HORTICULTURE.

The Strawberry.

The strawberry is one of the best and the most popular of our fruits. It is justly famed for its beautiful blossoms, the lusciousness of its fruit, and the charm of its foliage. The fruit is rich in flavor and nourishments, and the plants are easily propagated by division or by runners. The little red berries, clustered on the short stems or runners, are the delight of children and adults alike. The strawberry is adapted to a variety of soils, and can be grown in pots, boxes, or the open ground. In the spring, the plants should be set in the open ground, and the soil should be rich and well-drained. The plants should be watered regularly and kept free from weeds. The berries should be picked when they are fully formed, and the plants should be allowed to rest in the fall. The strawberries are highly appreciated for their beauty and flavor, and are an important crop for home gardens and commercial farms.

Civil in the Rural Neighbor.

Our attention has been called to the fact that the strawberries have been sold in many places this spring, and we are pleased with the success that has attended their planting. The strawberries are a favorite fruit among many people, and are grown in many parts of the country. The strawberry is a hardy plant, and can be grown in a variety of climates. The strawberries are a good source of vitamin C and fiber, and are a popular choice for many people. The strawberries are a great addition to any garden, and are highly appreciated for their beauty and flavor. The strawberries are a great crop for home gardens and commercial farms.

The Battle is the Shenandoah Valley.

The Union took the field from the Federal Government with a 30,000-man expeditionary force, commanded by Gen. Thomas. As the enemy retreated into the woods, the Union soldiers pursued them, engaging in a fierce battle. Some 200 Union soldiers were killed or wounded in the fighting near the railroad tracks.

The enemy, led by Gen. Morgan, pursued the Union forces in the woods. The Union cavalry, led by Gen. Tyler, took refuge in the woods and fought back. Morgan's forces, however, were stronger and gradually gained the upper hand.

Despite the losses, the Union forces managed to hold their ground and eventually forced the enemy to retreat. The battle was a significant victory for the Union, as it demonstrated their ability to fight and defend themselves against a strong adversary.

The outcome of the battle was a blow to the morale of the Southern army and boosted the confidence of the Union.ps.
Thursday, 12th inst, Gen. Morgan, with four brigades of cavalry, took possession of Cumberland Gap and took possession, the enemy having deliberately resolved to harass, plunder and commit all kinds of lawless acts.

The following incident of a reconnoissance was made in Berryville:

A special dispatch to the N. Y. Times, June 23, says our army is believed from observations made from the balloon to be on the west side of the Chickahominy and preparing to make a movement on the right of our army, but also to follow the Chickahominy and enter on the left of our army, but also to follow the Chickahominy and enter.

The Chickahominy is now crossed by all the bridges possible, not only to repel any attack which may be made, but also to follow the Chickahominy and enter.

A dispatch from Confederate headquarters on the 17th the expedition reached St. Charles, 85 miles from New Market, bringing the intelligence that Freyman was in the Portage Swamp, and that the whole army is doubtless now, June 23, beyond the Chickahominy.

The Chickahominy is now crossed by all the bridges possible, not only to repel any attack which may be made, but also to follow the Chickahominy and enter.

MY MOTHER.

[The following clean was composed while at rest at Farm, Leicestershire, England, to a young lady of letters, who has been kind enough to write a tribute to my memory.]

A midsummer's night in the woods of Italy.

A young woman, dressed in a simple white gown, sits under a tree, absorbed in thought. She is deeply moved by the scene before her, and her gaze is fixed on a distant figure. The moonlight filters through the leaves, casting a soft glow on her face.

A voice breaks the silence.

"What is your name, my dear?"

"Lucy Dudly."

"Lucy, I am your mother."

The young woman looks up, her eyes wide with surprise.

"But you can't be my mother."

"Why, my sweet girl, I am your mother."

"You must be mistaken. I have only ever known you as my nurse."

"No, my love, you are mistaken. I am your mother."

"But how do you know?"

"I know, my sweet girl."

Lucy is overjoyed and embraces her mother, tears streaming down her cheeks.

"Oh, mother, I have never known you, but I love you."

"My dear, I know."

Lucy and her mother spend the night together, reuniting after years of separation.

The next morning, Lucy's mother tells her of her travels and the circumstances that led to their separation.

End of story.
