G. M. WETMORE, SHINOLA HEAD, DIES AT HOME

Was Prominent in Business Life and Active Officer of Lake Avenue Baptist Church—Funeral To Be Held Tomorrow.

June 11-1928
George M. Wetmore, president of the Shinola Company, died yesterday at his home at 4 Lake View Park.
Mr. Wetmore had been ill only 10 days. His illness was not considered

GEORGE M. WETMORE.

serious until a few hours before his death.

Mr. Wetmore was prominent in Rochester business life for many years. He was president of the Shinola Company since its organization 20 years ago and vice-president for 20 years of the American Chemical and Mining Company, which preceded the Shinola Company. He entered the shoe polish business in 1876, and since that time had been closely identified with the development of that industry. He was at the time of his death a director of the F. F. Daffey Corporation.

He was a member of the Lake Avenue Baptist Church, having served for many years on its board of trustees. He was a member of the Building Committee when the present church structure was erected. He was also a member of the board of trustees of the Rochester Theological Seminary.

In announcing his death at the services of Lake Avenue Church yesterday morning, the Rev. Dr. Albert
W. Beaven paid a high tribute to Mr.
Wetmore.

The meeting of the men's classes at the Sunday-school was given over to memorial services in honor of Mr.
Wetmore.

Mr. Wetmore leaves his wife, Mrs.
Sarah Wetmore; two daughters, Miss Dorothy E. Wetmore and Mrs. Helen
W. Beaven and one grandson, Robert
W. Levis. The funeral will be held from the home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Burial will be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

John W. Storandt, Pioneer Show Case Manufacturer, Dead

John W. Storandt of 1,376 Lake avenue, wealthy pioneer show case and store fixture manufacturer, died Saturday afternoon at his home, after an illness of three months.

JOHN W. STORANDT.

Mr. Storandt was born in Kuendorf, Germany, August 11, 1844. He came to America at the age of 20. He was connected with the Steinway Piano Company in New York city for a few years, then came to Rochester and was with the old C. J. Hayden Company. For about 16 years he was superintendent of the Minges & Shale Furniture Company, later starting in business for himself, being the founder of the J. W. Storandt Manufacturing Company, which business he conducted successfully for nearly 30 years, retiring four years ago. The business is now conducted by his sons.

Mr. Storandt leaves his wife, Mrs.
Sidonea Haffner Storandt; four sons,
Frank W., Joseph M., William C. and
Carl W., all of this city; one daughter, Mrs. George W. Henrich of Buffalo, and eight grandchildren.

The Rev. Franklin F. Fry, pastor of Lutheran Church of the Reformation, will conduct the funeral services at the home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. He will be assisted by the Rev. H. Branson Richards, pastor of Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.
Burial will be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Abram F. Nellis, Silk Maker, Dies At East Ave. Home

June 11-1928
Abram Fox Nellis, silk manufacturer, died Saturday evening at his home, East avenue and Clover street aged 52 years. He leaves his wife Lucy Pendergast Nellis, and two daughters Miss Martha and Miss Nellie Nellis.

Mr. Nellis was born on March 8, 1871, at Palatine Church, Montgomery county. He attended Clinton Liberal Institute and Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie. After considerable experience in business, he became a partner in the Duffy Silk Company of Port Plain, now of Buffalo, becoming secretary and treasurer a year later. He continued in the former office until his death.

He was also secretary of the Seneca Manufacturing Company and of the Gilford Manufacturing Company, both of Buffalo. He was a member of Atlantic Lodge, F. and A. M., of New York; Oswego River Chapter, Royal Arch Masons Lake Ontario Chapter, Knights Templar, of Oswego; and Medea Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Watertown. He married Lucy M. Pen-dergast in 1907.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home. Burial will be made in Mt.
Hope Cemetery.

Daily Death Roll

June 8-1928
Oliver Russell.

Oliver Russell, Civil War veteran, died yesterday at his home, 3 Highland avenue, Summerville. The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the family home. Interment will be in Mt. Hope.
Mr. Russell leaves his wife, Mrs. Annnette Russell; one daughter, Mrs.
L. W. Schuman of this city; one son, Edgar E. Russell of Summerville, two grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Mr. Russell, member of Charles J.
Powers Post, G. A. R., served from August 22, 1862 until July 15, 1865, in the 50th New York Engineering Regiment. On March 22, 1910, Mr. and Mrs. Russell celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Miss Emory E. Annis.

Miss Emory E. Annis, well known Rochester artist, died Friday in General Hospital. She was a daughter of the late Rev. Henry W. Annis, former chaplain at the Monroe County Jail. She leaves a sister, Mrs. Arlaine Fleming and two nieces, Mrs. Grace Marsellus and Mrs.
Fred Neros of Denver, Col. For the last few years she has made her home at the Church Home in Mt. Hope Avenue. At one time she painted several pictures for the National Gallery of London. She was one of the first members of the Rochester Art Club.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock from the Church Home. Burial will be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery. June 17-1928

Nellie Remington Lodge, Formerly Of Rochester,
Dies At Home In Cato

June 11 1923
The death of Nellie Remington Lodge, 67, occurred unexpectedly of heart failure at her home in Cato, near Syracuse, last Friday evening.

Mrs. Lodge was born at Henrietta, N. Y., where she was united in marriage to Clarence V. Lodge of that place. Later they moved to Rochester where they lived for 20 years. Mr. Lodge was superintendent of the poor of Monroe county at that time. About 14 years ago they moved to Cato.

Mrs. Lodge was a member of the Presbyterian Church, Woman's Missionary Society, and Irondequoit Chapter, D. A. R. Besides her husband she leaves three brothers, Dr. Frederic Remington of East Orange, N. J., Willis S. Remington and Judge Harvey Remington of Rochester and one sister, Mrs. E. H. Howard of Rochester.

The funeral was held at her home at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Burial will be at Maplewood Cemetery, Henrietta.

RESEARCH BUREAU MEMBER DIES IN NORTH CAROLINA

June 19-1923
John Townshend Child, member of the Bureau of Municipal Research staff since 1916, died Sunday at his home in Albemarle, N. C., according to telegrams received yesterday by the bureau and the Rochester Engineering Society, of which he was a member. Mr. Child's health was poor since the war, when he was injured in a fall from a horse. He left Rochester in February for a trip to his home and had not been back since. He leaves his wife and one child.

JOHN TOWNSHEND CHILD.

Mr. Child was a graduate of the Cornell University college of civil engineering, Class of 1912. After graduation, he was consulting engineer with the Gilbert C. White Company of Durham, N. C. In that capacity he had supervision of improvements in his home town of Albemarle. He came here in 1916 and, when war was declared, enlisted in the engineers. Following the armistice, he returned to the bureau.

While in Rochester, he established the Rochester Engineer, organ of the Rochester Engineering Society. He is a member of the Cornell Society of Engineers and of the Association of Former Officers of the Sanitary Corps.

He had been a generous friend of the University of Rochester, having contributed $15,000 to the endowment of the professorship of rhetoric and English literature; approximately $15,000 for the endowment of Burbank and Deane scholarships; more than $5,400 for the cases for Ward's museum; $2,400 at different times for the library, and nearly $2,000 in other miscellaneous gifts.

Daily Death Roll
J. Henry Howe
Dies Unexpectedly Of Heart Failure

June 19 1923
J. Henry Howe, president of the Howe & Bassett Company, Inc., plumbing and heating contractors, died yesterday afternoon of heart failure at his home, 277 Barrington street, aged 71 years. Mr. Howe was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, Rochester and Oak Hill Country clubs and at one time was active in the political life of the city.

J. HENRY HOWE.

Mr. Howe was born in Rochester on August 31, 1852, receiving his education in the city schools and had lived here all his life. In 1885 he went into partnership with William T. Bassett, opening a store on the site of the present Sibley block. This building was burned in 1892, when the firm moved to its present quarters in Stillson street. Mr. Howe was made president when the firm was incorporated in 1913, and retained that position until his death.

He leaves his wife, Margaret Brayer Howe; two sons, Henry B. and John T. Howe; two daughters, Mrs. E. S. Ingersoll and Mrs. C. W. Shafer, and four sisters, Mrs. D. E. Moore of Geneva and Misses Sara W., Catherine and Minnie W. Howe of this city.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at Corpus Christi Church. The Rev. J. Francis O'Hern, V. G., will officiate at the mass. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

JOHN HALL DEANE,
U. OF R. TRUSTEE, DIES IN NEW YORK

H. & C.
Graduate in Class of 1866

Was Generous Giver to Various Endowments.

June 28-1923
Word has just come to the University of Rochester of the death last week of John Hall Deane, a graduate of the Rochester institution in the class of 1866, and since 1879 a member of its Board of Trustees. For many years past Mr. Deane has been a resident of New York where he died after an illness of long duration.

Mr. Deane was a bachelor of arts of the University of Rochester in the class of 1866 and received the master of arts degree in 1870. He served in the United States navy at Charleston, S. C., during 1864 and 1865, being at the same time a correspondent of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. He was in the military service for about three and one-half years, receiving six promotions in the meantime. Mr. Deane was a life member of the American Geographical Society.

He had been a generous friend of the University of Rochester, having contributed $15,000 to the endowment of the professorship of rhetoric and English literature; approximately $15,000 for the endowment of Burbank and Deane scholarships; more than $5,400 for the cases for Ward's museum; $2,400 at different times for the library, and nearly $2,000 in other miscellaneous gifts.

CIVIL-WAR VETERAN TO BE BURIED TO-MORROW

H. & C. July 5-1923
Judson Lamson Andrews died on Tuesday at St. Mary's Hospital, aged 78 years. He leaves his wife, Caroline Andrews, and a daughter, Mrs. J. E. Mattison, of Bennington, Vt. He served with the seventy-fifth regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, in the Civil war and was a member of F. E. Pierce Post, G. A. R. The funeral will take place from the home, No. 619 Sawyer street, at 2:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon with interment in Mount Hope cemetery.

E. J. Millington 22 - Dies At His Home; Funeral Tomorrow
T.U. 1923

Edward J. Millington died yesterday at the family home, 65 South Union street, aged 65 years. The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home. Services will be in charge of Genesee Falls Lodge F. and A. M. Interment will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Millington was a veteran of the Spanish-American War, member of the Old Guard of Rochester and a life member of Genesee Falls Lodge, F. and A. M.

He was born in the old Third ward where he spent his boyhood days. He attended the old School 3 in Tremont street when James Cook was its principal. On August 13, 1883 he enlisted as a private in the Eighth Separate Company, New York National Guard.

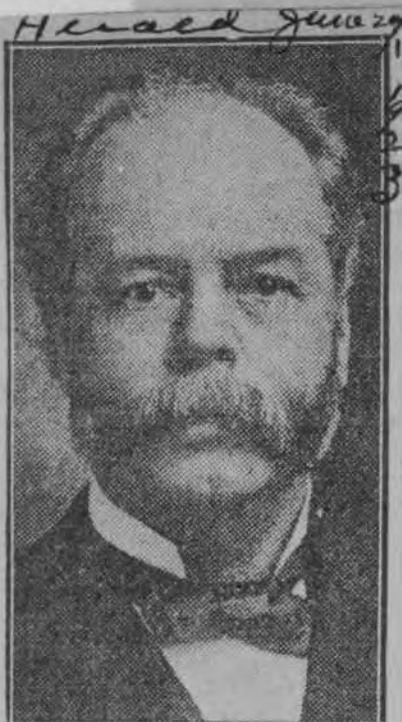

EDWARD J. MILLINGTON.

On November 8, 1897, he was promoted to the rank of quartermaster-sergeant and in May of the following year he volunteered for United States service in the Spanish war and was on duty at Camp Black, N. Y., with the Eighth Separate Company until it was mustered into United States service as Company A, Third New York Volunteers. He served with that Company at Camp Alger, the march through Virginia and several detention camps until mustered out of service with an honorable discharge on November 20, 1898. On May 17, 1905, he was awarded the bronze and gold medal of the National Guard for 15 years' service.

Mr. Millington was a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association, L. Bordman Smith Camp, of Spanish War Veterans, Lalla Rookh Grotto and was a 32nd degree Mason. He was stationed at the Armory in Main street east for more than 22 years.

He leaves his wife, Jennie Hutchinson Millington; a sister, Mrs. Sarah Embury, and a brother, Sam Millington.

Members of the Old Guard will meet this evening at 8 o'clock at the Commerce building to visit the family home.

DR. PARSON G. UDELL, native of Rochester and highly esteemed surgeon, whose death occurred at family residence in Spencerport Saturday, June 23.

T.U. Dr. Parson G. Udell. June 23
Dr. Parson G. Udell of Spencerport, well known surgeon and founder of the Rochester Pathological Society, died Saturday at his home in Spencerport. He was 73 years old.

He was born in Rochester on December 16, 1849, son of William C. and Mary M. Udell. He received his early education in the public schools and the collegiate institute of Satterlee & Peck. He began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. F. G. Shipman and Dr. John F. Whitbeck and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with the degree of M. D. on March 14, 1871.

Doctor Udell was an interne for some time at the Rochester City Hospital, and upon graduation took up his profession in Rochester. During the first year he was commissioned assistant surgeon of the U. S. N. Y. In the early summer of 1871 he founded the Rochester Pathological Society, which has become one of the active medical organizations of this city. In 1872 he moved to Spencerport, where he since had followed his profession.

He leaves his wife, Celia M. Day; four daughters, Mrs. Clinton H. Furbish, Mrs. George F. Stone, Miss Celia D. Udell and Mary Marjorie Udell, all of Spencerport, and two sons, Parson Genet Udell of Spencerport, and John W. Udell of Red Creek. He also leaves two sisters, Miss Adelaide V. Udell and Mrs. Burton G. Bennett of Rochester.

The funeral will take place from the home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, with burial in Fairfield Cemetery.

John J. Schleyer, aged 62 years, died yesterday at the family home at 14 Strathallan Park, following a long illness.

Mr. Schleyer and his brother, the late Joseph Schleyer, Jr., conducted their father's meat market at 271 Main Street East under the name of Joseph Schleyer's Sons, after the death of their father in 1886. The market was moved to the Schleyer Building at 312 Main Street East some years later, and the brothers continued to run it until 1920, when they sold their interests and retired. Mr. Schleyer's brother died in April, 1922.

Mr. Schleyer was, at the time of his death, president of the Rochester Tal-low Company. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Lucy Weigand Schleyer; one daughter, Miss Katherine G. Schleyer; one son, Joseph J. Schleyer; one sister, Mrs. Katherine Otto, all of Rochester, and one sister, Mrs. Christopher Volmer of Henrietta.

G. Elbert Taylor Victim of Heart Disease—Stricken at Favorite Summer Resort—Helped Build Great Industry Here. 1923

G. Elbert Taylor, former president of the Taylor Instrument Companies of this city, died unexpectedly yesterday afternoon at his summer home at Millen Bay on Lake Ontario, aged 64 years. Heart disease was the cause of death. He was found dead sitting at his desk at his hotel, Taylor's Inn. His wife had been with him only a short time before.

