Muir, as follows (General Order, Number 3): It gives me pleasure to record in General Orders, a tribute to the val-orous conduct of the following named soldiers of this Division who have distinguished themselves by extraarmed enemy of the United States under the following circumstances: Sergeant Chauncey T. Young, 1239165, Hdq. Company, 110th Infantry, in command of his 37 m-m gun platon, when the Infantry which he was supporting were held up by machine gun fire on September 6, 1918, near Bax-lieux, France, placed a 37 m-m gun with the assistance of three others on the front line; ordering the three men with him to take shelter, Sergennt Young fired the gun himself, although subjected to very heavy rifle, machine gun, and artillery fire, with the result that the enemy machine gun nests which were delaying the advance of the Infantry were destroyed. His actions exemplified great personal courage and coolness under fire.

FOREIGN BORN RESERVISTS

Editor's Note: In estimating the total number of Rochester and Monroe County men who served in the World War, several thousand should be added to the Roll of Service, Part I, herein, for it is known that many of our foreign-born citizens joined the armies of the Allies as volunteers or were summoned as Reservists. Efforts have been made to obtain the names of these men through application to the War Departments of the various foreign governments, and through the local cooperation of the Racial Advisory Committee of the Council for Better Citizenship, of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce. No help was received from the foreign War Departments, but, locally, many names have been reported. It is not possible to make a complete and accurate list of such foreign-born Reservists.

The Italian Consular Office at Rochester, covering twelve counties, reported sending back to Italy about three thousand Reservists. Hon. Cesare Sconfietti, Italian Consular Agent at Rochester, writes: "A conservative estimate of the Italian residents of Rochester and Monroe County included in this group could be placed at 1700."

Through a Special Committee organized under the local Racial Advisory Committee, above noted, reports have been received as to other foreign-born groups of Rochester and Monroe County, who furnished Reservists.

Reports as to the Rochester Poles show over 600 in military service, of which number at least 258 joined the Polish army recruited at Niagara-on-the-Lake (See detailed statement, herein, "Rochester Poles in the World War"). There were also Canadians, Belgians, French, Lithuanians, Ukranians, Armenians, Greeks, and other foreign-born residents of Rochester who served in armies other than that of the United States.

In the Second Report of the Provost Marshal General to the Secretary of War (December 20, 1918) appears this statement as to the loyalty of aliens:

"The problem of the alien was fraught with many intricacies. It was in this field that were encountered not only the subtle efforts of the Imperial German Government to insinuate its intrigues into our armed forces, but also (and this was the larger and infinitely the more complicated side) the diplomatic situations arising out of relations with our allies and the neutral nations.

"Truly were we the melting-pot of the world; and the cosmopolitan composition of our population was never more strikingly disclosed than by the recent events of the World War. Then the melting-pot stood in the fierce fires of the national emergency; and its contents, heated in the flames, either fused into the compact mass or floated off as dross.

"The great and inspiring revelation here has been that men of foreign and of native origin alike responded to the call to arms with a patriotic devotion that confounded the cynical plans of our arch enemy and surpassed our highest expectations. No man can peruse the muster roll of one of our camps, or the casualty list from a battlefield in France, without realizing that America has fulfilled one of its highest missions in breeding a spirit of common loyalty among all those who have shared the blessings of life on its free soil. No need to speculate how it has come about; the great fact is demonstrated that America makes Americans. In the diary of a German officer, found on the battlefield, the following sentences, penned by one of the enemy whom these men went out to fight, speaks volumes: 'Only a few of these troops are of pure American origin; the majority are of German, Dutch, and Italian parentage. But these semi-Americans—almost all of whom were born in America and never have been in Europe—fully feel themselves to be true-born sons of their country.'"

As a tribute to all the foreign-born living in the United States at the time of the World War, who did finally serve in the American Army, it is interesting to note the report of the Provost Marshal General from which it appears that there were 123,277 American soldiers not naturalized. This total comprised 76,545 soldiers who had not declared their intention and 46,732 declarants. These foreign-born residents refused to claim exemption from military service because of their alienage; although not one of them could receive a commission as an officer, however valiantly he might fight.

The United States Government cannot furnish the records of American citizens who served in the Armies of the Allies. A letter from the War Department, dated September 18, 1924, says:

"Although the War Department has attempted through the Department of State, to obtain from the governments of the countries which were allied against the central powers the records of American citizens who served in their respective armies, the results thus far have been negligible. The responses received indicate that, in most instances, it is impracticable to determine from the records which soldiers were American citizens. The War Department regrets that it is therefore not in a position to furnish any information concerning those individuals."

In his "History of the Italians of Rochester from 1876 to 1926," (published in Publication Fund Series, The Rochester Historical Society, Volume VI, pp. 183-199) Mr. Clement G. Lanni, editor of La Stampa Unita, the Italian Weekly Newspaper of Rochester, says:

"The greatest influx of Italian immigration to this country occurred between the years 1905 and 1915, and Rochester's Italian population jumped considerably during that time. When America entered the World War there were hundreds of Italian boys, who, as yet, had not been weaned from their beloved Mother Country. This was demonstrated most forcibly in 1915 when Italy entered the World War on the side of the Allies. Although the young boys of military age were thousands of miles from their native land and from the scene of the terrible conflict, they responded to the call of their Mother Country. Yet, had they chosen to remain in this country, they could have done so under the protection of the United States. But they left, and many were the stirring scenes enacted in the railroad stations of Rochester as hundreds upon hundreds of these boys of military age left to fight for their country. I have seen no greater fidelity and loyalty to one's country than that exhibited by these strong, ambitious young men, the flower of Italian manhood, as they departed, some never to return again. In all, according to the figures of the Italian Consular Agent, Cesare Sconfietti, 1700 left this city, long before America entered the War.

"And finally, when America called to arms, approximately 2,000 more of the 20,000 who left Rochester and Monroe County were boys of Italian birth and descent. Fiftyfour of the 2,000 gave their lives for their country, and of the fifty-four all but one, were born in Italy. The only American-born was John Arthur Sturla, grandson of the oldest Italian settler of the city. The youngest boy killed in the World War from this city was James R. Civitillo, son of Raffaela and Raffaela Civitillo, who still live here. Young Civitillo was born in Piedmonte Alife, Italy, on October 12, 1901. He enlisted at the tender age of fifteen years and seven months, and was killed in action on the Hindenberg Line on September 29, 1918, when still under seventeen years of age. Another Italian boy, Private Michael Vigliotti killed on the same day, was posthumously decorated by the United States Government with the Distinguished Service Cross for bravery on the field of action when he attempted to save wounded men from a terrific machine gun fire which was sweeping the battlefield. Private Charles Granata, who is still a resident of this city was decorated for bravery by the French Government."

Mr. Lanni has prepared also a statement for the World War Service Record, which shows the names of 866 Italians of Monroe County who obtained transportation through the local Consular Office to the Italian Army as Reservists, and of these 785 went from the City of Rochester. These records are official, being taken from the roll on file in the office of Hon. Cesare Sconfietti, Italian Consular Agent at Rochester.

If it were possible, complete lists of the Reservists of other nationalities also would be published, but the Italian list is the only one available. Where individual Reservists of nationalities other than Italian have been reported from any source to the City Historian they have been credited, in their alphabetical position, in the general Roll of Service, Part I, herein. This applies also to six instances, only, of Italian Reservists, where details of the service record have been supplied. Therefore, these six names appear twice, once in the general Roll of Service, and again in the special list printed below:

ROCHESTER POLES IN THE WORLD WAR

(RETOLD FROM TALES OF POLISH VOLUNTEERS)

In April, 1917, when, at a session of the Polish Falcons' Alliance in convention at Pittsburg, Pa., it was announced that the United States had declared war against Germany, Ignace J. Paderewski, pianist and patriot, offered a resolution that the Polish Falcons offer to the United States for service in the World War a Polish army of one hundred thousand men.

The resolution was adopted but, though this offer was fully appreciated, it was not accepted by the United States Government. The policy of the nation was not to receive volunteers for the army as organized bodies, but as individuals, that the men might be trained and assigned for duty according to American Army standards.

Undismayed the Polish youth of America flocked at once to the recruiting offices of the Regular Army and the National Guard. Later, the selective draft called thousands of them to the training camps. Rochester's Polish contribution to the American Army was more than 600 men of Polish birth. Fully 258 left the city early in the war to seek service with the Polish Army in France and on the Eastern front.

Rev. Ignatius J. Klejna and Louis Kubiak, through whose efforts partial lists have been secured of the names of Rochester Poles who served during the World War, assert that to furnish complete lists is almost an impossibility. Polish recruiting officers who were in this city seeking recruits for the Polish Army before America entered the war took with them, when they left, all their office records. Also, it is alleged, many of the Polish soldiers, since returning from the war, have abandoned the names they received at their christening in favor of simpler sounding names in English. For example, Piotr Grabowski has become Peter Parker, Wojciech Hermanowski is now Walter Herman. Only by diligent search have some of the original Piotrs and Woiciechs been located. However, it is known that hundreds of these splendid young men whose names sound so strange to American ears entered the army and served, both America and the home of their fathers. well.

Though Paderewski's plan for the organization of a Polish Legion in America was not carried out a Polish Legion was, however, assembled overseas. It numbered 100,000 men and fully 25,000 of them were from cities and villages in America.

Two years before the United States decided to enter the World • War the Poles in America had set in motion a plan to train a corps of officers and non-commissioned officers as a nucleus for a proposed Polish regiment. For this purpose 260 young men were selected from the country at large and assembled for a course of training at the National Polish Alliance School at Cambridge Springs, Pa. Another group of 28 students were sent to Toronto University.

In June, 1917, permission was secured to organize a Polish Legion in France. It was to be composed of Poles recruited in France, Spain, England, Russia and the United States. Recruiting offices were at once opened all over America under the direction of a body known as the Polish Pre-Mobilization Army Committee. This committee was represented in Rochester by Louis Kubiac, Joseph Koscielmy, John Owczarczak, John Cryez, Adam Norwich, S. W. Kowalski and S. W. Dukat. Men between the ages of 18 and 45 years, not liable to draft in the United States, which two months before had entered the World War, were accepted as volunteers. Among the volunteers were many German and Austrian born Poles, ineligible for service in the American Army. The recruits were sent to Camp Kosciusko, at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, Canada, for training under Canadian officers. By late summer 10,000 men were in training at this camp.

Among the 260 students training at Cambridge Springs, Pa., were three from Rochester, Ladislaus Czaban, Thaddeus Gedgowd and John Pospula, who, after three months in the cadet corps at the Springs, were among 106 sudents selected for special training at Camp Borden, Canada. In September, 1917, this group, together with the cadets still at Cambridge Springs, joined the battalions training at Camp Kosciusko. November 4th the troops at Camp Kosciusko were reviewed by Prince Stanislaus August Poniatowski, at which time the Polish flag of the corps was consecrated by Chaplain Celichowski of the Polish Army Commission.

In late December, 1917, the first American contingent of the new Polish Legion, consisting of 750 men and including Messrs. Czaban, Gedgowd and Pospula of Rochester, sailed for France. Czaban and Pospula were lieutenants, Gedgowd a sergeant. Their port of embarkation was New York, instead of Halifax, as intended, because of the damaged docks at the latter place caused by a recent explosion of a store of munitions. Landing at Brest on New Year's Day, 1918, the detachment was sent to a training area near Laval where it was joined by later-arriving troops, uniformed and equipped, and merged into the 1st Polish Regiment. When the Legion recruits left America they were mostly in citizen's dress. The uniform later adopted was of "horizon blue" cloth, piped at the seams and collar with crimson. The uniform cap had a cloth visor. Its flat top was square instead of round.

In March the new Polish Legion reached the front near Rheims where it remained for nearly two months. Following a three weeks rest period the Legion was again sent into the lines, in late June, where it served in various French sectors for some six weeks. In mid-July it was badly cut up by shell fire. August 15 the Legion moved into the Alsace-Lorraine country and a week later found itself in the Vosges Mountains in preparation for a combined attack with French and American troops. The signing of the Armistice, Nov. 11, caused a change in plans and the Polish Legion was withdrawn to Luneville to await transportation across the German frontiers for service on the Polish east front. In the mean time the French general, Archinard, who took command of the Legion when it first reached France, had been succeeded by the Polish general, Joseph Haller, formerly an officer in the Austrian Army.

It was April 1, 1919, before the first detachment of Haller's army of "Yank Poles" succeeded in leaving France for Poland. The movement was not completed until April 21. The Legion was assembled in Warsaw just when it was needed most.

The winter of 1918-19 found the recently consolidated Poland struggling to maintain its boundaries gained by World War conditions. The country had no army, was in a wasted condition, and beset on all sides. Germany was disputing claims to the west, the Czechs to the southwest, the Ukranians to the southeast, the Bolsheviks to the east and the Lithuanians to the north. Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, just returned from Germany where he had been held a political prisoner, set in motion every force he could muster to furnish relief. Within six months he had a form of government organized, and 1.000.000 armed men in the field.

By Easter, 1919, this army had retaken Vilna in Lithuania, was driving the Bolsheviki Army back into Russia, and May 6 entered Kiev. General Haller's army, arriving from France in the nick of time, carried out a successful campaign in Galicia. Poland seemed fairly cleared of invading soldiery. In the spring of 1920 the Bolsheviki Army made a sudden drive across the border and arrived within a dozen miles of Warsaw before it was halted and driven back by vigorous Polish counter moves in which Haller's army was again active. In March, 1921, the Treaty at Riga brought the fighting to a close.

Poland had not survived the war without acute suffering. Cities and villages in the fighting area were in ruins. The country was filled with refugees, old men, women and children, homeless and destitute. American relief agencies were at work on every side, striving to avert starvation and disease from making the fight for a reunited nation all for naught. It was to assist in this relief work that many of the Polish Legionaires from America offered themselves as volunteers and remained abroad for months after the Legion had been mustered out of service.

There is no complete roster obtainable of the 248 Rochester Poles who served in the Polish Legion in France and on the Eastern Front. The men who served in the American Army are included in the general Roll of Service, Part I, herein. ral Library of Rochester and Monroe County Historic Monography Collection

THE NAVAL MILITIA

By Lieutenant Commander William B. Zimmer

The Third Battalion of New York Naval Militia, also known as the National Naval Volunteers, was the first Rochester organization to leave for service in the World War.

While the various units of the Naval Militia throughout the country were State organizations, they were considered also as a National Force. There was some doubt, however, as to the authority to order members of the Naval Militia into active duty outside of State boundaries, and to avoid this question, a few years before the war there was organized the National Naval Volunteers, to comprise all organizations of the State Naval Militias that met the standards of the Navy Department. By this act the Naval Militia became subject to the orders of the Navy Department and the President of the United States. It was in this capacity, as National Naval Volunteers, that the Third Battalion was ordered into Federal Service.

March 23, 1917, two weeks before the formal declaration of war by the United States, Lieutenant Commander William B. Zimmer, as Supply Officer, received telegraphic orders to report for active duty at the New York State Armory, 900 Main Street East, to make arrangements necessary to prepare the Third Battalion for immediate service. During these two weeks the local members of the Naval Militia were aware that they were about to be called and all were in a state of preparedness.

On the night of April 6, 1917, Captain Edward N. Walbridge received telegraphic orders from the Department, to proceed immediately with his men to League Island Navy Yard, Philadelphia, Pa., a rendezvous that had been arranged about two months previously. The Units at Rochester comprising the Third Battalion, were the Headquarters, 2d, 6th, and 7th Divisions; the 2d and 6th being Line Divisions, while the 7th was designated as an Engineer Division.

By arrangement the various units of the Naval Militia in Western New York departed from their stations at a designated time to assemble on a train of the Lehigh Valley Railroad which started from Niagara Falls and added, on its progress to Philadelphia, the cars containing the 1st Division from Dunkirk, the 3d and 5th Divisions from Buffalo, and the Rochester Units at Rochester Junction. In addition to the above, there was one Division from Oswego, and one from Watertown. Thus the entire Battalion was mobilized from the Rochester Headquarters and moved to League Island Navy Yard on the night of April 8, 1917.

When the Rochester members of the Naval Militia entrained the officers of the Battalion were as follows: Captain, Edward N. Walbridge: Commander W. J. Graham, Executive Officer: Lieutenant Commander William B. Zimmer, Supply Officer: Lieutenant Commander W. H. Harriman, Surgeon, The 2d Division was commanded by Lieutenant Edward G. Zimmer, and the 7th Division by Lieutenant Roger De Wolfe.

Upon arrival of the Third Battalion at the League Island Navy Yard the Navy Department began breaking up the organization and sending officers and men to different posts of service where military necessity demanded their presence. Men were assigned to duty in France, and on transports, cruisers, destroyers, in the air forces, and at naval bases. Many were assigned to the battleships Wisconsin and Iowa, to the cruiser Salem, and to the transports De Kalb and Von Steuben. The Oswego Division was ordered almost intact to the U.S.S. Granite State, which later became the flagship of the transport force.

After the departure of the Battalion the Supply Officer was ordered back to Rochester to ship naval stores and military property to designated points and to complete the records and property returns of the organization.

Shortly thereafter, orders were received from the Navy Department designating the Naval Militia Armory at Summerville as a Naval Station, with the Supply Officer in command, with instructions to recruit an additional force of seven hundred men from Western New York as National Naval Volunteers. Later, this designation was changed to Naval Reserves, the name still in existence.

The required number of men were duly enlisted, and a Battalion with seven Divisions was formed in the latter part of May, 1917. This force was trained into an efficient organization at Summerville Armory, and a band of seventy pieces was recruited at Williamsport, Pa., being taken in its entirety as an established concert organization.

While the Navy Department at first adopted the system of having small Naval Stations throughout the country, especially along the Great Lakes, it was soon discovered that it would require the services of too many experienced officers properly to train the men at those posts, therefore, on December 1, 1917, orders were issued to discontinue the Naval Station at Summerville, and to transfer the officers and men to Pelham Bay Naval Training Station, Long Island Sound, which transfer was effected December 2, 1917. When the Rochester men marched into Pelham Bay, they made a fine appearance, and the band was so excellent that it was retained at that station as the official band throughout the war. The new outfit was broken up according to the practice of the Navy Department and the men were sent out as individuals to various ships.

When orders were received to discontinue the station at Summerville, the Supply Officer was directed to retain ten men for the purpose of shipping the property of the post to points designated by the Navy Department, and thereafter, to form a crew from these ten men to take eight boats via Lake Ontario. Erie Canal, Hudson River, Harlem River, Hellgate and Long Island Sound to Pelham Bay Naval Station. These were all open boats, and the officers and men suffered much from cold, because it was in the midst of winter, after navigation had closed. Two of the men slipped overboard into the icv waters, with the temperature standing at ten below zero, but they were recovered and not a man was lost on the hazardous trip. In recognition of the services of these men, the Lieutenant Commander received a letter of commendation from Admiral Usher, then in command of the 3d Naval District, for the successful accomplishment of this trip made in the midst of storms and very high winds on the Lakes.

The first Rochester man of the Naval Militia to lose his life was Milton L. Lewis, a member of the 6th Division, serving as Quartermaster of an armed guard aboard a transport carrying supplies to the Allies. The ship was torpedoed by an Austrian submarine, January 28, 1918, in the Mediterranean Sea, off the coast of Sicily. While many members of the Battalion met death, those from Rochester were Harry Damaschke, Jarvis H. Abey and Francis Nugent. The Milton L. Lewis post of the American Legion, composed, largely of men who served in the Navy, was named in memory of Milton L. Lewis. Many of the officers and men of the Battalion were aboard vessels that were torpedoed, but escaped with their lives.

After the Armistice the members of the local Naval Militia were not discharged from service, as was the case in the Army, because they were still Naval Reserves, subject to call, and upon completion of active duty they were ordered home into what was known as inactive status. The time of their enrollment was four years, and all remained subject to call for that period. As the men were not enrolled simultaneously, their periods of service terminated at different times. At the end of the war some of the officers and men remained in the regular service, transferring from the Naval Reserves to the regular Navy.

It is of interest to note that a very high percentage of the men of the Battalion were promoted while in service.

THE NAVAL MILITIA: SECOND MARINE COMPANY

By Captain Clarence Ball

Personnel furnished by Rochester and vicinity for the United States Marine Corps before, during and since the World War has been plentiful but it has generally been in the form of small replacement groups, and been further divided at the training camps for assignment to various Marine Corps companies on duty afloat or ashore the world around.

The only complete unit of Marines to leave Rochester in carload lots for duty during the World War was the 2d Marine Company, New York Naval Militia. This company was composed of 95 young men selected for their physical fitness from a total of 450 volunteers who flocked to the Armory in Main Street East to enlist in the Marine Corps when recruiting for the new company was begun early in 1917.

This company created an impression upon its arrival at the Brooklyn receiving station, by reason of its good marching qualities, steadiness in ranks and general attention to matters of discipline, which caused the authorities for a time to consider retaining it as a unit instead of throwing it into the general pool as was being done with the other arriving Marine Companies, but eventually the Company was separated into small groups of men and distributed among already existing units of the regular branch of the Marine Corps destined for field duty in France, ship duty at sea with the Grand and North Atlantic Fleets, or in garrison at various naval bases.

Upon the return to Rochester of the survivors of the 2d Marine Company, at the close of the World War, the unit was reorganized and reattached to the Third Battalion, New York Naval Militia, with headquarters at the State Armory in Main Street East, and in the fall of 1926 was taken over by the Federal Government and redesignated as the 302d Company, United States Marine Corps Reserves.

The 2d Marine Company was organized in Rochester in February, 1917, under the direction of Captain E. N. Walbridge, then commanding the Third Battalion, N.Y.N.M., pursuant to orders authorizing the formation of a marine company to complete the organization of each Naval Militia battalion.

Clarence Ball of Rochester, who had enlisted in the Naval Militia in this city in 1892 and served as a petty officer in the U. S. Navy during the Spanish-American War, was commissioned a 2d Lieutenant of Marines and placed in charge of recruiting for and drilling the new unit. The response to the call for volunteers was almost instantaneous and the company at once began a systematic program of training at the Main Street East Armory in spite of the fact that everything in the way of uniforms, arms and equipment was lacking.

May 6, 1917, with solid ranks and steady step, though still in mufti, the company marched to the New York Central Railroad station and embarked for Brooklyn under orders to report for duty at the Navy Yard. All Rochester turned out to see the new Marine Company off to the war and Troop H, 1st N. Y. Cavalry, and a band furnished the escort across the city to the depot.

