American Agriculturist

Charles William Burkett, Editor. Subscription Price, $1.00 a Year

The one weekly agricultural NEWSpaper. First of all it is devoted to the NEWS of agriculture. It reports what is going on. It reveals underlying conditions that forecast the influence that will affect agriculture. It reports the changing conditions that confront the farmer and the various branches of his business, as well as his family and social interests.

Its original, exclusive and comprehensive crop reports are a feature of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST. These reports are the accepted authorities among the producing, transportation, distributing, mercantile and consuming interests. The Orange Judd crop reports are considered more reliable than the government reports, while much more prompt and newsy.

We tell the news about crop conditions, market influences, etc., from one week to a month or more earlier than does the government. AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is quoted more widely by the daily press and other newspapers than probably all other farm weeklies put together.

In addition to crop and market news, AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST reports weekly what is going on among the farmers, describes the doings of their organizations, and gives the news about whatever is happening in each and every branch of agriculture in the respective sections.

As an agricultural NEWSpaper, AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST therefore is unique.

None other of the farm press even attempts anything approaching our adequate crop reporting service. During the summer and autumn months, the Orange Judd reports have been the first, the most complete and the authoritative statement of all that was known of the situation from week to week pertaining to the staple crops: Wheat, corn, oats, cotton, hay, tobacco, potatoes, apples. Also all special crops, such as small fruits, vegetables, cranberries, onions, milk, butter, cheese, eggs, rye, barley, buckwheat, rice, etc. Our comprehensive inquiries reveal the relation of agriculture and other fundamental conditions to general business and all industry. Notable examples of this service appear in each issue.

Special Service to Advertisers and Subscribers

Orange Judd service bureau also performs a service to our subscribers and advertisers which may be likened to what Dun and Bradstreets do for their clients, among merchants, manufacturers and bankers.

We give our subscribers and readers SERVICE. We co-operate with them to enable our advertisers to better serve our subscribers and readers, and thus make the advertising columns of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST of larger usefulness from month to month and year to year to each and every subscriber, reader and advertiser.

The publisher executes a bond of confidence with each subscriber in which we guarantee the reliability of each advertiser and advertisement admitted to AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

We seek to build up agriculture, to promote rural life, to foster legitimate business and to insure general prosperity. We strive to build up instead of tear down.

The Standard Authority

upon the technique of agriculture and home interests, AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is preserved for reference and study as the standard authority upon the best methods of doing the various operations on the farm and in the home.

It constitutes a technical magazine of agriculture, a weekly authoritative encyclopedia of all branches of farming and of home interests.

Most Carefully Read

Our subscribers and their folks eagerly wait the coming of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, to get its news in all phases of agriculture, its crop reports, its market forecast, its price quotations.

They study it for reliable and authoritative information upon the technique of work on the farm or in the home.

They preserve it as the standard authority for constant reference.

Farming Types in the United States

Those Most Profitable—Where, Why, and How. Specialties Good and Doubtful. Types that Combine Well. Crop Rotation. Selection and Breeding. The Way Up from Beginnings

THOSE types of farming which make no provision for maintaining or building up the fertility of the soil are called exploitive types. They exploit the soil. Exploitive farming is characteristic of regions in which farming is new. When first put into cultivation, most soils are rich and can be farmed for many years without attention to fertility. History shows that exploitive farming may continue without serious consequences on rich soils for 20 to 50 years, depending on the character of the soil and the climate; the farther south one goes the quicker the humus (decaying organic matter) rots out of the soil.

Generally speaking, after exploitive farming has reduced the fertility of the soil to the point where paying crops are no longer produced, types of farming are introduced which build up the soil and make it fertile again. Usually these conservative types of farming produce forage for live stock and put the manure back on the land. There is some evidence that the soil may be brought back by growing green crops, especially certain leguminous crops—cowpeas, crimson clover, vetch, bur clover and the like—and turning them under. Where it is possible to grow forage crops only and to buy grain or other concentrated feed at a reasonable price, good strong land may be built up and made highly fertile without the use of chemical fertilizers; but generally, in those sections of the country where farming has been followed for more than half a century, commercial fertilizers are used to a greater or less extent.

The small cotton farms of the south, on most of which no effort is made to keep a supply of humus in the soil, the production of corn and wheat in southern Missouri, of wheat in southern Illinois, and of hay in New England are other examples of exploitive types of farming that have continued beyond their legitimate life.