Mr. Taylor retired from connection with the companies in 1910 after service of more than 30 years, in which he was largely responsible in laying the foundation by which the products of the concern are known throughout the world.

G. ELBERT TAYLOR

Since his retirement in 1910, Mr. Taylor has not made his residence in Rochester but has visited here frequently. He was in Rochester a short time ago. A son, Fred K. Taylor, who lives here, left last evening for Cape Vincent to take charge of the body.

Mr. Taylor was born in Rochester in January, 1859. His uncle, Frank Taylor, had organized a thermometer business with Hamlet Richardson, who was forced to retire from business and go to Colorado because of ill health.

The company had a modest beginning and after the retirement of Mr. Richardson, an interest in the business was acquired by George Taylor, father of G. Elbert Taylor. The plant at that time was located in what is now Industrial street. George Taylor was a retail shoe merchant with a store at Main street east and North Water street.

With the acquisition of Mr. Richardson's interest by George Taylor, the name of the company was changed from Taylor & Richardson to Taylor Brothers Company.

G. Elbert Taylor was educated in the public schools in Rochester and attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston. After completing his education, Mr. Taylor in about 1880 obtained employment in the business of his father and uncle in a minor capacity.

Through his initiative, the business of Taylor Brothers Company began to expand.

Taylor was active in civic endeavors in Rochester, when he was a permanent resident here. He was a member of the Genesee Valley Club and He was a director of the Union Trust Company, of which his uncle, Frank Taylor, was president for a number of years. He made his home in Rochester in Lake View park.

Taylor, who maintained a summer home at Millen bay, three years ago undertook the development of that section as a summer resort. He founded the Millen Bay Park Association, which purchased extensive tracts along the bay and divided it into small parcels, which were sold for cottage sites, establishing an exclusive resort.

M. Taylor's first wife was a sister of J. Clifford Kalbfleisch of this city. He was married a second time about two years ago. Both of Mr. Taylor's sons are connected with the Taylor Instrument Companies.

Mr. Taylor leaves, besides his wife, Cora Richards Taylor, two sons, Fred K. Taylor of Rochester and E. Clifford Taylor of Pittsburgh; a daughter, Mrs. Arthur Phillips of Charlottesville, Va., and a sister, Mrs. John A. Sutherland of Chicago. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

SANDY C. GLOUD, ONE OF ROCHESTER'S BEST KNOWN SHOE SALESMEN, DIES AT BRIGHTON HOME AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Herald Aug. 5 - 1923

Sandy C. Gloud, one of the best known shoe salesmen traveling out of Rochester, died Friday at his home at Landing and Kilnck roads, Brighton, after an illness of nine months. Prior to his illness, he had represented the Leach Shoe Company for a number of years in the Northwestern states, which territory he formerly covered for the Utz & Dunn Company for more than twenty-five years.

Mr. Gloud was born at Garden Island, Canada, August 10, 1865. He came to Rochester at the age of eighteen years, and, since that time, has been connected with the local shoe industry. He took an active interest in the welfare of Rochester as a shoe center and served on the committees which formerly had charge of the Rochester Shoe Style Show, held each season for a number of years at the Powers Hotel.

Sociable and friendly by nature, Mr. Gloud had a great many friends, both in and out of the shoe trade. He was a man of varied interests and in the days of the international cup races for the "Canada's" cup, was an enthusiastic yachtsman. He was a member of the Rochester Yacht Club and of the syndicate which owned the yacht Iroquois. He was also elected to honorary membership in the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, which competed with the Rochester Yacht Club.

In movements for the benefit of the traveling fraternity, Mr. Gloud always took an active interest. He was a charter member of Flower City Council, 203, Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, a member of the Rochester Association of Traveling Shoe Salesmen and of the Commercial Travelers Council of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Gloud leaves his wife, Mrs. Margaret E. Gloud; his mother, Mrs. Sophie Gloud, of Detroit; four brothers, J. Leon, and Arthur A., of Chicago; Wilfred N., of Detroit and Wallace A., of Toledo, and one sister, Mrs. Anna Dickman, of Detroit. The funeral will take place from the home Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock and at 9 o'clock from Our Lady of Victory Church in Pleasant Street.

LOUIS M. ANTISDALE.

LOUIS M. ANTISDALE, EDITOR IN CHIEF OF THE HERALD SINCE 1898, DIES SUDDENLY AT HOME

Herald June 29-1928

Intense Heat of Last Week Believed To Have Contributed to Cerebral Hemorrhage, Which Was Immediate Cause of Death; Last Attended to Duties at Office on Wednesday Afternoon.

Louis Marlin Antisdale, editor-in-chief of The Rochester Herald since 1898 and president of The Rochester Herald Company, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at his home, 180 Dartmouth Street. He had been somewhat indisposed for a few days, but had been able to attend to the conduct of the editorial department as usual. He was at his desk in The Herald office Wednesday afternoon, but remained at home in the evening on the advice of his physician.

Hemorrhage Causes Death.

It is thought that the intense heat of last week was a contributing cause of the cerebral hemorrhage which caused his death. He had appeared to be suffering greatly from the heat, and was advised by friends to leave the city for a prolonged rest. Yesterday he seemed to be considerably improved in health and appeared more cheerful than for a number of days. Like all night workers, he slept through a portion of the day, although he was accustomed to use the telephone at his bedside at almost any hour. A telephone call was received from him at The Herald office yesterday forenoon. When a member of his family entered his bedroom about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, he was found to have passed away as he slept.

Mr. Antisdale was born in Marion, Wayne County, October 27, 1869, a son of Philander and Elizabeth H. Lyke Antisdale. His education was received in the school at that town. In his young manhood, he taught school for a time in the stone schoolhouse, which is still standing, in the Mormon Hill District, where his father, years previously, also had been a school teacher. He entered the University of Rochester in the Class of 1893 and was graduated with honor with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. During the last two years of his college course he was a reporter on the staff of The Herald.

Editor-in-Chief Since 1898.

Following his graduation, Mr. Antisdale became a deputy collector of internal revenue, but from 1894 until 1897 he was business manager of The Herald. In 1898, he became editor-in-chief of the paper, the policy of which he had directed since that time.

Mr. Antisdale was married August 15, 1895, to Miss Margaret McIntyre of this city. Besides his wife, he leaves three daughters, Madame Elizabeth Phillips Antisdale, a religious of the Sacred Heart Order, stationed at Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Miss Margaret Dewey Antisdale and Miss Mary Claire Antisdale, at home. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Henry R. Mason of Marion, and two nephews, M. Bruce Potter of Rochester and Dewey Randolph Mason of Hempstead, L. I.

Besides the Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Upsilon college fraternities, of which he was a member, Mr. Antisdale held membership in the Genesee Valley Club, the Humdrum Club and the University Club of Rochester, was organizer of the Thirteen Club of Herald employees who have been in the service of the paper for more than thirteen years; was a member of the Manhattan Club of New York City, the Corner Club and the Society of the Genesee of New York.

Funeral Tomorrow Afternoon.

In the course of his newspaper career, Mr. Antisdale formed numerous close friendships with men and women of national and international reputation. He was a personal friend of former President Woodrow Wilson, of the late Governor David Bennett Hill and most of the New York Governors since the Hill administration, including Governor Alfred E. Smith.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the home. Burial will be made privately.

by His Opponents.

Louis M. Antisdale, editor of the Rochester Herald and president of the Rochester Herald Company, died suddenly yesterday at his home, No. 180 Dartmouth street. Mr. Antisdale passed away as he slept and his body was found at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon by a member of his family who went to arouse him. Although he had been in declining health for several months past Mr. Antisdale's death came as a shock to his wide circle of friends, which embraced men and women of prominence in all lines of civic, business and political endeavor.

A writer of brilliancy, Mr. Antisdale had made for himself a prominent place in newspaper circles of the state, and his editorial comment attracted wide attention. From his early manhood he had developed a keen interest in political activities through the inspiration and friendship of the late David B. Hill, former governor of the state, and a man of wide influence.

Started as Teacher.

Mr. Antisdale in his early days manifested interest toward a career as an educator, and after his preliminary education at the public schools at Marion, N. Y., where he was born on October 27, 1869, and at the Marion Collegiate Institute and the Palmyra Classical Union School, served as teacher for a time at the stone schoolhouse in the Mormon Hill district, where his father had taught twenty years previously. Abandoning his teaching activities for a time Mr. Antisdale matriculated at the University of Rochester and was graduated with the class of 1893 with honor.

It was during his attendance at the University of Rochester that he became acquainted with Mr. Hill and a warm friendship developed between the two men. Mr. Antisdale from that time on participated actively in public affairs, and his influence in later years reached to the state government and to the national administration, under President Woodrow Wilson, who regarded Mr. Antisdale as a personal friend.

Active as Scholar.

Although active in politics and an untiring worker in the newspaper field, Mr. Antisdale never diminished his interest in scholarly activities. He was a linguist of ability and always manifested pleasure in study, especially in the field of Old English literature. His library at his home was regarded as remarkable both in point of size and in the rarity of a number of its volumes.

Mr. Antisdale politically always was a Democrat. His friendships however knew no political allegiance, and he was a strong personal friend of the late George W. Aldridge, although vigorously opposed to him in many public affairs. For a quarter of a century he had been a friend of James L. Hotchkiss who succeeded Mr. Aldridge as Republican Leader, and Mr. Hotchkiss was among the many people who yesterday expressed themselves as sustaining a personal loss in his passing.

Opponent of Tammany.

Mr. Antisdale was a bitter opponent of Tammany Hall for years, but this did not hinder him from reaching an understanding and friendship with Governor Alfred E. Smith, with whom he was in frequent confidential communication after the last Democratic convention at Syracuse. Mr. Antisdale was an adviser of former Governor William Sulzer and during the Wilson administration he was especially potent in the affairs of New York state.

The newspaper career of Mr. Antisdale began in 1891 when, a student at the University of Rochester, he became a reporter on the Rochester Herald. His success in this field was noteworthy and rapid, for his talent as a writer of force and clarity soon became firmly established. In 1898, only seven years after he started his newspaper career, he became editor-in-chief of the Rochester Herald, and he had personally directed its policies since that time. In 1910 he and several associates acquired an interest in the Herald owned by the David family, and he became head of the company that published the newspaper, as well as its editor.

Held One Office.

Mr. Antisdale left newspaper work in 1893 and 1894 to become deputy collector of internal revenue, the only political office he ever held, but came back to the Herald again in 1894 as business manager. He served in this capacity until 1897 and the next year became the director of the editorial activities of the publication. Louis M. Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, and a former Rochesterian, declared publicly several years ago that he regarded Mr. Antisdale as "one of the most brilliant editorial writers in the United States."

It was Mr. Antisdale's personality and political sagacity that attracted to him. Mr. Antisdale was regarded as a protégé of Mr. Hill's and when the clash came in this state between the Hill followers and the adherents of Grover Cleveland, twice president of the United States, Mr. Antisdale was active in behalf of his political mentor.

In Politics at 20.

It was in 1888 that Mr. Antisdale, then a youth of 20 years, first took an active part in Democratic politics. Although not of age, Mr. Antisdale keenly followed political events and two years later, together with George P. Decker, John F. Kinney, James S. Havens, G. Fort Slocum, J. Stuart Page, William C. Barry, George H. Perkins and others, organized the Flower City Democracy, which from a modest beginning soon controlled the party affairs in this county.

It was during the Cleveland campaign in 1890 that the potency of the Flower City Democracy became apparent. Mr. Decker was the first president of the organization and while this element in the party was characterized as "the silk-stocking group," by its opponents, the enthusiastic efforts of Mr. Antisdale and Mr. Havens and the others soon eliminated the facetious references to the organization.

Active in 1890 Campaign.

In the campaign of 1890 tariff reform was of paramount interest. Mr. Antisdale's intellectual insight into the issues of the campaign soon established for himself a prominent place in the party councils. With the conclusion of the national campaign the activities of the Flower City Democracy were not abated.

The organization, with Mr. Antisdale, playing an important part, directed itself toward municipal reform. It clashed with the Democratic organization, headed by the late George Raines, and was victorious in the primary contest. From that time on Mr. Antisdale's place in the leadership of Monroe County Democracy has been of first importance.

On Geographic Board.

Tribute to Mr. Antisdale's intellect found many forms. Governor Sulzer in 1913 appointed him a member of the State Board of Geographic Names, which was authorized under a law to determine and establish a correct historical and etymological form of the place names in this state, and to recommend that new names of villages, towns or cities have correct geographical or historical significance. The other two members of the board were the dean of the State College of Forestry at Syracuse University and the chief archivist of the State Library.

Mr. Antisdale possessed a keen sense of humor. This was demonstrated by a conversation with Mayor Van Zandt, who had been his friend since the editor's college days. Mr. Antisdale asked for a photograph of Mayor Van Zandt and when informed that there were several on file at the newspaper office, the publisher said that he wanted a special one for use by the cartoonist.

At His Desk Wednesday.

Mr. Antisdale was at his desk as late as Wednesday afternoon. He usually worked well into the early morning hours, but left early that day on the advice of his physician. Before retiring he called his office on business and then went to bed. His body was found later. His friends had been urging him to take a long rest, but he felt that he was better off at work. The intense heat of the last week greatly aggravated his ill-health.

The parents of Mr. Antisdale were Philander and Elizabeth J. Antisdale. At the University of Rochester he took an active part in collegiate affairs and his excellence in studies won him election to the Phi Beta Kappa honorary scholastic fraternity. He was also a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, and his clubs included the Genesee Valley and University clubs of Rochester. He organized the Thirteen Club of the Rochester Herald, made up of employees of the newspaper who had been in service more than thirteen years.

Brilliant Conversationalist.

The company of Mr. Antisdale frequently was sought because of his facility as an entertaining conversationalist. His range of interest was wide and all phases of human activity found sympathetic response from him. Although he was aggressive politically and his writings were of fearless nature, he possessed a faculty of retaining the firm friendship of his political enemies.

In the days when John Pallace stood as the defender of Tammany policies against the Axe faction headed by Mr. Antisdale there were many political scrambles yet Mr. Pallace declared last evening that in the passing of Mr. Antisdale he had lost a personal friend of years' standing.

Mr. Antisdale was an enthusiastic angler and for a number of years took fishing trips with Herbert W. Bramley, whom he had known from their college days at the University of Rochester. When the death of Mr. Antisdale became known many people called at the home. One of the earliest callers was James S. Havens, who was Mr. Antisdale's confidant and adviser. Perhaps Mr. Antisdale's strongest political activity was in behalf of Mr. Havens in the special election for member of Congress in which Mr. Havens defeated George W. Aldridge.