At Brooklyn the news of the proposed disintegration of the Rochester unit came as a blow to the men of the 2d Marine Company though their disappointment was in a way soothed by a partial issue of uniforms and equipment. However, stifling their sorrow at the separation of friends, the various detachments shouldered their new sea-bags and went their ways.

Some of the Rochester men went to the Marine Corps base at Quantico, Va., and were assigned to the 5th and 6th Regiments of Marines destined to sail for France in September, 1917. Others were sent aboard warships outward bound for blockade duty or to guard transports. Others joined replacement battalions at the naval bases, awaiting orders to be sent overseas as soon as arrangements could be made for the reception of more troops in France. Some of the men never got to France at all. Many never came back. Cooper Post, American Legion, is named in honor of Sergeant W. H. Cooper, 2d Marine Company, killed in action at Soissons on the second day of the Aisne-Marne offensive. Corporal T. H. Imeson and Private J. C. Nelson are also among those who met death overseas.

Second Lieutenant Ball, in command of the 2d Marine Company when it left Rochester, May 6, 1917, was made first lieutenant the following August and sent to the training camp at Quantico in October. The following March, he was assigned to the 2d Replacement Battalion, 5th Marine Regiment, which landed at Brest, France, March 25, 1918, and two months later joined the regiment at Belleau Wood just in time to take part in the assault in the early morning of June 6, and which carried on for 21 days. Lieutenant Ball was the only 2d Marine Company man in the 5th Regiment but there were many in the 6th Marines, brigaded with the 5th in this action and those which followed. Mid-July found the Rochester Marines in the fighting at Soissons, September at St. Mihiel, October at Champagne, and early November in the Argonne. October 5, Lieutenant Ball, commanding a company of his regiment, learned that he had been made a captain the preceding July 1, and was about this time ordered to hospital as the result of the development of injuries received earlier in the fighting. July 2, 1919, he was transferred to Base Hospital 6 at Bordeaux, whence he was sent, February 1, to Portsmouth Va., and thence to the Brooklyn Naval Hospital. October 6, 1919, while on duty at the Automatic-gun School at Quantico, Va., he received his discharge from Federal service. Returning to Rochester Captain Ball was instrumental, with the aid of a number of the old members returned from active service, in reorganizing the 2d Marine Company, New York Naval Militia. November 1, 1926, he retired from active service leaving the command of the company to Lieutenant E. F. Doyle.

The original roster of the 2d Marine Company follows:

Lieutenant, Clarence Ball; First Sergeant, J. F. Weithorn; Sergeants, J. H. Raymond and W. H. Cooper; Privates: E. Armstrong; B. K. Batzold; J. E. Begy; H. A. Bellows; M. A. Birmingham; C. E. # THE 108TH INFANTRY

By Captain Wheeler Chapin Case

The 108th Infantry, 27th Division, American Expeditionary Forces, then known as the 3rd New York Infantry, left its home stations in Western New York in the spring of 1917 at the nation's first call to arms for service in the World War, with an approximate strength per company of three commissioned officers and 150 enlisted men.

While encamped that fall near Spartanburg, S. C., the regiment's strength was increased to five commissioned officers and 250 men per company by personnel received from the 74th Infantry of Buffalo, the 12th of New York and the 47th of Brooklyn, which regiments had been broken up in accordance with reorganization orders of the 27th Division, New York National Guard.

The regiment reached France in May 1918, approximately 3,200 strong. Five months later, when it was withdrawn from the fighting near Le Cateau and Catillon, the combined strength of the battalions holding the line was but 205 men and ten officers. Many of the missing still rest beneath the white crosses which mark the fields of Flanders and Northern France. Thanks to the efficiency of the medical department of the army a large percentage of the loss in wounded was returned to duty by the time of the muster-out of the regiment at Camp Upton, N. Y., in March, 1919.

"The biggest thing about the 108th Infantry," assert the officers of the regiment, "was the way its men, who had been just boys in the home towns back in New York State, walked into battle with as much unconcern as if they were going in to buy a package of cigarettes at the corner store. It was National Guard training and pride of regiment that did it."

The recorded history of the 108th Infantry dates back only to May 1, 1898, when twelve separate companies, New York National Guard, representing eleven cities in central and western New York, were assembled at Camp Black, Hempstead Plains, L. I., to train as a regiment to be known as the 3d New York Volunteer Infantry for service in the Spanish-American War. Rochester at that time, furnished Companies A and H.

The name, 3d New York Infantry, is an old one, and dates back in American history to Colonial times in the Mohawk Valley, which was then Western New York. A regiment known as the 108th New York Infantry also made history in the Civil War, but this organization did not give its name to the 108th Infantry of the World War as the following letter from the Adjutant General's office, War Department, shows:

"March 22, 1926.

"Mr. Edward R. Foreman,

"I am in receipt of your letter of March 16th 1926, in which you enquire whether the name 108th Infantry, 27th Division, given to the former 3rd New York Infantry, was given with the intention of perpetuating the designation of the 108th New York Infantry which served in the Civil War.

"The designation '108th Infantry' was not given to the former 3rd Infantry, New York National Guard, with the intention of perpetuating the designation of the 108th New York Volunteer Infantry which served in the Civil War.

"Very truly yours,
"(Signed) ROBERT C. DAVIS,
"Major General,
"The Adjutant General."

It was during the American Revolution that Colonel Peter Gansevoort's 3d New York Infantry, recruited mainly in the Mohawk Valley, held Fort Stanwix, now Rome, N. Y., against the invading British and Indians from Canada, and in 1779 this regiment formed a part of the American Army assigned to General John Sullivan which invaded the Genesee Valley wilderness and drove the British and their Indian allies westward to the Niagara frontier.

The National Guard units known as Separate Companies which composed the 3d New York Infantry in 1898 took form in 1879-80 in connection with a reorganization of the old State Militia that called for the breaking up of a number of pre-Civil War regiments, including such organizations as the 54th Regiment of Rochester and the 49th of Auburn.

The result was the formation, throughout the state, of a number of smaller units, such as the 1st and 8th Separate Companies of this city, the 2d Separate Company of Auburn and the 34th of Geneva, the personnel of which was composed of selected material from which candidates for commissioned officers might be drawn should occasion arise for the expansion of the state troops to war strength.

During the Civil War the 3d New York Artillery, formerly the "Old Nineteenth" Infantry, a Western New York volunteer regiment built up from a nucleus of militia companies, served with distinction on the side of the North and furnished many officers and non-commissioned officers who later became identified with the 3d New York Infantry of Spanish-American War days. General William M. Kirby of Auburn, formerly an officer of Battery K, 3d New York Artillery, and later colonel of the 49th New York Infantry, became captain of the 2d Separate Company at the time it was organized and in 1898 became lieutenant colonel of the 3d New York Volunteer Infantry. The colonel of the regiment at that time was Edward Hoffman of Elmira, adjutant general of the state. General William Wilson of Geneva, then senior major of the regiment, succeeded Colonel Hoffman in command.

The commanding officer of the 108th Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, was Colonel Edgar S. Jennings of Auburn, now brigadier general commanding the 54th Brigade, 27th Division, a soldier risen from the ranks through successive grades since his enlistment as a private in the 2d Separate Company in March, 1891. John B. Tuck of Syracuse was lieutenant colonel. Major Fred S. Couchman of Rochester commanded the first battalion, Major Arthur Turnbull of Elmira commanded the second, and Major Otto H. Chorman of Rochester, the third. Lieutenant Colonel Tuck, transferred to the 106th Infantry, was later succeeded by Lieutenant Colonel William Taylor, formerly of the 2d New York Infantry. By the transfer of Major Turnbull to the Judge Advocate's Department and Major Chorman to the Department of Chemical Warfare the command of their battalions fell upon Captains John S. Thompson of Medina and S. H. Merrill of Geneva, now colonel and lieutenant colonel, respectively, of the 108th Infantry.

Major W. W. Percy of Rochester, regimental surgeon, being ordered, in October, 1917, to Corps and Army School for promotion and transfer, was succeeded by Major C. R. Lynn. Placed in charge of Evacuation Hospital 25 at Fort Oglethorpe in May, 1918, with orders for duty overseas, Major Percy found his command held up to fight the "flu" epidemic at Camps Dodge and Upton until November 11, when he sailed, with the grade of lieutenant-colonel, and remained for six months on duty in France. The present regimental surgeon of the 108th Infantry is Major George Clark of Rochester.

The home stations of the regiment were Rochester, Companies A, G and H, the Medical Detachment, Machine Gun Company and part of Regimental Headquarters Company; Geneva, Company B; Syracuse, Company C; Oswego, D; Niagara Falls, E; Medina, F; Olean, I; Hornell, K; Elmira, L; and Auburn M and the Supply Company. At the time of the reorganization of the 27th Division the 107th and 108th Infantry regiments were assigned to the 54th Brigade commanded by General Palmer E. Pierce, an officer of the U. S. Army.

April 13, 1917, found the 3d New York Infantry mobilizing at its home armories in the cities of Central and Western New York, following the entry into the World War of the United States just a week previous.

Orders had been received the night before calling for the mobilization at 8 o'clock on the morrow, and promptly at the hour set, while the corridors of the armories in all the cities where the units of the regiment were located were yet ringing with the bugles' brazen notes of "Assembly" the companies, uniformed and equipped, were standing with ranks formed to answer roll call. From that time forward the routine of daily drills and instruction began, though another week elapsed before the necessary physical examinations of the men could be completed and the mustering into Federal service of the various units accomplished.

The regiment had returned only the preceding October from three months service in the Mexican Border Campaign of 1916, in which the theater of operations of the New York Division had been along the Rio Grande between the towns of Pharr and Mission, Division Headquarters having been located at McAllen. Much of the valuable training acquired during that campaign was now lost through a ruling known as the "Dependability Law" whereby all enlisted men with relatives depending upon them for support were obliged to leave the service. The move, well meant, cost the National Guard regiments the loss of many veteran non-commissioned officers and resulting delays and confusion before younger men who thus gained promotion became familiar with their new responsibilities.

The first duty assigned to the newly mustered 3d Infantry was to patrol certain rail and waterways of the state to protect important bridges, aqueducts and docks from possible injury at the hands of the enemy's agents in this country. The 74th Infantry at Buffalo received orders April 14 to send detachments eastward along the New York Central Railway tracks as far as Syracuse, but was relieved of a portion of this work April 26 by the 3d Infantry, which established headquarters at Auburn and took over all railroad and canal property north and south across the state between meridians drawn through Rome on the east and Churchville, Monroe County, on the west. The 74th Infantry was eventually withdrawn to a camp at Kenmore, near Buffalo, the 3d Infantry extending its lines westward to Youngstown at the mouth of the Niagara River. Headquarters, Supply and Machine Gun Companies of the 3d were at this time encamped on the Owasco River at Norwood, two miles south of Auburn. The other units were billeted in all sorts of buildings adjacent to the property they were assigned to guard.

In August the 3d Infantry was assembled as a regiment, for the first time since its return from Texas, at Pelham Bay in Westchester County, in connection with the mobilization of the 27th Division at New York City for its trip south for winter quarters to prepare for service overseas.

Early in September the Division, having reached Camp Wadsworth, near Spartanburg, S.C., cleared a second growth pine forest of stumps and young trees and went into camp under canvass for a period of intensive training. French and British instructors were assigned to the regiments in preparation for trench warfare in Europe.

The winter proved a hard one with cold rains, deep snows and deeper mud. Firewood became scarce. Officers and men suffered from the weather but there was no let-up in the training in the trenches and drill fields. Rifle and artillery practice was carried on in the wooded valleys of the Blue Ridge Mountains near a peak called Glassy Rock, 35 miles north of the Division Camp, the regiments taking turns in marching to and from the ranges they had laid out and built themselves under the supervision of the Division Engineers. There was some sickness but the general health of the 108th remained remarkably good.

The first troops of the 27th Division reached Brest, on the coast of France, from Newport News, Va., May 24, 1918, and included Regimental Headquarters and band and the First Battalion of the 108th Infantry which had made the ocean voyage on the British troopship, Kursk, in company with twelve other transports and one American battleship, after a voyage of fourteen days. The Kursk, formerly in the Russian mail service, was no perfumed yacht. The second day out from the Virginia Capes Colonel Jennings, with the "skipper's" permission, set his men to work policing the ship and inspecting the preparation of the men's mess. Good results followed.

The remaining companies of the 108th, with a second large convoy, reached Brest May 31st. The first contingent was encamped in the dry moat of old Fort Bougon on the outskirts of Brest, the second at Pontenezen Barracks, an historic old stone pile, three miles from the city, originally built as a training quarters for the armies of Napoleon.

Before the fast-arriving troops that followed the 27th Division built their bustling camps about Brest and Pontenezen Barracks, the surrounding villages, fields and lanes were beautiful, especially to the landsmen just ashore from two weeks at sea. The troops enjoyed their strange surroundings, made friends with the people who flocked to the regimental band concerts each evening, and put in some hard labor at the docks, unloading stores.

From early June, that year, until after the signing of the armistice, the 108th Infantry was attached to the British Army. It never served with the American Army during the fighting in France. For that reason it never received mention in the American reports of the fighting overseas. Not until late November, when it was sent to the Le Mans area to await shipment home, did it again come under American control.

The British refer to the fighting which took place during the summer and fall of 1918, when the 27th and 30th American Divisions carried on with the Australians arriving in the British sector, as the "100 Days Battle."

Within a week after its arrival on French soil the 108th Infantry was sent northeast into the Abbeville area, took over British equipment, and went into special training under British officers in anticipation of immediate German activities in the vicinity of the Channel Ports. For this training Regimental Headquarters and the 3d Battalion were located at Canchy, the First Battalion at Froyelles on the road to Crecy, and the Second Battalion at Domvast. Divisional Headquarters was eventually located in the historic old town of St. Requier. At Noyelles, the detraining point in this area, the men first came into sight of the flash and sound of the roar of the German guns and were entertained at night with bombing raids by German airmen.

June 18 the Division was marched for further training to the St. Valery area, south of the Somme, but a threatened attack on the Arras-Albert front sent the columns scurrying back again over a portion of their old route to occupy a reserve position in the trenches west of Arras June 21. In this area training was again resumed for a few days, with 108th Infantry Headquarters at Sus-St. Leger.

Conditions on the Ypres front caused another sudden movement of the Division by rail, July 2, north to St. Omer, 25 miles from Calais, whence the 108th Infantry marched overland, eastward, by Buysscheure, the hill town of Cassel and through stricken Steenvoorde and a sadly devastated district to Beauvoorde Wood and the town of Abeele on the Belgian border. Here the hitherto pleasant weather changed to heavy rains and deep mud and the regiment was under almost constant bombardment from the German lines about Kemmel Hill.

Other elements of the 27th and 30th Divisions, the latter composed of regiments from Tennessee and the Carolinas, followed the 108th Infantry to the Belgian line, and July 7, these American divisions, comprising the 2d Army Corps, were attached for duty to the 19th Corps, 2d British Army, under General Plumer, and assigned to positions west and southwest of Ypres to head off a threatened German drive against Calais. The 27th Division occupied a line running southwest from Dickebusch through Reninghelst and Scherpenberg, about Kemmel Hill.

July 23, the 108th Infantry suffered its first casualties in action when two men of Company F,* Corporal Morris Lynchick and Private Grant C. Colton, were killed by shell fragments during a bombardment.

August 1, after a week of rifle practice in a "rest area" near St. Omer, the 108th Infantry was returned to Ypres district, the First and Second Battalions going into the front lines of the Dickebusch-Scherpenberg sector with the Durham Light Infantry and 23rd, Middlesex, British regiments, the Third Battalion entering the lines later with the British 10th Queen's Regiment, the Americans gradually assuming entire charge of the front lines.

August 23, when the 27th Division relieved the British 6th Division eastward to Dickebusch Lake, the First and Second Battalion of the 108th Infantry were stationed at Ouderdoom and Busseboom in support of the 106th Infantry. The Third Battalion was at Mandalay Corners. Air raids and shell fire caused many casualties at this time.

August 28, the Germans began the evacuation of Kemmel Hill. August 31, after taking Vierstraat Ridge, the 27th Division was relieved by the British and the Americans were sent back to a rest area at Doullens, near their old Abbeville training quarters, to rehearse for their coming part in the smash on the Hindenberg Line in late September. During the campaign in Belgium the 108th Infantry lost 10 men killed, 56 wounded and 4 missing.

September 22, the 27th Division began a movement southeast from Doullens to Péronne and Ronssoy by rail. The mounted transport was sent overland, marching by night. Its column was four miles long. It reached Tincourt, near Péronne, at 5:30 A. M., September 24. September 27 the 107th and 108th Infantry marched nine miles from Tincourt Wood through Zizzecourt, Longavesnes and Ste. Emelie to Templeaux le Guerard to be in reserve when the 105th and 106th Infantry attacked, east of Ronssoy. September 28 the 107th and 108th took positions forward to relieve the attacking troops.

In the assault of September 29, which was launched at 5:50 A. M.,

*Editor's Note: Company F, 108th Infantry, was originally recruited in Medina, Orleans County, N. Y. Guernsey L. Wilder of Auburn, N. Y., a Lieutenant of the 108th Infantry, assigned to Company F for service during the World War, writing from Salt Lake City, Utah, January 17, 1928, in reference to the casualties of July 23, 1918, said: "I remember these two men very well. Corporal Lynchick was transferred to the 108th from the 12th New York Infantry, recruited in New York City, and Private Colton came from Medina and was with the original Company F."

a heavy fog prevailing, the Second Battalion was assigned the right and the Third Battalion the left half of the sector occupied by the 108th Infantry, the First Battalion, in support, advancing at the same time as "moppers-up."

With the artillery barrage falling 1,000 yards ahead to avoid slaughter of remnants of the 106th Infantry, supposed to be "dug in" somewhere out in front, the 108th men suffered fearfully from machine gun nests hidden in the middle ground, before reaching the real mass of wire and the fortified positions of the Hindenburg Line, but made their way through in excellent order to the town of Bony where they were relieved by units of the 3d Australian Division. The 108th then assisted the Australians in cleaning up machine gun nests until recalled the evening of September 29th and consolidated as a reserve force.

All tanks which had been advanced that morning to destroy machine gun nests and tear holes in the acres of barbed wire were put out of action almost at the outset by the enemy's artillery fire, which also destroyed the 108th Infantry's wire communication as fast as it was laid. Communication between units was maintained entirely by runners. Contact was kept by the 108th, throughout the advance, with the 107th Infantry on the left and the 119th Infantry, 30th American Division, on the right.

September 30 the 108th Infantry marched out of the lines in excellent formation and the following day was taken to billets at Buire for a week's rest.

During the action of September 29 the regiment had lost 195 killed, 601 wounded, 163 gassed and 22 missing. It had captured 16 officers, 594 men and 33 machine guns.

October 7 the regiment resumed its advance by a series of night marches, covered a distance of 36 miles and reached Butry Wood near Busigny October 11. The place was being heavily bombarded. October 15 the regiment relieved the 119th Infantry, 30th Division occupying a line west of La Selle River, between St. Souplet and St. Benin, the relief being completed by daybreak.

October 17, the First Battalion leading, the regiment crossed La Selle River, captured a fortified railroad embankment and carried on past Baudival Farm by 9 o'clock in the morning. A British regiment on the right, being unable to keep up the advance, made it necessary during the day for the 108th to fall back to the farm and "dig in." October 18 the 107th Infantry relieved the 108th and carried on to Jonc-de-Mer Farm. October 20 the 108th took up the advance again and carried on to the Le Cateau-Catillon Road where it was relieved by a British Division.

October 23, after two weeks continuous marching and fighting, the 27th Division was sent back to the Corbie rest area, ten miles from Amiens, the 108th Regiment marching twenty miles by Nauroy and Hamel and entraining thence for Villers-Bretonneux. The Division Transport, marching overland from St. Souplet to Corbie, arrived October 25, one day later than the line companies.

During the fighting at St. Souplet the 108th Infantry lost 26 men killed, 151 wounded, 218 gassed and 17 missing. The prisoners taken during this advance totaled 17 officers, and 1,059 men, together with a total of 139 field pieces and machine guns.

Following the news of the signing of the armistice, November 11, the 27th Division entrained at Corbie the night of November 24, for Montfort in the Le Mans area, arriving November 26, where the three battalions of the 108th were billeted for the winter at Savigne-l'Eveque, Silli-le-Phillipe and Champagne, respectively. February 23, 1919 the regiment entrained at Champagne for Brest, arriving February 24, and sailed February 28 on the U. S. transport Mauretania for New York, arriving March 6.

This regiment was mustered out of the United States service at Camp Upton, N. Y., the week of March 28, the Rochester companies being met by a delegation of home folks, brought home by special train and given a grand welcome at their home armory.

Following the muster out of the 108th Infantry, A. E. F., a number of the returning members of the regiment joined the new 3d New York which had been organized, by companies, in Rochester and other western New York cities, during the war.

At the time of the reorganization of the New York National Guard, following the World War, and the federalization, in 1919, of its units included in the new 27th Division, the new 3d Infantry was granted permission to assume the name of the 108th Infantry and was assigned to the 54th Brigade, 27th Division, together with the 107th Infantry, formerly the 7th New York, thus bringing about again the war time brigade formation, with General Jennings, former colonel of the 3d New York as brigade commander. Major Thompson of Medina became colonel of the 108th, Major Merrill of Geneva lieutenant colonel, and Captains Harry Farmer of Syracuse, Fred S. Johnston of Auburn and Arthur T. Smith of Rochester became majors.

In token of its service for its country the 108th Infantry displays on the staff of its national color five silver bands engraved respectively as follows: Spanish-American War, 1898; Mexican Border Campaign, 1916; Dickebusch Offensive, Belgium, July 9-August 30, 1918; Ypres-Lys Offensive, Belgium, August 31-September 2, 1918, and Somme Offensive, France, September 24-October 20, 1918.

TROOP H, 1ST CAVALRY, NATIONAL GUARD OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

COMPANIES A AND B OF THE 106th MACHINE GUN BATTALION

Editor's Note: Information for the following statement was furnished at Headquarters, 121st Cavalry, and it has been approved by Col. Kenneth C. Townson.

Troop H, 1st Cavalry, New York National Guard, was organized in Rochester April 16, 1912.

The men of this Troop were mustered into United States service June 19, 1916, and served on the Mexican Border as Divisional Cavalry of the 6th Division National Guard until March 17, 1917, when they were mustered out and returned to their home stations.

They were again mustered into United States service, July 16, 1917, for the World War.

