A very good percentage of our customers, who are not familiar with the long experience and wise counsel, have been very kind to our store. This is to say that many of the customers who come to us have no experience in the gardening line, and the store is open to them. It is to be hoped that such customers will be taken care of in their own interests.

The store is open to all, and the customers are welcome. It is to be hoped that such customers will be taken care of in their own interests.

HANDS OF THE AMERICAN GIRL.

One hands onto my own short locks,
And the other towards my head, and circling round,
While my helper's her arms were free,
She bent her neck and delved the full of my head.

I love the sight of the many hands,
With which they take the hair of the child,
As it is being combed and arranged in a style;
But I do not love the sight of the one hand,
With which they take the hair of the child,
As it is being combed and arranged in a style.

The hands of the American girl are so gentle and tender,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.
Their fingers are so soft and delicate,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.
Their nails are so clean and well-manicured,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.

Therefore, we must always remember,
That the hands of the American girl are so gentle and tender,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.
Their fingers are so soft and delicate,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.
Their nails are so clean and well-manicured,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.

But they are still hands of the American girl,
With which they take the hair of the child,
As it is being combed and arranged in a style.
Their fingers are so soft and delicate,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.
Their nails are so clean and well-manicured,
That they seem to be the hands of the child, not of the adult.

Therefore, we must always remember,

But they are still hands of the American girl,
fore, it was with a slow, reluctant step, that I began. It was a day of perfect clearness. The sky was so blue, so cloudless, that it seemed that the blue sea was just there, so close, that one could almost touch it. The sun was very warm, but it did not seem to be too warm. It was a beautiful day, a day of perfect clearness.

As the warm stages was just approaching, I took a deep breath and started out. I was tired, but I was not too tired. I was hungry, but I was not too hungry. I was hot, but I was not too hot. I was thirsty, but I was not too thirsty. I was worn out, but I was not too worn out.

I was walking along the street, when I saw a little girl. She was very pretty, and she came up to me and said, "Hello, young man.
What are you doing?"

"I am walking along the street," I said.
"What are you doing?"

"I am walking along the street," she said.

The Army in Virginia.

The following is a description of the army in Virginia, which was given by a correspondent of the New York Tribune, who was present at the battle of Gettysburg:

The enemy's army consists of about 100,000 men, and is commanded by General Lee. The Federal army consists of about 150,000 men, and is commanded by General Hooker. The battle was fought on the 1st of July, and resulted in a victory for the Federal army.

The troops of the Army of the Potomac were engaged in a severe battle with the rebels, under General Lee, for the possession of the town of Gettysburg. The Federal army, under General Hooker, was victorious.

The battle was fought on the 1st of July, and resulted in a victory for the Federal army.

The Story-Teller.

MILSEY'S SACRIFICE.

It is the season of all seasons, the June solstice, when a day-long sky's banner, a sun that shines like a spent sword, and a breeze that sways the lemon trees' canopies with a sigh reminds us of the sweetness of life. The same sentiment, with a more intimate touch, is felt in the present story by our correspondent, who, in a few vivid paragraphs, captures the essence of the season. The story tells of a young woman who, on a hot summer day, seeks refuge under the shadow of a cherry bough, only to be interrupted by the sound of footsteps. The story is a poignant reminder of the beauty of summer, and the fleeting nature of life.