Expressions of profound grief were made by Mr. Antisdale's friends when his death became known. Mr. Decker said that it was difficult to find expression for the loss of the friendship of a man like Mr. Antisdale. Mr. Decker has been intimate with him since 1890. He said that Mr. Antisdale was a painstaking student of everything that excited his interest and that "he was recognized as having few superiors in the field of editorial writing." Mr. Decker struck a responsive chord in the thoughts of Mr. Antisdale's friends when he declared that the editor's "capacity for work and accomplishment was always a mystery to all who knew him."

High Praise by Dr. Rhee.

Dr. Rush Rhee, president of the University of Rochester, said:

"I was perfectly shocked by the news of Mr. Antisdale's death. He was a graduate of the college of whom we were proud. He was the most brilliant editorial writer, whose work I ever read. His death is the source of grief to me."

Mayor Van Zandt said yesterday afternoon that he first met Mr. Antisdale in a business way thirty-five years ago. The Mayor said that his admiration for Mr. Antisdale grew with every meeting and that he feels that Rochester has lost one of the most able newspaper men it has ever had.

Mr. Hotchkiss said: "While I did not agree with Mr. Antisdale politically I considered him a friend for a quarter of a century and always admired his intellect and personal qualities. His loss will be greatly felt by the community."

Mr. Pallace said: "I have known Mr. Antisdale since before I became a voter and in all that period I feel I may truthfully say he has been a real personal friend to me. I was shocked to learn of his death. He was relatively a young man, who had not yet attained the eminence his intellect, ability, courage, personality and remarkable talent entitled him to. I know those who had the opportunity to know him will regret the loss the community and state has suffered in his death."

James L. Whitley, state senator, of opposite political views to Mr. Antisdale, frequently conferred with him on matters of government, and expressed sorrow yesterday in his passing. He said that he always had much respect for Mr. Antisdale's ability and for his personal qualifications, especially his untiring energy.

Private Funeral Saturday.

On August 15, 1895, Mr. Antisdale married Miss Margaret Intyre, whom he leaves. He leaves three daughters, Madama Elizabeth Phillips Antisdale, a religious of Sacred Heart Convent, Grasse Pointe, Mich.; Miss Margaret Dewey Antisdale and Miss Mary Claire Antisdale, of Rochester; a sister, Mrs. Henry R. Mason, of Marion; two nephews, M. Bruce Potter, of Rochester, and Dewey Randolph Mason, of Hempstead, L. I.

The funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon from the home, No. 180 Dartmouth street. Burial will be private.

Herald Editorial

Louis Marlin Antisdale.

In the death of Louis Marlin Antisdale, which occurred at his home in this city yesterday afternoon, The Herald loses one who had been its pilot and chief for a quarter of a century. The newspaper world will feel keenly the absence of that inspiration which his vigorous personality and virile pen afforded. A host of friends, which included men and women in all walks of life, will mourn his departure from among them.

Mr. Antisdale was one of the ablest representatives of that school of journalism which believes in a strong editorial policy. He lived up to that belief, speaking through the columns of his paper with an ability and fearlessness that won him the respect of even those who differed from him in opinion. His writings, dignified in style and sound in logic, will long stand as examples of all that is best in the expression of editorial opinion.

In his private life and personal character, Mr. Antisdale was one man among many thousands. He had that rare faculty of being able to bind to himself with bonds stronger than mere business relations, those who worked with and for him in the daily tasks of The Herald. He took a keen personal interest in the affairs of his employees and associates and sought in many unobtrusive ways to be of friendly assistance to them.

There is perhaps no higher tribute that can be paid than to say that those who were associated with him in the rigorous routine of daily newspaper work mourn him sincerely, not only as an employer or business associate, but even more as a friend.

D. & C. Louis M. Antisdale. Editorial
June 29 1923

The sudden death of Louis M. Antisdale, in the prime of life and at the summit of his powers, is a severe loss to journalism in this city and state, and will come home with a sense of personal bereavement to a wide circle, for in the course of his newspaper career he had come into contact with leaders in all walks of life, and his strong personality had made itself felt far beyond the bounds of ordinary acquaintanceship.

Mr. Antisdale was a native of Western New York; a graduate of the University of Rochester, and since 1891 had been associated with the Rochester Herald. He entered the employment of that newspaper as a reporter and rose step by step until he became editor-in-chief and president of the Rochester Herald Company. He was thus peculiarly and intimately associated with the Herald up to the time that he was unexpectedly stricken down, and had guided its destinies during many years, making it the vehicle of his views on local questions, and on affairs of the greatest moment to the nation.

He wielded a polished and facile pen, and his comments on the issues of the day attracted wide attention. He was for a number of years active in Democratic politics, but with strong independent leanings and a dislike for Tammany Hall that often found fearless expression. He was an enthusiastic supporter of Mr. Wilson, in both his campaigns for the presidency, and while the Democratic party was in power at Washington his advice carried great weight in matters affecting New York state.

His interest as a party man was in principles rather than in personal advancement. He never held but one office, that of deputy collector of internal revenue in 1893 and 1894, when he was a young man, and when he was just entering upon his newspaper career. This was to be regretted from the standpoint of the public service, but it left him free to devote himself wholly to his newspaper work.

He enjoyed the confidence and friendship of the leading men of Rochester, regardless of their political affiliations. He was for years on terms of close intimacy with the late George W. Aldridge, notwithstanding the fact that their views differed radically on the subject of politics. He took a keen interest in the welfare of Rochester at all times, and while his party was in the minority here almost from the time that he assumed the editorship of the Herald, his influence made itself felt in every municipal campaign. He was always ready to lead a forlorn hope with all the enthusiasm of a man conscious of victory.

He was an exponent of what has been called the personal school of journalism, following in the footsteps of the men of an older generation, who made their newspapers the vehicles of their personal opinions. His close attention to the exacting details of the newspaper profession undoubtedly shortened his life, and yet it may be questioned whether he would have accepted a different course under any circumstances.

A former Rochester newspaper man, in a recent tribute to Mr. Antisdale, referred to him as the author of many "able articles which have attracted nation-wide attention as valuable contributions to contemporary political literature," and an editor gifted with unusual insight into men and matters. It may be said of him, far more than of most men, that he found the place in life for which he was best suited, and that he filled it with a relish that never became dulled. He was fortunate in this respect, as he was in the many friendships that he formed, and in the esteem in which he was held by all who knew him.

His memory will be cherished as that of one of Rochester's worthy and deserving citizens, who did his part for the advancement of the city, and who never spared himself in any cause which enlisted his support.

T. U. Louis M. Antisdale. Editorial

Through the death of Louis M. Antisdale Rochester loses a citizen of whose ability and services it was justly proud and New York journalism one of its outstanding figures. His reputation and acquaintance extended far beyond the boundaries of the city to which he gave his life work.

From first to last Mr. Antisdale was a newspaperman. He was a native of Western New York, and began his career in 1891 as a reporter on the Rochester Herald when a student at the University of Rochester.

After a brief experience as collector of internal revenue in 1893 and 1894, the only political office he ever held, he returned to his chosen field. His three years of service as business manager of the Herald gave him the opportunity to widen his knowledge of newspaper work.

In 1898 he became editor-in-chief of the Rochester Herald. At once his keen and facile pen, wide knowledge of men and affairs, and continually extending circle of acquaintanceship with leading men of Rochester and throughout the state made his opinion carry weight.

He was a Democrat in politics and much consulted by influential leaders. Yet he never surrendered his personality and independent views to that narrow partisanship which regards winning as the only matter to be considered. He was usually aligned with independents against Tammany control.

This independence sometimes gave rise to complaints among his political associates. "It's hard to tell just where Louie stands," was an expression frequently heard. This was due, not to any shiftiness or unreliability, but to his unwillingness to submit to any cut and dried program.

His editorial writing was reminiscent of the older, less hurried days, when readers delighted in seeing a subject handled at length, with all the verbal play and nicety of detail at the writer's command. Many of his editorials, especially those in which he dissected his opponents joint by joint, were treasured as classics.

Mr. Antisdale was keenly interested in the welfare of Rochester. He lent his pen and influence to many worthy causes and had the friendship and respect of leading citizens without regard to party.

His sudden removal at the height of his powers is a loss to the intellectual life of the community and the city as a whole that will keenly be felt.

LAST SERVICES HELD FOR EDITOR AND PUBLISHER

T. U. June 30
Simplicity Marks Funeral of Louis M. Antisdale in Accordance With His Wishes — House Filled With Floral Tributes.

Surrounded by floral tokens of the high esteem and respect in which he was held by hosts of friends in all walks of life, last services were held for Louis M. Antisdale at the family home, 180 Dartmouth street, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Among these floral gifts none showed more impressively the democratic spirit of the editor and publisher of The Rochester Herald than the wreath which was sent by a group of newsboys who had ever looked to Mr. Antisdale as their friend and adviser. Surrounding this offering were a wealth of beautiful tributes from men and women prominent in public and business life and personal friends.

In accordance with Mr. Antisdale's often expressed wish, the services at the house and at Riverside Cemetery were simple. Interment was private. The bearers were James S. Havens, William B. Hale, Herbert W. Bramley, Henry E. Lawrence, John F. Dailey and Edwin C. Mason.

The close-knit and far reaching friendships which Mr. Antisdale formed were manifested in the steady stream of deeply-affected callers at his late home yesterday and today. Many of those attending the funeral this afternoon were unable to gain admittance to the house when the hour of service arrived and waited silently with bowed heads on the front porch or yard until the service was completed.

Flower City Continentals, a Thirteenth ward Democratic marching club, a flourishing organization in the Cleveland-Hill campaign, and which reorganized this spring, met last night and adopted resolutions of sympathy on the death of Mr. Antisdale.

Fred D. Lamb, as chairman of the Democratic County committee, appointed a committee of nine members which represented the committee at Mr. Antisdale's funeral. Dr. William D. Wolf, president of the Monroe County Democratic Club, of which Mr. Antisdale was a member, also appointed a similar committee.

Dr. Thomas Jameson said yesterday that Mr. Antisdale's death was due to cerebral embolism, for which he had been under treatment for two years. Mr. Antisdale's end was hastened by his unwillingness to relinquish the many responsibilities and duties that fell on him in the varied activities of his life.

Sorrow At Antisdale Death Expressed By Ex-President; Memorial Adopted By Union

T. U. July 6 - 1923
Regret at the untimely death of the late Louis M. Antisdale, editor-in-chief of the Rochester Herald, was expressed today by Woodrow Wilson, in a letter received by Alexander N. Freiberg of this city, which reads:

"June 29, 1923.
"My dear sir:

"Mr. Wilson asks me to thank you for your message and say he is distressed to hear of the death of Mr. Antisdale. He hopes that you will have an opportunity to express his sympathy to Mr. Antisdale's family.

"Yours very cordially,

"John Randolph Bolling, secretary."

The following memorial resolution was adopted by Typographical Union 15 at its regular meeting held July 1:

Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of the Universe to take from our midst Louis M. Antisdale, president of the Rochester Herald Company and editor-in-chief of the Rochester Herald, who passed into the Great Beyond Thursday, June 28, 1923; and

Whereas, In his death the city of Rochester loses one of her foremost citizens and newspapermen one of its most brilliant editors and writers; and

Whereas, The contractual relations and business dealings between Mr. Antisdale and Rochester Typographical Union, No. 15, have been the most friendly for a period covering more than a score of years; therefore be it

WELL KNOWN EXPERT ON FLOWER CULTURE AND POULTRY DIES

Herald July 4

Frederick O. Guenther, well known nurseryman and poultry fancier, died yesterday morning at his home at 801 Blossom Road. He was an expert on floral culture and was considered one of the most successful rose growers who ever lived in Rochester. He was an authority on all kinds of flowers and nursery stock. For many years Mr. Guenther was called on to judge flowers and vegetables at the Batavia Fair, the Cortland County Fair, Trumansburg and others.

He was equally prominent for his knowledge of poultry and pigeon raising. He was one of the organizers of the first poultry show in Rochester and was for many years its treasurer. Later he was elected president of the Flower City Poultry and Pigeon Association, Inc., which office he held for fifteen years. Among his other activities was acting as superintendent of every poultry show in connection with the Rochester Exposition. For many years he judged the entire show. He also was one of the first breeders to take up the silver wyandotte chicken and the first to bring together the two original lines of that species. He judged the first club show of the buttercup chickens and made the standard for them.

In politics Mr. Guenther was always a staunch Republican. He was a member of the first ward committee to be chosen in the 21st Ward and was its treasurer for one term. He was a member of Germania Lodge 722, F. and A. M.

Mr. Guenther leaves a wife, Mrs. Lilly Hauser Guenther, and a daughter, Miss Mattie Guenther.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home and will be in charge of Germania Lodge. Interment will be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Death Of William Hartman Occurs At Verdun, France

Chairman of Building Committee of Baptist Temple Dies at Outset of European Trip Which Was To Have Included Attendance at International Baptist Conference—Prominent in Church and Business Here.

Times Union July 18-1923
News of the death of William Hartman at Verdun, France, came yesterday as a great shock and sorrow to his many friends and business and church associates in this city.

Mr. Hartman, who was a prominent member and chairman of the building committee of Baptist Temple, and senior member of the tailoring firm of Hartman & William Hartman. Dengler, Osburn House building, sailed for Europe on June 30 in company with his family and Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Beaven of the Lake Avenue Baptist Church, the party intending to attend the International Baptist Conference. G. Charles Dengler, his partner, said this morning that Mr. Hartman was in excellent health at the time he left Rochester and was looking forward with great happiness to the holiday abroad, the first long relaxation which he had allowed himself in the years devoted to building up his business.

Mr. Hartman was born in Webster in 1868 and came to Rochester with his family as a young boy. For a time he was in the carriage painting business but devoted his spare hours to learning the tailoring trade. About 20 years ago he opened a tailor shop with a partner under the name of Hartman & Kline. Some time later his brother, George Hartman, joined him and Mr. Kline withdrew, the firm name being changed to Hartman Brothers. When George Hartman left the firm, some 10 years ago, Mr. Dengler assumed the partnership which has continued to this time, the business growing steadily. For many years Mr. Hartman's store was in the old Y. M. C. A. building in South avenue but it recently was moved to the Osburn House building.

Mr. Hartman was very active in Y. M. C. A. work and was one of the oldest members of the association. He was at one time a trustee and his photograph was among those of prominent members placed in the cornerstone of the new Y. M. C. A. building in Gibbs street.

Mr. Hartman was also very active in work in the Baptist Temple and when the congregation considered plans for erecting a combined church and office building Mr. Hartman was made chairman of the building committee. It was largely due to his enthusiasm and untiring energy that the recent drive for the building fund was so successful. It is said by members of the church.

Mr. Hartman was one of the promoters and officers of the Crown Ribbon and Manufacturing Company in St. Paul street.

Mr. Hartman leaves his wife, Stella Dake Hartman; two daughters Ethel and Grace Hartman; a son, William Hartman, jr.; a brother, George E. Hartman and four sisters, Mrs. William Holley, Mrs. Nellie Snell, Mrs. James Barnsdale and Miss Matilda Hartman, all of this city, besides many nieces and nephews. Mr. Hartman's residence was at 38 Rutgers street and he usually spent part of the summer at the old Dake homestead in Summerville boulevard.