October 17, 1917, Troop H was reorganized for service in Machine Gun units, most of the men being assigned for duty with Companies A and B of the recently organized 106th Machine Gun Battalion, 27th Division, American Expeditionary Forces. Overseas machine gun units participated in all the battles and engagements in which the 27th Division was active in Belgium and France, their work culminating gloriously in the drives east from Ronssoy which resulted in the smashing of the Hindenburg Line.

Going overseas in May, 1918, the 27th Division, American Expeditionary Forces became a part of the British Armies in France, serving (with 30th Division as 2d American Corps) successively in the 3d, 2d, 3d, and 4th British Armies and participating in major operations incident to the occupation of the Dickebusch-Scherpenberg Defensive Sector, in Flanders, the Ypres-Lys Offensive in Belgium and the Somme Offensive in Picardy. These operations covered the battles, engagements, or minor actions of East Poperinghe Line, Vierstraat Ridge, the Knoll-Guillemont Farm, Quennemont Farm, Hindenburg Line, LeSelle River, Jonc-de-Mer Ridge, and St. Maurice River. 527 Decorations (U. S., British, French, Belgian, Italian, Montenegrin, etc.) were conferred upon personnel of the Division for conspicuous gallantry in action or other distinguished service in The World War. Nearly 2,500 Divisional Citations for similar services were awarded to personnel of the Division.

The 106th Machine Gun Battalion returned to America March 18, 1919, and were discharged from service March 31, 1919, at Camp Upton, N. Y.

November 24, 1919, Troop H, Lieutenant Kenneth C. Townson commanding, was reorganized and assigned to the 1st New York Cavalry, Federalized National Guard. June 20, 1922, the designation of the unit was changed by War Department orders to Troop F, 101st Cavalry, 51st Cavalry Brigade, 21st Cavalry Division, assigned to the First Army Troops.

During the summer of 1927 plans were completed at National Guard Headquarters for the organization of an "up state" regiment of cavalry, using as a nucleus the 2d Squadron of the 101st Cavalry which included Troop E of Buffalo, Troop F of Rochester and Troop G of Syracuse, together with the three remaining troops of the old 1st New York Cavalry, B of Albany, G of Utica and M of Geneseo. The 101st Cavalry, with Headquarters and 1st Squadron stationed in Brooklyn, was brought to regimental strength by the addition of three troops from the 51st Machine Gun Squadron (Old Squadron A, New York Guard).

Major Kenneth C. Townson of Rochester, commanding the 2nd Squadron, 101st Cavalry, was made Colonel of the 121st Cavalry and immediately put in motion the work of recruiting and training troops necessary to bring his new command up to required strength. With the necessary transfers and promotions made the units comprising the 121st Cavalry were located as follows:

Regimental Headquarters Troop and Band, Captain John Meston, Rochester; Service Troop (less Band), Captain Patrick A. Toal, Buffalo; Ist Squadron H. Q., Major Donald Armstrong, Syracuse; Troop A, Captain Ralph A. Glatt, Utica; Troop B, Captain Harry G. Taylor, Albany; Troop C, Captain Hamilton Armstrong, Syracuse; 2d Squadron H. Q., Major George M. Denny, Buffalo; Troop E, Captain Charles D. Reidpath, Buffalo; Troop F, Captain Don R. McChesney, Rochester; Troop G, Captain Ralph L. Miller, Geneseo; Captain Perry C. Euchner of Geneseo was made Lieutenant Colonel and Captain Richard J. Toole of Rochester, Regimental Adjutant; Captain Stalham S. Baker, Intelligence Officer; Captain Raymond J. Bantel, Supply Officer; Lieutenant George Norton, Chaplain.

TROOP H, SQUADRON B

At the annual dinner of Company A Boys-in-Blue, a semi-military-political organization, held at the Genesee Valley Club on the evening of February 12, 1916, it was decided by some of the members present, after a great deal of discussion on the military unpreparedness of the United States, to form a military organization and start drilling. Such an organization was perfected and became

Company A, National Defense Contingent, with the following officers:

Captain Frank M. Enos; 1st. Lieutenant Paul H. McG. Converse; 2nd Lieutenant William C. Barry, Jr.

In June, 1916, Company A withdrew from the National Defense Contingent and was mustered into service in New York State as the "Depot Unit of Troop H, First New York Cavalry."

When Troop H was ordered out for active service on the Mexican Border, the Depot Unit took over the quarters of the Troop and started drilling men preparatory to sending them as replacements to the active Troop on the Border.

In August, 1916, the following men were transferred from the rolls of the Depot Unit and ordered to report to Troop H:

Charles F. Aufdehar, Jr.; Edwin A. Bott; P. Howard Case; Roosevelt W. Durkee; Emmett L. Guerin; H. M. Hasselwander; Harold C. Neefus; Alfred G. Preston; Elmer Ross; Edward L. Zimmer.

Upon the return of Troop H, from the Mexican Border, the Depot Unit was furnished with quarters on the floors above the Troop quarters in Building No. 3, at Exposition Park, where they continued to drill, using the horses and equipment of the Troop.

In July, 1917, Captain Enos was commissioned Major and transferred to the Infantry, leaving Lieutenant Converse in command of the Depot Unit.

On the night of August 7, 1917, Lieutenant Converse received orders to assemble his men and prepare for active service.

On August 9, the Depot Unit entrained and moved to Highland, N. Y., going into camp there until August 10, when they moved to St. Elmo, N. Y., and took over Troop A, 1st Squadron, 1st New York Cavalry's old camp and guarded part of Sector North 4, on the Ashokan Aqueduct. The Depot Unit of Troop H, then became a part of the 1st Provisional Regiment, New York Guard, and the following is the muster-roll when the unit was taken into the 1st Provisional Regiment:

1st Lieutenant Paul H. McG. Converse; 2nd Lieutenant William C. Barry; 1st Sergeant Atkinson Allen; Supply Sergeant Freeman C. Allen; Mess Sergeant E. Frank Brewster, Jr.; Stable Sergeant Stalham S. Baker.

SERGEANTS: Julius H. White; Augustus H. Smith; Mortimer R. Anstice.

CORPORALS: E. Clinton Wolcott; Charles H. Chapin; Embry MacDowell; Wilmot V. Castle; Kenneth C. Townson.

PRIVATES: Arthur E. Bates; Francis R. Bellamy; Clarence K. Carlson; Floyd E. Carson; John W. Castle; Howard M. Cook; Frederick S. Cooksley; L. Philip Fahy; Jerry B. Foster; Richard M. Harris; George H. Hawks; Alexander Hough; George C. Fichter; Sheldon MacCartney; Leander M. McCord; R. Evershed Myers; Martin B. Potter; Arthur G. Seitz; Lu F. Sherman; Louis R. Smith; L. Walton Smith; Joseph F. Taylor;

W. Herbert Wall; DeWitt C. Ward; Ernest L. White; Herbert W. Spears; Howard S. Kellogg; William H. McCann; Henry C. White; Chauncey C. Woodworth; John Francis Weller.

August 23, Lieutenant Converse was ordered to Fort Niagara and transferred to the Federal Service, and Lieutenant Barry was left in command.

September 11, 1917, the Depot Unit was ordered to its home station at Rochester, N. Y., to take over the quarters of Troop H, the latter having, in the meantime, been ordered into training for service overseas.

In December the Depot Unit was mustered into the reorganized New York Guard, as Troop H, Squadron B, 1st Cavalry, New York Guard, with the following officers:

Captain Atkinson Allen; 1st Lieutenant M. R. Anstice; 2nd Lieutenant W. Herbert Wall.

Lieutenant Barry was commissioned Major and given command of Squadron B with Lieutenant Herbert W. Spears as Adjutant, and Lieutenant E. Frank Brewster, Jr., Supply Officer.

During the balance of the war, the troop was busy constantly recruiting and drilling men and, as soon as possible, transferring them into Federal organizations.

During the influenza epidemic, the members of the troop acted as orderlies and nurses at the various hospitals; one volunteer contracting the disease and died. (Carl W. Cole.)

From the time it was first organized until the signing of the Armistice the members of this organization furnished the Federal service two majors, six captains and ten lieutenants, together with many non-commissioned officers for the army and petty officers for the navy. So many men have passed from its roster to the Federal service that it is impossible to give the exact number.

Troop H also furnished the state service, during this time, two majors, one captain and four lieutenants.

Following the signing of the Armistice Troop H, absorbed by the Federalized National Guard, became Troop F, 101st Cavalry, Captain Kenneth C. Townson commanding.

102ND AMMUNITION TRAIN, 27TH DIVISION

COMPANY C

On July 10, 1917, Lt. Col. C. C. Lansing of New York City came to Rochester in search of some one to form a company of the New York Ammunition Train which was being formed at that time and was to be a part of the New York Division, later the 27th Division. The train was to be under the command of Lt. Col. Lansing and was to consist of two battalions of six companies each. One battalion was being recruited in New York City and the second was to come from upstate with headquarters at Syracuse under the command of Major Walter L. Ball. It was Col. Lansing's idea to form one company in Buffalo, one in Rochester, one in Utica and the other three in Syracuse. This was finally accomplished by Buffalo, Rochester and Utica sending extra men to fill up the three Syracuse companies.

On July 13, 1917, Arthur W. Beale of Rochester, New York was commissioned 1st Lieut., New York Field Artillery, and instructed to recruit 55 men to form a company of the up-state batallion of the New York Ammunition Train. Up to this time, there had been no active recruiting for men to drive trucks and it was an easy matter, with the help of the local newspapers, to get the necessary men. The appeal for men came out in the papers on Monday and the 55 men were recruited and their papers all filled out by Friday night of the same week, with no expense to the U. S., State or City. On July 23, the men were mustered into service at Syracuse, N.Y. as Company 6, New York Ammunition Train.

There was no provision made for quarters or equipment in Syracuse, so Company 6, was sent back to Rochester to drill and live at home until equipment could be procured from the government. No government funds were available for transportation so it was furnished by a Syracuse man. The next month was spent at the East Main Street Armory, drilling, receiving and issuing equipment and recruiting additional men for the three companies forming in Syracuse.

Editor's Note: In 1919, members of the Company published, "The History of Company C, 102d Ammunition Train, American Expeditionary Forces, 1917-1918-1919," which book included photographs, maps, and a roster. Upon authority of Captain Alson Shantz and Captain Arthur W. Beale, selected parts of said Company history are republished below:

On August 13, orders were received to report Company 6 at Syracuse for duty. The telegram read, "No funds available for transportation." By the courtesy of five Rochester men (James G. Cutler, William Bausch, Hiram W. Sibley, W. A. E. Drescher and George W. Thayer) the money was furnished for transportation to Syracuse. The next day was spent in Troop D Armory in Syracuse, and the day following after a five mile hike to Messina Springs, a battalion camp was pitched there.

Our training at Messina Springs ended August 22, when orders came to move to Pelham Bay. The next night found us on our way across the state for Pelham. Upon our arrival we found six "Train" companies, recruited in New York City, and the 3d Infantry there. We set to work and in a short time our camp was completed and we were back again at close order drill, physical torture, hiking, and so on. However we had plenty of recreation. Our free time was spent at the Bay. Nearly every night the greater part of our company was on pass, either to New York or Brooklyn.

On the morning of August 30, 1917, we left camp to take part in the "Farewell Parade" of the 27th Division. What a parade it was! Throngs of people lined the entire length of Fifth Avenue from 110th Street to Washington Square, cheering themselves hoarse, waving flags and banners, and bombarding us with candy, chewing gum and all kinds of fruits, cigars and cigarettes. We reached the end of the march at Washington Square late in the afternoon. After a lunch we boarded the elevated line and were soon back in camp to rest up for the trip, six days later, to the training camp in the south.

September 6, we struck tents and marched out of Pelham with full packs en route to City Island. Few of us will forget that trip down the river! Boats saluting, whistles blowing, great crowds along the shore cheering and waving handkerchiefs and flags. The Ammunition Train boat glided into the harbor at Jersey City and soon we were piling into tourist sleepers, grumbling because of the poor accommodations.

Sunday morning, September 9, at dawn, we reached Camp Wadsworth. We looked out of the windows. A camp! Ye Gods! and where? A big field of cotton was pointed out to us, our camp. We accepted it good naturedly, or otherwise, rolled out, set to work, and soon had enough space cleared to pitch our tents. We rested a day or two when arms were issued. These consisted of picks, shovels, wheelbarrows and garden rakes. Our first battle took place in the aforesaid cotton field. Company 6, made a gallant attack. When the dust of battle cleared away, a clean, level parade ground and a graded company street lay before us. This did not end our stevedore work. We were at it from time to time, all fall, building roads and trenches.

Training, we were told, was important. We worked hard, drilling, doing calisthenics and hiking. Usually we hiked about eight miles in the forenoon and drilled in the afternoon on the parade ground. This constituted a hardening process for our work overseas. During our training Company 5, from Buffalo, was our near neighbor. We ate in the same mess hall, worked on the same details, and hiked in the same battalion. A friendly rivalry sprang up between the two companies, and we had many hard contests on the baseball field. Whether at work or play, the time was spent very pleasurably together.

October 21, 1917, the general reorganization of the Division was put into effect. In the Ammunition Train it resulted in the reconstruction of the twelve Truck Companies which constituted the Motor Battalion, also the two Caisson Companies and one Wagon Company, to be known as the Horse Battalion. Companies 5 and 6, merged into "Truck Company No. 3," eventually became Company C, 102d Ammunition Train, under command of Lieutenant Moncrieff, Lieutenant Beale being transferred to Company I, 107th Infantry.

During the month of November, we were fortunate enough to have Captain Alson Shantz, formerly of Troop H, 1st New York Cavalry, assigned to us, also Lieutenant Cauley and Lieutenant Johnson. On the 21st of the month a detail of eighteen men, under command of Lieutenant Cauley, was sent to Grover, N. C., for the purpose of furnishing wood for Camp Wadsworth. This, as well as the many other duties assigned to the Ammunition Train, made us assume the role of a labor battalion.

About noon, May 18, we made our last hike in Camp Wadsworth, going from our company street to Fair Forest. There we entrained on the Southern Railroad for the coast where we spent another period of nearly one month in Camp Stuart, Newport News, Va.

June 13, we marched out again. This time it was not a false alarm. At the docks, the Red Cross ladies gave us coffee and cookies. Sad to relate, this was the last time we were to have their cheerful and encouraging presence for many months. We boarded a British boat, the Czar, and Company C was quartered in the forward steerage section, below the water line. The Czar had been at one time a Russian immigrant steamer. It carried odors unfamiliar. They were simply horrible. Luckily the weather was warm, and most of us slept on deck, going down to our quarters as infrequently as possible.

After a week on the water we grew tired of the view. It was not until the thirteenth day that we sighted land. In the late afternoon the Czar anchored in the harbor of Brest. After some time lighters pulled along side and we were soon delighted at the sensation of standing on the soil of France. It is a question, however, whether we were the happiest over being in France at last, or in quitting the Czar.

June 27, 1918, after having been taken on shore in lighters, we formed companies along the wharves of Brest, and marched up the long hill leading out of town. Who will ever forget that hill or that hike? After thirteen days of lying around on the boat we were in poor condition, especially on account of the poorly prepared food. We marched to "Napoleon's Barracks," but as the barracks were full we continued on into the country. When about exhausted, a halt was called and we pitched "pup" tents in an open field. No advance arrangements had been made. We had no meal that night.

After five days in the Brest region we marched down to the wharves one morning, starting about 3 A. M. Arriving there, we were halted beside a long line of small, untidy looking French freight cars. We piled into them, 40 to a car, with our boxes of rations. This was our initial introduction to a very popular method of travel in France during the war—"40 hommes, 8 chevaux"—forty men or eight horses to a freight car. It seemed about twenty too many. So things go in army life. C'est la guerre. Notwithstanding the discomforts the ride that day was beautiful indeed. The country appeared very odd to us and wonderfully interesting.

That night we fully realized the limitation of our box car. There was not room for all to lie down at once, so some of us took turns at sitting on our provision boxes in the center of the car. We were travelling south through the beautiful chateau district of France. We passed Nantes and the next evening reached Bordeaux. Not far outside this city, we left our cramped quarters. Then came one of our hardest hikes in France. Five miles of uphill work at a slow and jerky pace. After the cramped railroad ride it certainly was not fun. At last we reached Camp de Souge. After plodding along a mile further, we were given a place to rest our weary bones.

Next day was the Fourth of July. We rested that day and a few days more, but then a schedule of our day's duties was posted. From then on we arose in the darkness, stood reveille at 6 and started in at 7 on our daily rounds of gas mask drills, drilling, signaling, and lectures on engines and shells. A month passed and we still kept at our schedule; with some variations, however, afforded by the new job of fighting fires. That was a volunteer job once—just once—and from then on a detail to be missed if possible.

To make us realize the value of the gas mask we had to go into a gas chamber. It accomplished its purpose without the least shadow of a doubt, and we will never forget how our famous gas sergeant came through the barracks before daylight giving gas alarm. We were obliged to dress with gas masks on.

Towards the last of August the tiresome range detail came into being and soon afterwards rumors came that our move north was near at hand. At last the final orders came for the Horse Battalion to go by train and the Motor Battalion overland in their trucks. Our training in France was at an end.

September 7, about 10 A. M., after piling company boxes and our packs and rolls into trucks, we climbed aboard. The four Motor Companies went out in sections, a few hundred yards between each section, eleven trucks to a company. We went through the center of Bordeaux and then turned north, on a wonderful trip through one of the most beautiful regions of France. The sun shone as we rode along. The trucks kept far enough apart to avoid the dust, making it delightful riding. It was like a huge picnic. We cheered and sang until we were tired out. As we passed through the villages the people would line the streets and wave and call to us. We were in the grape country, and the people threw us large, juicy bunches of the fruit along with bouquets of flowers.

Sunday was spent in Bar-le-Duc. Happily all the cafes and stores were open. Our last day behind the front was an enjoyable one. We were scheduled to leave at 10 that evening but it was almost midnight before we started on the final stretch of our journey to the front.

It would be a difficult matter to give a clear description of our thoughts as we piled into our trucks at 11 P. M., September 15, for an all-night drive to the front. We can safely say that curiosity was foremost in our minds, and little of fear. We were ignorant of what we were coming to.

Our bivouac the second night, was far from peaceful. At 10 o'clock, we were startled by the sharp command, "Get those horses in the shadow of the wood! Enemy planes!" And then we discerned the unsteady drone of an airplane motor unlike any we had ever heard before. Immediately following this, was a crash, accompanied by a deafening explosion of a bomb, or "ash can," as we soon came to term them. From then on, excitement reigned and grew higher with the explosion of more bombs.

Suddenly, the dreaded cry, "Gas!" came; then all records were broken for quick movements into the masks. "Hey! Where is my gas mask?" "Get out of the way." "I can't find my mask." "Have you my gas mask?" "Where in hell is Daymont, I've lost my mask." Pup tents were torn down in the scuffle and confusion. The "pur" of the plane motors and the "put-put-put" of the machine guns resounded from the moon-lit sky. All sorts of things imaginable, and more, were heard in that few minutes (seemingly hours) of front line life in that eventful first night.

Most of the following day was spent in digging trenches for protection in case of shell fire. Just as we had completed them we were moved to an adjoining wood. The wood was located just outside Balecourt. It was at this time, we learned that the 52d Brigade was to support the 33d Division instead of our own. From here we started making trips to the front on the Frommerville sector, supplying ammunition to the batteries at La Claire and Charny, as well as making one trip to the reserve infantry trenches with rifle ammunition.

The "buck" private soon learned that handling 75's and 155's was far different from herding cattle on Texas plains or pushing a pen in a New York skyscraper. Finding our way to Frommerville (Division Headquarters), Germonville (dump), La Claire, Charny, and Chattancourt in the dark soon became second nature, to us.

September 24 we again moved, going to another wood on the opposite side of Balecourt. Half of the company found shelter in a dilapidated barracks and stables. The balance pitched tents. There we became aware of something big to come. Each day saw more cannon going into place in the surrounding hills and ammunition massed at the batteries. We sensed a big drive. It started September 26, and lasted until the signing of the armistice. "The last offensive," everyone called it, and thank God, such it proved to be.

September 26, we made our first trip over the roads in daylight, carrying ammunition from Nixeville to Chattoncourt by way of Charny and Marne. At least a dozen observation balloons were in the air all that day and were the object of attack from enemy planes. While passing along the road between Charny and Marne we saw two balloons shot down almost over our heads. The two enemy planes then flew over our train at a low altitude, emptying their machine guns at the road. Oh yes, we prayed considerably. We never before realized what a big battle meant.

October 7 we moved to La Claire. There we found dugouts to live in. Some were dark. On the whole they were fairly comfortable. We at least felt secure from "Jerry's" disconcerting air attacks or stray shells.

Our next move was to the historic city, Verdun. We left La Claire Tuesday, October 22, and proceeded in our trucks to Fauburg Pave, just outside of the gates of Verdun, where we were billeted in French barracks, some of which were very badly shot up from the four years continuous shelling of the city. We rested there four days and again took up our work of transporting ammunition to the battery positions.

We now worked on the east side of the Meuse River, which the Americans had crossed after a hard fight. We found the roads to be much better than any we had traversed at the front. Every truck was in constant use. We were advancing very fast. In many cases the ammunition had to be carried ahead with the artillery.

Ever since we had come to Verdun, there had been rumors of the war ending. When, Sunday, November 10, we heard that an Armistice would begin Monday, November 11, we could not believe it. We waited and hoped, but the cannonading only seemed greater, and we thought, "only another rumor." When at 11 o'clock the guns suddenly ceased firing, joy and real hope were in the hearts of the men that the long war had come to a victorious close at last.

After the Armistice, November 26, we moved down to Belleray, just south of Verdun. This was our first hike in a long time, but luckily it was not very far.

The great event of Belleray was undoubtedly a fire there. After we had done considerable digging and thoroughly cleaned the town, we moved on. Getting up at 4 A. M., we marched down to Dugny and had plenty of time to catch a train, which left around 9 that evening.

The trip from Dugny to La Chapelle was the worst of our experience in the "Side-door Pullmans." Three nights and two days on the train with our old friends "Corned Willy," beans and tomatoes. During the day we relieved the monotony somewhat by riding on the flat cars. However, the intermittent rain made that pleasure uncertain. After the third night we arrived, about 8 A. M., at our destination. A stiff and weary crowd we were! It was then necessary to march to Montsurs, seven miles away. We spent Christmas there.