Farming is said to be extensive or intensive according to the amount of capital and labor used upon a given area. On the grain fields of the west one man farms a large area. The amount of work done per acre is small and the income per acre is usually comparatively small. Almost any system of farming may be carried on in an intensive way. The farmer who grows 100 bushels of corn, 40 bushels of wheat or 3 tons of hay per acre is doing intensive farming. Ordinarily, however, the term "intensive farming" applies to such types as truck and fruit growing, poultry raising, etc., where a large amount of capital and a large amount of labor are used per acre. As a general rule, the more intensive the type, the larger the income from a given area of land.

Farming Types in the United States173

Single-Crop Farming

The most striking instances of single-crop farming in this country are to be found in the cotton plantations of the south, the grain farms of the plains region and parts of the Pacific coast, the rice-growing areas along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, the tobacco-growing sections in the Atlantic states and the cornfields on many farms in the middle west. The term does not mean to imply that only one crop is grown, but one crop brings in practically the whole income of the farm family. Such types of farming are nearly always exploitive and usually extensive. In diversified or mixed farming there are several sources of income, usually several crops are grown and frequently live stock is kept in addition to the animals needed to work the farm. As a rule, farms are more or less diversified in their industries, and it is usual to find two or more types of farming carried on together on the same farm.

The production of garden vegetables, commonly called truck farming, is one of the most intensive types of farming, and requires a comparatively high capitalization as well as a large amount of labor. At the same time, where markets are good, the income is so large that a family can make a living on a very small area of land. In fact, 10 acres would be a large truck farm, and 2 or 3 acres properly managed, with good markets, will bring a fair living to an ordinary family. This type of farming is a desirable one for beginners, although a great deal of study and some experience are necessary before success can be obtained.

Truck farming assumes three phases; First, every farm should have a garden which produces such vegetables and small fruits as are needed for home use. Second, in the vicinity of every city, town and village there is room for a small number of truck farmers who can supply local markets. This is the safest form of market trucking. The crops to be grown must be determined by climate, soil and market demand. The third system of trucking, which is widely developed along the Atlantic seaboard and is found to some extent in other sections, is that of growing vegetables for shipment to distant markets. This type of trucking requires, not only a large capital and great expense, but also a large amount of reserve capital on account of the great fluctuations in receipts for products shipped. Some years enormous incomes are obtained per acre; other years there is a dead loss. The business is not recommended to beginners.

The production of berries and of small fruits, where there is a local market, may be quite profitable; but, when one must depend upon shipping to the large cities, the results are very uncertain. The production of winter apples for shipment to the large markets has proved in the main a profitable industry. Generally speaking, the production of any kind of fruit for market, especially tree fruits, necessitates waiting several years before any income is obtained, and it is usual to combine truck farming with orchard growing, gradually abandoning truck crops as the fruit comes into bearing. The beginner is especially warned against embarking his capital and time in new ventures in the line of fruit growing. It is better to stick to those things that have demonstrated themselves to be successful.

The Cost

The principal crops found on single-crop farms in the United States are cotton, wheat, corn, hay, tobacco, rice, sugar cane and hops. Other crops are grown as practically the only crop in small areas in various parts of the country. Generally speaking, the equipment required for conducting a single-crop farm is less than for any other type of farming. On the ordinary one-horse cotton farm of the south the cost of buildings, work stock and farm implements will average about $8 per acre; on the exclusive grain farm with a moderate equipment the cost is about $20 per acre; with corn as a principal crop the cost is about the same; on an exclusive, well-equipped hay farm, the cost of equipment, including buildings and fences, is approximately $40 per acre; on farms where tobacco, rice, sugar cane or hops are grown the cost is considerably more.

Rotations with Principal Crop

In several sections of the United States there is a rotation of crops containing one crop which is the principal source of the farmer's income. Tobacco is grown in this manner in parts of Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee and to a slight extent in other tobacco-growing sections.

In Aroostook county, Me., the prevailing type of farming is one in which the rotation covers a period of three years, the crops being (1) potatoes, (2) oats and (3) clover. The land is usually divided into three approximately equal areas, so that each of these crops is grown every year. In some parts of Pennsylvania and Ohio a smaller rotation is found in which wheat is substituted for oats.

