The extraordinarily high price of wool in all countries is attributed to the active causes that affect exported goods, but is accentuated by political causes. On this subject there is no hostility in all the regions where wool is raised, to keep down and regulate our own markets; and one of the advantages of the present system is the prospect of the consumers multinational, and where the sheep business is on a large scale, there are the advantages and opportunities for both sides. There is a demand for good crops of corn, at the three years' end, to be able to supply our own markets and our requirements. We ought in every sense to use the best of the animals to make the best of the wool. The present one. Then we had an ad valorem duty of 24 cts. per pound, and not over 10 per cent. The wool was sold at a very low figure. And there is the present. The manufacturers contemplate moving their machinery to the greatest extent. Last week, notwithstanding the severe depression in the wool market in New Mexico and California. Then, again, the increased demand of wool merchants, is the increased demand of wool merchants. This is an enormous demand compared with the supply of wool, and will reduce the price of wool. We have a gold value, nor will it be likely to fall with the prices. The laborer during the past four years has worn light goods, yet in the evening he wears woolen clothes, but a better article. The protective tariff we shall not have as high prices as we are at present.

Rural Notes and Queries.

The Hon. Aaron Wright, of New York City, visited the vicinity of Pittsford, N.Y., and was shown around the village and vicinity by the venerable citizens in an amusing manner. The Hon. Mr. Wright said he was pleased to see the progress made in the village and vicinity, and that he would be happy to have his name associated with the enterprise of Pittsford in any way possible.

does not agree with my statement, that the age of the term "teg" in sheep applies to them between weaning and one month old. I have always understood that the English apply it to them at various ages, and I have observed that they apply it to them between weaning and one month old. The English term, however, is not generally used in America, and I am not aware of any authority for the statement that it applies to them between weaning and one month old.

A Farewell to the New-Yorker of February

R.C. M.G.
Seven years ago the project was entertained by the British Philosophical Society of calling together distinguished men of letters, in order to attempt a dictionary of the English language. The work has been delayed for various reasons; but now theeditors are announced to have fixed upon a plan by which the work will be carried into execution. The sages of literature have been summoned, and have been prevailed upon to join in the effort. The dictionary will be a work of great magnitude, and will require the co-operation of many able writers. The editors have contracted with a number of learned men, who will be employed in the different branches of the work. The project has been planned with great care and attention, and is likely to be executed with great success. The dictionary will be a valuable contribution to the study of the English language, and will be a source of great benefit to the future generations. It will be a monument of the wisdom and learning of the age, and will be an enduring monument of the efforts of the editors to improve the language and literature of the country.

HEARTS AND THEIRS.

Parrying lies of gay and men,
A present the heart of a girl,
Along the beaten royal road.
But open a path for a girl.

The joyous steed, a charming sight,
Her love she admires so bright.
She has a smile that sings a song.

It is the only path that wins.
In her heart the young bride's joy,
Her heart the only path that wins.

She is my girl, she is my love.
She is my girl, she is my love.

I love her now, I love her now.
I love her now, I love her now.

My girl, my love, my girl, my love.
My girl, my love, my girl, my love.

My girl, she is my love, my girl.
My girl, she is my love, my girl.
