WORK OR DIE:

CIRCUMSTANCES ALTER CASES.

The following quality written story, with no added fiction, is written by Mr. M. H. M. Mandeville.

We are positive in our conviction that the story which we are about to present is a faithful account of events that have actually taken place.

When Lincoln was elected he told his family that he had been retired, and that he would have no more work to do. Where his brother said that he would do anything for him, so long as he had work to do, he replied, "I will not have any work to do, and I will not have anything to do."

As he was walking out to meet his friends, he met a man who had just come from the United States, and who said that he had seen a great many changes since he had been away. "Yes," said Lincoln, "I have seen a great many changes since I have been away."

The man then asked him if he knew anything about the changes that had taken place in the United States. "Yes," said Lincoln, "I am acquainted with all the changes that have taken place in the United States."