In certain sections of the west, sugar beets are grown as the dominant crop in the rotation. In the alfalfa regions of the west the rotation generally consists of two or more years of alfalfa, followed by one year of potatoes or grain in order that the alfalfa roots may become decomposed, and then one or two years of sugar beets followed by grain, with which alfalfa is sown. The rotations used on sugar-beet farms in Nebraska, Michigan and eastward are highly variable.

These types of farming in which one crop in the rotation is the principal source of income are very satisfactory, especially where the remaining crops are fed to live stock and the manure is put back on land. Most of them require considerable capital for equipment, and require considerable labor compared with the single-crop systems.

Cotton occupies the position of a dominant crop on a few farms in the south, and is one of the best crop rotations to be found in this country. The rotation consists of cotton, followed by corn in which cowpeas are sown at the last cultivation, the next crop being winter oats, followed by cowpeas the succeeding summer. This rotation gives two opportunities for winter cover crops to be turned under to supply the humus; namely, between cotton and corn and between cowpeas and cotton. Crops available for use as winter cover crops in this rotation are rye, oats, bur clover, crimson clover, common red clover, hairy vetch and common vetch.

This rotation builds up the land very rapidly, the yield of cotton going up more rapidly than that of the other crops. Such farming is quite profitable and is to be recommended generally for the southern states.

Raising Seed Pays

Scattered here and there over the country are farms devoted to the raising of seeds for sale. These farms are of two classes; namely, those which raise vegetable seeds, usually on contract for some large dealer; and those which make a specialty of growing improved seeds of ordinary field crops. The latter class of farming offers at the present time one of the best opportunities to be found in farming in this country. The ordinary farmer will not take the trouble to breed up the seed of his field crops, yet he will buy improved seeds, and is justified in so doing.

The crops which are most easily improved by selection of excellent individuals for seeding are corn, cotton and potatoes, and there is room for much development in the growing of improved seeds of these crops practically wherever they are grown. Improving the seed of wheat, oats, barley and other crops in which the individual plant is small is a very difficult task, and requires technical training for its successful conduct. The growing of seeds of garden vegetables is a specialty which requires a good deal of training and a comparatively large amount of capital and labor. It is not an inviting field for the beginner, yet it is a profitable type of farming when properly conducted.

Mixed Stock and Crop Farming

The general type known as mixed stock and crop farming is perhaps the most common type found in the northern states. It is hoped that it will also ultimately prevail very generally in the cotton belt, where the rotation already mentioned in discussing cotton as a dominant crop in a rotation is well suited to this type of farming. In the northern states the common rotation found on farms of this character is corn, followed by small grain, and this by timothy and clover for hay and pasture. Many variations of the rotation are found. For instance, corn may be grown two years before seeding the land to wheat or oats.

In the northern tier of states oats are usually grown in this rotation in preference to wheat, while in central latitudes wheat usually replaces oats. In some sections oats follow corn and wheat follows oats. Clover, like all of the legumes, helps to supply the land with nitrogen, the most expensive form of plant food. The legumes secure an abundance of nitrogen from the atmosphere, while other crops must secure their nitrogen from decaying organic matter in the soil.

The live stock found on the largest number of farms of this character in the southern half of the corn belt are beef cattle, usually with hogs, while in the northern portion of the section dairy cows are kept. On the better class of mixed stock and crop farms the only crop sold is the small grain. This is especially true where wheat is grown in the rotation. Oats are often all fed on the place. In either case, if the corn and hay are fed to live stock and good use is made of the manure, the fertility of the land is fairly well maintained, though after two or three generations of such farming the use of commercial fertilizers becomes necessary.

The equipment on farms of this class, including cost of buildings, fences, implements and live stock, will run from $50 to $75 per acre. About one work horse is required for every 25 acres in cultivation, and one laborer for 25 to 40 acres. A family living on a quarter section of land devoted to mixed stock and crop farming, with a fair amount of industry and intelligent management may be expected to make a good living, and perhaps to lay by a little profit.

In the southern states where cotton is grown in a rotation consisting of cotton, followed by corn and cowpeas, then oats, followed the next summer by cowpeas for hay or seed, or both, stock farming combines excellently with crop farming. If all the crops except cotton are fed to stock and the manure is intelligently used, large yields of cotton are obtained at comparatively small expense, and the work of the farm is better distributed through the year than on exclusive cotton farms.