The cable received by Mr. Dengler contained only the news of Mr. Hartman's death. A letter is expected giving further particulars and information as to the return of the body to this city.

Mrs. Lucy Sabey Winn.

Mrs. Lucy Sabey Winn, widow of Nathaniel Winn, and an old and highly esteemed resident of this city, died last night at her home, 70 Westminster road.

Mrs. Winn was the youngest daughter of the late James and Sarah Edwards Sabey, and was born in London, England, February 6, 1837. She was christened at Shoreditch Church, London, England, and was brought to this city in her infancy by her parents 86 years ago. The trip from New York to Rochester was made by way of the Hudson river and Erie canal, the landing here being made at the old weighlock. She was married to Nathaniel Winn in Trinity Church, in 1857, the Rev. George Cheney being the officiating clergyman. Trinity Church at that time was located on the corner of Center and Frank streets. Her husband died in 1891.

The family home for 45 years was in lower East avenue, now a business center, Goodman street being at that time the city line.

Mrs. Winn became connected with Christ Episcopal Church in 1863 and had been actively identified with the life of the parish ever since, up to a recent period.

She leaves four children, Mrs. J. C. Kalbfleisch of Rochester; Miss Jennie L. Winn of Rochester; James S. Winn of Evanston, Ill.; and Herbert J. Winn of Rochester. She also leaves five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

FEDOR WILLIMEK DIES AT HOME OF DAUGHTER

Was Connected With Mechanics Saving Bank for 34 Years and Was Prominent in Musical Circles as Soloist and Composer.

July 18-1923

Rochester friends of Fedor Willimek, for 34 years connected with the Mechanics Saving Bank, were grieved to learn of his unexpected death this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fannie Roblin of La Salle with whom he has been making his home in recent months. It is understood that Mr. Willimek was stricken in the garden of the Roblin home, his death occurring within a short time.

Mr. Willimek was born at Ratibur, Prussia, on June 1, 1849 his father being Hermann Willimek who was in charge of the estates of the Duke of Ratibur. Mr. Willimek was educated in the public and high schools of Germany and served as an officer in the German army before coming to this country in 1868. In the following year he came to Rochester but after a brief stay here went to Syracuse where he engaged in the sale of pianos and other musical instruments. He was later connected with the firm of Terrill, Johnson and Company in Auburn and in 1886 entered the Mechanics Savings Bank in this city as bookkeeper, progressing through the various offices until he became assistant secretary in 1903, a position which he held until the time of his retirement last year.

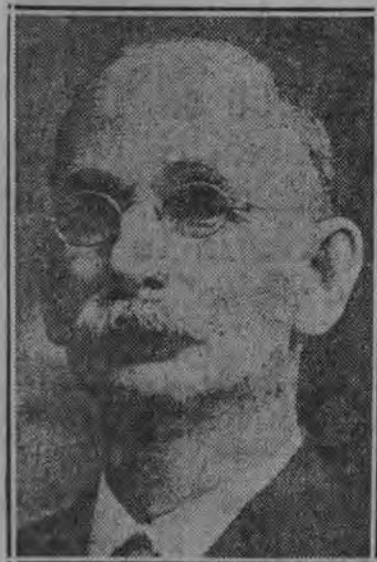

In 1889 Mr. Willimek was married to Miss Rosa H. Pfafflin of this city. His two daughters, Mrs. Fannie Roblin of La Salle, and Mrs. Hermione Saegermueller of this city, survive him.

Mr. Willimek was a musician of much ability and at one time was noted for his skill as a zither player. He composed a number of pieces of music for this instrument which he played both as a soloist and in local orchestras. He was also a prominent member of the Maennerchor and other German singing societies in this city.

MANY PAY TRIBUTE TO MRS. LUCY WINN

D. & C.
Funeral Services Attended by Host of Friends.

July 24-1923

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy Sabey Winn, whose long life of usefulness came to an end early on Saturday morning, were conducted yesterday afternoon at the family home, No. 70 Westminster road, and later from Christ Episcopal Church. Actively identified with activities of Christ Church since 1863, Mrs. Winn had a legion of friends, many of whom were at the church to pay tribute to her memory.

The impressive Episcopal burial service was conducted by Right Rev. David Lincoln Ferris, suffragan bishop of the Diocese of Western New York, and by Rev. Lewis G. Morris, D. D., rector of Christ Church. There were many floral offerings in the chancel.

The bearers were Ranson N. Kalbfleisch, Dr. Clarence P. Thomas, Walter H. Cassebeer, David Narramore, Gordon Narramore and Morris Copeland, all members of Mrs. Winn's family. Burial was in the family lot at Mount Hope cemetery. A detail of officers supervised vehicular traffic in East avenue during the services.

Mrs. Winn died at the age of 86 years and five months. She was keenly interested in all causes of righteousness and her kindly, genial disposition, and charitable characteristics won her countless friends who held her in the highest esteem. A number of prominent people including friends of the family were in the church during the services.

C. D. GALLIGER, 1923 PROMINENT IN MASONRY DEAD

T. U. July 27
Well-Known Dental Laboratory Surgeon and 33rd Degree Mason, Succumbs to Illness Which Developed From Severe Cold.

Charles DeForest Galliger, for the past quarter-century one of the best-known Masons in Western New York, died at 9:30 o'clock last night at his home, 41 Cornell street, in his 65th year.

Mr. Galliger was born in Rochester in 1858, attended the public schools here, and later engaged in dental laboratory work. He entered Masonry when a young man, and becoming deeply interested in the work, he steadily rose in the offices of the organization, at the time of his death being an honorary 33d degree Mason.

The various organizations in the Masonic body to which he belonged were: Zetland Lodge, 951, of which he was a charter member and held the office of tiler; past monarch of Lalla Rookh Grotto, M. O. V. P. E. R.; past thrice patent master of Rochester Lodge of Perfection; past most wise master of Rose Croix, Scottish Rite; past potentate of Damascus Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; seneschal and engineer of Rochester Consistory, and a member of Ionic Chapter.

CHARLES DE FOREST GALLIGER.

Mr. Galliger was also an honorary member of Warren C. Hubbard Lodge and of the Frank L. Simes and Craftsmen lodges, in the latter two holding the office of assistant tiler.

Mason throughout the city this morning spoke of the great gap in the organization which the death of Mr. Galliger has made. For more than 30 years active in Masonry, he had become a prominent figure in the activities of the Rochester organizations.

For 34 years Mr. Galliger was engaged in dental work as a laboratory surgeon with the late Dr. Fred Sanford. The offices were located in Main street, near Clinton avenue.

It was last April that Mr. Galliger returned from a trip to Montreal. There he had contracted a heavy cold which he never succeeded in throwing off. It was this illness that became so severe about two weeks ago that caused his death.

He leaves his wife, Elizabeth Hutchison Glliger, and one daughter, Maie Irene. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the home in charge of Zetland Lodge while Rochester Consistory will have charge of services at Mt. Hope chapel at 3 o'clock.

THRONGS MOURN DEATH OF JEWISH CHARITY WORKER

D. & C. July 26 1923
Mother of Emma Goldman Dies After Life Devoted to Charitable Work.

The funeral yesterday afternoon of Mrs. Toby Goldman, mother of Emma Goldman, was one of the largest orthodox Jewish processions in Rochester in recent years. Mrs. Goldman was a highly respected member of the Jewish community and was interested in all philanthropic and charitable endeavors. She died at the age of 86 years at 11 o'clock Tuesday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Commins, No. 402 South Goodman street.

Following the orthodox Jewish custom of early burial, the funeral took place yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Goldman was the grandmother of David Hochstein, a young violinist of recognized promise, who was killed in the Argonne on October 14, 1918.

Mrs. Goldman was born in the Ukraine in 1839. There when a young woman she married Abraham Goldman and together they came to Rochester, where Mrs. Goldman always has resided. She was president of the Hebrew Ladies' Relief Society, vice-president of the Jewish Children's Home in Gorham street, a founder of the Jewish Home for the Aged in St. Paul street, president of the Bickur Cholim Society, an organization providing sick benefit for the poor, and was active in the affairs of the Associated Hebrew Charities.

Mrs. Goldman always was regarded as a woman of keen intellect and one always willing to help people in distress. She was loyal to the traditions of her adopted land and had the respect of virtually everybody in the Jewish community. This was manifest by the large crowd that gathered at the funeral.

The body was taken from the home in South Goodman street to the Hanover street synagogue. A eulogy was pronounced by Abraham D. Joffe, Fifty-eight children from the Jewish Children's Home walked behind the hearse. The funeral procession stopped at the Jewish Home for the Aged in St. Paul street in memory of Mrs. Goldman and the aged people there were taken to the cemetery.

Mrs. Goldman leaves two daughters, two sons, nine grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

FAMOUS SCENIC ARTIST DIES AT ADVANCED AGE

Life-long Resident of City Knew Greatest Actors of Old School.

SUCCUMBS OUT OF DOORS

D.C.
Seated at Best-loved Spot
Amid Nature's Scenery

as Death Comes.

Aug. 8, 1923

Word came to Rochester yesterday that Dennis Flood, of No. 86 Wilmington street, said to be the oldest scenic artist who still used the brush in America, had died suddenly on Monday at Pine Point, Crooked Lake, in the Berkshire Hills. Mr. Flood, a lifelong resident of this city, had spent his summers for fifteen years at the camp of his niece, Mrs. William J. Wiley.

A dispatch to the Democrat and Chronicle said that death was believed to have resulted from cerebral hemorrhage. Relatives in Rochester later confirmed this report. The only near kin of the artist are Mrs. Wiley and another niece, Miss Anna Maher, of Wilmington street, with whom he lived with in the winter. The funeral will be to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's Church. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

Mr. Flood was a man of exceptionally interesting qualities. It is said that he knew personally all the great actors and actresses of his time. He consulted with them to get their views on the work which would be the setting for their roles. He took a great interest in costumes for the stage and had rare books on this subject. He counted among his acquaintances Edwin Booth, Sarah Bernhardt, Sir Henry Irving, Burrell and other men and women of world renown in dramatic art. It has been said that no person living in his later days knew Rochester's theatrical life as well as he. He painted the first curtain that ever adorned the Lyceum Theater. In the last three or four years he painted a curtain at the Family Theater the design of which bears the title, "When Rochester was Rochesterville."

Tried to Enlist at 14.

In 1844, seventy-nine years ago, Mr. Flood was born in Court street. His early education was at old No. 11, now Samuel Lattimore School. When he was 14 years old he tried to enlist in the Civil war, but because of his age was rejected. He was so eager to be a soldier that he jumped on a train taking enlisted men to Albany, and when discovered, the officers were obliged to let him go there. His military experience was cut short, however, for he was returned to his home.

Later in boyhood, Dennis and two young friends of similar ambition tasted a bit of adventurous fortune. All three wanted to be artists. Having other plans for the boy, Dennis Flood's father did not share his son's enthusiasm for paint and brush. The three lads ran away and in an evening paper on the date of their departure an item told that the three had started for Paris. They had funds to carry them only as far as New York. Their parents thought they would not compel the boys to come home. A taste of paying their expenses away from home with money they earned would be a good lesson for them, their parents reasoned.

Painted in New York.

They stayed in New York for two years. Like all artists in tales of typical careers, they lived well when pictures sold well and slimly when no customers appeared. At the end of the two years, they were ready to come home. By that time Dennis's father had come to the decision that art was a real calling for his son. Whenever a prize had been offered in No. 11 School for the best drawing of any kind, the lad had won it. The father took note of all that had occurred, and objected no more.

When the Civil war was casting its shadow and its sorrow over the land, Dennis Flood began to paint scenes for theaters, then sought to divert the minds of those who stayed at home and waited for news from the front. He began this work in Denman Thompson's little theater in Exchange street, where the Snow Wire Works now are. Thompson later was the popular "Uncle Josh" of "The Old Homestead."

As a boy, Dennis Flood was a regular gallery attendant in the city's first theater the Metropolitan, which stood where the Family now is. There he saw many famous actors.

Recalled Stock-Star Period.

"They came in what was called the stock-star period of the drama," Mr. Flood said eight years ago in an interview he gave to a Rochester paper. "A resident company was prepared in all the great plays of the day, and this company supported the traveling stars who came alone. Edward Adams came there. He was the greatest of all Claude Melnotte in 'The Lady of Lyons.' He also was a great Hamlet and a man of rare ability. James Wallack, uncle of Lester, played there, and so did the great Forest and Charlotte Cushman. Mrs. Kimball was another visitor in the old theater. Eventually it burned down, but not until the stock-star system had waned and the period of spectacular pieces, we called them 'show pieces,' had passed also."

When still young Mr. Flood went to Milwaukee to visit a brother. On the train coming back to Rochester, he made the acquaintance of Leon Lempert, also an artist and theatrical architect, father of Leon H. Lempert, architect, of this city. As the two men traveled they became better acquainted and as a result, Mr. Lempert took young Flood into partnership with him. It was he, Mr. Flood told in later years who encouraged him to follow scenic art. Mr. Flood did much mural decorating, painting a great deal in the interior of churches, as well as theaters.

Mr. Flood was one of the four men who founded the Rochester Lodge of the Elks, the early meetings being held for years in his paint shop—not yet raised to the dignity of "studio"—in North Water street. Later he was made a life member.

Died at Picturesque Spot.

In the last three years, Mr. Flood considerable work, some of it being sent to him from as far away as Detroit.

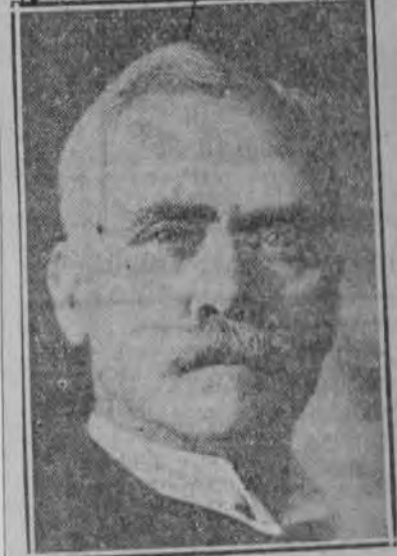

If Mr. Flood had chosen the spot on which he would look for the last time on this world's scenery, his relatives fancy he would have selected that from which he went out on Monday afternoon. Disappointed for the last fifteen years with his niece's summer home in the Berkshires, he had a chair on the grounds, where he could see Crooked Lake through the trees. This camp stands in a dense grove of pines. It is some 100 feet away from the nearest house. The location and outlook are so picturesque that they have become celebrated in their vicinity. Mr. Flood was fond of this lovely scenery—the grove, the lake and the distant mountain all in the landscape. He had sketched there a number of times. On the afternoon of his death, he went to the chair in the grove where he had so often enjoyed this nature's masterly scenery, and when his niece's family found him, he had died there.

His body was brought to the home of his niece, Miss Maher, where he spent his winters.