On the morning of February 25 we lined up by companies along Montsur's main street, or rather Grand Rue, and marched away with the band leading. All the people were out to see us go, and we felt we were leaving many good friends. Once more we hiked to La Chapelle, but as we had not been sleeping in box cars for the three preceding nights it was not nearly as hard going as on our arrival.

The ride to Brest was the best we had had in box cars. For once we were not crowded. Every man was able to lie down on the floor and sleep. When we arrived in Brest next morning everybody was full of pep.

Cheering, bantering words with the "M. P.'s" and such others as were around, Company C pulled into Brest about 9 in the morning of February 26, 1919.

Sunday afternoon we made the usual false start. After packs had all been made our departure was postponed till the next morning. But then, we really did start, finally, and marched five miles, in the rain, to the docks. After very little delay, we boarded a lighter and went out to the boat that was to take us across the sea and home. Goodbye "A. E. F."

We embarked on the transport, Mount Vernon, formerly the North German Lloyd liner, Kronprinzessin Cecile, March 3, 1919. Speaking of the Happy Hunting Grounds, the minute we were located an immediate rush was started on the canteen that lasted until everything was sold out, real candy, and as much as one wanted. The weather was a bit rough the first two days out, but soon almost everybody got their sea legs. We had an enjoyable trip. The two daily meals took up a good deal of time. What a battle it was to get into the famous "fourth sitting."

Early, March 11, we pulled into Hoboken. Some of us even went without breakfast to get a look at Madamoiselle Liberty. We were greeted with a sure 'nough "jazz" band and a bevy of Red Cross nurses and Salvation Army girls, not to mention the Welcome Committee's marvelous craft sent out by the Mayor.

We disembarked that morning, and then Company C received the happy news. They were to police up the boat. So, we all filed back on the ship. After working a couple of hours we again got off. On the wharf we were given biscuits and coffee by the A. R. C. and chocolate and candy by the Salvation Army. After that we were loaded into a small boat which took us to Weehawken. There we boarded a train for Camp Merritt. At last we were really in the good old U. S. A.

The joy of our homecoming was marred by the death, the night before we landed, of one of the finest fellows in the company, Corporal George Banning of Rochester, N. Y.

Contrary to precedent, the day for our leaving Camp Merritt proved to be warm and fair. Incidentally, even more contrary to precedent, this was our first time to have regrets on leaving any post. Camp Merritt was a camp of comfort, convenience and "good eats."

With our usual luck, we marched out of camp at 7 A. M. and crossed the Palisades to Alpine Landing, only to find that we would have to wait a few hours before we could embark on the ferry for

1934

New York. By ferry and by elevated we reached the 8th Coast Defense Armory about 3 in the afternoon. There we left our equipment and were free until 7 A. M. Tuesday morning.

The magnificence of the decorations along the streets, and the size and enthusiasm of the crowd, made the parade of the 27th Division, of which Company C was a part, a wonderful event. Such an immense and continuous crowd we had never seen and probably will never see again. All our friends were in the stands at Ninety-second Street. They gave us a great welcome as we passed by.

Monday, March 31, all the men from Rochester marched away from the demobilization camp for a special parade in their home city, cutting the company down to half size. Thursday the rest of us got up at 4 A. M. in order to get an early start. Around 7:30 we marched down to Camp Headquarters and were paid off. Then away we went to the station and after the tickets had been purchased the long looked-forward-to discharges were given out. At last we were free men. The great adventure was over. We were going back to our homes and our friends.

306TH FIELD SIGNAL BATTALION

By LIEUTENANT WARREN W. IRWIN

Shortly after a state of war was declared between the United States and Germany, A. M. Lindsay, Jr., of Rochester was given the task of enlisting a Field Signal Battalion. Mr. Lindsay was then 1st Lieutenant in the Signal Reserve Corps.

This Field Signal Battalion was to be known as the 3d Field Signal Battalion and recruited in Western New York, with Rochester as the center. It was understood from letters and statements made by army officials that this battalion should be recruited to full strength from this territory and be assigned to some army division as a unit intact. It was one of fourteen to be organized. The authorized strength of a battalion at that time was 239 enlisted men and 13 officers. Lieutenant Lindsay had power to enlist all of the men and was to have the opportunity of selecting officers.

A recruiting office was established and a vigorous campaign opened. The first enlistment was made June 4, 1917. Lieutenant Lindsay made several trips to Buffalo, Syracuse and Jamestown and various other points to enlist competent men for signal work. Telegraph operators, radio operators, telephone men, horsemen, cooks and mechanics were enlisted to the proper requirements so that the battalion would be well balanced. The enlistments for the battalion were completed in July, but orders were received to enlist additional well selected men to fill any vacancies which might occur in camp. In all. 303 men were enlisted.

It became evident in September that the battalion would not be kept together but that detachments would be assigned to various camps. Small units eventually were ordered to Camp Sherman, Camp Upton and to various schools.

Finally, orders were received by 161 men to proceed to Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C. This detachment left Rochester October 10, 1917, and arrived in Camp Jackson October 12, 1917, and was assigned to the 81st Division as the 306th Field Signal Battalion. Later, more of the original battalion's enlisted men were assigned to Camp Jackson which brought the total in the battalion from Western New York up to nearly 200.

The size of a Field Signal Battalion had been increased by this time to approximately 475 men. The men from Rochester were assigned to companies at camp and vacancies were filled from selected draftsmen. The battalion never was up to full strength however until it sailed for France.

Captain Harry S. Strider was in command of the battalion when it first arrived at Camp Jackson. Lieutenant A. M. Lindsay was in command of "A" Company, Lieutenant Jones, "B" Company and Lieutenant Carl Danner, "C" Company, with Lieutenant Frank E. Mullen. Adjutant and Supply Officer. Later, Lieutenant Allegar, Lieutenant Howard, Lieutenant Hammond, and Lieutenant Roddey were assigned to the battalion's commissioned strength. Lieutenant Allegar was made Adjutant and Supply Officer and Lieutenant Mullen was transferred to "C" Company. Lieutenant Howard was assigned to "C" Company, Lieutenant Hammond was assigned to "C" Company, and Lieutenant Roddey was assigned to "C" Company.

Although the barracks were practically completed when the battalion arrived in camp there was considerable cleaning up to be done, such as felling trees, pulling roots, grading, etc. The first few weeks were spent in policing the grounds and at drill and fundamental instruction in Signal work.

About December 1, Lieutenant Lindsay resigned from the service. Shortly after Captain Strider was transferred from Camp Jackson to Camp Wadsworth. Major Samuel R. Todd came early in December and assumed command of the battalion. About this time also various members of the battalion were selected and sent to officers training camps and several to signal schools.

Early in January, Captain Carson was assigned to the battalion and given command of "C" Company. Lieutenants Jones and Mullen were commissioned captains and given command of "C" and "A" Companies, respectively. Lieutenant Danner was then transferred to "B" Company.

By January 1, 1918, the battalion was beginning to shape itself. Non-commissioned officers had been made, first sergeants selected and examinations held for the rank of Master Signal Electrician. All of these grades were finally filled.

March 16, 1918, Sergeant W. W. Irwin of "A" Company was commissioned from the ranks to be 2d Lieutenant and assigned to "A" Company. This completed the officers for "A" Company. Shortly afterward, 2d Lieutenants Brown, Brubaker and Van Dusen were assigned, Brown to "B" Company, and Brubaker and Van Dusen to "C," completing the officers of the battalion with the exception of the medical officer, Captain Frank Mower, who came to the battalion immediately after.

Training was continued at Camp Jackson until May, 1918, when the 81st Division was transferred to Camp Sevier at Greenville, S. C., arriving there May 29. Here the Division trained until early in July when it received orders to move to a port of embarkation. At Camp Sevier, Lieutenant Howard was made Adjutant. The battalion left Camp Sevier July 19, 1918, and went directly to Camp Mills, Garden City, L. I.

Just before sailing, Captain Jones and Lieutenant Hammond were detached and sent overseas to a school. Captain Jones never came back but Lieutenant Hammond rejoined the battalion in France. Lieutenant Danner was commissioned Captain and placed in command of "B" Company.

July 31, the battalion embarked on the transport Mandingo, formerly the Appam, a German war prize. The ship arrived in Liverpool, England, August 16, where the battalion disembarked and was taken at once to "Knotty Ash," a rest camp just outside of Liverpool. A day later the battalion was transferred to Romsey, a camp 15 miles from Southampton. A few days later it was marched to Southampton and sailed for France, landing in Cherbourg the next morning, August 20. One member of the battalion, E. A. Pegg, was left in England on account of sickness of which he died later.

At Cherbourg, the battalion was sent to another rest camp where it laid up one day and was then shipped by train to Tonnerre in the Department of Yonne, France, Division Headquarters.

In Tonnerre, the boys got their first taste of French life. Tonnerre is a town of probably 5,000 people and one of the oldest in France. The men of the 81st Division were the first American troops to reach the town and were received royally. A good many friendships sprung up and several members of the battalion still correspond with their French friends.

Training was resumed at Tonnerre. Communication was established and maintained with all units of the Division. The battalion was instructed fully in the operation of apparatus in use on the front and was fully equipped with arms, etc.

September 18 the entire division was moved into Alsace-Lorraine with headquarters at St. Dié. It was a quiet front. The 81st Division remained there until the middle of October and then marched by short stages to Rambervilliers, a point in reserve on the Meuse Argonne front. The Division finally went into action with headquarters at Belrupt, five miles southeast of Verdun. Battalion headquarters was first at Sommedieu, but later at Belrupt. The Division relieved the 35th Division. The 306th Field Signal Battalion took over the lines of communication and maintained them. The Division was on the extreme left of the Second Army which was pushing forward with Metz as its objective. Several casualties occurred, the chief among them being:

Sergeant 1st Class, Charles L. Anderson, gassed; Corporal Floyd Oster, wounded in the head, and Private 1st Class, Isaac Scheerens, died from wounds.

At the front, Captains Carson and Mower were commissioned majors, 1st Lieutenants Howard and Hammond were commissioned captains and 2d Lieutenants Irwin, Brown, Brubaker and Van Dusen were commissioned 1st lieutenants. Major Carson was transferred to the 80th Division and Captain Mullen was given command of "C" Company and Captain Hammond, "A" Company.

After the Armistice was signed the following officers and men received citations for bravery in action:

Major Samuel R. Todd; 1st Lieutenant Carl Brubaker; Sergeants, 1st Class, George L. Ferguson; Charles L. Anderson; and Sergeants Raymond B. Christy; John T. Porter, and George W. Jones; Corporals, Floyd Oster; Patrick H. Houle and Henry C. Sayers; and Privates 1st Class, Isaac Scheerens (died of wounds); Iner Jacobson; Hjalmar H. Berg; Francisco G. Carrea; John Peters and Otto H. Taube.

Lieutenant Chambers came to the battalion at Sommedieu. About a week after the Armistice the Division started back into France finally arriving about December 1, with headquarters at Mussy-sur-Seine. Lieutenant Irwin was there made supply officer to replace Lieutenant Allegar.

A musical show called, "Just for Tonight," was given at this time at various points in the divisional area by members of the Signal Battalion. Through the influence of Major Todd, the show was later booked for a tour of engagements in Italy. Among the places visited were Rome, Milano, Turin, Genoa, Florence, Naples, Venice, and Trieste.

It was during the stay at Mussey-sur-Seine that leaves of absence were given. Some men visited Paris, some Nice and Monte Carlo, others England and Ireland, and a few went to Italy.

The battalion left Mussy May 1 for Chatillion-sur-Seine. This point was nearer the center of the Divisional area, which was an aid to efficient communications. Late in April, Lieutenants Chambers, Roddey, Irwin, and Captain Howard were transferred to the 3d Army in Germany.

About the middle of April the Division began preparing for the return trip to the United States. The Signal Battalion received orders May 4 to be ready for the move and left Chatillon-sur-Seine May 14 for the Le Mans area. There it was billeted in St. Mars-sous-Ballou and remained until early in June.

June 10, 1919 the entire battalion sailed from St. Nazaire on the Roanoke and arrived in Charleston, S. C. June 22, 1919. All of the New York State members of the battalion were sent to Camp Upton, Yaphank, Long Island, where they were discharged from service, July 1, 1919.

UNITED STATES ARMY BASE HOSPITAL No. 19

AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES

By Colonel John M. Swan, Med.-Res. and Captain Mark Heath, M.A.-Res.

United States Army Base Hospital Number 19 had its origin in a conversation between Major William C. Gorgas, then Surgeon General of the Army, and Dr. John M. Swan at the meeting of the American Public Health Association in Rochester, New York, in September, 1915.

In reply to a question as to what the office of the Surgeon General was doing toward preparedness, General Gorgas said that Dr. Harvey Cushing and Dr. George W. Crile had recently returned to the United States from Europe and had urged the Surgeon General to organize base hospital groups for quick mobilization in case the country should become involved in the struggle then in progress. General Gorgas said that his office was getting together the names of groups of physicians and surgeons who were accustomed to cooperative endeavor and who might be expected to work well together under the trying circumstances of war. He was making a provisional list of these groups for further consideration.

The Surgeon General asked Dr. Swan if he would like to organize such a group and upon receiving an affirmative answer authorized him to send the names of his associates to Washington, whereupon they would be commissioned in the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army. The plan at that time was to have ready lists of officers who would be willing to do the professional work in 500 bed hospitals.

The following physicians of Rochester were invited to form a group such as that suggested by the Surgeon General: Dr. Nathan D. McDowell; Dr. Charles W. Hennington; Dr. William V. Ewers; Dr. Clayton K. Haskell; Dr. C. Wentworth Hoyt; Dr. Albert Bowen; Dr. John D. Fowler; Dr. Max Almy; Dr. Arthur P. Reed; Dr. Charles L. Hincher and Dr. Charles C. Sutter.

'During the fall and winter of 1915-1916 these physicians were examined and commissioned first lieutenants in the Medical Reserve Corps. Early in February, 1916, it was announced that in consultation with the office of the Surgeon General of the Army, and in accordance with the provisions of Circular No. 8, 1912, of the War Department, the American Red Cross had undertaken to enroll the personnel for fifty base hospital units in various parts of the country according to a uniform table of organization. This work was undertaken by the Department of Military Relief of the American Red Cross, of which at that time Colonel Jefferson R. Kean, M. C., U. S. A., was the Director General.

In February, 1916, Colonel Kean visited Rochester and explained the nature of the organization desired and left instructions for the increase of the officer personnel to twenty-six, the enrollment of enlisted personnel, the enrollment of the nursing personnel, and the collection of $25,000 for equipment.

Later in February, Miss Jane Delano, the Director of the Red Cross Nursing Service visited Rochester and interviewed the nurses who belonged to the Red Cross nursing service; she explained the necessity for the enrollment of nurses in the Red Cross nursing service and received from Miss Emma Jones and Miss Jessica S. Heal promises that they would both enroll in the unit being formed in Rochester in any capacity desired. Miss Jones was selected to be the Chief Nurse of the Hospital and Miss Heal to be the Assistant Chief Nurse.

The officer personnel was increased by the addition of the following physicians, all of whom were commissioned first lieutenants in the Medical Reserve Corps: Dr. Frederick J. Garlick; Dr. Harry A. Sadden; Dr. Warren Wooden; Dr. Edgar W. Phillips; Dr. Edward T. Wentworth; Dr. Edward L. Hanes; Dr. Albert D. Kaiser; Dr. Alvah S. Miller; Dr. John R. Booth; and Dr. James M. Flynn; two dentists, who were commissioned first lieutenants in the Dental Reserve Corps, Dr. Arthur W. Smith and Dr. Ralph H. Wickins; and Rev. Herbert W. Gates. As there was no provision in the law for a reserve corps of chaplains, Mr. Gates was carried on the rolls of the hospital as a civilian. Dr. John M. Swan was given a Red Cross Commission as Director of this Unit, which was designated Red Cross Base Hospital 19.

In March, 1916, a meeting was held in the office of Mayor Edgerton, and a Red Cross Chapter, with Mr. Clarence D. Van Zandt as Chairman, was formed. The executive committee of this chapter, of which the Director was a member, was always in close touch with the activities of the hospital.

Meetings for the enrollment of the enlisted personnel were held in the Brick Church Institute, beginning June 1st. At these meetings the object of the formation of a hospital unit under the provisions of the enlisted reserve corps clause of the army organization was explained and on June 22, the first men enrolled, forming the nucleus of that body which later did such good work in the active life of the hospital.

The nucleus of this important part of the hospital was composed of Vaughan Payne; *William W. Morris; *Herman Wild; George L. Reeder; *Nelson B. Neth; *Edward H. Tanner; *Henry V. Jones; *Mason H. De Lano; *Edward L. Barrett; Frank L. Gray, and *Walter J. Shields. Those men whose names are marked with an asterisk served throughout the active life of the hospital being discharged from the army on the demobilization of the unit in May, 1919, except Hermann Wild, who was discharged with Base Hospital 115.

All through the summer and autumn of 1916 and the winter and spring of 1917, these meetings were held first in the Brick Church Institute and after November 16, 1916 in the Third Regiment Armory.

A partial list of the subjects covered in the instruction of the men includes personal hygiene, hospital ward routine, first aid and bandaging, elementary anatomy and physiology, in addition to the military drill pertaining to the medical department of the army. The men were also given a preliminary physical examination. The enrollment of the nurses went on during this period under the direction of Miss Jones and Miss Heal.

It had originally been the intention of the Surgeon General's Office and the Department of Military Relief of the American Red Cross to send young women who had received instruction in certain phases of hospital work and had passed a satisfactory examination and who were fit physically with Base Hospital Units as Nurse's Aids. This subdivision of the personnel was determined upon from the experience of the Allies who found that during major military operations the number of trained nurses available was far from sufficient to supply the requirements of the patients for women's care.

Difficulties of transportation and other features of starting the operation of a new department of hospital personnel necessitated the detachment of these women from our hospital before it left the United States. Nevertheless, the young women who took the instruction and passed the mental and physical examinations deserve high praise for their loyalty to a new idea and their desire to serve their country. The following were enrolled in this unit before the order was received discontinuing the enrollment: Elizabeth S. Knight; Elizabeth H. Hart; Alice K. Foote; Janet C. Everest; Esther Steele; Amy B. Ewers; M. Elizabeth Jones; Evelyn S. Hubbard; Edith E.

Ryder; Estelle Sumner; Mary P. Allen; Winifred Jones; and Laura B. Robins.

The officers met at the Third Regiment Armory through the courtesy of the officer in charge and control every three weeks and discussed the questions that came up in the correspondence course for Medical Reserve Officers offered by the service school at Fort Leavenworth. They also examined the East High School, with the permission of the Superintendent of Schools, and made plans, which were filed in the office of the Surgeon General, for converting it into a military hospital.

In July and August, 1916, Dr. Hincher, Dr. Hoyt, Dr. Wentworth, Dr. Fowler and the Director attended the Plattsburg Camp for Medical Reserve Corps officers. In the autumn of 1916, Dr. Aikman resigned; Dr. McDowell resigned on January 1, 1917, and Dr. Smith resigned in March, 1917. Dr. Leonard W. Jones was appointed to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Dr. McDowell and Dr. Marvin V. Welcher was appointed to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Dr. Smith. During July, August and September, 1916, those who were enrolled were offered the privilege of receiving anti-typhoid vaccination. This was given at the General Hospital by Dr. Ewers and Dr. Kaiser.

Irondequoit Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was interested in the Base Hospital from the beginning and in the autumn of 1916 presented us with a box of hospital equipment, technically known as Box No. 1, containing sheets, pillow cases, towels, face cloths, etc. The second box of equipment was contributed by the Order of the Eastern Star shortly afterwards.

The privilege of using the drill floor of the Third Regiment armory, National Guard, State of New York, was granted us beginning November 23, 1916, through the courtesy of the officer in charge and control. Later, when it was necessary to have offices open all day the officers of the New York State Militia placed their rooms at our disposal, the Naval Militia having been previously called into the service of the United States.

On September 24, 1916, Miss Jones sailed from New York for duty in the hospital at Yvetot, France, conducted by Dr. Ralph R. Fitch, of Rochester. The resignation of Miss Jones was followed by the promotion of Miss Heal to be the Chief Nurse of the Unit and of Miss Eunice A. Smith to be the Assistant Chief Nurse.

In February, 1917, after diplomatic relations were severed with Germany, we opened headquarters in the Hotel Rochester, through the courtesy of the hotel management and the collection of the equipment was begun in a more energetic manner than had been employed before. A committee of women of which Mrs. William R. Hardy was chairman undertook to furnish the hospital garments and bed linen. Work rooms were established at the Hotel Seneca, and in the Professional Building on Chestnut Street, the latter through the courtesy of F. L. Greeno & Company.

Mrs. Hardy appointed the following chairmen of sub-committees: Advisory, Mrs. Lucius L. Button; Purchasing, Mrs. W. H. H. Rogers; Organizing, Mrs. Frank G. Patchin; Inspector of Work Rooms, Mrs. De Leck, Miss Laura Robins and Mrs. J. W. Olin; Packing, Mrs. Charles W. Taylor; Inspectors of Surgical Dressings, Mrs. George C. Gordon and Mrs. Frank Elliott; Inspector of Garments and Visiting Committee, Mrs. Charles W. Frisbie; Private Secretary and Order Clerk, Miss Mildred Hunting. In addition the following women gave valuable assistance to the chairmen of these committees: Miss Helene Langslow; Mrs. Wilbur S. Grant; Miss Anna Watkins; Miss Mary Allen; Miss Adelaide Devine; Mrs. D. M. Garson; Mrs. J. R. Culkin; Mrs. Erlo H. Gray; Mrs. Benjamin Stetson; Mrs. George L. Andrus; Mrs. George E. Faulkner; Mrs. Nettie M. Wyckoff.

This committee, and the various groups of women which worked under their direction, furnished the hospital with an excellent equipment of hospital linen and garments of all kinds which was valued at $12,000 actual cost; making no allowance for the labor of making the various articles. Mr. Simon Stein furnished the packing cases for this equipment and cut all garments.

On February 20, 1917, the first annual muster and inspection of the hospital was held in the Third Regiment Armory. Lieutenant Colonel Henry Page, M. C., U. S. A., was the mustering and inspecting officer. Out of a total enrolled personnel of 134 officers, nurses, enlisted men and civilian employees there were ninety present, or 67.1%. The officers and nurses were in uniform. In his report to the Commanding General of the Eastern Department, Colonel Page said in part: "The personnel seems to possess a keen interest and it is evident that much progress has been made in the right direction.