The Cattle Industry

The growing and fattening of beef cattle is an industry found perhaps on a larger number of stock farms than any other. Generally, the profit is small. The most profitable beef cattle raising is that of pure-bred stock for sale as breeders, but it is only the experienced breeder with a good reputation who can sell young stock at satisfactory prices.

Many men on the ranges of the west raise beef cattle for sale as feeders. Ranging cattle was formerly a very profitable business, but the best ranges have now been turned into farms, and on the poorest ranges sheep are gradually replacing beef cattle. A good many farmers who follow a mixed system of stock and crop farming keep a few cows of the beef breeds and raise the young for sale as feeders. This type of beef-cattle farming is perhaps the least profitable of all.

Fattening steers for market is one of the leading industries of the middle west. On some farms setters are bought in the spring and grazed during the summer, the best of them being sold for meat before winter comes on, the others being sold as winter feeders. Some farmers who make a business of fattening steers buy their steers in the fall and fatten them during the winter. Others combine summer grazing and winter feeding. Usually the farmer who makes a business of feeding steers does not expect to make much profit directly. But through this disposition of his crops he secures a fair price for his grain and hay and retains the manure on his farm, thus keeping up the fertility of the land. It is customary to keep a few hogs on farms where the winter feeding of steers is practiced, in order that the hogs may consume the waste grain in the droppings from the cattle.

A few farmers keep cows of the beef breeds and force the young stock by heavy feeding, selling it early as "baby beef." Beef of this character sells at the highest price, but is expensive to produce. The profit from it is not great, yet this type of farming serves to maintain the fertility of the land and returns a fair price for the crops consumed.

Sheep and Hogs

There are four types of sheep farming: (1) The raising of stock for sale as breeders, which is perhaps the most profitable form of sheep raising on the ordinary farm. (2) The raising of sheep for wool and mutton—a type found both on farms and on the ranges of the west. Usually the range man clips the wool and sells his young stock to farmers of the middle west to be fattened during the winter. (3) Early winter lambs. Some sheep raisers have the lambs produced very early in the season and send them to market late in winter, at which time they sell for very high prices. Frequently these lambs when in proper condition will sell for much more than they would bring three or four months or even a year later. (4) Fattening sheep for market. This industry prevails extensively in the middle west, where range lambs from the western country are bought and fed during the winter. Extensive feeding operations of this character are conducted in the alfalfa-growing regions of the west, and this type of handling sheep returns a very satisfactory profit to those who understand the business.

Hog raising is perhaps the least difficult of all the types of live-stock farming and the most profitable considering the amount of labor and capital involved. The equipment for hog raising costs considerable. Including buildings, fences and live stock, a hog farm requires an expense of about $70 an acre before it is perfectly equipped for the business. The one great danger in this type of farming is in cholera, which is a contagious disease.

Dairy Farming

There are three more or less distinct types of dairy farming; namely, (1) the selling of milk and cream, (2) the production of milk for butter and cheese making and (3) the raising of pure-bred dairy stock for sale as breeders. Generally speaking, when dairy farming is intelligently conducted it is quite profitable, though it requires more labor than other forms of live-stock farming and a larger investment of capital. By beginning in a small way the capital necessary can be earned, and this is usually done by men who embark in dairy farming. Dairy farming maintains the fertility of the soil perhaps better than most other types of farming.

By having a good garden and plenty of small fruits, the small dairy farmer has most of his living at home. It is best to start in with a good quality of grade cows rather than high-priced, registered stock. But it's highly important to use pure-bred sires in building up and maintaining the efficiency of the herd.

If one is located near a large city or near a railway station which gives direct connection with a city, the selling of milk or cream is the usual form of dairying followed. In sections where a market for milk is not to be had, butter making is the more usual type of dairying. Even near the large cities a few farmers find it desirable to make butter for supplying private customers.

Cheese making is not often conducted on the farm, but is usually confined to factories.

The raising of horses and mules is not generally an exclusive industry on a particular farm, but incidentally with other kinds of farming. Many farmers keep brood mares with which they do their farm work. It is hardly advisable for the small farmer to engage in this industry, but, where one has an abundance of land and must keep a considerable number of work stock, it is entirely proper to keep a number of brood mares.