Mr. Flood was a life member of the Scenic Artists of America, a member of the Art Colony of America an honorary member for life of the Rochester Lodge of Elks and a member of St. Mary's Church.

Mr. Flood was married to Miss Mary Crane, of this city. She died twenty-six years ago.

dan, Onondaga county, in 1847. He was of Quaker parentage and until the day of his death held fast to many of the simple tenets of the Christian faith of his ancestors. Moving to Rochester while still a young man, Mr. Wheeler became a bookkeeper in the firm of Moore & Beir, wholesale clothiers, and in 1884 he married Alice Johnson, a Rochester girl. At this time he also was corresponding secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, then situated in Main street.

He later found employment as a bookkeeper with the Rochester Lumber Company, holding that position up to a year ago when illness forced him to retire. Mr. Wheeler's avocation was boys' work. For nearly 40 years he spent his spare time at work directly connected with boys' activities and welfare.

He joined the First Methodist Church soon after coming to Rochester and later changed his membership to the Monroe Avenue Methodist Church, then the Alexander Street Methodist Church. During his life he always has been the leader of a large boys' Sunday-school class. At the time of his death he was secretary-treasurer of the Board of Trustees of his church. Resolutions expressing sorrow at his passing were made by the board yesterday. Mr. Wheeler at one time was superintendent of the Sunday-school of the church.

Mr. Wheeler leaves his wife and a daughter, Mrs. Alice Matthews, having himself survived three sons, Elmer, George and Edward Wheeler, Jr. The latter was for years fire marshal of Rochester.

L. E. Loewenguth Insurance Agent, Dies At His Home

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning from the home and at 9 o'clock from Sacred Heart Church. Interment will be in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

Mr. Loewenguth was born in New York city in 1856. He worked in a brokerage office there for some time and came to Rochester when about 16 years of age. He began his insurance career in Elwood's insurance office here. Later he went to work for the Rochester German Insurance Company, with which for about 20 years he was special agent and adjuster. Some time later he opened an office for himself in the Powers building, and at the time of his death was one of the most widely known insurance men in this part of the state. He was the oldest insurance man in the city in length of service. He was active until about a year ago when he became ill.

Mr. Loewenguth had a large number of friends. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Fire Underwriters. He attended Sacred Heart Church.

MISS ADAH BURKE DIES AT HOSPITAL

D. & C.
Death of Former Teacher
Follows Long Illness.

D. & C. Sept. 6-1923
In the death of Adah Jane Burke at the Homeopathic Hospital Tuesday the public schools of Rochester lost one of their most gifted and progressive younger teachers. Miss Burke began teaching in September, 1914, and was assigned to Lake View School, No. 7. In June, 1918, she was transferred to Concord School, No. 18, where she had since taught in the third grade. In the summer of 1917 she studied in the Normal School Physical Education department at Battle Creek, Mich., and in 1920 began a course of study at the University of Rochester, specializing in psychology.

She was taken ill about a year ago, but continued her work until last March, when she was compelled to stop.

She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, who survive her, with three sisters, Eleanor F. and Sadie M. Burke, of this city, and Mrs. Oren Womack, of Seattle, Wash., and a brother, Frederick T. Burke, of this city.

Funeral services will take place at the family home, No. 35 Harris street, to-day at 2:30 o'clock, and will be conducted by Rev. Francis A. Ransom, rector of St. James Episcopal Church, of which Miss Burke was a communicant. The bearers will be public school principals and teachers: Clinton E. Kellogg, principal of Washington Junior High; Lewis Michelsen, formerly physical director at Concord school No. 18; William Jermyn; Judson Decker, acting principal of the East High School annex; M. J. Callahan, of Andrews School, No. 9; and Nathaniel G. West, principal of the same school. Burial will be in Mt. Hope cemetery.

LOEWENGUTH FUNERAL WILL BE TO MORROW

D. & C. Sept. 6-1923
The funeral of Louis E. Loewenguth, well known insurance man of this city and member of the firm of Loewenguth, Dineen & Hock, of the Powers building, who died yesterday morning at his home, No. 30 Magee avenue, aged 67 years, will take place to-morrow morning at 8:30 o'clock from the home and at 9 o'clock at Sacred Heart Church. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

Mr. Loewenguth was born in New York in 1856 and came to this city when he was about 16 years old. He began his career in the insurance business in Elwood's insurance office. Later, he was connected with the Rochester-German Insurance Company for whom he was special agent and adjuster for more than twenty years. After leaving the Rochester-German company he opened an insurance office in the Powers building where he was active in the business until a year ago when he became ill. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Fire Underwriters.

He leaves his wife, Emma Loewenguth; a daughter, Mrs. Edward B. Dineen; a son, Frederick M. Loewenguth; two grandchildren, all of this city, two sisters, Mrs. Teresa Foster, of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Elizabeth Wehle, of Buffalo, and two brothers, William Loewenguth, of this city, and Edward Loewenguth, of Churchville.

Funeral Of Miss Burke, Public School Teacher, Is Held This Afternoon

T.U. Sept. 6-1923
The funeral of Miss Adah Jane Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, was held this afternoon from the family residence, 35 Harris street. The services were conducted by the Rev. Francis A. Ransom, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, of which Miss Burke was a communicant.

The bearers were public school teachers, as follows: Clinton E. Kellogg, principal of Washington Junior High; Lewis Michelsen, formerly physical director at Concord School 18; William Jermyn; Judson Decker, acting principal of East High School Annex; M. J. Callahan of Andrews School 9, and Nahtaniel G. West, principal of School 2. Burial was in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Besides her parents, Miss Burke leaves three sisters, Eleanor F. and Sadie M. Burke of this city and Mrs. Oren Womack of Seattle, Wash., and one brother, Frederick T. Burke of this city.

In the death of Miss Burke on Tuesday at Homeopathic Hospital, the public schools of Rochester lost one of their most gifted and progressive younger teachers. Miss Burke began teaching in September, 1914, and was assigned to Lake View School, 7. In June, 1918, she was transferred to Concord School, 18, where she had since taught in the third grade. In the summer of 1917 she studied in the Normal School Physical Education department at Battle Creek, Mich., and in 1920 began a course of study at the University of Rochester, specializing in psychology.

She was taken ill about a year ago, but continued her work until last March.

Miss Burke, who was a pupil of Eastman School of Music, possessed a remarkably fine soprano voice. She was a member of the choir of St. James' Church and in the Rochester Teachers' Association production of the "Mikado" at the Lyceum in December, 1921, her singing of the part of "Yum Yum" was one of the most successful features.

Miss Florence L. Smith, Teacher For 30 Years, Buried At Union Hill

Miss Florence L. Smith of 37 Gibbs street, supervisor of rhythm instruction in the Rochester public schools, was buried on Monday, August 27, at Union Hill.

She had been a teacher in the Rochester public schools for 30 years. For the first 16 years she was a teacher in the upper grades of number 3 school, and the last 14 years was supervisor of rhythm in the health education department of the public schools. She had a radiant personality and was loved and respected by all the teachers and pupils with whom she came in contact. Miss Smith was a most progressive teacher in every sense of the word, keeping abreast of the times through constant study. Few teachers have surpassed her in her loyalty to the profession. She was unselfish in her devotion to the best interests of her pupils and the school system.

While preparing a group of dances for the homelands exhibition which was held at Exposition Park four years ago, she met with an accident which resulted in a serious bone injury. Until this mishap she had been in vigorous health, but from that date had been in failing health.

Miss Smith was a member of the Central Church of this city, a member of the D. A. R. and the Women Principal's Association and the Rochester Teachers' Association. She was also a member of the New York State Teachers' Association.

Besides her many friends and those to whom she has been of service, she leaves the following: her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Cramer of 37 Gibbs street; a brother, Edward Smith of Union street, and four nieces, Miss Florence Cramer, instructor in art, East High School, Miss Marguerite Cramer, health education instructor, at number 25 and number 30 schools, Miss Ruth Cramer of New York city, and Mrs. Gritchen Clark of Rochester. Sept 8-1923

D. & C. - Aug. 6
Once Influential Democrat

Succumbs at Hospital.

THOMAS J. LEDDY.

Thomas J. Leddy, formerly of wide influence in Democratic politics in Monroe county, died at the Highland Hospital on Saturday afternoon after a brief illness. Mr. Leddy had been active in politics for about six years.

He was stricken in a barber shop on Thursday and removed to the hospital. He failed to recover from an operation that was performed. Up to about six years ago Mr. Leddy made his home in Gates. Since that time he had been engaged in the real estate business with offices in the Ellwanger & Barry building. Formerly he was a contractor and specialized in the construction of houses.

Mr. Leddy for twenty years was justice of the peace at Gates. He was 61 years old and for thirty years was prominent in Democratic politics, entering public life in 1891. He was superintendent of Division 9, of the Erie canal for several terms and was an unsuccessful candidate for member of Assembly from the Fifth District on several times.

He was three times a delegate to the Democratic State Convention and was chairman of the Democratic Town Committee for many years.

He was born in Rochester in 1862 and moved to Caledonia with his parents when 4 years old. He returned to Rochester in 1883 and the next year moved to Gates, where he learned the mason trade, and later embarked in business as a contractor.

Mr. Leddy leaves a son, Frank J. Leddy three daughters, Mrs. Thomas J. Frawley; Mrs. James W. Coates and Miss Katherine M. Leddy, all of Rochester, and a sister, Mrs. M. Justin, of New York. The funeral will take place from St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

JUDGE D. C. HEBBARD, PROMINENT IN CIVIC LIFE, DIES OF STROKE

Stricken While Out for Walk; High Tributes Paid by Associates.

D. & C. Aug. 7 - 1928

Delbert C. Hebbard, City Court judge, long prominent in civic and fraternal affairs in Rochester, was found dead shortly before noon yesterday at Mount Hope avenue and May street. Judge Hebbard had not been well for the last two months and left his home at No. 1 Castle park for a walk. He collapsed in the street and Coroner Thomas A. Killip, who investigated, gave as his opinion that the jurist suffered a stroke.

For more than a quarter of a century, Judge Hebbard had been an active member of the Rochester bar, and served nearly twenty years on the bench. He formerly was in law partnership with United States Commissioner Edwin C. Smith, with offices in the Powers building, but dissolved the partnership about four years ago. A man of quiet, gentlemanly demeanor, Judge Hebbard was popular with members of the legal fraternity and with his fellow judges. High tribute to Judge Hebbard as a man and lawyer was paid last evening by City Court Judge Joseph M. Feeley, who expressed the sentiment of the other members of the court.

A life-long Republican, Judge Hebbard was active in the party councils. James L. Hatchkiss, Republican leader, declared that Rochester loses a judge and lawyer of highest personal standards in the passing of Mr. Hebbard.

Active in Church Work.

Judge Hebbard was born in Le Roy on October 14, 1865. His early youth was spent on a farm. After receiving his early education in the district schools in Genesee county, Mr. Hebbard attended the Genesee Normal School and was graduated with the class of 1890. Before coming to Rochester, he taught at the Union School at Mumfords for three years. Mr. Hebbard studied in the law office of Surrogate Selden S. Brown. From the start he was a successful attorney and his ability won many lawsuits.

Judge Hebbard's interests were broad. He was a member of the Brick Presbyterian Church and in former years conducted the boys' work at the First Presbyterian Church. Since affiliating with the Brick Church, he had been an active member of the Men's Class, under the direction of Mr. Wolf.

Judge Hebbard was a past master of Genesee Falls Lodge, F. and A. M., and a member of the Hamilton Chapter and Monroe Commandery. He was a past steward of the Grand Lodge of Masons of New York State.

Judge Hebbard was a member of the Rochester Historical Society and the Rochester Chamber of Commerce. He was one of the vice-presidents of the Rochester Humane Society, and a member of the Rochester Bar Association and the Burroughs-Audubon Club.

Elected to City Court in 1903.

On his father's side, Judge Hebbard was a direct descendant of Governor Bradford, of Massachusetts, and was eligible to join the Mayflower Society. On his mother's side he was a member of prominent Scottish descendants who were connected with the most important class.

JUDGE DELBERT C. HEBBARD.

Judge Hebbard at one time served as United States commissioner. He was elected to the City Court in 1903 and served three complete terms of six years. He was elected for a fourth term of six years that began on January 1, 1922, and would have expired on December 31, 1927. His successor will be appointed by Mayor Van Zandt, and will have to run in the election this fall.

Judge Hebbard leaves his wife, Bessie C. Hebbard; a daughter, Margaret; a brother, Donald D. Hebbard, of this city, and three sisters, Miss Catherine Hebbard, of Le Roy; Mrs. Hamilton Vallance, of Caledonia, and Mrs. Manfred J. Dewey, of Oneida.

City Officials Attend Services — Genesee Falls Lodge, F. & A. M., Officers at Chapel—City Court Is Adjourned.

Aug. 7 - 1928
The funeral of City Court Judge Delbert C. Hebbard was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the family home, 1 Castle park, and at 2:30 o'clock in Mt. Hope Chapel. The Rev. John S. Wolff of Brick Presbyterian Church, officiated, assisted by the Rev. G. B. F. Hallock. Services in the chapel were in charge of Genesee Falls Lodge, F and A. M., of which Judge Hebbard was a past master.

City officials and prominent men attended the services. Among those present were Mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt, County Clerk James L. Hotchkiss, Commissioner of Public Safety Harry J. Bareham, United States Commissioner Edwin C. Smith, Park Commissioner William S. Riley and others. The following committee represented the Bar Association: Judge Selden S. Brown, United States Commissioner Edwin C. Smith, Patrick Cauley, Herbert J. Menzie, Daniel W. Forsyth and Julius J. Clark, deputy clerk of the Appellate Division, fourth department.

Active bearers were Judge Raymond E. Westbury, Judge Joseph M. Feeley, Harvey S. Remington, Edmund Withington, Charles M. Colton and Frank H. Dennis.

City Court session was brief this morning, Judge Raymond E. Westbury calling cases and then adjourning them out of respect for Judge Hebbard.

BAR ASSOCIATION ADOPTS MEMORIAL TO JUDGE HEBBARD

D. & C.
Pays Tribute to Memory of Honored City Jurist;
Funeral To-day.

Aug. 7 - 1928
Resolutions on the death of City Judge Delbert C. Hebbard were adopted at a special meeting of the Rochester Bar Association at the Court House yesterday. After calling the meeting to order, President Harvey F. Remington turned the gavel over to Supreme Court Justice John B. M. Stephens.

The Committee on Resolutions, composed of Special County Judge Frederick L. Dutcher, James L. Hotchkiss, Harry Otis Poole, Edward Lynn and Philetus Chamberlain, reported the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously:

Delbert C. Hebbard, for nearly twenty years a judge of one of our most important tribunals, died suddenly in the city of Rochester on the 20th of August, 1923.

He was born at La Ray on the 15th of October, 1853, of colonial and Scotch ancestry. His early youth was spent upon a farm and he acquired his preliminary education in the district schools. He graduated from the Genesee Normal School in the Class of 1880 and for about three years thereafter was engaged in educational work preparatory to his commencing the study of law.

