SHEEP HUSBANDY.

WELL, I AM NOT HIDING IT Any longer than I shafl do it in sufficient small pieces with the teeth for, like a bow in the water, I shall not do it any more if I do not give myself the liberty of saying it. The great advantage of improvements is, that they are the means by which the farmer is enabled to improve his own stock to a certain extent, no matter how long he may live. Rural Notes and Items.

The Annual Meeting of the Eastern New-Yorker. — The annual meeting of the Eastern New-Yorker was held in the Richmond Hotel, on the 24th instant. The following officers were elected: President, Geo. B. Lyon, of Sandusky; Vice, J. H. Kiffmeyer, M.D., of Brockport; Secretary, Wm. R. C. C. Crook, of New York City; Treasurer, Geo. S. H. Chase, of Mechanicville. The meeting adjourned without business. The Eastern New-Yorker is the only paper published in this state which specifically addresses rural issues. It provides valuable information and guidance for farmers and rural communities. The Eastern New-Yorker aims to educate, inform, and advocate for the needs and interests of rural residents. It covers topics ranging from agriculture to local events and community issues. In this meeting, the officers were elected, and the paper continues to serve as a valuable resource for those in the countryside.

Rural Communications, etc.

PANINOMINIC DONSALIN ANIMALS. — In the State of New York, the proposal to introduce Doninominc Donkeys is gaining traction. These donkeys are known for their hardiness and ability to survive in harsh conditions. They are also valued for their resistance to diseases and their adaptation to various terrains. The introduction of Doninominc Donkeys to the state would likely have a positive impact on rural areas, providing a reliable source of labor and transport.

As the debate continues, the Eastern New-Yorker will keep its readers informed on this important topic. Your support is crucial in ensuring that the publication can continue to provide valuable content and support for rural communities.

"Gardens at Railway Stations!"

This is the title of an article in a London periodical containing gardens found at the stations along the line of one of the railways in the southern country. It suggests the possibility of a winter’s delight on this subject in these localities. It is important that our railway agencies should take up this subject and promote it; and the successful development of horticultural knowledge and facts; of the value of the smaller and more delicate flowers among the classes which may in due time be developed.

Those who have traveled have not failed to notice how the American’s eye is drawn to the beauty of the flowers of the same species and the variety of the flowers of the same species and the variety of the flowers of the same kind of flowers in the area about the stations. The writer has had occasion to pass through Flushing, Long Island, on the way to the Great Western, and has been particularly struck by the beauty of the flowers in the area about it. He has observed that the flowers are set like brilliants in the area about the station, and notes whatever is symmetrical and beautiful, whether in landscape or architecture. The writer therefore has invited the Speyer and the New York Central Railroad to take up this subject, and has written to them that the flowers should be shown off to the greatest advantage.

There is a station on the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, whose rapid growth and beauty are due to the beauty of the flowers of the same species and the variety of the flowers of the same kind of flowers in the area about the stations.

ORNAMENTAL TREES - NO. II.

This month's article is one of the most popular and greatly valued papers of the season. It contains valuable information on the keeping of ornamental trees and shrubs.

Many fruit books and papers contain valuable information on the keeping of ornamental trees and shrubs. In this issue, the writer offers valuable information on the keeping of ornamental trees and shrubs. We cannot claim that we have any knowledge of the subject, but we can recommend the following books and papers as excellent sources of information:

- "The Keeping of Ornamental Trees and Shrubs" by E. H. Wilson
- "Ornamental Trees and Shrubs" by A. W. Hitchcock
- "Ornamental Trees and Shrubs" by A. W. Hitchcock

The writer also mentions that the school of horticulture at the University of Illinois is the best arranged and most concise catalogue that has been published. The article is reprinted with the permission of the school of horticulture at the University of Illinois.

The Army in Virginia.

The Army of the Potomac.

The Army of the Potomac is still in motion towards the South. The columns have not crossed the Potomac as far as the city of Fredericksburg, but the apprehension that the Federals may advance on Richmond has caused Gen. Lee to order his army to the South, and on Saturday the 13th of this month the rebels were stationary at Fredericksburg.

Incidents of the Campaign.

The number of troops engaged in the battle of the 8th of April was about 60,000 on each side. The Federals were repulsed, and the rebels lost about 1,000 killed and wounded. The same day the Federal Government issued a proclamation offering a reward of $500 for the capture of Gen. Lee.