. . . . The unit seems to be in a most healthy condition. A great deal of public interest has been excited by its activities, while within the organization itself there seems to be a determination to make the unit of real value to the Country."

Between the time of the severing of the diplomatic relations with Germany and the time that the Rochester Chapter began its first War Drive, from the proceeds of which the remaining equipment of the hospital was to be paid, the Director had received from various sources $9,174.85 which had been deposited with the Treasurer of the Chapter. Mr. Charles R. Markus was appointed purchasing agent and disbursing officer for the hospital on April 19, 1917. Through his expert knowledge an admirable hospital equipment was secured and as fast as it arrived was stored in the basement of the Post Office, the Third Regiment Armory and at the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Warehouse.

In May, 1917, Captain Joseph H. Hickey, who was assigned to Base Hospital No. 23, Buffalo, for duty as Quartermaster, and in addition was temporarily to perform the duties of Quartermaster for Base Hospital No. 19, Rochester, reported, inspected the condition of our equipment, and gave valuable advice.

On May 29, 1917, the Director was ordered into the active service of the United States for the purpose of enlisting the personnel of Base Hospital Unit No. 19 in the Medical Enlisted Reserve Corps. Enlistments of the enrolled personnel began on June 4, and the required 152 men were reported enlisted on August 16, 1917. In enlisting the men it became necessary to follow the provisions of the War Department Circular with subsequent amendments concerning recruiting and several men who had been enrolled in the unit for many months and had done excellent work in the preliminary activities of the organization had to be rejected. Later, owing to a modification of the requirements of the Adjutant General's Office, it was possible to enlist these men, who rendered faithful service during the active life of the hospital.

Captain Harry A. Sadden and 1st Lieutenant Edward T. Went-worth were assigned to active duty shortly after the Commanding Officer's orders were received, to assist him in the work of physical examinations, recording of enlistment data, obtaining of fingerprint records, measuring for clothing, shoes, etc.

Early in July, Sergeants Mark Heath and Walter J. Shields and Privates Clarence H. Ager and Vernon F. Adkin were called into active service of the United States for duty in the office of the Commanding Officer of Base Hospital No. 19.

Late in July, Captain Hickey was relieved from further duty as Quartermaster of the hospital and Captain Sidney B. Williams was ordered to report to the Commanding Officer for assignment to duty as Quartermaster. Captain Williams reported for duty on August 1.

Dr. Wentworth's services could be dispensed with after the rush of physical examinations was over and at his own request he was placed on the inactive list on July 5.

Hospital Sergeant Joseph Feldstein was ordered to the hospital from Syracuse, December 8. On December 17, notification was received from the office of the Surgeon General that the hospital "has been designated to the War Department authorities for service overseas," and the same day confidential Special Orders No. 97, Head-quarters, Eastern Department were received as follows: "Under telegraphic instructions of the War Department, December 14, 1917, the necessary quartermaster supplies and ordnance will be furnished to the enlisted personnel of Base Hospital No. 19 (Rochester General Hospital) to be mobilized at the Third Regiment Armory, National Guard, Rochester, New York."

On December 17, orders were received to proceed with the mobilization of the hospital in the Third Regiment Armory. The men were notified and, on the 20th, 148 of the total 153 men were on duty in the Third Regiment Armory, in uniform and the mess started. The five missing men reported as soon as they could reach Rochester, and when Colonel George A. Skinner, M. C., U. S. A., arrived to relieve Major Swan of the command, he found an organization which received his warm praise.

Colonel Skinner arrived in Rochester on December 23, 1917, and took command. January, February, March, April and part of May, 1918, were spent in perfecting the organization, in daily drills and hikes, in inspection of equipment, in instruction in the wards of the hospitals of Rochester, and in instruction in the duties of the medical department soldier. This period was very trying on nearly all, as every person was anxious to be on the way. The difficulties of transportation, owing to lack of ships and the activities of the enemy U-boats, made it necessary for all concerned to be good soldiers and to do the duty of the day as it presented itself in a cheerful and thorough manner. The personnel acquitted itself of this difficult task in an exemplary manner.

The officers began to report as soon as the order to mobilize was received. Many of them had been called to the service of the United States and were on duty in distant camps: Major Ewers was at Camp Oglethorpe, Ga.; Major Hennington was at the School for Brain Surgery, Chicago; Captain Hoyt was at Camp Sherman, Ohio; Captain Flynn was at the School for Military Röntgenology at Chicago; Captain Booth was at Columbus Barracks, Ohio; Captain Wentworth was at the Base Hospital, Camp Pike, Ark.; Captain Hanes was at Columbus Barracks, Ohio; Lieutenant Fowler was at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.; Lieutenant Wooden was at Fort Strong, Mass.; Lieutenant Phillips was at Vancouver Barracks, Oregon; Lieutenant Garlick was at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Virginia; Lieutenant Smith was at the School for Oral and Cosmetic Surgery, in Philadelphia; Lieutenant Bowen was at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

Early in February instruction was received to increase the personnel of the hospital from that sufficient for a 500 bed organization to that for 1000 beds. This required the enlistment of forty-seven additional men and the assignment of ten additional officers. Men who had been called in the draft and who volunteered for immediate service could be assigned to the hospital on application by the Commanding Officer to the Adjutant General's Office, through the office of the Surgeon General. Of the additional men, twenty-one were thus secured; the others were of an age that did not bring them under the selective service law and they were enlisted. The officers were assigned from the various medical organizations in the training camps.

The activities of the hospital during the period of mobilization may be divided into training activities and social activities. The training activities may be divided into military and professional training. The military activities consisted in various routine duties, the constant repetition of which makes for the efficiency of any organization, and lectures on administration from the Manual of the Medical Department. In addition to the drills prescribed in the Drill Manual for Sanitary Troops, the company was formed in four platoons of fifty men each.

Each platoon had assigned to it a Captain and two Lieutenants, so that it was possible to conduct the work in such a way that a spirit of healthy rivalry was created between the different platoons in perfecting themselves in the duties of the soldier. It was possible under this system to hold evening parade at retreat. This ceremony afforded the friends of the men an opportunity to witness the progress made in soldierly bearing which always brought out an appreciative audience. Drill and floor work was supplemented by hikes; at first without equipment; later with increasing loads until the men were carrying full equipment.

During the period the unit was quartered at the Main Street East Armory, a regular program of garrison duties was carried out according to an established program of formations, beginning with First Call at 6 A. M. and ending each day with Taps at 11 P. M.

Through the courtesy of the managers of the following institutions the men, in small detachments, were taken to the wards for instruction in hospital ward work: Rochester State Hospital for the Insane; Rochester General Hospital; Rochester Homeopathic Hospital, and St. Mary's Hospital. Several of the enlisted men were instructed in the administration of anaesthetics in the operating rooms of these hospitals. The cooks, and a group of men who had indicated their desire to work in the subsistence organization of the hospital, received instruction in the Department of Household Arts of Mechanics Institute.

The Young Men's Christian Association opened its swimming pool for instruction in swimming for those who could not swim. This course was very popular. The instruction received, however, was never put to actual practice under the conditions for which it was designed as a preparation. The Articles of War, as prescribed in Army Regulations, were read to the command on December 22, 1917.

On January 4, 1918, the first field day was held at the Armory. There were about 4,000 spectators who watched, with much interest, the exhibition of the efficiency reached by the company during its period of voluntary training in the year 1917. On February 7, a second field day was held complimentary to the physicians of the Craig Colony for Epileptics and the Clifton Springs Sanitarium and their wives. On Lincoln's Birthday, February 12, a third field day was held; on Washington's Birthday, February 22, a fourth, and on Liberty Day, April 26, a fifth.

On these occasions, the programme consisted of competitive drills between the four platoons; litter drill, company drill, battalion drill, and various athletic exercises. On Lincoln's Birthday, Major Swan read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address; W. A. Campbell, Captain, Infantry, U. S. A., retired, and Rev. Horace J. Ogden made addresses.

On Washington's Birthday, the Company attended a patriotic meeting in Convention Hall held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. On Liberty Day, addresses were made by Dr. William R. Taylor and Charles E. Ogden. Through the kindness of various organizations other social features during these tedious months were: February 1, Exhibition of sleight of hand by Josef & Company of the Western New York Institute for the Deaf and Dumb and a concert by the Orchestra of the Washington Junior High School, Miss Helen Garvin, Leader. February 4, a concert of chamber music by a quintette led by Mr. Hermann Dossenbach. February 8, The Clark, Joy & Nier Amateur Dramatic Association presented "The Congressman" at the Avon Theater. On January 5, Mr. Henry Schlegel and his associates gave an excellent concert. On January 22, Mr. Jesse B. Millham led the men in their first group singing; an event which subsequently became a weekly occurrence under the lead of Private Hawken or Corporal Porter.

On May 7, the company paraded to the newly opened Red Cross House at East Avenue and Alexander Street, where a flag was raised in memory of Lieutenant William S. Ely, American aviator, killed in France. The Park Band led the parade and was present at retreat on that day. Dr. Rush Rhees, President of the University of Rochester, made the address.

On May 18, exercises were held in Seneca Park by the pupils of Public School Number Twenty-six in connection with the planting of a tree dedicated to the men in the military service and of a tree dedicated to the men in the aviation service, which the company attended.

The officers were entertained at dinner at the Genesee Valley Club on the night of January 2, by the Rochester Medical Association. On February 5, the Officers and their wives met at dinner at the Rochester Club and after dinner had a pleasant dance to music furnished by the orchestra of Base Hospital No. 19, which made its first public appearance.

On February 2, the pupils of the West High School, who had been active in the preparation of the hospital equipment in the days before mobilization, presented the hospital with a Ford truck. This truck did excellent service during the hiking period, for in it the midday meal was transported.

On February 26, the Kiwanis Club presented an Indian motor cycle and the Retail Druggists of Rochester presented an Indian motor cycle and side car at the regular noonday meeting of the former organization in the Hotel Seneca. The presentation speeches were made by Mayor Edgerton and Mr. H. B. Guilford. The acceptation speech was made by Colonel Skinner.

On April 6, the Iroquois Society, Children of the American Revolution presented a Regimental Flag. The presentation speech was made by Dr. William R. Taylor and the speech of acceptance by Colonel Skinner. On May 2, Rev. Horace G. Ogden presented a portable organ in behalf of the members of the First Methodist Church. This organ was given by the commanding officer to the Young Men's Christian Association worker on the U.S.S. Freedom at the end of the voyage home for further use on that vessel.

On February 9, the President and Faculty of the University of Rochester were tendered a complimentary Inspection and Review in heavy marching order. The company paraded, with full equipment, in the Third Liberty Loan Parade, on April 6. The flag, which had been presented that morning was carried in this parade. On April 24, the company paraded to Exposition Park, led by the Band of the 108th Infantry, in the interest of recruiting for the New York troops of the 27th Division. A review of the Home Defense Regiment and a concert by the 108th Infantry Band were features of the ceremony at Exposition Park.

On invitation of Rev. William R. Taylor, its pastor, the company attended morning service at the Brick Presbyterian Church on December 30. On February 10, the company attended the session of the Hubbell Class on invitation of the teacher, Mr. Walter Hubbell. The orchestra furnished music for the singing. After the Chaplain joined, March 7, regular Sunday morning service was held in the Mess Hall.

The period of marking time finally came to an end, as all things do. On the first day of May, the nurses received orders to leave for their mobilization point in New York, the Hotel Judson. Fifty-four nurses and civilian employees who were still in Rochester, left on the 9:45 P. M. train, May 5th, in command of Miss Heal, the Chief Nurse, for New York. The others were already on duty in the various contonments and met the nurses from Rochester there. The original number required for the administration of the hospital had been increased from sixty-five to one hundred early in January. The thirty-five nurses above the original number enrolled in Rochester were assigned to the hospital by the Nursing Service of the American Red Cross.

On February 13, Colonel Skinner had received orders to "put the unit in readiness for overseas service at the earliest date possible;" and on April 19th, he was able to report that all was ready; the delay being due to the lack of uniforms and equipment for the extra personnel required by the increase in the size of the hospital to 1,000 beds. On April 30, official information was received to the effect that in the near future the unit would be ordered to proceed to Hoboken to report to the Commanding General, Port of Embarkation, for temporary duty. On May 12th orders were received to start the movement.

The freight was to arrive in New York not earlier than May 17th and not later than May 19th. The officers and men were to arrive at Camp Merritt not earlier than noon May 19th and not later than noon May 21st. Colonel Skinner elected to arrive during the morning of May 20th. He had previously received permission to drive the motor transportation overland to the Port of Embarkation. The loading of the freight was begun on the afternoon of May 13th simultaneously from the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Warehouse, the Post Office and the Armory. The portion of the freight stored in the Post Office was loaded at Kent Street, and that at the Armory was loaded at Circle Street. The train was made up in the Goodman Street Yard and left on May 16th in command of First Lieutenant Warren Wooden, with the following detail: First Lieutenant Alexander L. Smith; Sergeant Frank M. Glover; Sergeant Frank G. Orlopp; and Privates First Class, Harold A. Burch and William H. O'Hara. Upon arrival of the equipment in New York, it was delivered to the General Superintendent, Army Transport Service, New York Lighterage and the detail proceeded to Camp Merritt, reporting to the Commanding General to await the arrival of the hospital.

The Motor Transport left on May 14, in command of Major John M. Swan, with the following detail: Captain Newton A. Seehorn; Sergeant Vernon F. Adkin; Corporal Julius Lockner; Cook Leo R. Hetterick; Privates First Class, Herbert M. Anthony; Mortimer H. Howard; Floyd H. Owen; Elson I. Wright; Glenn A. Thomas; Private Ingraham Curtis and Lance Corporal Chester J. Ritter.

The motor transport consisted of two three-ton Pierce Arrow trucks, which had been received from the Quartermaster Corps on April 26th, a Chalmers Touring Car, which had been received from the same source on April 23d, and the Ford truck which had been presented by the pupils of the West High School on February 2d. The motorcycles were shipped with the other freight to New York.

The detail left the Armory at 7 A. M. and proceeded through Canandaigua, Penn Yan, Watkins and Elmira. Camp was established two miles east of Elmira. On the 15th, the detail proceeded through Waverly, Binghamton, Winsor, Deposit and Hancock, and camped on Hawk's Mountain about five miles east of Hancock. On the 16th, it passed through Roscoe, Liberty, Monticello, Wurtsboro, Middletown, Tuxedo and Suffern. Camp was established in Mahwah on land of Mr. Winters. Here they were entertained by the Patriotic Service League. Breakfast was served at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Stone, of Mahwah, on the morning of the 17th.

The route then lay through Hackensack and Leonia to Hoboken, where the detail was directed to proceed to Camp Merritt to await the arrival of the Hospital. After the arrival of the hospital at Camp Merritt, this transportation was turned over to the embarkation office, except the Ford Truck, which was not released by the Surgeon General.

Colonel Skinner presented it to the Base Hospital at Camp Merritt, where it did good service. The other cars and the motorcycles and side cars were never seen again. On July 6th, a Karrier three-ton truck was assigned to the Hospital from the Motor Reception Park at LeHavre, but early in August that had to be surrendered to the Motor Transport Company which was sent to Vichy and furnished the transportation for all the hospitals at that center.

In answer to a letter from Major Swan, after he again assumed command of the Hospital, General Kean, in the office of the Chief Surgeon, said: "As regards the transportation which belonged to the Base Hospital, it does seem a hard case that your trucks and motorcycles should not be delivered to you. In fact, I suppose to the donors at home it would seem like highway robbery.

"The motor transportation question is, however, so serious that no favors can be shown, and all has to go into the pool. The transportation for the hospitals has been turned over to the Commanding General of the section in which they are located, and to him all appeals for assistance have to go."

The unit commanded by Colonel Skinner left from Circle Street Sunday, May 19th and arrived at Camp Merritt on Monday, May 20th. Here the two details that had been on detached duty rejoined it and the entire company was quartered in Block Seventeen. Many people were disappointed over the fact that there was no public entrainment of the unit; but the orders to prevent unnecessary publicity regarding the movement of troops at this time were very strict.

On May 30th, orders were received instructing the Company to appear at Pier 59, North River, on Monday, June 3d, at 8:00 A. M. On June 1st, more definite instructions were received. The train that Base Hospital No. 19 was to take left Creskill at 11:30 A. M., on June 3d. All preliminary work was done, the camp area inspected and pronounced sanitary and the march to the railroad begun at 10:10. At Jersey City, the company boarded a steamer of the Quartermaster's Department and was taken to Pier 59. A large ferry boat of the Hudson River type was ahead of us at the Pier, filled with men of the 355th Infantry.

The steamer on which we were was also transporting Base Hospital No. 22, commanded by Colonel Thomas J. Kirkpatrick, M. C., U. S. A. When we finally got to the Pier, we found that we were to sail on the Baltic, of the White Star Line. Here we also heard the news of the submarine raid on the Atlantic Coast on the night of June 2. The last man of Base Hospital No. 19 crossed the gang plank about 4:30 P. M. Reveille had blown at 4:00 A. M., and there had been a great deal of work to be done; baggage detail to have its work cleaned up, sanitary inspections, last instructions, care in avoiding accidents from running trains and boats too close together, and the checking of the organization at the gang plank. On the Pier we met our nurses, who had been sent from their headquarters. At 6:00 P. M. the loading of the baggage and equipment had not been completed and the night was spent tied up at the dock. At noon the next day, June 4, everyone was ordered to his room; the ship left her dock and proceeded down the Hudson River. Dinner was served at that time and after the meal was finished, we were well down the lower bay and we were allowed on deck. The convoy was forming and during the afternoon consisted of eighteen vessels with protection by dirigibles and airplanes. Every known means was being applied to the safety of the vessels starting on a long voyage through waters where two days before enemy submarines had been operating with disastrous results. On the morning of the 5th, the convoy had been reduced to nine vessels which were to complete the vovage. Of these, one was an English cruiser and the others were troop ships or cargo vessels. The Baltic carried two battalions of the 355th Infantry, with its headquarters and band, Base Hospital No. 22 complete, Base Hospital No. 19 complete, and the nurses of Base Hospital No. 26. There were also some casual officers and several officers of the Navy on their way abroad to join their commands. The days were passed in drills, exercises, life boat drill, and instruction of the command in various matters affecting the operation of troops of the United States in a foreign country. The political significance of the position in which all arms of the service found itself is well indicated in the beginning of Chapter I, Provisional Instructions on Disembarkation, Entraining and Detraining of Troops in France and England:

"For the first time in history the American Army finds itself in European Territory. The good name of the United States and the maintenance of cordial relations require perfect deportment of each member of this command. It is of the gravest importance that the soldiers of the American Army shall at all times treat the people of France, especially the women, with the greatest courtesy and consideration. The valiant deeds of the French Armies and those of their allies by which they have together successfully maintained their common cause for more than three years and the sacrifices of the civil population of France in the support of their armies, command our profound respect. This can be expressed on the part of our forces by uniform courtesy to all the French people and by faithful observance of their laws and customs.

"Company and detachment commanders will inform themselves and advise their men as to local police regulations, and will enforce strict observance thereof."

The voyage was uneventful; the band of the 355th Infantry gave two concerts, one on the 10th and the other on the 12th. Base Hospital No. 19 contributed solos by Miss Olive B. Leussler and Private Hawken. Private Hibbard played accompaniments. "Shorty" Peterson, six feet four, of the 355th Band, played the mouth organ in an unusual style and "Shorty" and another musician from the Band played a clarinet duet which was good. The band played at other times but these two concerts were given in the saloon in the afternoon, with portholes closed and blackened and electric lights turned on; so different from the concerts in the piping times of peace! On the 13th, orders were issued to wear life preservers all the time except at meals and when asleep; previous to this we had been required to have the life preservers at hand, but were not required to wear them except at boat drill twice a day. The orders also required each one to sleep fully dressed and to wear a canteen filled with water whenever he was on deck; in other words, to be ready to abandon ship at a moment's notice. The convoy from the European shore arrived at 1:00 P.M. on the 14th, eight British torpedo boat destroyers. On the 15th we were ordered on deck at 3:00 A.M., fully dressed and equipped to leave ship at a moment's notice. We were going through the narrows between Ireland and Scotland; a dangerous place for submarine attacks. The Tuscania had been torpedoed in this portion of the sea. Nothing appeared, however, and we reached the mouth of the Mersey at 3:00 P. M., and got up to the Princess Landing Stage at about 6:00 P. M. We were kept on board all night and disembarked at 8:00 the following morning, Sunday, June 16th. The nurses in command of Major Ewers, left almost at once for Southampton. The officers and men left at 1:50 P. M. The trip was something like a triumphal journey. Crowds were in all places along the railway embankments, at crossing gates, and in gardens, cheering and waving flags. At the station in Liverpool, we had a chance to talk to some British Y.M.C.A. people. The atmosphere was quite gloomy; they made no secret of the serious condition of the allied armies and said that if the United States did not hurry up the war was lost. They seemed to think that it was questionable whether they could hold out until the United States was ready. We reached Southampton at midnight. We then had to unload our freight and baggage and march between two and three miles to camp where we arrived between 3:00 and 3:30 A. M. The city of Southampton was entirely dark except for street lamps at the corners which had been blackened above so that the light was reflected downward on to the roadway, making a pool of light about twice the diameter of the lamp. It was really worse than no light at all. The wierdness of the situation was accentuated by the tramp of the tired men with their forty-pound packs. The night was clear and beautiful and we had our first experience of the precautions being taken on land to make it difficult for the enemy to find his objectives from the air.

At noon on the 18th, we received orders to leave camp at 5:30 P. M. We marched back, over the same route that we had followed in the early morning, to the docks; and this time we could see where we were going. We went on board the S.S.St. George, which left at 8:00 P. M., for Le Havre. The most comfortable place that the officers could find was on the deck under a lifeboat, or standing up against the smokestack; alternating the positions was pretty good.

The men, however, had not even this comfort. They were obliged to stay below and sleep on the decks; to such an extent had the submarine campaign reduced the transportation facilities. The early part of the run was made in the fading daylight down the Solent past Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight out into the Channel guarded by destroyers; and what time we did make! At 1:30 A. M. we picked up the lights of Le Havre and we docked at 4:00. We debarked at 8:00 A. M., and marched through the streets of the town to a camp on a hill overlooking the Channel. In the meantime, the nurses had crossed on a hospital ship and were quartered in a hotel in the city.

