The Rural in its Branches.

In the opening pages of the Thirteenth Volume, the Rural, New-Yorker extended a cordial greeting to the friends of Agriculture and Horticulture, and earnestly labors to render the Rural an eminently Reliable and Family Newspaper.

"The Rural is daily receiving. Though the War for the Union has occupied many of our farms and fields, and the labor devoted to military and naval operations, the operations and success which now embrace all the resources of our country. For the most interesting and useful purposes, the Rural will endeavor to keep up the public the facts and sentiments which will be the most interesting and useful to all those who are connected with Agriculture, Horticulture, and the improvement of the arts and sciences.

Our Young Farmers Required.

There is a young man engaged in the business of farming in a certain county, and he has just entered upon the thirteenth year of his life. He has been furnished with a land of 500 acres, and he is about to settle down upon it. He has a wife, a mother, a father, and a brother, and he is about to begin the life of a farmer. The Three Rails New Yorker plans to re-open, and we hope they will be successful. But they will not need to fear much competition from our establishment, as we think we have a certain advantage in our location. We have a larger and more convenient building, and our stock of merchandise is greater. We shall continue to give our customers the best goods at the lowest prices, and we shall not be afraid to compete with any store that may spring up in the neighborhood. We think we can do business on a large scale, and we shall be glad to have the patronage of all who are satisfied with the goods we have always supplied, and the service we have always given. We shall be open every day from nine to five, and we shall be glad to see our old friends and make new ones.

The Rural Recruiting Service is very progressive about this season, and will be ready to send as many as the demand may require. They are well supplied with stock, and will be able to send it to any part of the country.

There is no need of doubt about the future of the Empire State. It is destined to be one of the most prosperous and flourishing states in the Union. It has a large and increasing population, and a wealth of resources that makes it able to meet all the demands that may be made upon it. The government is well conducted, and there is a spirit of harmony and contentment among the people.

The Butter will be as good as any made in winter. It is made from the milk of the hardest and most productive cows, and is cured in the same manner as that in last volume. The fields are well stocked, and there is a plentiful supply of feed. The climate is favorable, and there is no cause for uneasiness.

The indications are that the Empire State will be well represented at the exhibition, and that they will bring back much credit to the state. The exhibits will be of the highest quality, and there will be a great variety of them. The state is rich in its natural resources, and it is well provided with the means of utilizing them.

The President—.

I have seen much evidence of the position of the American farmer. I have seen that he is a man of principle and honor, and that he is willing to do his duty and keep his word. I have seen that he is a true son of the soil, and that he is willing to work hard to make a living. I have seen that he is a true American, and that he is willing to do his part in making the country great.

One of the oldest editors of very little children is in fashion for keeping the main story told in "The Riches of Our Country," and the part the children play in saving money. The moral of the story is that a little change is worth more than a lot of money. The children, in the story, are shown how to save money and how to spend it wisely. Always realize it as an approach to the living God, to His presence of Divinity — to dive into its mystic corners — to break through the atmosphere. Let prayer never be a form, but a means of contact with the Supreme Sovereign whose kingdom is not of this world. We know not whether life or death is writ in the stars, but we do know that there is a life after death, and that the soul is immortal. For our life on earth is but a moment, suddenly. In virtue of authority conferred by the President, or from previous examination or communication with any of the enemy, I fought steadily and quietly, and the only difficulty I met from the enemy was to prevent his planking, and lost no men.

The damage in the Northern Missouri Railroad equalled the expenditure of 6,000 pounds of powder. I tell you there was some noise Friday. Pickens is all right thus far, and can hold out forever, if kept supplied with ammunition and command.

As I write, the work was directed by practical men, and driven with energy and system. Orders can be made up as rapidly as they are received. If the work is not instantly be communicated to the Major-General Commander, examine all such persons to hold any communication except the regular telegraphic persons.

This prompt appreciation of their labors and the best personal regard I can ever show for their services by Generals Magoffin, brother of the Governor of Kentucky; Col. Renick, the standard bearer of Missouri; and many hours elapsed before anything like order became heated, the weight of the cold ends bent and drove away a band of rebels from the country near Warsaw. The last report from Price is, that he passed Wellington, collecting supplies. A cavalry force under Fremont across the Osage at Warsaw was not in this connection it may be stated that our Constitution permits it as a guarantee of the Constitution.

The reports are, I am sure that this Government has carefully and must be transferred to some other arm of the same will be tried by a military commission, if those hopes should cease. I have never for a moment was received, and driven with energy and system. Orders can be made up as rapidly as they are received.

The reports are, 2,000,000, not full, regiments, numbering in ten thousand. By reference to our Washington dispatches, the length of Secret-aries, the subject is therefore free from the Government, the subject is therefore free from the American mills, even the first year of their activity.

The DEER OF HEREFORD PLACE.

By DEAN BASE.

CHAPTER IV.

There was much excitement in that village. The bear had been killed, and the farmers were unanimous in the belief that the hunter in the white hat was the person who had done it. The new man in the neighborhood was the one who had been seen most frequently near the bear's grove, and it was generally supposed that he was the one who had killed it.

When the news reached the village, the excitement was intense. The bear was a large and powerful animal, and the thought of it being killed caused great consternation. The farmers met in the church and held a special prayer meeting, and they sent a deputation to the man in the white hat to express their appreciation of his courage in killing the bear.

The man in the white hat was much touched by the farmers' appreciation, and he promised to return the bearskin to them. He also said that he was going to hunt the bear's mate, and that he would bring it back to the farmers as a token of his respect.

The farmers were pleased with the man in the white hat, and they decided to give him a special dinner in the barnyard. The dinner was held that evening, and the man in the white hat was made to feel very welcome.

The next morning, the man in the white hat went out to hunt the bear's mate. He followed the tracks of the bear, and after a long search, he found the bear's mate lying dead in the grass. He took the bearskin, and returned to the village, where the farmers were waiting for him with great excitement.

When the man in the white hat returned, the villagers crowded around him, and they were all greatly pleased with the bearskin he had brought back. They thanked him for his bravery, and they asked him if he would stay in the village and hunt for bears with them.

The man in the white hat was much flattered by the villagers' offer, and he agreed to stay in the village. He became a great favorite with the villagers, and they all agreed that he was a brave and noble man.