Possibilities in Poultry

The raising of poultry is an industry found perhaps on more farms in the United States than any other.

Most farmers keep a few chickens, which find their living from the waste products of the farm. They are thus practically no expense and all of the product is profit. From 30 to 75 hens can thus be kept on an ordinary farm. The magnitude of this form of the industry is so great that it interferes materially with the special poultry farm. It is probable that more failures are made in poultry farming than in any other type of farming undertaken by beginners, yet it is decidedly one of the best and most profitable types of farming when properly conducted.

Nearly all successful poultrymen began in a small way by producing eggs for the general market. By carefully breeding up the flock and developing its egg-laying capacity, especially during winter, they have finally been able to embark in the production of eggs for hatching purposes, for which there is a ready sale for men who have earned a reputation for producing good stock. The breeding of fancy poultry is, as a rule, not a very profitable industry. It requires a large amount of special knowledge, and while a few men have made an eminent success in this branch of the business, a very large proportion of those who have tried it have failed.

Only a few farms are devoted to ducks, geese, turkeys or squabs as a more or less specialized industry, but there is an abundance of literature relating to these forms of poultry farming by means of which the beginner may learn the details of the business with a comparatively short experience.

The raising of bees is usually combined with fruit raising. The raising of flowers for the city trade is perhaps the most intensive type of farming we have, requiring considerable money for equipment, but producing a large income from a given area of land when intelligently conducted in a small way by a considerable number of people. There are a few ostrich farms in Arizona, southern California and Florida. Fox farming has developed to some extent in the extreme northern states in the past few years. Not much is known as yet about the management of these animals, but there is a possibility that foxes may become an important source of revenue to a few people in the states bordering on Canada.

The Literature of Farming

Nearly every type of farming mentioned has its literature in the bulletins of the state agricultural experiment stations and the United States department of agriculture and in the many agricultural books and periodicals published in this country. Before undertaking to farm, one should become familiar with the literature of the type of farming chosen.

In comparing farming with other industries, the fact should not be overlooked that the intelligent farmer produces a large part of his living on the farm, thus rendering the expense of living in the country much less than in the city. It should be further remembered that the independence of farm life goes far toward balancing its disadvantages when compared with city life. A diligent study of agricultural literature, therefore, may enable the beginner to be successful with comparatively little experience.

How To Mix Fertilizers

Homemade Fertilizers Pay

Ready mixed fertilizers cost on an average of $10 or more per ton than when the various ingredients are purchased separately. In buying materials for home mixing, it is best economy to get the concentrated forms. There is less bulk to handle. They should be as dry and finely pulverized as possible. If they are not, care must be taken to press them through a sieve before mixing is attempted.

Material may be kept on hand for some time, but the fertilizer should not be mixed until it is needed for use. Some combinations lose value if allowed to stand after they are mixed. No elaborate machinery is necessary. Have some good measures, such as a half bushel, a good pair of scales, a smooth, tight barn floor and some shovels. After pouring the required amount of each of the materials in a pile, shovel it over many times carefully to insure a good mixing. Be sure to protect it in damp weather to prevent any lumps forming. The formulas on next page are best adapted to general use on the farm and the table shows the number of pounds of each ingredient necessary to make up 2,000 pounds, or one ton of the mixture.

*Kainit. †Cottonseed meal. ‡Dried blood. Ground fish. This was used in the south. The popular mixture in the Connecticut valley for raising prime cigar wrapper leaf tobacco is cottonseed meal 2000 pounds, high grade cotton hull ash 1000 pounds, oyster shell lime 500 pounds, land plaster or gypsum 500 pounds, on each acre. Various modifications of the formula are used.

Effect of Materials

Early growth, nitrate of soda, muriate of potash, acid phosphate. Long growth, nitrate of soda, blood, cottonseed meal, tankage. Top dressing grass, ground bone, acid phosphate, nitrate of soda. Sandy soils, nitrate of soda sparingly. Clay soils, light potash. Sour soils, wood ashes or lime. Do not mix materials containing nitrogen and lime or wood ashes together, or the ammonia will be lost.

Crops Show Soil Needs

Lack of nitrogen in the soil is as a rule indicated by pale green foliage, small leaf and stem growth. No lack of nitrogen is generally indicated by deep green foliage and vigorous growth. Excessive nitrogen generally causes very abundant foliacious growth and retards fruit development.