For the latter purpose he came to the city of Rochester and entered the office of the Hon. Selden S. Brown as a law student. After completing the required course of study he was admitted to the bar and began the practice of law in the city of Rochester where his entire professional and judicial life was to be spent.

For many years he practiced in partnership with Edwin C. Smith, and for a number of years served as a United States commissioner for this district. He was elected in 1903 a judge of the former Municipal Court, which was subsequently superseded by the present City Court. He served continuously as a judge of these two courts down to the time of his death.

Judge Hebbard was essentially a public man and for over a quarter of a century had a useful part in the affairs of this community. Originally of a powerful physique and great vitality, he was further blessed with broad sympathies and great common sense. He never spared himself. By hard study he became a well read lawyer and an able judge, and both in private practice and on the bench gave to his clients and to the public the best that was in him and undoubtedly thereby hurried his untimely end. His other interests were broad and liberal. He was active in church and humanitarian work. He delved deeply into the treasures of history. He was a man among men, in political, fraternal and civic affairs.

Perhaps the thing about Judge Hebbard most noticeable to his fellow members of the bar, was the trust which his mere presence seemed to inspire. To meet him was to trust him. Naturally in his professional and judicial life he had occasion to differ with many, but we doubt if his perfect honesty or sincerity of purpose was ever questioned. Although an aggressive lawyer, at times a strong partisan in politics, and for years an absolutely fearless judge, we doubt if he has left a single personal enemy behind him.

The untimely death of Judge Hebbard is an irreparable loss to the bar of Monroe county, and the State of New York, and the Rochester Bar Association sincerely mourns his departure.

The funeral of Judge Hebbard will be conducted to-day from the home at No. 1 Castle park at 2 o'clock and at 2:30 o'clock at Mount Hope Chapel. The committee appointed to represent the Bar Association consists of Judge Selden S. Brown, United States Commissioner Edwin C. Smith, Patrick Cauley, Herbert J. Menzie, Daniel W. Forsyth and Julius J. Clark, deputy clerk of the Appellate Division, fourth department.

Rev. John S. Wolff, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, will officiate at the services, assisted by Rev. G. B. F. Hallock. Services in the chapel will be in charge of Genesee Falls Lodge, F. & A. M., of which Judge Hebbard was a past master.

The active bearers will be Judge Raymond E. Westbury, Judge Joseph M. Feely, Harvey S. Remington, Edmund Withington, Charles M. Colton and Frank H. Denais.

of law up until a short time ago. He had been ill for about four weeks, but had been confined to his home for only the past two weeks.

In politics Mr. Ludakens was a staunch Democrat of the Jeffersonian type. He was at one time candidate for special county judge and also ran on the Democratic ticket for district attorney, being defeated by Stephen J. Warren by a very close margin. His integrity and honesty won him many positions of trust in the gift of the courts. Some years ago he was appointed receiver for "Count" Pacheco's Loan Association and by his careful management succeeded in saving from the wreck much money for the unfortunate investors, most of whom were of German descent.

He was a member of Rochester Germania Lodge of Perfection, F. & A. M., and the Rochester Bar Association. He was master of the Fraternal Order of Eagles here at one time. He attended the Salem Evangelical Church of which he was a member of the council.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from 92 Magee avenue. Interment will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

JOHN BRADLEY DIES FOLLOWING LONG ILLNESS

T.U. Oct. 6 - 1973
Well-Known Business Man Passes Away at Home in Lorimer Street — Was Prominent in Masonic Order.

Following an illness which has extended over the past three years, the last four months of which he was confined to his home, John Bradley, one of the city's widely known business men, died at 9:40 o'clock this morning at his home, 70 Lorimer street. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Some 40 years of Mr. Bradley's life was devoted to the brewery industry, he having been in succession manager of the old Rochester Brewery, the Genesee Brewery Company, and in the 12 years preceding prohibition also secretary of the Bartholomay Brewing Company. He was also a past president of the New York State Brewers' Association. Upon retiring from the brewery business he entered the insurance business, being associated with Louis Kolb in the Wilder building.

Mr. Bradley was a man of marked charitable inclinations, ever helping those who came to him for aid. He was a great lover of poetry and delighted to entertain his guests and intimate friends with selections of verses from the best writers. He took an active interest in Masonry and was a member of Corinthian Temple Lodge, F. & A. M.; Rochester Consistory, A. A. O. S. R., and of Damascus Temple, A. A. O. N. of M. S., and the Chamber of Commerce.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Inez A. Bradley, and three sisters, Mrs. Emily Fitzmaurice of New York city, Mrs. Frank Stubbs and Mrs. Anna Stubbs of this city.

Funeral services will be held from Mt. Hope Chapel next Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Julia Rathbun Winans died early yesterday morning at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Clarence Hardell, 444 Sawyer street, aged 92 years. The remains were taken to the home of Mrs. Winans' son-in-law, Henry B. King, at Hathaway's station, on the R. & E. Ry., where the funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment was at Lima.

Mrs. Winans was born in Chautauqua county and removed with her parents to Lima when a girl. She was married to Seth W. Winans of Lima in 1879 and lived in that village until Mr. Winans' death in 1900. Mrs. Winans is survived by two brothers, L. G. Rathbun of Phelps and George Rathbun of Minneapolis.

Heart Trouble Proves Fatal To T.U. Adele E. Brooks T.U. Oct. 28 - 1973

Mrs. Adele E. Brooks, founder of the Mothers' Clubs of Rochester and for many years honorary president of the clubs, died of heart trouble yesterday at her home, 105 Meigs street.

MRS. ADELE E. BROOKS.

Mrs. Brooks was associated with Kindergarten work in the Rochester public schools for a number of years and was supervisor of Kindergarten instruction at the time of her death. She was stationed at School 18 and served 34 years in that institution.

Mrs. Brooks was the widow of John M. Brooks, a former city editor of the old Union and Advertiser and Post Express. She was a native of Boston. She suffered from heart disease during the summer.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock from 105 Meigs street. Mrs. Brooks is survived by five cousins: Mrs. W. B. Whitcomb of this city; H. P. Booth; Florence Booth and Julian May Booth, all of Batavia, and Mrs. A. E. Woerner of this city; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Edward Brooks of Warwick avenue, this city.

Daily Death Roll T.U. Oct. 19 - 1973 Charlotte Lyman, Widow Of Pioneer Art Dealer, Dead

Charlotte Marion Lyman, widow of the late Charles Warren Woodward, died last Monday at her home 1,350 Main street east, in her 82d year. She is survived by a son and daughter. Funeral services were held at Jeffrey's Chapel, Thursday afternoon, the Rev. Dr. G. B. F. Hallock officiating.

Mrs. Woodward was born in Royalton, Vt., and came to Rochester a bride. Her husband was the pioneer art dealer of Western New York, and the late M. W. Rundel, who left most of his fortune to the city, was his partner for many years. She was of a quiet, retiring disposition and made many friends among all ages. She traveled much and visited many parts of the country with her son. She was over 70 when she traveled alone to San Francisco to visit her son who was living there. She took a keen interest in current events, going frequently to the theater and other events. She retained her faculties to the last and enjoyed relating her early experiences here, particularly in the flood of 1865.

Daily Death Roll T.U. Oct. 18 - 1973 H.G. Whitmore Dies While At Work In Yards

Homer G. Whitmore, 43 of 99 Pelham road, a member of the contracting firm of Whitmore, Rauber & Vicinus, died unexpectedly yesterday afternoon at the yards of the firm in Brooks avenue. Heart trouble, from which Mr. Whitmore had suffered for more than a year, is believed to have caused death.

Last winter Mr. Whitmore went to

HOMER G. WHITMORE.

Florida in the hope that rest and change of climate would cure his trouble. Since his return he had been actively engaged in his business.

Mr. Whitmore was born in this city, in Hickory street, Aug. 17, 1880. He received his elementary and high school education in Rochester, and later went to Troy Polytechnic Institute, from which he graduated in 1904. After his graduation he returned to Rochester and entered the business of his father, with which he has been associated ever since.

He has always been keenly interested in Rochester political affairs. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Rochester Club, Monroe Commandery, Knights Templar, Corinthian Lodge F. & A. M., Damascus Temple Shriners, Doric Council, F. & A. M. and the Rotary Club, and vice-president of the Men's class of Brick Presbyterian Church.

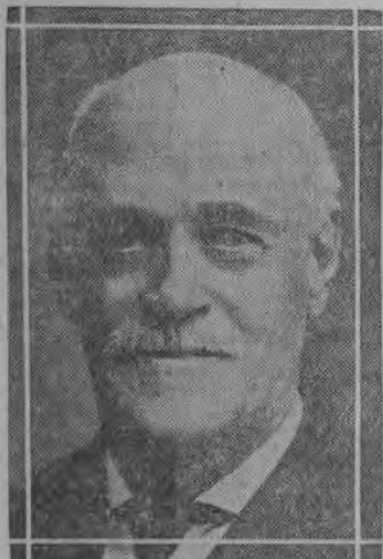

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mildred Cook Whitmore; two sons, Homer Grant Whitmore, Jr., and John Howard Whitmore; his mother, Mrs. Valentine F. Whitmore; his sister, Mrs. William H. Vicinus, and two brothers, Lewis S. and Walter V. Whitmore. The funeral will take place from the home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Rev. John S. Wolff of Brick Presbyterian Church will officiate. Interment will be in Mt. Hope.

J. HENRY CRAIGIE DIES AT UNIVERSITY WHERE HE WAS IN CHARGE OF BUILDINGS; DESCENDANT OF TWO PIONEER FAMILIES

Herald Oct. 10 - 1923

J. Henry Craigie, for 31 years in charge of the buildings at the University of Rochester, died at his home in Anderson Hall yesterday morning from heart disease, aged 68 years. He leaves his wife, Mary; two daughters, Miss Annie Louis Craigie of St. Louis, and Mrs. Robert H. Link of this city; one brother, Frederic E. Craigie of Catskill and one sister, Mrs. William Gahan of Buffalo.

Mr. Craigie was the grandson of two Rochester pioneer families, the Harris and Craigie families, who came to Rochester in the early days of the city's development. Orrin Harris came here with his family in 1823, as a surveyor working on the Erie Canal. The Harris family were down East Yankees. Duncan Craigie came to Rochester from Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1835, a stone mason, and was employed on the present Aqueduct, which is being remodeled to take care of the new subway development.

James Henry Craigie was the son of John Craigie (son of Duncan Craigie) and Abby Maria Harris (daughter of Orrin Harris). He was one of the younger children of a large family, which lived in Platt Street, near Kent Street. In his younger days, he was ambitious to "see the world," and one day started out and was gone for a number of years, working his way on a trip around the world. The greater part of the time he was away, he spent in Australia and the Dutch Guinea Islands of the Pacific, although there is scarcely a country, in which he did not spend some time.

He returned to Rochester in the late 80's and was employed for a time on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway. In 1892, he began his work at the University of Rochester, a position he held until his death.

In his 31 years of service at the university, Mr. Craigie was associated with all the students who came to that institution. At commencement time, he had as good a time as the old "grads" renewing acquaintances, and one class claimed him as its own, electing him an honorary member. That was the class of 1902.

Mr. Craigie was a member of Yonondio Lodge F. and A. M., and about a year ago he was elected to life membership.

In politics, he was a lifelong Democrat, and while not an active worker in political circles, he was always at the polls Election Day, casting his vote, according to the dictates of his convictions. He knew the late Louis M. Antisdale, former editor in chief of The Herald, from his association at the university, and was always an admirer of Mr. Antisdale's editorial writings.

The funeral will take place Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence and at 2.30 o'clock from the Hubbell Classroom of First Baptist Church. Mr. Craigie was a member of that church. Rev. Dr. Donald B. MacQueen, pastor of the church, will be in charge. Burial will be made in the family plot in Riverside Cemetery, in charge of Yonondio Lodge.

MORTIMER SMITH, PROMINENT ELK, DIES; ROCHESTER LODGE TO HAVE CHARGE OF PUBLIC FUNERAL SERVICES WEDNESDAY

Herald Oct. 29, 1923

Mortimer Smith died yesterday morning at his home at 8 Algonquin Terrace, aged 51 years. Born in Rochester May 29, 1872, he had spent all his life, with the exception of four years, in this city. For four years he was located in Scranton, Pa., where he was resident engineer of the D. L. & W. Railroad. Returning to Rochester, he became identified with the State Engineer's office as assistant engineer, a position he had held for 28 years.

At the time of his death, he was connected with the New York State Highway Commission, Division Seven, as assistant engineer in charge of road work in the counties of Monroe and Livingston. He was a son of the late John R. Smith, who was a pioneer miller of this city. He was educated in the public and private schools and, following his graduation, he studied engineering under George W. Rattier.

He was a member of the Rochester Engineering Society and a past exalted ruler of Rochester Lodge 24.

R. P. O. E. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Rose Smith; one son, Mortimer Smith, Jr.; one daughter, Helen E. Smith; one sister, Mrs. Chester P. Greene of West Rush, and two brothers, Charles A. and Alexander George Smith of Rochester.

Because of his prominence in the Elks, the past and present officers of the lodge are arranging to pay him honor at a public funeral, which will take place from the Elks Temple at 113 Clinton Avenue North, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The body will be removed to the temple at 11 o'clock on that morning and will lie in state in the auditorium there until the hour set for the funeral.

The services, which will be in charge of Rev. Albert W. Beaven, will not be restricted to Elks, all friends being invited to attend. Past officers of the lodge will assist Rev. Dr. Beaven, the past exalted rulers will act as honorary bearers and the present officers an active bearers. Burial will be made in Riverside Cemetery.

EDGAR P. REED, DEAN OF SHOE INDUSTRY, DIES

D. & C.
Nation's Oldest Footwear
Manufacturer Succumbs

Oct. 15-1923
to Brief Illness.
57 YEARS IN TRADE

Established Pioneer Plant in City; Was Leader in National Association.

Edgar P. Reed, president of E. P. Reed & Company and dean of the Rochester shoe industry, died suddenly at 11:50 o'clock Saturday night at his home, No. 25 North Goodman street, aged 87 years. Although in advanced years, Mr. Reed had been in fairly good health.

Up to the time of his death Mr. Reed was the oldest living shoe manufacturer in the country and had been associated with the shoe industry in this city for more than fifty-seven years. He was honorary life vice-president of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association, and had been instrumental in the formation of that body.

Came to Rochester in 1866.

Mr. Reed was born in the town of Moriah, Essex county, on February 14, 1837, and received his early education in the schools of his birthplace. In 1854 he went to Beaver Dam, Wis., and a few years later moved to Milwaukee, where he worked in the dry goods house of Hensett & Chapman.

Later he became associated with the grocery firm of Byanton & Smith, as a traveling salesman, remaining with that concern when it moved to Chicago. In 1866, at the solicitation of his father-in-law, Edmund Mortimer, he came to Rochester, where he entered the firm of Johnson & Jaquith as a partner in the shoe manufacturing business at No. 111 State street.