We were in the camp at Le Havre two days. The men, twelve in a tent, sleeping on the wooden floors, which was better than in the mud, and the officers sleeping also on the floors, but with from four to eight in a tent. In all these movements, the baggage and freight that was traveling with us had to be handled by a detail of our own men under Captain Williams. This freight is not to be understood to mean our hospital equipment which was turned over to the transport people in New York, but the officers' baggage, nurses' baggage, the barracks bags of the men, and the equipment for maintaining the command on the journey to its final destination.

On June 19th about 4:00 P.M., orders were received to leave camp at 3:00 A.M., Thursday, June 20th, for point 1, for entrainment. We were up at 1:30, had hot coffee and hardtack and cheese by the light of the camp cook stove, a curious thing of English make, and started on our march down the hill to the railroad yards; at first, in the darkness of night; later, in the grav of early dawn; and, finally, in the full light of the day. As we marched into the railroad vards, the nurses arrived from their hotel in trucks. When we reached the train, we learned that our destination was Vichy. The train left at 8:17 A. M. and proceeded slowly through Harfleur, Motteville, Pavilly, Rouen and Sothville to Oissel. Here we were detained for two hours by a train wreck ahead. In the afternoon we went on through the villages along the Seine; Rosny-sur-Seine, Mantes, and others, skirting Paris and arriving at Versailles at 1:30 A. M. It began to rain during the evening and our interpreter and liaison officer seemed glad because he said it would keep the Hun at home. The next night we were told the train which reached Versailles at the time ours did experienced an air attack. During the night we were moved on to Villeneuve-St. Georges, where we laid until 11:00 A. M. Then through Brunov. Corbeil, Melun, Montargis, Gien, Chatillon-sur-Loire, Cosne and Nevers to Saincaize and St. Germaine des Fosses. All the afternoon we passed American military formations; we were going through the American line of communications. We found out in this part of the journey that we already had a million men in France and more arriving daily. Everybody was optimistic in this part of the country and the anxiety produced by the views of the people at Liverpool began to lift. We spent the night between Saincaize and St. Germaine-des Fosses. We left the latter place at 7:30 A. M. and arrived at Vichy at 8:00, a tired, dirty lot. Here we found that Base Hospital No. 1, the Bellevue Hospital Unit, had been in operation since March. The hospital was commanded by Major (later Colonel) Walter D. Webb, a retired officer of the Medical Corps of the Regular Army. Major Webb met us at the railway station and invited the officers to breakfast with the officers of Base Hospital No. 1. The men were temporarily quartered with the men of Base Hospital No. 1, and the nurses with No. 1 nurses.

The plan of the office of the Chief Surgeon was to make Vichy a hospital center of 10,000 beds with five base hospital units, each with 2,000 beds, operating. The arrival of Base Hospital 19 was the first of the units that were expected by Major Webb. The Rents, Requisitions and Claims Section had taken over several hotels that had been used as military hospitals by the French Army and arrangements were being made for future expansion. Vichy, as is well known, is a health resort of world-wide fame; and while the war had seriously interfered with its work, there were still many French people who spent their summers there and there were many subjects of the neutral European Nations that came for their annual "cure." We went, then, in the end of June, into a cosmopolitan European watering place which was comfortably filled with all kinds and conditions of men and women. The orchestra played in the Park twice a day; there was an opera company that gave performances two or three times a week; the river Allier was available for boating and swimming; there was a golf course, and other amusements and entertainments to lighten the periods of release from duty. We were assigned at first nine hotels which we were to arrange as a hospital. These buildings had been used as hospitals for nearly four years; the French equipment had to be taken out and our equipment put in: the buildings had to be housecleaned and arrangements made for operating rooms, wards, administrative offices, messes, storerooms, etc. Here our experience in arranging the East High School at home came into play; we were able to plan our buildings in a convenient manner with no delay. The group of nine buildings included the Hotel International, Hotel Splendide, Hotel Milan, Hotel Havre et New York, Hotel Amerique, Hotel Neva, Hotel du Helder, Hotel Bellevue and Hotel Velay. A garage also was assigned, which was used as a storeroom. For the first few weeks, the officers were quartered in the Hotel Velay; but they were soon moved to the buildings in which they were to work, and the men, who had been in the same hotel with the men of Base Hospital No. 1, were moved into the Velay, which was then their barracks. The nurses were at first quartered with the nurses of Base Hospital No. 1, in the Hotel Grande Grille; but were soon moved to the Hotel Bellevue, which was our Nurses' Home until after the Vichy season, when the Hotel des Ambassadeurs was requisitioned for the nurses of all the hospital units of the center.

The Hotel International was at once selected as the Headquarters Hotel. It was a six-story building shaped like a letter "L." The short arm of the "L" paralleled the Rue de Nimes and the long arm extended backward from the street to an alley in the rear. The two sides enclosed a courtvard, which was further bounded by a wall on the back alley, in front of which was a raised platform, evidently used as an out-of-door restaurant in peace times. The fourth side was occupied by a one story and basement structure, which served as dining room and kitchen in peace times. There was also, on the side of this one story structure away from the courtvard, a vard containing a shed, with a sloping roof, its wall formed by the wall of the building next door. This was known to us as the yard. The portion of the courtyard immediately within the main entrance was covered by a glass roof which was above the entresol, or our second story, and had a number of rooms, evidently used as stores in peace time, opening from it. This hotel also was made the chief surgical hospital; the operating room was set up here; and it also contained our largest patients' mess. We were disappointed in having to surrender one of the large dining rooms for the storage of the goods, belonging to the proprietor of the hotel, which the French military authorities had been using.

At the same time we were assigned to the Hotel du Havre et de New York, always called by us the Havre, as our Chief Medical Building. The first week was spent in getting these buildings ready for occupancy. The men and the nurses labored with scrub brushes, soap, mops, brooms, and dust pans, putting everything in readiness. The International, being the chief surgical hospital, was commanded by Major Hennington, or by Captain Sadden, who took his place when he was on detached duty. The Havre was commanded by Major Ewers, as Chief of the Medical Service. The equipment began to arrive about July 1st, and as fast as possible was unpacked and distributed to the different buildings.

On July 27th, Hospital Train No. 58 arrived with 350 patients for Base Hospital No. 1. Our men had their first duty in actually caring for the wounded, being detailed to assist the men of Base Hospital No. 1 in unloading the train. Two patients had died on the train, and on the 28th military funerals were held for them, one at the Catholic Church and the other at the Protestant Chapel. All men who died in Vichy were buried with military honors in the Vichy Cemetery, in which the United States Army had rented a section. There was always a detachment of enlisted men as funeral escort and taps was always blown. The first funerals were also attended by details of officers; but later the press of work made it impossible to detail officers for this duty and frequently the detail of enlisted men had to be made up from convalescent patients. The French always sent a complimentary escort; sometimes with officers. Flowers were always sent by the French people.

On Friday, July 12th, we received our first patients. A hospital train arrived for Base Hospital No. 1, and as they were nearly full. we took 78 of their convalescent medical cases into the Havre. We were not nearly ready for patients, but the patients were ready for us and they were accommodated. On the 14th, Sunday, another train arrived with 488 patients and we took on that day and the next (15th), 272 more, receiving about 100 in the International, making our census on the morning of the 16th, 350. On the 14th, rumor had it that the Paris hospitals were being evacuated, explaining the sending of so many patients to us when we were not ready for them. They were getting ready nearer the front for the wounded that they expected from the Chateau-Thierry Operation, known officially as the Champagne-Marne Offensive. On the Monday of that week, the 15th, the German advance on Paris was checked. When the news came in towards evening, a French officer said, "There is a smile on the whole face of France to-day." In order to accommodate the sick and wounded, we put up beds wherever there was room, among the packing cases in the glass covered court, in rooms partly cleaned, and in the hallways. What the men needed was a place to sleep, a chance to bathe, and some food. They got all three. From this time on we may be said to have been fairly launched on our career of active operation.

On July 6th, Colonel Skinner left on order from Headquarters, Commanding General, Service of Supply, for temporary duty. He returned to the hospital on July 15, and on July 19, he left to assume command of the American Hospital Center of 20,000 beds which was being developed at Mars-sur-Allier (Nievre). Major Swan thereupon became Commanding Officer of the Hospital. He was promoted to be Lieutenant Colonel, with rank from August 20th, 1918, "in recognition of his service to the country in organizing and bringing to France, Base Hospital No. 19," and continued to command the Hospital until it was demobilized at Camp Upton, May 9th, 1919. Colonel Skinner was missed by all. He was an ideal Commanding Officer. His experience made it possible for everyone to feel that his decisions were wise and that by following his directions the best results, under the prevailing conditions, would be obtained. His successor, new to military requirements and fresh from Civil life, missed his advice and undertook his new duties with considerable hesitation; but there was nothing to do but to obey orders and the work of the Hospital was carried on.

Colonel Skinner desired to take with him to his new command some of the personnel of Base Hospital No. 19, to form the nucleus of his headquarters staff. Consequently, Captain Seehorn, who became Adjutant at Mars, Sergeant First-Class, Ager, Sergeants Decker and Van Neil, and Privates First-Class, Scherer, Bakker and Deyle, and Miss Rockwood were released and were ordered transferred to Mars. They left on July 27. Sergeants Ager, Decker and Van Neil were subsequently promoted to be Lieutenants in the Sanitary Corps, and Captain Seehorn was promoted to be Major. Later, Sergeant First-Class Bainbridge was transferred to Mars, where he was promoted to be Second Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps, and assigned to duty as mess officer.

The Milan was opened on July 17, with Captain Booth in command. The Amerique was opened on July 28, with Captain Kaiser in command. The Splendide was opened on the 22d, with Captain Hovt in command. The Neva and the Helder were opened on August 6th; Captain Reed was in command of the former and Captain Haskell of the latter. At this time we had 1,200 patients, and on August 19, 1,450. After the completion of the Aisne-Marne offensive, on August 6th, there was a little time of less activity on the fronts and our census fell to as low as 632 on Septembr 15th. The Somme offensive, August 8th to November 11th; the Oise-Aisne Offensive, August 18th to November 11th; the St. Mihiel Offensive, September 12th to November 11th; and the Meuse-Argonne Offensive, September 26th to November 11th, taxed the capacity of the hospitals of the American Expeditionary Forces to the utmost. The census began to rise on September 16th and increased continuously until the 12th and 13th of November; on those days we had 3,518 and 3,504 patients, respectively; the high-water-mark of our activity.

In order to accommodate the patients sent to us, we were obliged to open new hotels from time to time; the Cecil was opened October 3d; the Beaujolais Annex, October 5th; the Lutetia, October 16th; the Bellevue was opened for patients after the nurses were transferred to the Ambassadeurs, October 22d; the Russie on the 23d; the Charmilles, the Beau Site, the Venise and the Tours on the 25th; the Rhone on the 30th; the Suisse and the Barcelone on November 2d; the Naples on November 4th and the Lilas on the 6th. At this stage, we were required to report the normal beds in the various buildings, the number of emergency beds that could be put up in odd corners and the halls, and the number of gold medal type cots that could be put up where there was no room for beds. Our normal bed capacity was then 3,629; emergency beds, 187; cots, 298; total capacity, 4,114. The 500 bed plant seemed a long way in the past, and the increase had come about so logically and so satisfactorily that it seemed but natural.

The personnel was increased from time to time. Fourteen men were received to replace those that we left in the Base Hospital at Camp Merritt, that Colonel Skinner took to Mars, and that were detailed to Headquarters of the Hospital Center, Vichy. These men reported for duty from the Training School for Sanitary Troops, on August 12th: Charles Daggert; Leon A. Deischbourg; Floyd Howell; John E. Kelleher; George A. Martin; Harvey M. McCann; William McEwan; Raymond R. Coffey; Alvin L. Knepp; John D. Lahart; Roy L. Merritt; Earl I. Pearce; Alexander H. Surette and Exer C. Yates. On September 8th, the personnel of Hospital Train No. 43, commanded by Major Lyman B. Hollingshead, reported for duty, and on October 12th, 91 enlisted men reported for duty, having been transferred from Headquarters, First Depot Division. The majority of these were at once transferred to Vichy Hospital Center.

The other Base Hospitals did not reach Vichy in time to be ready for the patients received from the Champagne-Marne offensive. Consequently, it was necessary for Base Hospital No. 1, and ourselves to administer and do the professional work that would otherwise have been further divided. A hospital was expected which was to be known as a "Head Hospital." The Hotel Ruhl had been set aside for the Headquarters of this organization (Base Hospital No. 115), which was to do all the head surgery, eye, ear, nose and throat work for the center. In July and August this hotel, which had a bed capacity of 1,650, was administered by Base Hospital No. 1 and the professional work, including the nursing was divided between that hospital and 19. Base Hospital No. 115, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Edward C. Ellett arrived on September 6, 1918, and relieved the situa-Base Hospital No. 76, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Lewis T. Griffith, arrived late in September and Base Hospital No. 109, commanded by Major Francis Vinsonhaler, arrived late in November.

As we began to close up our affairs preparatory to leaving Vichy en route for the United States, we transferred the Lilas to Base Hospital No. 109, on December 4th; the Helder on December 5th; the Havre, the Amerique, the Beaujolais annex, the Suisse and the Neva on January 16th. The Milan was transferred to Base Hospital No. 76 on January 16th. The Splendide was transferred to Evacuation Hospital No. 109, on December 4th; the Helder on December 5th; which had come to Vichy to relieve us, on January 19. The Cecil was transferred to Base Hospital No. 115 on January 16th. The International was emptied of patients on January 14th and the men moved in from the Velay, which was cleaned and reported to the Rents, Requisitions and Claims service on January 25th. The other hotels were reported to the Rents. Requisitions and Claims service as fast as they were emptied and cleaned, between January 4th and 20th. The closing of all records and the obtaining of a clearance from the Office of the Chief Surgeon was pushed as fast as possible and we were ordered to leave Vichy, en route to the United States on February 18th, 1919.

The work of the hospital may be divided into Administrative and Professional. The administrative work consisted of (1) keeping account of the orders received from time to time from General Headquarters, from the Office of the Chief Surgeon, and from the Office of the Commanding Officer of the Center; keeping the records of the duties of the officers, men and nurses; making the requisite reports to superior authority, and conducting the correspondence. This work was done in the Adjutant's Office. (2) Keeping a record of the names of the patients with the diagnosis of their injuries and diseases; the nature of their operations; their organizations; their home addresses; forwarding the lists of patients received and discharged to the Office. of the Chief Surgeon; furnishing the patients with clothing and equipment; seeing that they were sent to the train when they were well enough to be started back to their organizations or to the United States, and taking care of their property. This work was done in the Office of the Registrar. (3) Keeping a record of the various articles of property belonging to the hospital, both purely military property, such as the clothing and equipment of the enlisted men; the medical supplies; keeping the buildings in repair; and looking after the heating and sanitary appliances. This work was done in the office of the Quartermaster. It required a division, and early in the life of the hospital, an officer known as the medical supply officer, was detailed to have charge of all purely medical property. (4) Keeping the record of the enlisted men and their duties and assignments; furnishing details for unloading hospital trains and other necessary work of the center; seeing that they were paid; paying the patients. This work was done in the office of the Detachment Commander. (5) Feeding the patients and the personnel. This work was done in the office of the Mess Officer. The Chaplain and the Chief Nurse had administrative duties in addition to their professional duties.

When the unit first reached Vichy, Major Swan was Adjutant; when he succeeded Colonel Skinner as Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Lawther J. Whitehead was appointed Adjutant and after Sergeant Heath was commissioned First Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps. and assigned to the Hospital for duty, he was appointed Adjutant, succeeding Dr. Whitehead, and filled that office until the demobilization of the unit. Lieutenant Edgar W. Phillips was Registrar when the first patients were received. We could not well spare a medical officer for that work and he was succeeded by First Lieutenant Thomas L. Casey, S. C., upon the arrival of that officer. After Sergeant Lynn was commissioned First Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps and was assigned to the Hospital for duty, he was appointed Registrar, succeeding Mr. Casev. The work in this office was the heaviest and most constant of that of any administrative department, except the subsistence department. The daily report of sick and wounded had to be in the mail at 10:00 A. M., and necessitated a day and night force for its completion. Between midnight October 19th and midnight October 20th, 822 patients were received and during the same period there were 418 discharges, so that the sick and wounded report for October 21st contained more than twelve hundred items. This work went on day after day in an orderly and systematic manner. The record of patients was kept up, their property listed and tagged, and their valuables placed in the hospital safe. Every man was furnished with a new uniform, underclothing, mess kit, cap, overcoat or slicker and other equipment, and turned over to the evacuation office of the Hospital Center, when ready for discharge.

The Quartermaster's Office was under the direction of Captain Williams. Soon after reaching Vichy, Lieutenant William F. Ryan was appointed Medical Supply Officer; he was succeeded by Captain James M. Flynn. After Sergeant Nolan was commissioned First Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps, he was appointed Medical Supply Officer, succeeding Captain Flynn. This office had charge of all the strictly medical articles in our equipment; merely keeping the records of the items and where they were issued was considerable of a task.

Captain Williams was relieved and ordered to the Quartermaster Casual Depot at Gievres. He was succeeded by Second Lieutenant Rolla L. Carpenter, the transfer being made on August 7th. This office kept the records of all the supplies except the purely medical items; it had charge of the repairs in the buildings, and of the stores and shops. After the Center was fully organized, a detachment of Engineers was ordered to Vichy and relieved us of a good deal of this work, but we always had plenty of jobs for the repair men to do. The carpenter work was under the direction of Sergeant Elgin and Sergeant Ritter; they made tables and shelves from the packing material and were constantly busy with repairs of all kinds. The plumbing was under the direction of Sergeant Schutte; it was always out of order. The electrical equipment of the buildings was under the direction of Sergeant Mahar; usually as fast as one elevator was put in running order, another would require his attention.

In the office of the Detachment Commander, the various details were made out; the payrolls for the personnel and the patients were made out; the Detachment Commander was "responsible for the discipline, instruction, equipment, rationing, quartering and proper keeping of accounts and records of all members of his detachment." Upon our arrival in France, Captain Seehorn was detailed as Detachment Commander; upon his transfer to Mars, he was succeeded by Captain John D. Fowler, and after Sergeant Shults was commissioned First Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps, he was detailed Detachment Commander, releasing Captain Fowler.

The Mess Officer had the hardest task of all. Originally planned to feed 500 patients, 26 officers, 65 nurses and 153 enlisted men, the task was increased until we were feeding 3,500 patients, 50 officers, and 350 enlisted men. The nurses' mess was separate from the general hospital mess and was looked after by the dietitians of the hospitals of the center, under the supervision of the Chief Nurses of the Hospitals. Instead of one general kitchen, we were obliged to establish eleven kitchens and some of the mess halls had continuous meals for two hours, feeding the convalescent patients as they came up in detachments. In our main mess, in Headquarters building, on one particularly busy day, the organization served 3.600 meals. Messes were established in the International, the Havre; the Lutetia; the Amerique: the Helder: the Splendide: the Cecil: the Bellevue: the Suisse; the Barcelone and the Velay. Mess equipment was at all times short; we used galvanized iron ash cans for cooking during our entire period of active service, it being impossible to obtain the proper number of large stock pots. The mess organization deserves the highest praise for the manner in which it performed its dutles, often subjected to captious criticism from hungry patients who had no appreciation of the difficulties under which the work was done. they went about their tasks day and night with a cheerful manner and accomplished the work they set out to do. On our arrival in France, Captain Henry G. Smith was mess officer; he was succeeded by Lieutenant Thomas L. Casey and after Sergeant Cooke was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps, he was detailed as Mess Officer, succeeding Mr. Casey. The Mess Officer was also the custodian of the Hospital Fund. Major Hoyt relieved Lieutenant Cooke as Mess Officer after the hospital ceased operating and continued as Mess Officer until he was detached and ordered to Brest for transportation to the United States.

The administrative problems were increased in difficulty by the fact that the various units of the hospital were so scattered; but by daily conferences with the administrative officials, the Commanding Officer was able to keep in touch with the varied questions needing decision. In each building of the hospital, there was a commanding officer and a chief ward master. Paragraph 46 of Hospital Order No. 84 thus defines the duties of the Commanding Officer of the buildings:

"Each building operated by Base Hospital No. 19 as a component hospital of the group shall be in charge of a medical officer who will be responsible to the Commanding Officer for the treatment of the patients therein, the police of the buildings, the discipline of the patients and the medical department personnel on duty therein. He shall also be responsible for the establishment of regulations for fire prevention and the prompt evacuation of the building in case of fire."

The Detachment Commander acted as Sanitary Inspector, and the Commanding Officer made frequent inspections of the various buildings of the group in person.

Following instructions from the office of the Surgeon General of the Army and from the Director General of Military Relief of the American Red Cross, the hospital was organized as a general hospital with all departments represented. Upon finding ourselves assigned for duty in a hospital center, we became subject to the orders of the Commanding Officer of that Center. Major, later Colonel, Walter D. Webb had planned to have the various units of his center specialize along certain lines. According to this plan, No. 19 was designated as the hospital to do the contagious disease work, the respiratory infections, and to take care of the wounded German prisoners that might be received. Base Hospital No. 1 did the laboratory work (until a center laboratory was established in which the laboratory personnel from each unit worked), the urological work, the neurological work (until the arrival of Base Hospital No. 115), and the dental work. Base Hospital No. 115 was designated the "Head Hospital," and was to do all the head surgery, the ophthalmological, laryngological, and rhinological work. Each hospital unit had its general medical and general surgical services and its röntgenological service. The operation of the center was cut short by the Armistice so that the full development of this plan was never seen.

An analysis of our patients made on December 20th, at which date we had 10,287 admissions, showed that 4,714 patients had been surgical; 4,117 medical, and 1,456 gassed. The patients received after December 20th were mostly repatriated prisoners from the German prison camps, who were held in quarantine for observation. The hospital was in operation six months and eight days; during that time 11,071 patients passed through its wards, of whom 78 died, a mortality of 0.70%.

