The proper kind of shelter is very essential. Each animal has its own peculiar kind of shelter that it needs in order to be healthy and strong. Shelter may be of various kinds, from simple sheds to elaborate barns, and it is necessary to ensure that animals have access to the appropriate type of shelter for their needs. Shelter is not only important for comfort but also for health, as animals can become sick or even die if they are exposed to harsh weather conditions. The proper kind of shelter is being advocated by various organizations, and it is important to follow their recommendations to ensure the health and well-being of animals.

Some of the key points to consider when providing shelter include:

1. Type of Shelter: The type of shelter needed depends on the animal and its environment. For example, sheep may require a simple shelter made of straw, while horses may need a well-insulated barn with a roof to protect them from rain and snow. Shelter should be designed to keep the animal dry and warm, and it should be easy to clean and maintain.

2. Access to Shelter: Animals should have easy access to their shelter, especially during adverse weather conditions. This may involve building pathways or creating a system of feeding and watering stations that are easy to reach.

3. Environment: Shelter should be situated in a location that minimizes exposure to extreme weather conditions. For example, it should be sheltered from strong winds and sun during the hottest parts of the day.

4. Protection from Predators: Shelter should be designed to protect animals from predators, such as other animals or humans. This may involve adding fencing or gates to enclose the animal and prevent access to the shelter.

By providing proper shelter, we can ensure that animals are healthy and comfortable, which in turn can improve their productivity and well-being. Shelter is an essential aspect of animal welfare, and it is important to give it the attention and resources it deserves.

Care of Bees in November.

Mr. Williams of the U.S.U. Grant totalled the American Flock of Sheep to 1,169, of which 1,106 died, 674 were recovered, and 377 were left. The number of sheep in the country less than three sheep per hundred acres of cleared lands, and he keeps a dairy of 90 cows: potatoes are covered only one inch, and one

THE TIMB TO EXTEND ITS CIRCULATION.—Those of us who live in the country can congratulate ourselves that the central office of the American Rabbit is not neglected. All your friends will be glad to hear that the interests of the RUBAL are not neglected. If you have made any discoveries or inventions, and wish to have the timely notice of all your friends, the American Rabbit can be of service to you.

MENAGEMENT DISASTERS.—Are most of these given in this paper, and we trust that they will generally be found to be correct. We shall do our best to give as many as we can, and to do so in a way that will be of service to all who are interested in the same. If you have any valuable observations to make, please communicate with us at once.

We are constantly receiving inquiries in regard to the most suitable breeds of cattle, and to the best remedies which we have found for stretches and other diseases of cattle. Will you, or some of your correspondents, please to communicate with us on these subjects?

If the interests of the RUBAL are not neglected. If you have made any discoveries or inventions, and wish to have the timely notice of all your friends, the American Rabbit can be of service to you.

GARDEN WORK IN NOVEMBER.

BLOOMING.

To Prepare Coffee.

The best and finest coffee must be prepared with care and attention. It is a mistake to think that any coffee is good which has been roasted on the street or in the country. The best roasting is done in a kiln or a coffee house, and the coffee should be ground fresh every day. This will necessarily cost more, but it is worth it in the end.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

The most important duty of the husbandman is to provide for his family. This includes the cultivation of a garden, the care of livestock, and the management of a house. The garden should be well planned and laid out, with proper rows of crops and a system of rotation. The livestock should be fed on proper rations, and the house should be kept clean and orderly.

ADVERTISMENTS.

Advertisements are a means of communication for businesses and individuals. They can be placed in newspapers, magazines, and other media. They are an important part of marketing and advertising. Businesses use advertisements to promote their products and services, and individuals use them to find job opportunities or to sell their goods or services.
A SINGULAR STORY. Some years ago, I was attending a church meeting at a place appointed for that purpose. There was a young lady in the congregation, who, with others, was engaged in singing and praying. The young lady was so moved with emotion that she fell to the floor in a kind of swoon, and was laid aside by the ladies who surrounded her. The young lady was the daughter of an old and respected Christian family, and was known for her piety and goodness. She recovered, and remained in the meeting until the close of the meeting. She was then taken home, and soon after died. She was a great comfort to her family, and was beloved by all who knew her. She was a true Christian, and her death was a great loss to the church.

THE PEACE AUTUMN.

BY JAMES S. WHITAKER.

Tis true, dear JENNIE, that a cloud has set aside the summer sun, and the reins are put upon the horses of peace and quiet. The autumnal leaf falls like a symbol of this change from the lively summer. Your voice and mine are again heard in the stillness of the forest, and the rustling of the leaves is like the murmurs of the quiet hours of the evening.

The story of a gentleman who, when he was short of money, sold one of his most precious possessions to a charitable institution, has been widely told. The institution, which was a hospital, purchased the property for a sum that was far below its real value. The gentleman, who had no other means of support, was left without any means of subsistence. In the story, we are told of his wretched lot, and of the kind treatment he received at the hands of the charitable institution.

The institution, which was a hospital, was one of the most respected in the city. It had been founded by a wealthy man, who had left a large fortune to the institution, with the express wish that it should be used to benefit the poor and the suffering. The gentleman, who had sold his property, was admitted to the hospital, and was kindly treated. He was given good food, and was allowed to keep his dog, which was his only companion.