In 1878 Almeron J. Johnson withdrew from the firm and five years later when E. A. Jaquith sold his interests, Mr. Reed's father-in-law, Mr. Mortimer, purchased a share in the business. After passing through various hands, the business finally was bought by Mr. Reed, who formed the E. P. Reed Company. Soon after he took in a partner named Weaver and the business continued under that partnership for eight years. In 1887 the firm became again E. P. Reed & Company, and Joseph Farley was taken in as a partner. In 1899 the company was incorporated as E. P. Reed & Company.

Leader in Industry Here.

On account of increased business the factory was moved three times, first to St. Paul street, then to River street, and about seventeen years ago to the present plant built by the company in North Goodman street.

On June 20, 1916, Mr. Reed celebrated the golden anniversary of his entrance into the shoe business. When he came here, Rochester had a population of about 56,000 and was growing rapidly. At that time the boot and shoe industry was in its infancy. It could advertise truthfully hand and bench-made products, for there were no others. Six shoe firms, Pancost, Page & Company, Hatch Sons & Streeter, Churchill & Company, Tarrant Brothers, G. P. Grant & Company and Johnson & Jaquith, were the progenitors of the shoe manufacturing industry, which to-day has become one of the largest of the city's industries. A great deal of the success and the rapid growth of the shoe industry in Rochester has been attributed to the efforts and achievements of Mr. Reed.

He was known as the "grand old man" of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association and prior to his election as honorary life vice-president of the organization in 1916, had served as vice-president since its formation in 1904. Mr. Reed was active in the founding of the association and gave much time to its development, watching it grow from an organization with a few members to one of the most important national trade organizations in the country. Several times the office of president was offered to him but he declined it.

Funeral Service To-morrow.

Although Mr. Reed gave over the active management of his factory in 1914, it had been his daily practice, until a short time ago, to visit the plant and keep in close touch with the conduct of the business. He was well liked by his employees, a number of whom have been with the company for more than thirty-five years.

Mr. Reed was of a retiring nature when questioned as to his success. When asked at one time if he had a word for the younger men beginning their careers, he said,

Daily Death Roll '23 T. O. 11-12 Benjamin R. Williamson, President Of Catering Co., Dies In Hospital

Benjamin R. Williamson, president of the I. R. Teall Catering Company, 263 East avenue, died yesterday afternoon at the Park Avenue Hospital. He had been ill about five weeks.

Mr. Williamson was associated with the Teall Company for 15 years. He became president of the organization upon the death of Isaac Teall in 1916. He was born in Raleigh, N. C., April 15, 1865 and came to Rochester 15 years ago.

BENJAMIN R. WILLIAMSON.

He leaves his mother, three sisters, Mrs. Nellie W. Price, Rosalind and Gladys Williamson, all of this city, and four brothers, Frank P. Williamson, of Zanesville, P. L.; Bailey F. Williamson, of Gainesville, Fla.; Herbert L. Williamson, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Carl L. Williamson, of Raleigh, N. C.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 285 Alexander street, the Rt. Rev. David L. Ferris, suffragan bishop of Western New York, officiating. The body will be taken to Raleigh for interment.

"I have always made one point to make good, honest shoes. I care more for the reputation than for the amount of money I make. I have always been very active in my business. I have always thought I must be the first at the factory in the morning and the last there at night."

He leaves a son, Louis M. Reed; a daughter, Mrs. W. S. Stroud, of Portage, Wis.; three grandsons, Edgar M., Lester H., and Robert M. Reed, and three great-grandchildren.

Rev. Paul Moore Strayer, D. D., will officiate at the funeral services which will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home. Burial will be made in Mount Hope cemetery.

Editorial Edgar P. Reed. Oct. 16
To Edgar P. Reed must be assigned an important place in the development of an essential industry and in the business growth of Rochester during the long and active life which has come to a close.

When he became a partner in the firm of Johnson & Jacquith in 1866 shoe manufacturing, as now understood, was in its infancy. The "cow-hide" boot still flourished and footwear was heavy and cumbersome.

In 1916, when Mr. Reed celebrated the golden anniversary of his entrance into the shoe business, the supremacy of American shoes was acknowledged throughout the world. No other nation could compete with this country in turning out footwear combining style and comfort with good wearing qualities.

Honors paid Mr. Reed by the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association showed that his fellow manufacturers realized that he had been among the foremost in bringing about the remarkable progress of their industry.

Rochester quality stands high in boots and shoes, as in many other products. Buyers come from all parts of the country to secure goods in this market. Mr. Reed won his success and steadily expanded his business by working along sound lines and striving always to turn out a good product adapted to the wants of the wearer.

It requires hard work, ability and character to maintain a place in a strongly competitive industry over a long period of years. Rochester's reputation as center for the manufacture of the women's shoes of the better quality is in no small part due to his efforts. His life's contribution to the city's solid business growth merits praise. 1928

William J. Wilcox, Old Resident Of City, Dies, Aged 80

T.U. Nov. 4-1928
William J. Wilcox, a resident of Rochester for nearly 80 years and formerly engaged in the book and stationary business at 12 State street for many years, died unexpectedly yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Hennessey, 564 South Goodman street, aged 80 years. The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home of his daughter. Interment will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Mr. Wilcox was born in Napoli, Cattaraugus county, in 1843. He came to Rochester a few years later and at one time engaged in the steamboat agency business. He operated a boat into Irondequoit bay for many years.

He leaves three daughters, Mrs. W. H. Hennessey of this city, Mrs. Cuthbert Frost of Carthage and Mrs. Frederick G. Frost of New Rochelle and seven grandchildren.

GEO. N. CROSBY, FUR CO. HEAD, DIES, AGED 83

T.U. —
Began Tanning Business at Antwerp Which Failed—Started Life Anew in Middle Life and Founded Prosperous Concern.

Oct. 22-1928
George N. Crosby, president of the Crosby Frisian Fur Company, died this morning at the Clifton Springs Sanatorium in the 83 year of his age. He was married in 1883 to Miss Pauline Houston, of Manchester, N. H., who survives him. Mr. Crosby was in his usual health up to about a month ago, and his final illness was of short duration. He lived at 23 Lake View park.

George N. Crosby was born at Great Bend, N. Y., soon after his parents had come across from their earlier home in Vermont. After a few prosperous years, his father died, his mother lived only a short time longer, and young Crosby not yet 10 years of age, went to work on a neighboring farm. As soon as he was able to shift for himself he started afoot in search of work. Soon he went for the first time to the village of Antwerp, in Jefferson county, the largest town he had ever seen, stopped to put on the shoes which had been slung over his shoulder, and walked slowly through, resolving as he went, that to this beautiful village he would some day return to live.

Enlisting at the outbreak of the Civil War, after two years of service, he contracted a camp fever and he was left for dead by the roadside. Finally, however, he staggered on to his command, to be invalided out of service. A slow recovery was followed by several years as a journeyman tanner. When he began at Antwerp a tanning business destined to prosper for many years.

However, when Mr. Crosby was about 50 years of age, the unexpected failure of a large eastern bank, heavily interested in leather, forced into bankruptcy several of the great leather houses and they in turn carried down with them many of the comparatively small tanneries, including Mr. Crosby's Antwerp concern.

In middle life, then, Mr. Crosby found himself not only without resources, but with heavy debts which, though not legally binding upon him, he considered a moral obligation. Coming to Rochester he rented a house in Mt. Hope avenue for his business and began a long line of experiments in tanning horse and cattle hides with the hair on for manufacture into garments, rugs and robes. At first all the labor was done by Mr. Crosby while Mrs. Crosby conducted the business. Soon, however, he established the Crosby Frisian Fur Company and began to gather about him the department heads who stood by him until his death, and with their help saw the establishment become the largest of its kind in the United States.

Starting with heavy hides Mr. Crosby added various branches, including fine furs, leather and taxidermy. Those intimately associated with Mr. Crosby in building up his company were Alvin Metz, a director; Robert Shellard, secretary of the company; Miss Frances Streh, office manager, and George T. Duncan and Frank T. Adams, in charge respectively of the taxidermy and coat departments.

Within a short time after its establishment the Crosby Company moved out of the Mt. Hope avenue house, making the first of four subsequent changes to larger quarters. Soon Mr. Crosby paid off with eight per cent interest all the creditors of his Antwerp tannery. As an expression of their affection for Antwerp Mr. and Mrs. Crosby recently built and presented to that village a library; the building is of unusual charm, with reminder of its Flemish architecture that the original families of Antwerp, N. Y., were from European Antwerp and the parts of Flanders near by. In the planning of this library Mr. and Mrs. Crosby were aided by their life long friends Senator and Mrs. Willard F. Augsbury of Jefferson county.

Though Mr. Crosby was a broad general reader. He was a trained musician with keen appreciation and as a young man organized an orchestra still famous in the annals of the north country. Outside of his home and business, however, his greatest interest was perhaps in the study of advertising to which he gave much time, and his views on this subject commanded respect both in Rochester and elsewhere.

Mr. Crosby was an attendant at the Unitarian Church, a member of the G. A. R. of Genesee Valley Falls Lodge, F. and A. M., 507, of the Chamber of Commerce, of the Oak Hill Country Club and of the Rochester Ad Club.

Richard Cotchefer, Former Groceryman, Dies At His Home

T.U. Oct. 29-1928
The funeral of Richard Cotchefer, 83, who died Saturday at his home, 32 Tremont street, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home. Interment will be in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Cotchefer conducted a grocery store for many years in Plymouth avenue near Adams street. He was born in England and came to this country in a sailing vessel when a boy. A short time later he moved to Rochester and had lived here since.

He was well-known among the older residents of this city, being a personal friend of the late Cornelius Crittenden, Dr. A. P. Little and "Deacon" Sage. In the early days Mr. Cotchefer and these men formed a hunt club and often went on hunting trips together.

Mr. Cotchefer leaves his widow and two sons, Charles F. and Herbert R. Cotchefer.

VETERAN TEACHER OF CITY SUCCUMBS TO BRIEF ILLNESS

D.T.C.
Miss Ella M. Geraghty Dies
After 45 Years' Service in Schools Here.

Oct. 9th 1923
Miss Ella M. Geraghty, for forty-five years a teacher in the Rochester public school, died at her home, No. 209 Westminster road, early Sunday morning after a brief illness. Miss Geraghty was at school Friday morning, attended the meeting of the Rochester Teachers' Association Friday afternoon and was at her church Saturday night, apparently in the best of health. She had not missed a day from school on account of illness in at least two years, so that her passing came as a shock to her associates at Andrews School, No. 9, where she was a 6A grade teacher, and to her sister, Miss Margaret Geraghty, with whom she lived.

Miss Geraghty had spent all of her life from her sixth year, with the exception of about five years, in Andrews School, No. 9. She began as a pupil in the primary department, passed through the grades and then went to the old Free Academy from which she was graduated. She took the teacher-training course offered by the city then and in September, 1878, was appointed a teacher in School No. 23. In October, 1879, she was transferred to School No. 9, and there she spent the rest of her life—forty-four years in all. She had seen the community around this old school change from almost entirely Irish, to Jewish, and was now seeing another transformation—a change from Jewish to Polish and people from the Balkan countries. W. H. Bosworth was principal when she began to teach at School No. 9, and she later served under L. R. Sexton, George H. Walden, Ezra M. Sparlin and a number of others.

Until Washington Junior High School was opened Miss Geraghty was an 8A grade teacher and could have joined the staff of the school, but she preferred to stay in No. 9, where she had spent so many years. With the opening of the junior high the seventh and eighth grades in Andrews were abolished, and she was given a 6A class.

Her many years at Andrews School had developed in her a great sympathy with the foreign-born child or the child of foreign-born parentage, who came into the school. This work often brought out all the resourcefulness of her resourceful nature, with the result that she attained a high standing as a teacher.

A committee from the school will attend the funeral services to-morrow morning in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, and the school will observe a silent moment during the time of the last rites.

DEATH ENDS LONG SERVICE FOR THE STATE

T. U. Oct. 29
Mortimer Smith Was for 28
Years in State Engineer's Office—Past Officers of Elks Arranging Public Funeral.

Mortimer S. Smith, prominent Elk and past exalted ruler of Rochester Lodge, is dead and with his passing hundreds of members of the antlered herd who knew him as "Mort" Smith will mourn, for he was one of the most popular members and past officers of the organization. An ailment of long duration ended in death yesterday morning at 8:35 o'clock at the family home, 8 Algonquin terrace. Besides his wife, Rose M., he leaves one son, Mortimer, jr.; one daughter, Helen E. Smith; a sister, Mrs. Chester P. Greene of West Rush, and two brothers, Charles A. and Alexander George Smith of Rochester.

Mortimer Smith was born in Rochester on May 29, 1872, a son of the late John R. Smith, who was a pioneer miller of this city, and was educated in the public and in private schools. After leaving school he studied engineering under George W. Rafter and had spent all but four years of his life in Rochester. While absent from the city he was resident engineer for the D. L. & W. Railroad in Scranton, Pa.

Upon his return to Rochester he became identified with the state engineer's office and had been associated with that branch of the state government for 28 years, serving as assistant engineer. For several years prior to and up to the time of his death he was connected with the New York State Highway Commission, division 7, as assistant engineer in charge of road work in the counties of Monroe and Livingston. He was a member of the Rochester Engineering Society.

The body will be removed from the family home on Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock and conveyed to the Elks Temple at 113 Clinton avenue north where it will lie in state until 2 o'clock that afternoon, when the funeral services will be held. The Rev. Albert W. Beaven, pastor of Lake Avenue Baptist Church, will officiate and the past exalted rulers of the lodge will conduct the Elks' funeral service. Past exalted rulers will act as honorary bearers and the present officers of the lodge as active bearers. The funeral at the Elks Temple will be a public funeral and attendance at it will not be restricted to Elks. Burial will be in Riverside. The past exalted rulers of the lodge will meet tonight to complete arrangements for the service.

Funeral services for Mortimer S. Smith, past exalted ruler of Rochester Lodge, 24, B. P. O. Elks, were conducted at the Elks Temple at 2 o'clock this afternoon, past exalted rulers of the lodge participating in the services which were conducted by the Rev. Albert W. Beaven, pastor of Lake Avenue Baptist Church.

The funeral was largely attended by members of the lodge as well as by friends including a delegation representing the New York State Highway Commission and employees of the state engineer's office, Mr. Smith having been identified with these two departments of the state government for more than 30 years.

The body of Mr. Smith was removed to the Elks' temple from the family home at 8 Algonquin terrace at 11 o'clock this morning and during the three hours the body lay in state in the Elks' auditorium it was viewed by hundreds of members of the lodge and state employees and friends of Mr. Smith. The tolling of the 11 strokes during the ceremony was of added significance to the Elks because of the fact that the chimes were installed in the lodge room during the time Mr. Smith was exalted ruler of the lodge.