The following is a list of the causes of death (in this list there are more than 78 entries because some of the patients had more than one pathological condition):

Gunshot Wounds
Pneumonias
Empyema
Exposure to Gas
Typhoid fever (both complicated by laryngeal diphtheria)
Military tuberculosis
Meningitis
Nephritis
Gangrene of the lung
Abscess of the liver
Suicide
Ether anesthesia

The surgical service was directed by Major Hennington, and in his absence by Captain (later Major) Sadden. The International and the Helder were the surgical buildings for bed cases, each having its own operating room. The convalescent and ambulant cases were evacuated from these to other buildings as soon as they were able to look out for themselves and they and those patients who were ambulant from the time of their admission were dressed in dressing rooms set up in the Milan, the Splendide, the Cecil, the Russie and the Venise. Our main operating room was set up in the headquarters hotel. The distance from the farthest removed building was so great that it became necessary to establish a second operating room in the Helder in September. Three hundred and ninety operations were performed; 213 in cases of battle casualty, and 177 in cases of a civil character. Out of 3,809 battle casualty surgical admissions, 196 were operative cases and 3,613 were nonoperative. Of the operative cases there were four deaths, or 2.04%; of the nonoperative cases, 23 died, or 0.63%. Of the total battle casualty admissions, the death rate was 0.70%. There were 14 cases of wounds of the abdomen received, all nonoperative, none of which died. There were 59 cases of wounds of the chest received, all nonoperative, one of which died of sepsis resulting in pyopneumothorax. Captain Wentworth directed an ortheopedic service in the Hotel Splendide.

This service sent out two surgical teams. Surgical Team No. 80 was composed of Captain Warren Wooden; Captain William F. Ryan; Nurse Elizabeth Weber; Nurse Mary E. Harriman; Sergeant First Class Frank M. Glover and Sergeant John W. McCauley, Jr. This team was ordered to duty with Base Hospital No. 15 and left the hospital on July 19th. They were in Paris July 21st to August 16th, attached to American Red Cross Military Hospital No. 5; at Chateau Thierry, August 16th to August 22d, attached to Evacuation Hospital No. 5; at Coiney, August 22d to 25th, attached to Mobile Hospital No. 2; at Rouen, from August 30th to September 26th; at Ravecourt from September 26th to October 4th, at Fleury from October 4th to November 1st, attached to Evacuation Hospital No. 114; at Standen from November 7th to November 9th, and at Iseghem from November 9th to 15th, attached to Mobile Hospital No. 9. They rejoined the hospital November 20th.

Surgical Team No. 80-A was composed of Major Charles W. Hennington; Lieutenant Edgar W. Phillips; Nurse Olive B. Leussler; Nurse Alice L. Fitzgerald; Sergeant Mortimer H. Howard and Corporal Harold A. Burch. This team was ordered to duty with Evacuation Hospital No. 8 and left on September 8th. It served with Evacuation Hospital No. 8 through the St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne operations; it returned to the hospital on November 19th.

We had agreed to furnish a Mobile Hospital and were engaged in detailing its personnel when the Armistice put an end to all such activity. Captain (later Major) Edward T. Wentworth was to command this hospital and the other officers were to be Captain Frederick J. Garlick and Lieutenant Lawther J. Whitehead. The rosters of nurses and enlisted men had not been completed.

The Medical Service was under the direction of Major (later Lieutenant Colonel) Ewers. In addition to the regular run of medical cases, this service had the treatment of all gassed cases that did not present surgical complications.

The Contagious Disease Service was directed by Captain Albert D. Kaiser, who was in command of the Hotel d'Amerique. This service cared for all of the transmissible diseases that occurred in any of the hospitals in the center and all cases of this nature received on the hospital trains were sent directly to this hospital. From the time it was opened, July 28th, until it was transferred to Base Hospital No. 109, on January 16th, 509 cases were treated in its wards with a bed capacity of 170; 150 normal and 20 cots. Of these cases there were 162 of diphtheria, clinical, and 127 of mumps. But five deaths resulted.

Respiratory Infections Service: When influenza became a problem in the American Expeditionary Forces, Base Hospital No. 19 was designated the unit to take care of all the respiratory infections in the Vichy Center. The Hotel Lutetia, commanded by Major Arthur P. Weed, was opened for this purpose on October 16th, and was emptied of its patients on January 15th. During that time, this service treated 1,210 cases of influenza and 296 cases of pneumonia. There were 31 deaths from pneumonia, a death rate of 10.67%.

This service sent out Shock Team No. 140, composed of Major Charles L. Hincher, Nurse Mary F. Laird and Corporal Wilfred J. Wright. The team was ordered to Base Hospital No. 66 and left Vichy on September 10th. It served with Evacuation Hospital No. 4 during the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne operations at Frommerville, and returned to the hospital on November 19th. During its period of service with Evacuation Hospital No. 4, that hospital was bombed in an air raid and Corporal Wright was gassed.

The Röntgenological Service was directed by Captain Flynn, assisted by Lieutenant Whitehead; 2,217 examinations were made and 106 of the best plates were sent to the Army Medical School in Washington for its permanent collection. This department was set up in a suite of rooms on the ground floor of headquarters. The necessary carpenter work was done by our own forces from the lumber salvaged from the packing material. The plumbing was done by our own men with some assistance from French contract plumbers.

The Urological Service directed by Captain (later Major) Haskell, and assisted by Lieutenant Cook, operated in connection with Base Hospital No. 1.

The Neurological Service directed by Major Hanes operated in connection with Base Hospital No. 1, until the arrival of Base Hospital No. 115, which organization took over the service. This service was hampered by lack of personnel until the arrival of No. 115 and after that Major Hanes' services could be spared so that a request from Colonel Skinner at Mars, that Major Hanes be transferred to him for duty as his consulting neurologist, was granted.

The Laboratory Service was conducted in Base Hospital No. 1, until the formation of a center laboratory in the Hotel Cherbourg. Captain Sutter had a course in wound bacteriology at Dijon in July and when he returned to Vichy was in command of the laboratory during the absence of the Director, who was an officer of Base Hospital No. 1. After the establishment of the center laboratory, Captain Sutter was assigned to duty as the Chief of the Bacteriological Section and in connection with Captain (later Major) Booth made some very excellent studies of the prevalence of streptococcus hemoylticus in the throats of the patients and the personnel of the hospitals in the center.

The necessity for an Ophthalmological and Otolaryngological Service was obviated by the arrival of Base Hospital No. 115. Major Odeneal, the chief of these services, was ordered to Evacuation Hospital No. 4, for duty on July 17th and did not return to us until September 1st. He was then ordered to Mars as Consulting Ophthalmologist on September 5th. Lieutenant Voorhees worked in Base Hospital No. 1 as otolaryngologist until the arrival of Base Hospital No. 115, when he worked in that institution.

The Dental Service of Base Hospital No. 1 had already been set up in the Hotel Carlton when we reached Vichy, and, as there was a suite of rooms of sufficient size, our dental service was combined with that of the former hospital. Lieutenants (later Captains) Wickins and Welcher gave 3,295 sittings to 1,812 patients and personnel of Base Hospital No. 19, during the period of active service: (the statistics for the month of July are lacking in this total because the July report was erroneously combined with the report of Base Hospital No. 1). During the period of mobilization, this professional department was busy with the dental work for the command and 207 sittings were given to 138 officers and enlisted men.

The Nursing Service: Under the direction of Miss Jessica S. Heal, Chief Nurse, and Miss Eunice A. Smith, Assistant, the nurses performed the duties assigned to them whether they were the customary professional duties of the trained nurse, the administrative duties of the nurse on the wards of a military hospital, or the duties connected with the cleaning and making ready of buildings for occupation, in a cheerful and thorough manner. Those nurses who were assigned to operating teams and who were detached for service with medical formations at the front have already been enumerated. The Nurses of Operating Team 80 had the most continuous front line service of any. On February 8th, 1919, thirty nurses were transferred to Evacuation Hospital No. 26 at Coblenz, Germany, per authority Telegram from Adjutant General, G. H. Q., A. E. F., dated February 7th.

The remaining nurses left Vichy with the unit on February 18th, 1919 and proceeded from Nantes to LaBaule, in command of Captain Warren Wooden, at the time the officers and men were diverted to Vallet. They were later returned to the United States, through Brest, on the S.S. Mt. Vernon, March 3d, 1919, and were subsequently discharged, on March 11th, 1919, from the military service.

The first disability board was appointed on July 17th and consisted of Major Hennington, Major Hanes and Captain Hincher. On July 24th, Major Hennington having been ordered to Evacuation Hospital No. 7 for temporary duty, Captain Sim was appointed in his place. On October 31st, Major Hincher having been ordered to Base Hospital No. 66, as the physician of Shock Team No. 140, the board was reconstructed and was then composed of Major Hanes, Major Ewers and Captain Sadden. These boards performed their duties with justice and with impartiality.

The amount of work done by this hospital may perhaps be best appreciated by a glance at the number of hospital days:

July	7,480
August	28,686
September	30,836
October	47,594
November	100,332
December	58,995
January	7,202
Total	281,125

Twenty-two hotels were operated as hospitals at Vichy by Base Hospital 19, with a total bed capacity of 4,114.

The problem of sanitation of a hospital composed of as many scattered units as No. 19, was considerable. The streets in front of each building had to be kept clean by our personnel; the courtvards about which all French hotels are built and onto which many windows open, offered convenient places for the unthinking patient and medical department soldier to throw trash; and there were also many irregularities in construction of the buildings which left little blind pockets into which dirty socks, cigarette butts, newspapers. empty tobacco tins and the miscellaneous junk that accumulates about the human habitation could be thrown. The mess halls and kitchens offered particular problems of their own; their construction and the utensils for dish-washing and garbage disposal were quite novel to our men. As has been stated elsewhere in this history, Base Hospital No. 19 at the time of its maximum activity occupied twenty-one buildings as hospitals and one as barracks. It is estimated that with the normal capacity, that is excluding the emergency beds and cots which were to be set up in halls, corridors and odd corners, the floor space available for each patient was about forty to fifty square feet. The heating systems were at all times inadequate. Those of the hotels that had "Chauffage central" were, at all times, insufficiently heated according to the standards of the United States. Stoves were set up wherever possible; but the coal was of poor quality, mostly briquettes, which required experience for getting out of them all the heat units possible. There were only five buildings of the group that had elevators; the International, Helder, Amerique, Lutetia, and Havre. These elevators were often out of order, so that when patients were expected it was never possible to be sure that they would be in commission; consequently we always counted on the men having to carry the stretcher cases to the wards. The wards themselves were small which made ward management difficult.

Sewage was disposed of through the municipal sewers of the City of Vichy in the majority of the hotels, but broken and disordered plumbing interfered with the disposition for several months after we began operations. In the Hotel Russie, the sewage emptied into a cesspool, which over-flowed every two or three weeks, and the drainage from the Hotel Cecile became stopped up and produced a flood on one occasion. When there was a downpour of rain, we could never be sure what places the water would leak into.

Garbage was disposed of in a satisfactory manner by a carrier who purchased it for feeding his pigs. The money realized from the sale of this garbage was added to the hospital fund. Empty tins and papers were collected by the Group Quartermaster. The disposal of surgical dressings caused a good deal of difficulty. The commanding officer had expected to erect an incinerator such as was described in The Military Surgeon for August, 1918. The yard of Headquarters was occupied by a bakery company nearly all summer and it was not until that organization moved out that a place was available. In October such an incinerator was built by soldier labor, under the supervision of Private First Class Kinney, at a cost of 1812.15 Francs, or $330.00. This incinerator was a practical apparatus, estimated to be capable of destroying four tons of rubbish a day, and if available during the entire period of our active service would have simplified the disposal of such waste as surgical dressings, papers and other combustible rubbish. Before the erection of the incinerator, the combustible rubbish was destroyed in the heating plants in the hotels in which it accumulated. This was unsatisfactory because it interfered with the fires.

We started out with a complete sterilizing apparatus for operating room use and one large bed sterilizer. The operating room used a gasoline sterilizer until the apparatus shipped from the United States was received and the parts broken in transit were replaced. When the second operating room in the Hotel Helder was opened, a gasoline sterilizer was used there until an operating room equipment could be obtained from the Medical Supply Depot at Cosne. The large bed sterilizer was set up at the Hotel Maussant with the similar apparatus of Base Hospital No. 1 and the sterilization of all bulky material such as mattresses, clothing and blankets was taken care of there for the center.

Bathing of the men was at all times difficult until the Commanding Officer of the Center, in October, succeeded in renting the Second Class Bath House from the French at the close of the Vichy season. Then the ambulant patients went to the bath house from the hospital trains and were bathed and given clean clothing before they were sent to the wards. Until that time the Engineers detachment was engaged in installing shower baths in the different hotels and in putting in tubs where possible. Many of the hotels had no bath tubs and in Headquarters Hotel there were but five bathrooms in the entire building. The laundry was done at the steam laundries of Vichy by contract entered into by the Commanding Officer of the Center. The greatest part of the work was done in the Village of Bellerive across the Allier from Vichy. Owing to the shortage of labor and transport, the collections and deliveries were often much delayed on some occasions producing acute shortage of available clean linen for the wards.

The water supply was obtained from the municipal supply of Vichy from the River Allier. This water was examined bacteriologically by Captain Sutter twice a month. It was reported as a good, safe water, but not sterile. In January 10th, the bacteriological examination showed colon bacilli and the water was then boiled until the organisms had disappeared.

The food supply was furnished by the Group Quartermaster, and was at all times ample with the exception of a shortage of potatoes and bread in October and November. The shortage of bread was due to the simultaneous decrease in the personnel of the bakery company and the increase in the number of patients being sent to Vichy. Liberal use was made of canned milk. Fresh milk was available in limited quantities only, and the examinations in the bacteriological laboratory showed that it was not safe to use it unless previously sterilized. An inspection of the dairies in September showed unsanitary surroundings and unsatisfactory condition of the dairy utensils.

At first the clothing of the personnel and patients was not wearing well, and the quantity to replace the worn out articles was limited; but the quality improved and the quantity was unlimited early in the course of operations. Facilities for drying clothing were always limited until the Bath House became available.

No epidemic diseases were present in the hospital except sporadic cases until September 27th, when a Hospital Train brought eighty-one cases of influenza from Base Hospitals 31 and 32. In October there were forty-nine cases of influenza in the command; two officers, twenty nurses, twenty-seven enlisted men; and eight cases of pneumonia: one officer, five nurses, one enlisted man and one civilian emplovee. In November there were forty-three cases of influenza, and no pneumonia in the command. In December, thirty-two cases of influenza, and no pneumonia. During these three months there were sporadic cases of tonsilitis, diphtheria, measles, mumps and scarlet fever, but nothing that could be considered epidemic or dangerous. One of the nurses was extremely ill with cerebrospinal meningitis in October, but fortunately recovered. Miss Anna Williams, a nurse graduated from the Training School for Nurses of the Erie County Hospital, Buffalo, New York, contracted pneumonia in October. She had a virulent type of the disease and in spite of every effort of the medical service, she died on the 15th. One of the nurses of Base Hospital No. 115 died at the same time. Their bodies were interred in the American Cemetery on October 17th, with military honors. Major Arthur P. Reed, Captain John R. Booth, Captain Albert D. Kaiser, Lieutenants Frederick M. Cook, John D. Lynn, 2d, and Hunter acted as pall-bearers for Miss Williams.

Considering the conditions under which the personnel were living and the long hours of hard work performed by everybody the health of the command may be considered as uniformly good; with the exception of Miss Williams, everyone who went to France with Base Hospital No. 19, returned to the United States. Upon the appearance of the first cases of influenza, the laboratory service made cultures of every throat in the command in an endeavor to find carriers of streptococcus hemolyticus. It is upon the prompt institution of these examinations and the treatment of the carriers that the commanding officer ascribes the fact that only eight cases of pneumonia occurred in the command.

During our work in Vichy we assisted at many ceremonies of a military, civil and religious character.

On July 4th, Independence Day, which has been officially recognized as a holiday by the French Government, was celebrated by the following programme: 11:00 A. M., Service in L'Eglise St. Louis; addresses by a curate from Lille, who had been a German prisoner; and by the curate of the parish; viola, harp and contralto solos. 1:00 P. M., procession from the Hotel Carlton to Concours Hippique, where track events and a base ball game was held. Speeches were made by Chaplain Wood of Base Hospital No. 1 and by the Marie de Vichy. In the evening a gala performance was given at the theater in the Casino.

On July 14th, the French national holiday, Bastille Day, was celebrated. At 9:00 A. M., Military Medals were presented to wounded French officers and soldiers in the Park. At 10:00 A. M., a procession was formed in the following order: French Band, the Commanding Officer of the Hospital Center, the Commandant de la Place de Vichy the Medecin Chef, the Maire, the City Council, American and French Officers, French Soldiers, Base Hospital No. 1, Base Hospital No. 19, Detachment of patients, Nurses. During this parade, the name of the Rue Cunin Gridaine was changed to Rue President Wilson and the name of the Boulevard National was changed to Boulevard des Etats Unis. Following this parade, the American and French Officers were the guests of the Maire at the Restauration in the Park. In the afternoon there was a concert in the Park. At 6:30 the American Officers tendered the French Officers a complimentary dinner at the Hotel du Parc and at 8:30 there was a gala performance in the theater.

There were three ceremonies of presentation of the Distinguished Service Cross to patients in the Hospital Center. The Commanding Officer of Base Hospital No. 19 was detailed to command the parades on each of these occasions. The ceremonies were held at the Concours Hippique and were conducted according to Section IV, Bulletin No. 25, G.H.Q., A.E.F., May 9, 1918.

On December 11th, the presentation ceremony for the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to Sergeant Byron W. Hamilton, Co. M, 168th Infantry and Private James L. Clark, 47th Company, 5th Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps was held, and on January 7th, 1919, the presentation ceremony for the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to First Sergeant Samuel E. Phillips, Co. B, 316th Infantry.

The third took place January 27th, a presentation ceremony for the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to First Lieutenant Marvin James Menefree, Headquarters Company, 116th Infantry.

On August 4th, a detachment of patients and personnel attended mass at L'Eglise St. Blaise, where a special prayer service was conducted for France and her Allies.

On November 24th, the city of Vichy decorated the graves of the soldiers who were killed or had died during the Franco-Prussian War, 1870-1871, and in the World War, 1914-1918. A detachment of fifty enlisted personnel commanded by First Lieutenant Thomas M. Nolan, S. C., formed part of the parade.

On November 11th, the news of the surrender of the German Armies and the establishment of the Armistice was received. The bells of the churches in Vichy were rung until the ropes broke. In the evening a parade, in which a detachment of officers and personnel represented Base Hospital 19, was organized by the French. There was much enthusiasm, and in front of the Mairie and the American Headquarters the French band played the Marseillaise and the Star Spangled Banner.

On November 16th, the Americans in Vichy held a parade in celebration of the Armistice and the end of the war. The band of the 334th Field Artillery from Clermont-Ferrand was ordered to Vichy for the ceremony and the American General Foote and a French General Officer reviewed the parade, which was commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Edward C. Ellett, Base Hospital No. 115. The patients from each hospital were formed in provisional companies according to the Divisions in which they had fought. Wounded men who could not march were transported in trucks, and the personnel of the hospitals was formed in companies commanded by the Commanding Officers of the hospitals. There were about 5000 men in line.

On February 9th, memorial services for ex-President Roosevelt were held in the Red Cross Theater at 10:00 A. M. Lieutenant Colonel Swan and Major Francis Vinsonhaler made addresses.

February 14th, orders were received directing Base Hospital 19 to proceed to Labaule (Loire Inferieure) for transportation to the United States. On the 15th, these orders were modified sending the nurses to Labule and the officers and men to Nantes. On February 18th, Base Hospital 19 left Vichy at 6:51 P.M. We were escorted to the station by the band of Evacuation Hospital No. 25, Lieutenant Colonel William W. Percy, of Rochester, commanding, and detachments of the hospital units operating in Vichy. The officers and men marched through a double line of men from the other units into the station while the band played "Eliza Jane."

While operating in Vichy we became indebted to M. and Mme. J. J. Hoff, of Paris, for numerous games for the recreation room in the Hotel International, and to Madame Becker for a piano for the Hotel du Helder, and a piano and books for the Hotel d'Amerique.

On our way to Labaule we spent the first night on the train outside Saincaize. On the night of the 19th, we were in the station at Tours; some of the officers and men and all the nurses slept in the Red Cross Hut just outside the station. We arrived in Nantes at 4 P.M., February 20th. There we were sent to Le Pallet for billeting where we arrived at 9:00 P. M. We slept on the train that night and marched into Vallet and to billets at 9 A.M., February 21st. Here we really learned the pleasant lines that had fallen to us in having been ordered to Vichy with its sidewalks, electric lights and other conveniences. The men were billeted in two theaters, small motion picture houses, and the outbuildings of a chateau which was 1 km. from the town. We shall never forget the cold, the rain and the discomfort, in spite of the fact that we had been so fortunate in the past.

The records of the hospital company were inspected on February 26th. The equipment of the men was inspected on March 4th. On March 23d, fifteen officers were detached and left for Brest for Transportation to the United States.

We entrained at Le Pallet at 12:30 P.M., April 9th, and reached St. Nazaire at 5:00 P. M. On the 13th of April, at 4:30 A. M., we marched to the docks and went on board the U.S.S. Freedom. We pulled out of the slip at 11:00 A. M., headed for New York. The Freedom was a small ship, formerly the Wittekind, belonging to the Hamburg-American line. In the Bay of Biscay we struck high winds and heavy seas. April 15th, we made fifty-four miles only and were blown some distance from our course. The seas moderated in time and we reached Bush Terminal early in the morning of April 28th. We were transferred to Camp Mills, which we reached about 8:00 P. M. Here the men were given leaves of absence to visit New York and on May 4th, we were transferred to Camp Upton where the work of demobilization was completed and the men were discharged from the service and left for their homes on May 7th.