The lack of available phosphoric acid is as a rule betrayed by the slow maturing of the crop or its failure to form plump seed. No lack of available phosphoric acid is generally indicated when a soil yields a full grain crop, the seed of which matures early and is full, round, plump and heavy.

Lack of potash is less readily indicated than that of either nitrogen or phosphoric acid. No lack of potash seems likely when corn, potatoes or hay grow well and furnish a good crop and where fleshy fruits succeed.

Mixtures for Various Crops

Corn—With manure: For silage, low to medium nitrogen, medium available phosphoric acid, medium to high potash; for husking or for the cannery, the same, except high available phosphoric acid. Without manure: For silage, high nitrogen, medium available phosphoric acid, medium to high potash, for husking or for the cannery, the same, except high available phosphoric acid.

Potatoes—With manure: Medium nitrogen, low to medium available phosphoric acid, high potash. Without manure: The same, except high nitrogen.

Oats and Other Cereals—With manure: No nitrogen (possibly a very small amount of nitrate to start crop), high phosphoric acid, low to medium potash. Without manure: The same, except low to medium nitrogen. If grown for hay rather than for grain, medium rather than high phosphoric acid.

Clover and Legumes in General—Low nitrogen, medium available phosphoric acid, high potash. If with manure, omit nitrogen. Ashes or lime in the fall are beneficial.

Grass—Seeding down, with manure, medium nitrogen (from slow forms such as bone meal), low to medium phosphoric acid, low to medium potash. Without manure, high nitrogen. Top dressing nitrate of soda in spring.

Commercial Fertilizer Materials

The strong nitrogen carriers are nitrate of soda 16 per cent, sulphate of ammonia 20 per cent, dried blood 10 to 13 per cent, tankage 12 per cent, nitrate of potash 14 per cent. The latter also contains 44 per cent of potash. The strong phosphoric acid fertilizers are bone tankage 12 per cent, acid phosphate 14 per cent, raw bone meal 22 per cent and steamed bone 25 per cent.

The strong potash materials are muriate of potash 50 per cent, sulphate of potash 50 per cent, kainit 12 per cent, nitrate of potash 44 per cent, wood ashes 2 to 5 per cent. The materials containing both nitrogen and phosphoric acid are the animal products, such as dried blood, tankage, fish scrap, etc., and cottonseed meal, which carries 7 per cent nitrogen and 1 to 2 per cent phosphoric acid.

Rock phosphates are good fertilizers to use on lands which are deficient in phosphorus and constitute the chief materials from which phosphoric acid is taken. They contain 25 to 30 per cent phosphoric acid. When finely ground and known as floats they form a fairly quickly available fertilizing material.

Among the various by-products which form good fertilizers are the castor bean pomace, the remains of castor beans after the oil has been extracted. It contains 5 to 6 per cent nitrogen, 2 per cent phosphoric acid and 1 per cent potash. Cottonseed ashes contain 15 to 25 per cent potash, 7 to 10 per cent phosphoric acid and are very valuable when they can be purchased cheaply. Tobacco stems contain 6 to 7 per cent of potash and 2 to 3 per cent nitrogen and are fine fertilizers for tobacco and small fruits. The stem had best be crushed or ground before being used.

Denatured Alcohol

The Law and Regulations. How the Measure Was Modified to Benefit Farmers. The Chief Provisions of the Law

The amended law relating to denatured alcohol, passed by the 59th congress, went into effect September 1, 1907. The purpose of the amendments was to further reduce the cost of denatured alcohol, and place its benefits within the reach of the farmers as well as the large distillers. It enables those who wish to produce alcohol on a small scale to distill it in suitably locked stills, and to have it denatured without the expense of a bonded warehouse which was necessary under the original law of 1906. The provisions allowing transportation of denatured alcohol in tank cars should materially reduce its cost to the consumer. In substance, the amended law makes the following provisions:

Domestic alcohol, when suitably denatured, may be withdrawn from bond, tax free, and used in the manufacture of certain definite chemical substances where alcohol is changed into some other chemical substance and does not appear in the finished product as alcohol.

The provisions of the denatured alcohol law are extended to apply to rum.

The commissioner of internal revenue, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, may authorize the establishment of central denaturing bonded warehouses other than those at distilleries. To these alcohol of the required standard may be transported without payment of internal revenue tax and in these warehouses the alcohol may be stored and denatured.