Before the Armistice was signed the men had all they could do in the line of their hospital duties; there was little time for entertainment, although several shows had been given in the courtyard of the International Hotel and the Red Cross Theater provided movies and other entertainments. Early in January, Corporal Hawken, at the suggestion of the Commanding Officer, called the members of the company who had shown ability in the line of entertainment together and put on a minstrel show at the Red Cross Theater on January 29th, 1919, which was well received. This company gave performances at the Hospital center, Mars-sur-Allier on the evening of February 7th and the afternoon of February 8th. The company also gave its entertainment at Clisson (Loire Inferieure) on March 5th. The interest of the Entertainment Officer of the Nantes Billeting area was drawn to the company and as a result it was sent to Nantes on March 13th, where it was coached for a week by Sergeant Jacoby, a professional entertainer. The Entertainment Bureau, Y.M.C.A., furnished costumes and make-up material. Major Edward T. Wentworth was in command of the men, as entertainment officer. During the week of its stay in Nantes, performances were given in the

Y. M. C. A. City Hut on March 14th; at the Hospital Center, Rennes, March 15th; at the Hospital Center, Doulon, March 16th; and at the Salle Colbert, Rue Colbert, Nantes, March 17th, 18th and 19th. The company returned to Vallet on the 20th. On the 21st, it gave a performance at Torfou; and on the 22d, an afternoon performance at Aigrefeuille for Base Hospital No. 115, which was billeted at that place and an evening performance at Getinge for the First Trench Mortar Battery. From March 25th to March 30th, inclusive, it gave an evening performance daily at the Red Cross Auditorium at Savenay. On March 31st, an evening performance at Vallet for Base Hospitals 9, 23 and 19.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Base Hospital No. 19 was organized in August, 1917. During the autumn of 1917, meetings were held at irregular intervals in the Armory, at which plans were made for providing for the comfort of the men of the unit during mobilization and active service abroad. The officers were: President, Mrs. Charles Taylor; Vice-President, Mrs. A. E. Hawken; Recording Secretary, Miss Florence L. Connal; Financial Secretary, Mrs. E. J. Barrett; Treasurer, Miss Ada Klein. The Auxiliary furnished oilcloth for use as table covers for the enlisted men's mess, knit goods, comfort bags, pillows, and sweaters for the enlisted men. Every Wednesday afternoon during the period of mobilization some members of the Auxiliary were present at the Armory to do mending for the men. The members of the Golden Glow Circle supplied numerous articles by its co-operation with the Auxiliary; socks, chocolate, phonograph records and books were also supplied, and they also gave some money for musical instruments.

On April 12, 1918, the Auxiliary gave the men a complimentary dance and on May 7, 1918, the enlisted men were given a complimentary supper in the Mess Hall. The Auxiliary had an enrollment of 121 members, and held twenty-one meetings.

Shortly after mobilization, five of the enlisted men who had been employed on Rochester newspapers, with the approval of Colonel Skinner, began to publish a weekly paper which they called the "Caduceus." After arriving at Vichy, this paper was made the newspaper for the Vichy Hospital Center. The men active in the production of the paper were Henry W. Clune, Edward H. Kennedy, Lewis R. Decker, Alan Porter, William F. Ryan, and Albert H. Longbotham.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The records of the Monroe County members of Base Hospital 19 appear elsewhere in this book under Roll of Service Part I.

AMBULANCE COMPANY 106, 102D SANITARY TRAIN, 27TH DIVISION

By STAFF SERGEANT, HARRY S. MEYER

Ambulance Company 106, 102d Sanitary Train, 27th Division, A.E.F., now known as 104th Collecting Company, 102d Medical Regiment, 27th Division, N.G.N.Y., came into being December 20, 1911, through G.O. 56, A.G.O.S., N.Y., which authorized Captain Charles O. Boswell, Medical Department, 3d New York Infantry, located in Rochester, to raise a unit equipped with mule-drawn ambulances to be known as the 2d Ambulance Company. This Company began drills January 19, 1912, and was mustered into New York State service February 9, 1912.

The organization attended the Connecticut Maneuvers, August 10-20, 1912; field training at Camp Whitman, at Fishkill Plains, N. Y., July 25, August 1, 1915; and June 19, 1916, was ordered to Pharr, Texas, for duty during the Mexican Border Campaign. Following this, it was mustered out of Federal Service and returned to Rochester, Dec. 27, 1916. The Company officers at that time were Captain Charles O. Boswell and First Lieutenants Raynauld D. Richman, Alfred F. Cassebeer and Willis Linn of Rochester and Lieutenant Thomas Laurie of Auburn.

On July 16, 1917, the organization answered the call of the President, and on July 17, 1917, was mustered into Federal Service at its Armory, Rochester, with orders to increase its strength from 79 to 150 men. On August 5, 1917, the company was drafted into the service of the United States by the President, and on Sept. 7, 1917, left Rochester for Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., for training with the 27th Division. Arrived at Camp on Sept. 10, 1917.

During the influenza epidemic, a volunteer Depot Unit, 2d Ambulance Company was organized at Rochester, in July, 1917, by Captain Norris Orchard, and served during the emergency. This Depot Unit suffered one casualty, Private Henry Vermeulen, who contracted the disease while on duty and died, Oct. 26, 1918. Captain Orchard being ordered on special duty was succeeded by Captain W. I. Dean.

On October 22, 1917, the designation of the 2d Ambulance Company, National Guard, then at Camp Wadsworth, was changed to Ambulance Company 106, 102d Sanitary Train, and in the latter part of the same month the organization was changed from a muledrawn Ambulance Company to a Motorized Ambulance Company, and the enlisted personnel was reduced from 153 men to 122 men. During its stay at Camp Wadsworth, the company performed the usual field duties, training and maneuvers; it also maintained a sick collecting route.

On May 19, 1918, Ambulance Company 106, with the other companies of the 102d Sanitary Train, left Camp Wadsworth, S. C. for a port of embarkation. Late in the afternoon of the next day we arrived at Camp Stuart, Newport News, Va. Our stay there, which we thought was to be for ten days, proved to be for six long, impatient weeks. Finally on June 30, 1918, at 4:00 P.M., with bands playing and whistles blowing, we sailed out of Newport News to start on our overseas career.

Our convoy consisted of fourteen vessels, ten transports, three destroyers, and one cruiser. Germany unwillingly furnished us transportation as our lot placed us aboard the U.S.S. Huron, formerly the "Frederick der Grosse." After an interesting, but quite uneventful voyage, we arrived at Brest, France on the evening of July 12, 1918, and the next day we first set foot on French soil.

We marched to a field near the old Pontanezen Barracks and pitched shelter tents. Here we lived in the mud for ten days, and on July 23, 1918, we boarded the now famous French pullmans "Chevaux 8—Hommes 40," and started our sight-seeing tour of France. Our first stop was at Rouen, and, after looking this city over, we started for Calais, where we made ourselves at home in a British leave camp. Here we parted from our barrack bags, but gained a new friend—our gas masks. After two days of rest, we decided to take a jump back to Rouen, because we were afraid we might have missed something there. But, we had seen everything the first time, except orders, and after two days of strenuous efforts to discover the hiding-place of the 27th Division, we again entrained, and passing once more through Calais, we finally arrived at Arneke, August 1, and there rejoined the Division.

From this point, after a ride of two hours on trucks we reached the Trappist's Farm, Belgium, and there became the guests of the 22d East Lancashire Field Ambulance, British Expeditionary Forces. Our actual combat training was now to begin, and on August 8, 1918, the first detachment of sixty men, under First Lieutenant C. C. Nesbitt, reported for duty with the 139th Field Ambulance, 41st British Division, at Wippenhoeck, to take care of the wounded at the Scherpenburg Sector. This detachment was the first of the 102d Sanitary Train in actual combat service, a point of great pride with our company.

The next day, August 9, a second detachment, of thirty men, under First Lieutenant L. R. Pierce, were assigned to duty with the 18th Field Ambulance, 6th British Division, at Remy Siding. On August 16, Captain J. P. Henry (having rejoined the company from school) with 1st Lieutenant A. B. Greiner and thirty men, reported to the 18th Field Ambulance for duty at the forward posts. On August 23, the entire company assembled at Remy Siding, for service with the 22d East Lancashire Field Ambulance Company, and detachments were sent to the advanced dressing stations and aid posts of both right and left sectors to reinforce the British personnel and for instruction.

On August 26, the evacuation of the right sector was taken over by Ambulance Company 107, which had just joined us, and the evacuation of the left, or Dickebusch Sector, was entirely taken over from the British by our company. Captain George Taylor, with Lieutenant Nesbitt, had charge of the advanced dressing station and the evacuation of the wounded from this sector during the engagement of Vierstraat Ridge. The headquarters of the company were at Remy Siding where Captain A. E. Cassebeer, in addition to supervising the evacuation of our sector and the changing of reliefs. maintained a system of supply of rations and medical needs to the forward posts of both sections. The ambulance evacuation from the advanced dressing stations to the main dressing station, was in charge of Lieutenant L. R. Pierce, and a staff of drivers under Sergeant Harry W. Weld. With strange cars and driving at night, without lights, these drivers did remarkably good work. Wagoner John E. Weiser, drove for seventy-two hours without relief, although his car was struck by shrapnel three times during this period. Throughout the engagement of Vierstraat Ridge, as well as the actions of East Poperinghe Line and Dickebusch Sector, our litter bearers experienced a real taste of war. At Gunner's Relay Post, Corporal Chester C. Beebe, with Privates 1st Class Charles C. Hindt and Edwin F. Burns, dug a man out of the ruins of a dugout under shell fire. Corporal Edward B. Simmons, and a party of bearers, while bringing a patient to the advanced dressing station, were upset by the explosion of a shell. Fortunately, all were unhurt, but the litter was smashed; nothing daunted, they carried the patient in relays to the dressing station. Privates 1st Class William F. Lawson, Edwin F. Burns, Charles C. Hindt, Lowell W. Lee, Stanley J. Hicks, and Burrel T. Cappon, deserve the credit for the evacuation of seventeen patients during a single night, each patient being carried for more than half a mile over a shell swept path. Many a time, litter bearers, after putting down their burden in safety in the dressing station, dropped in a faint from sheer exhaustion. Instances like this were numerous and showed the qualities of the men, their untiring effort and devotion to duty deserving the highest commendation.

Our training period completed, on September 4, 1918, we left Belgium and traveled back again to France, to take up our residence in the little town of Beauval. Here, by maneuvers and the working out of battle problems, we smoothed out what practical knowledge we had already gained. After three weeks we left by train for Tincourt, and marched to Longavesnes, which was to be our base of operations during the coming actions.

On the morning of September 26, Captain Cassebeer and Lieutenant Nesbitt, with detachments reported at Ronssoy to take over the evacuation of wounded of the left sector. Co-operating with the 133d British Field Ambulance, Captain Cassebeer supervised the work of the litter bearer section at the forward aid posts, while Lieutenant Nesbitt was in charge of the car post at Ronssoy. Captain Henry, with Corporal Edward B. Simmons and a detachment of six men, reported for duty at the advanced dressing station at Ste. Emilie. Litter bearer detachments were sent forward to the Battalion Aid Posts, and a relay post was established at Basse Boulogne. During the engagement of the Knoll-Guillemont Farm-Quennemont Farm, on September 26, Sergeant George Zimmerman and Corporal Merrill F. Long, with two detachments at the left Battalion Aid Posts, and Corporal Raymond W. Blank at the right aid post did excellent work in keeping these stations clear of wounded, and utilizing German prisoners to assist our bearers in bringing in the wounded. During the Battle of the Hindenburg Line, the aid posts were pushed forward, our detachments maintaining contact with their respective Battalion Posts. Collecting posts for wounded were established along the Guillemont Road, friendly shell holes providing the only shelter. From one of these, Corporal Blank and Private F. D. Scandling, while under machine gun fire, crawled to a wounded officer and carried him to the protection of their shell hole. Sergeant Ralph W. Hicks with Private Gustavus W. Burton established a relay post at Basse Boulogne north, and did excellent service in the evacuation of wounded. At the car post at Ronssoy, Lieutenant Nesbitt with Corporal Beebe and Private Charles E. Heydt and Frederick H. Dewey were in charge of loading ambulances, and directing walking wounded. On account of the rush of wounded to this station, many requiring dressings, it really assumed the duties of an advanced dressing station. Our men worked night and day in the effort to keep this station clear of wounded. Here again, as at the action at Mount Kemmel, litter bearers worked incessantly with practically no relief, carrying litters and patients back and forth, from the Battalion Aid Posts to the relay posts and from there to the car posts. After five days of this strenuous work, we were relieved. A more tired and exhausted lot would be hard to find, but we had the feeling of having been of some real service in this great struggle.

After a night's rest at Longavesnes we marched to a rest camp at Courcelles near Peronne. Here, after a bath, a few days rest, and regular meals, we soon recuperated, and on October 8, we started on our march back toward the front lines. The first night we camped outside of Roisel, and early the next morning continued our hike, arriving at Wiancourt in the evening. The march from Roisel to Wiancourt took us through Bellecourt and over the ruins of the famous Hindenburg Line. Fresh evidence of the terrific shelling was everywhere visible,-tanks, dismounted guns and machine guns in profusion. On our arrival at Wiancourt, we learned that the enemy had only evacuated this area a few days previously and that they were still on the run. This was evidently too far back for a base. so on the afternoon of October 10, we moved to a group of farm buildings between Busigny and Bohain. Heavy artillery was in position all around us and not infrequently shells ploughed up our back yard and sprinkled us with shrapnel.

On the night of October 11, we took over the evacuation of wounded from a British Field Ambulance Company. Three bearer detachments, two of which were in charge of Corporals Clancy and Blank, who took over the posts at La Haei Menneresse and the other in charge of Corporal Long, took over a station at Escaufourt. These detachments after three days were relieved by others in charge of Sergeant Harold M. Fitch and Louis G. Kelly, and Corporal Lemuel R. Gale. The forward evacuation of the left sector by Ford Ambulances to the advanced dressing station at Busigny was under the supervision of Captain Cassebeer. The Red Cross ambulance drivers were relieved by our own drivers, who maintained a constant service from the forward posts to the advanced dressing station. Many civilians left in the towns by the retreating Germans, had to be evacuated because of the shelling, particularly gas. The detachment at La Haei Manneresse, under Corporal Clancy, did excellent work under shell and machine gun fire, in evacuating the civilians, many of whom were old people and children, and who unfortunately suffered numerous casualties. Amid the suffering and terror, diverting incidents occasionally happened, as when a shell fragment completely severed a handle from a wheelbarrow loaded with household goods, which an old man was pushing with all speed possible, to a place of safety. Also, one day when word was passed that the enemy had broken through the line, our detachment formed the support when the little garrison of the post "stood to." We were Medical Department men one moment and combat troops the next.

On October 17, the advanced dressing station was moved to Escaufourt to facilitate the evacuation of wounded during the battle of the La Selle River and Jonc-De-Mer Ridge. Here the station for walking wounded was in charge of Lieutenant Nesbitt. Litter bearer detachments under Sergeants Zimmerman and Hicks were pushed forward to St. Souplet, while the enemy was still on the outskirts of the town. Here our company was credited with its first retreat. Alarm was given that the enemy was advancing, and our line, thinly held, had given ground. Immediately the station was closed and a more or less orderly retreat made toward Escaufourt. When halfway back, Sergeant Zimmerman, realizing that the firing did not approach any nearer, started back to St. Souplet, and soon the station was re-established. The alarm had arisen because of an attempted raid.

On October 18, litter bearer detachments were beyond the river and railroad. Later in the day a Battalion Aid Post was established at Arbre Guernon. Ambulances were sent forward beyond St. Souplet, and a shuttle service was established beyond the blown-up viaduct. Private Gustavus W. Burton, acting as orderly on an ambulance, was killed on October 18, near the crossroads at Arbre Guernon, while going from the ambulance across a field. Up to this time our company had been unusually fortunate, this being our first fatality. All day and all night, the Ford ambulance service was continued, neither Captain Henry, who had now taken charge of this department, nor the drivers had any sleep for several days, except, for snatches between runs. The next day, an ambulance while making a trip to the Battalion Aid Post at Arbre Guernon, was hit by a shell. The driver Wagoner Henry W. Miller was seriously wounded and later died at the casualty clearing station. During the engagement at the St. Maurice River, a bearer detachment in charge of Sergeant Laurence B. Atkins occupied a station at La Roue Farm. Private Frederick H. Dewey gave valuable service as a runner between this post and a forward aid post of the 107th Infantry and in the evacuation of wounded.

The 27th Division was relieved on October 20, and our march back to a rest camp began. First to Brancourt, and then on to Bellecourt. The following day we continued our march to Roisel where we boarded a train that arrived at Corbie on the night of October 24. Comfortably billeted here, we were making preparations for our next trip to the line, when, on November 11, we heard the news of the signing of the Armistice.

On November 27, we left by train for the Le Mans area. We were billeted at St. Corneille, and later at Prevelles, where we made preparations for returning to the United States. On February 25, 1919, we left St. Corneille and arrived at Brest the next day. On March 3, we embarked at Brest on board the U.S.S. Mount Vernon, arriving at Hoboken, N. J., March 11.

Our company was stationed at Camp Merritt, N. J. until March 24, 1919, on which day we left for New York City and on March 25, we participated in the Victory Parade of the 27th Division. March 26, we arrived at Camp Upton, Yaphank, New York, where we were demobilized on March 31, 1919.

During the time the company was overseas the officers were: Captains A. F. Cassebeer and J. P. Henry; Lieutenants C. C. Nesbitt, L. R. Pierce, and A. B. Greiner.

The reorganized 106th Ambulance Company, mustered into Federal Service as a National Guard Unit April 11, 1921, with Captain Walter Edwards in command, was redesignated the 104th Sanitary Company, 102d Medical Regiment, and May 12, 1924, to conform to regulations, again changed its name to 104th Collecting Company, 102d Medical Regiment. The present commander is Captain Eugene Kraft (1928).

THE AIR SERVICE

By Edward Peck Curtis

In his introduction to Henri Bordeaux' book "Guynemer Knight of the Air," Theodore Roosevelt says this of the Air Service and its personnel: "The Air Service in particular is one of such peril that membership in it is of itself a high distinction. Physical address, high training, entire fearlessness, iron nerve and fertile resourcefulness are needed in a combination and to a degree hitherto unparalleled in war. The ordinary air fighter is an extraordinary man."

It may be that Roosevelt put the case too strongly—at least the rest of the Army sometimes thought so—but his own sons were in every branch of service and he knew whereof he spoke. Not many months after those lines were written Quentin's machine was falling to earth—10,000 feet above the Marne—and its young pilot took his place among the immortal heroes of the Air Service.

Rochester's airmen were in every branch and department of the service over land and sea—over the battle lines in France and at schools and flying fields on both sides of the water. How well they did their part is told in the individual records which appear in this volume.

Not every pilot, at the end of his long and trying period of training, was lucky enough to get to the front, but to those of us who did there is no thrill equal to that of the first fight with a German plane. Other battles may have been harder fought and there were more hairbreadth escapes later on, but for that shivery-from-head-to-foot feeling there is nothing to equal the first sight of a great black cross on the wings of an enemy plane, thousands of feet above the clouds. For months probably you have been carefully trained in the latest aerial tactics, just what should be done when an enemy machine is sighted, how to approach it, depending on whether it was a single seater or two seater, where to place it in your gun sights and so on indefinitely. There was one point especially which was continuously impressed on us-if you met up with a two seater never, never attack from above and behind, for it is exactly in this position that you are most exposed to the fire of the machine gunner in the rear. We heard that maxim repeated a hundred times by our French instructors at school until we became a little bored with it. A few weeks later I saw my first German plane, a two seater Rumpler, over the St. Mihiel Salient and after nearly falling out of my machine in my excitement I proceeded carefully and deliberately to attack it from above and behind, just as if it carried pea shooters instead of two very effective machine guns.

Needless to say it happened very early in our career at the front while my squadron was at Toul. It was the custom at that time, in addition to our regular patrols, to keep three or four pilots on duty at the hangars to answer "alertes" as they were called. That is, our observation posts in the trenches would telephone the positions of enemy planes crossing the lines and the pilots on duty would immediately take off in pursuit. On this particular afternoon we had invited a lot of nurses from a nearby hospital to come over to tea and see how the Great War was being fought. The four of us who were on "alerte" were sitting around in our flying clothes having tea and explaining just how one should go about shooting down German planes, when an orderly rushed out of the Operations Office and shouted. "Three two seaters sighted near St. Mihiel going east. Altitude 6,000 feet." Amid much excitement and admiring comment we scrambled into our planes and took off toward the lines, flying in wide circles to gain altitude. Our small rotary-motored Nieuports climbed like helicopters and we got to 5,000 feet in no time. At this height we could plainly distinguish the white puffs of anti-aircraft smoke showing the presence of enemy machines still a little above us and on the German side of the lines. We headed directly for the puffs, still climbing, and were soon almost in the midst of them, but I for one had not seen a trace of the German machines. Suddenly I looked down over the side and to my utter amazement saw three German two seaters headed for home as fast as their good Mercedes motors would carry them. It took me about ten seconds to recover from the first paralyzing shock, and then throwing all my training to the winds and forgetting that I had three machines with me, down I went on the nearest machine spraying the heavens with machine gun bullets. I have confused recollections of seeing tracer bullets, vicious little streaks of flames, shooting by and of thinking how funny they looked and of going right on down past the other machine in a wild dive. By the time I had pulled out of that and climbed up again the other three planes were concentrated on the German who tried to manoeuver while his companions fled. This time we all approached more scientifically and as I got in quite close I saw a little puff of smoke followed by a burst of flame. You do not often get close enough to an enemy plane to distinguish the men in it easily but this time I was close enough plainly to see the machine gunner. His gun had either jammed or he was out of ammunition for he had stopped shooting and as his plane gave a final lurch and plunged to earth—a blazing mass of wreckage—he coolly waved his hand in farewell.

There certainly were not four more excited pilots on the Western Front than we were as we flew home and carefully landed near our hangars. It was less than half an hour since we left our tea party and they were all there to welcome us as we clambered out of our machines and tried to look unconcerned in response to their eager questionings. "Oh, yes," we said nonchalantly "we got one. Fell in flames near St. Mihiel. Can't we get you some more tea?"

Editor's Note: Major Edward Peck Curtis is a distinguished American Ace, officially credited with the destruction of upwards of six enemy airplanes. He was in constant service at the front as a Patrol Leader, being the youngest Major in the American Air Service. In recognition of his valor he was awarded the American Distinguished Service Cross; the French Croix de Guerre, with palm and bronze star; also the Russian Cross of St. Anne for services to the Northwest Army in connection with the typhus epidemic (For Citations see Vol. I, World War Service Record, pp. 614, 623; Vol. II id., p. 337.) His residence is Rochester, New York.

Eggers (New York, 1919); Pictorial Record of the 27th Division, by Alexander Starlight (New York and London, 1919); Story of the 47th Heavy Artillery, by George W. Small (Baltimore, 1919).

Editor's Note: In the American Expeditionary Forces the Divisions were in three groups: The 1st to the 20th, inclusive, were made up of Regular Army units, plus voluntary enlistments and Selective-Service men; there were no Divisions numbered from 21 to 25, inclusive; the 26th to the 42d, inclusive, were National Guard Divisions, from the Militia of the several States; there were no Divisions numbered from 43 to 75, inclusive; the 76th to the 93d, inclusive, were made up almost wholly of men called in by the Selective Service Law, known at first as the "National Army." There were no Divisions above the 93d. The Divisions being organized at the time of the signing of the Armistice were numbered 95, 96, 97 and 100. All Divisions reached France except the twelve Regular Army Divisions numbered 9 to 20, inclusive.