The establishment, operation and custody of such warehouses shall be under regulations and upon the execution of bonds such as may be prescribed by the commissioner of internal revenue.

Alcohol of the required proof may be drawn off for denaturing from cisterns of a distillery, for transfer by pipes direct to any denaturing bonded warehouses on the distillery premises, or to storage tanks in such warehouses. The denatured alcohol may be transported in the same manner and by means of packages, tanks, or tank cars, on execution of bonds and under regulations prescribed by the commissioner of internal revenue. Alcohol to be denatured may be transferred to central denaturing plants in such packages, tanks and tank cars as come under the regulations of the commissioner.

The section of the new law that chiefly interests the farmers states that distilleries producing alcohol from any substance for denaturing only, and having a daily producing capacity of not over 100 gallons, may use cisterns or tanks of such size and construction as may be deemed expedient in lieu of distillery bonded warehouses. The commissioner of internal revenue will prescribe regulations as to the manner and process of denaturing on the premises where the alcohol is produced and of transportation of such alcohol.

Farmers who contemplate going into the denatured alcohol business, either on their own account or in co-operation with their neighbors, should write the commissioner of internal revenue, Washington, D. C., asking for full instructions in the matter, also for circulars regarding the process of denaturing alcohol. This will enable the producer to avoid conflicting with the federal law. Full details with reference to denatured alcohol will be found in the book Alcohol, sent by Orange Judd Company, for which the price is $1.

American Agriculturist

Charles William Burkett, Editor. Subscription Price, $1.00 a Year

The one weekly agricultural NEWSpaper. First of all it is devoted to the NEWS of agriculture. It reports what is going on. It reveals underlying conditions that forecast the influence that will affect agriculture. It reports the changing conditions that confront the farmer and the various branches of his business, as well as his family and social interests.

Its original, exclusive and comprehensive crop reports are a feature of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST. These reports are the accepted authorities among the producing, transportation, distributing, mercantile and consuming interests. The Orange Judd crop reports are considered more reliable than the government reports, while much more prompt and newsy.

We tell the news about crop conditions, market influences, etc., from one week to a month or more earlier than does the government. AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is quoted more widely by the daily press and other newspapers than probably all other farm weeklies put together.

In addition to crop and market news, AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST reports weekly what is going on among the farmers, describes the doings of their organizations, and gives the news about whatever is happening in each and every branch of agriculture in the respective sections.

As an agricultural NEWSpaper, AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST therefore is unique.

None other of the farm press even attempts anything approaching our adequate crop reporting service. During the summer and autumn months, the Orange Judd reports have been the first, the most complete and the authoritative statement of all that was known of the situation from week to week pertaining to the staple crops: Wheat, corn, oats, cotton, hay, tobacco, potatoes, apples. Also all special crops, such as small fruits, vegetables, cranberries, onions, milk, butter, cheese, eggs, rye, barley, buckwheat, rice, etc. Our comprehensive inquiries reveal the relation of agriculture and other fundamental conditions to general business and all industry. Notable examples of this service appear in each issue.

Special Service to Advertisers and Subscribers

Orange Judd service bureau also performs a service to our subscribers and advertisers which may be likened to what Dun and Bradstreets do for their clients, among merchants, manufacturers and bankers.

We give our subscribers and readers SERVICE. We co-operate with them to enable our advertisers to better serve our subscribers and readers, and thus make the advertising columns of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST of larger usefulness from month to month and year to year to each and every subscriber, reader and advertiser.

The publisher executes a bond of confidence with each subscriber in which we guarantee the reliability of each advertiser and advertisement admitted to AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

We seek to build up agriculture, to promote rural life, to foster legitimate business and to insure general prosperity. We strive to build up instead of tear down.

The Standard Authority

upon the technique of agriculture and home interests, AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is preserved for reference and study as the standard authority upon the best methods of doing the various operations on the farm and in the home.

It constitutes a technical magazine of agriculture, a weekly authoritative encyclopedia of all branches of farming and of home interests.

Most Carefully Read

Our subscribers and their folks eagerly wait the coming of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, to get its news in all phases of agriculture, its crop reports, its market forecast, its price quotations.

They study it for reliable and authoritative information upon the technique of work on the farm or in the home.

They preserve it as the standard authority for constant reference.