Past exalted rulers acted as honorary bearers and present officers of the lodge as active bearers. Norman Nairn, esquire of the lodge, presided at the organ during the ceremonies. The honorary bearers were:

Past Exalted Rulers Harry R. Darling, Dr. Richard J. Decker, D. Curtis Gano, Samuel Ray, Bert H. Bates, T. Edward Freckleton, James F. McMahon, James S. Bryan, D. Lee Miller.

The active bearers were Exalted Ruler Charles W. Miller, Secretary Frank A. Flora, Treasurer George S. Bartold, Lecturing Knight Lewis Hall, Leading Knight John T. McGuire and Trustee George E. Savage. There were many beautiful floral tributes, including a number of set pieces. Burial was in Riverside cemetery.

VETERAN MAKER OF EDGED TOOLS TAKEN BY DEATH

D. & C.
Amos Peck Mack, President of Mack & Company, Dies

Not. 7 - 1923
After Long Illness.
BUSINESS FOUNDED 1832

Was Surviving Partner of One of Oldest Firms in Rochester.

Amos Peck Mack, president of Mack & Company, makers of edged tools, No. 100 Brown's race, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at his home, No. 10 Granger place, after an illness extending over two years.

Mr. Peck had just passed his sixty-sixth birthday, having been born in Oswego on October 22, 1857. He came to this city with his parents in 1864 and had lived here ever since. He was educated in the public schools and at the old Satterlee Institute, where he prepared for college.

Business Long Established.

In 1865, Mr. Mack's father, William W. Mack, formed a partnership with D. R. Barton for the manufacture of edged tools under the firm name of D. R. Barton & Company. Mr. Barton had established the business in 1832, so that at present it is one of the oldest, if not the oldest manufacturing concern in continuous business in the city.

In 1874, William M. Mack and his brother, Royal L. Mack, bought out D. R. Barton and continued the business under the name of Mack & Company, the name it retains to-day. W. R. Mack and his brother, Amos P. Mack, were taken into partnership about 1879, and continued the business under the same title. The partners, R. L. Mack, W. W. Mack and W. R. Mack, died in this order, until Amos P. Mack was the only survivor.

It is interesting in these days of many changes in the industrial world to find that there now are more than a dozen men on the payroll of Mack & Company, who have been with the concern for many years, most of them for a period of forty-five years and more. Between Mr. Mack and these men there was the closest relationship, approaching more that of brothers than of employer and employees. He was strongly attached to them and they were to him, indicating the character of the man and his methods inside of his own business.

Life-long Church Member.

Mr. Mack early in life became identified with the Baptist Church and for many years was a member of the Second Baptist Church. He had no other outside affiliations except his membership in the Genesee Valley Club.

On May 27, 1885, Mr. Mack married Miss Alice Munroe Smith, of this city, who, with a son and daughter, survives him. Their children are Warren T. Mack, of this city, and Ernestine, now Mrs. John Vrabeck, of New York.

Arrangements were being made last night for funeral services to-morrow with Rev. Clinton Wunder officiating and for burial in Weedsport on Friday.

Death Removes Familiar
— His Fairness With Drivers Was Outstanding, Friends Declare.

By the death of Fred A. Upton of 460 Lake avenue veteran followers of the horse race meetings of Western and Central New York have been made sorrowful. Mr. Upton, who died Wednesday evening at the age of 62, entered the horse training and breeding profession when but a lad on a farm in South Greece.

In the years that followed Fred Upton's name became a familiar word to everyone in this section of the state who was interested in the turf game. Before he became the best known starting judge in this section he was a successful driver.

It was in his work as starting judge at the Syracuse Fair that Mr. Upton reached the great popularity which he maintained until his death. His fairness with the drivers, his ability as a judge and his ever present good humor made him one of the most highly thought of men in the Grand Circuit, his friends declare.

For more than 20 years Mr. Upton officiated at the Syracuse Fair meetings. On the Erie Circuit he was as familiar a figure as in the Western New York Circuit.

At the time that Mr. Upton began his work as starting judge he was managing the Charles S. Upton Boulevard Breeding Stables in the Hanford Landing road, on the property now occupied by the Eastman Kodak Company.

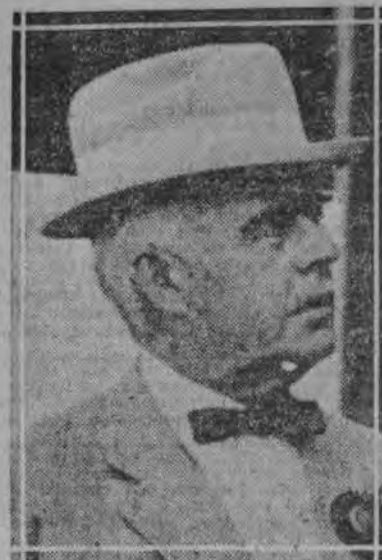

Mr. Upton leaves his wife, Margaret Upton; one sister, Mrs. Sarah Wilder, and one brother, Frank S. Upton.

SHOCK FATAL TO JOHN ARTH, Herald POLICE COURT INVESTIGATOR

Nov. 17-1923

John Arth, Police Court Investigator, died in the Highland Hospital at 9 o'clock last night as a result of a stroke of apoplexy suffered Thursday afternoon. He was found lying in his office by Fred O. Viehmann, clerk of the court, who at first thought him asleep. Mr. Arth was unconscious, when found by Viehmann, and never regained consciousness.

John Albert Arth was born in Rochester 59 years ago. He received his early education in the parochial schools of the city and for many years had lived with his sister, Miss Julia Arth and a nephew, Louis Humberbusch, at 404 Alphonse Street.

a true humanitarian. His "vest pocket fund" relieved distress in hundreds of cases. He never gave "charity." He never advertised his generosity. But he "loaned" money and time without stint to his "friends" whom he found needy and in want.

Thursday afternoon, when the ambulance surgeon bent over him, Police Captain McDonald whispered, "They'll never get a man to take John Arth's place."

His Friends Legion.

Because John Arth lived "on the square," he made friends among those whom he was instrumental in having sentenced to prison. They trusted him, confided in him and rarely abused the confidence he gave them. His office was at times, a confessional, where he gave advice to those in trouble. Or, again, he met an angry man or woman there and sent them away smiling at his shrewd humor. Once his word was passed, it was

John Arth filled a position almost unique in court history. Magistrates, who sat upon the City Court bench, learned to trust his judgment and depended upon his card indexed records almost in the face of their own convictions. The intimate circumstances connected with every case called for trial were always at his finger tips. His memory seemed to be indexed as carefully as his written records.

He had more sincere friends, who will realize the loss that the city has sustained in his death than, perhaps, any man in Rochester.

John Arth was "square." He was as good as another's bond.

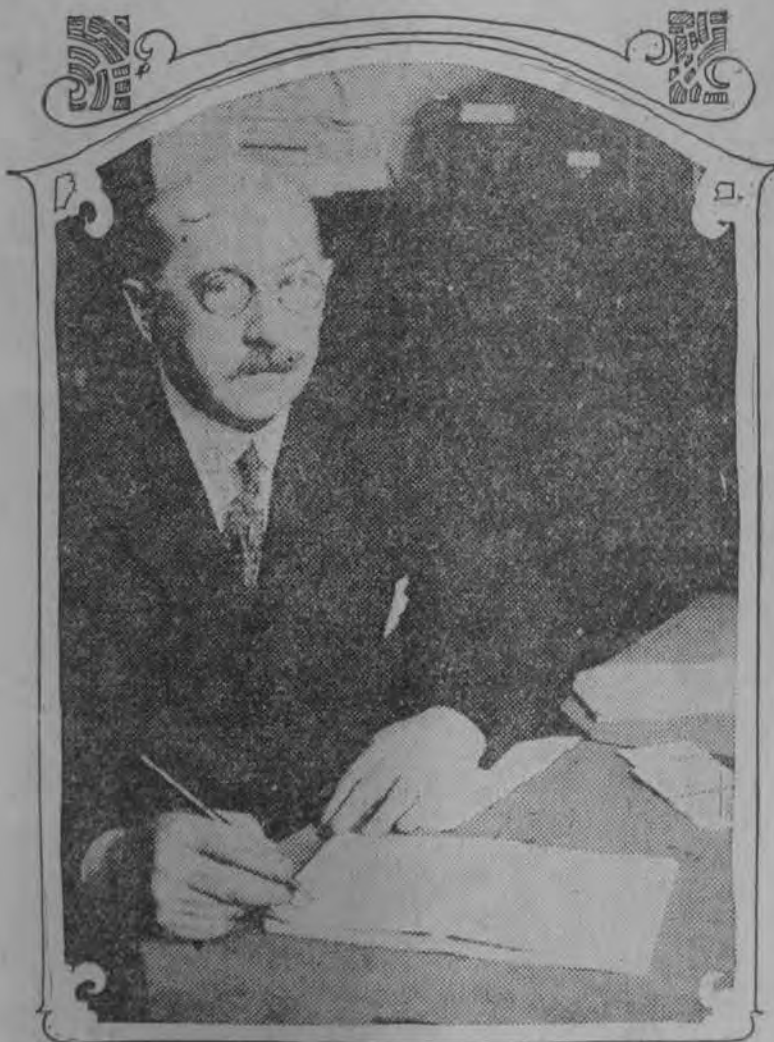

John Arth's success, his real success, was not in the cases when he appeared in court with a criminal record and a request to the magistrate to "send up" an unfortunate. He counted his successes in those times when he was able to satisfy a complainant without recourse to law and to the courts. He was more interested in justice than in law; more faithful to humanity than to statutes.

Before Police Judge Chadsey appointed John Arth as deputy police court clerk, he ran a tobacco store in Clinton Avenue North, near Central Avenue. He was the friend of the whole neighborhood. People sought him out to tell him their troubles. His hand was always in his pocket to give a coin to a man who was "out of luck."

There came to him one day a yegg, a safe blower, who knew John Arth. "Listen, John," said the man. "Don't pile so many cigar boxes in your window."

"Why?" asked the cigar store man. "Because the copper on the beat can't see your safe at night. I wouldn't touch your safe, John. You know that. And I wouldn't let any of my gang touch your safe. But leave your window clear. Because some mob that didn't know you might blow into town and pull off a job on you."

Appointed in 1906.
Mr. Arth was appointed deputy police court clerk by Judge John H. Chadsey in 1906. He was later re-appointed by Judge Willis K. Gillette. It was not until Andrew Wiedenmann was elected Sheriff in 1917 that Mr. Arth was named to succeed him as investigator for the court.

JOHN A. ARTH, police court investigator, as he appeared at his desk in Police Headquarters.

He was a member of St. Bridget's Church, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and several political organizations. Active in Republican politics for many years, he was a close friend of the late George W. Aldridge.

Farewell, farewell old friend of years;
Your parting dims my eyes with tears.

Court Adjourned 1923
For Funeral Of
I. U. Investigator Arth
Nov 20

A short session was held in City Court today because of the funeral of John Arth, investigator. A cloud of sadness hovered over the courtroom and the session was snapped through with half interest, all thoughts being turned to the laying away of the best friend of all connected with the court.

Judge Raymond E. Westbury was on the bench. Judge Kohlmeis was pallbearer at the funeral. The morning docket was called and all the cases were adjourned in which pleas of not guilty were made.

JOHN A. ARTH, INVESTIGATOR, PASSES AWAY

Times-Union City Court Official Who Was Friend of Unfortunate, Succumbs to Stroke Suffered While at His Work Tuesday

Nov. 17, 1923
A cloud of gloom hung over City Court today. There was a mournful atmosphere throughout the courtroom and on the lips of all were expressions of sorrow upon learning of the death of John A. Arth, investigator. Mr. Arth died last night at the Highland Hospital. He suffered a stroke of apoplexy on Thursday afternoon while at work in his office at police headquarters.

Mr. Arth bore the undisputed reputation of having more friends than any one person in Rochester. His death came as a shock to the vast number. The news of his death spread throughout the city and telephones rang in the newspaper offices and the hospital all night long verifying the report.

A high official stated today: "Rochester suffers a loss that will be keenly felt. John has done more for the community than we can realize. What he has done will never be known."

One who feels the loss of Mr. Arth very keenly is Judge William C. Kohlmetz. He said today:

"No one can sense my feeling. I feel his death as deeply as though he were a member of my own family. John had the finest character and disposition of any man I ever knew. John was born to the position he filled. Through his broad-minded judgment many cases were settled out of court. Many a family owes its happiness to John Arth who perhaps saved it from going on the rocks."

He was a friend of all connected with City Court and the police department. All officers on their way in the courtroom stopped in "Johnny" Arth's office for a chat. It was the police reporters' hang-out because he knew a story when he saw one. He sensed a "human interest story" because of his keen understanding of the men and women who by chance or circumstance were brought into police court.

Mr. Arth was "daddy" of the "Vest Pocket Fund." This fund was not a charitable institution. Mr. Arth once said to a Times-Union man:

"I do not do charity work. I loan and forget all about it."

That fits Mr. Arth's spirit. He gave many a "down-and-out" a five-spot as a "loan." Whatever he did he never told anything about it. Nobody ever knew how much he "loaned" or when he "loaned" it.

Mr. Arth talked to every prisoner brought into court. He had the wonderful faculty of gaining a man's confidence and this confidence was kept. Even after many went to prison they wrote to John Arth as a friend and advisor.

Mr. Arth was born 60 years ago in the Fifth ward. He was educated in the parochial schools. He lived with his sister, Julia Arth, at 494 Alphonse street.

About 20 years ago he was appointed deputy city court clerk by Judge John M. Chadsey. Mr. Arth served during the remainder of his term and through the term of Judge Willis K. Gillette, who succeeded him. When Judge Kohlmetz came into office Andrew Weidenmann was elected sheriff and the judge appointed Mr. Arth investigator.

The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock from the residence. A solemn high requiem mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock at Holy Redeemer Church, Hudson and Chitford avenues.

JOHN ARTH IS LAID AT REST; TEARS TRIBUTE

T.U. Nov. 20
City Officials Rub Elbows With City's Unfortunates at Grave of Man Beloved by Thousands—Good He Did Will Never Be Known

Tears of humble folk were the greatest tribute paid to John Arth, City Court investigator, friend of men and women in all walks of life, this morning when he was laid at rest in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery following services at the home, at Holy Redeemer Church and at the cemetery. Mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt, County Clerk James L. Hotchkiss, Superintendent of the Penitentiary William Craig, Chief of Police Joseph M. Quigley, former Police Inspector William Stein, Eugene J. Dwyer, former Detective John Doyle, newspapermen and scores of men and women who were befriended by Mr. Arth in some manner were at the church.

Typical of the esteem in which John was held by all was an incident noticed by only a few at the cemetery. A small man, dressed in old clothes which had seen better days long ago, shyly stepped up to the crowd. Respectfully he took off his cap. Looking at the bank of flowers, perhaps, wishing he could have afforded to show his friendship for John by sending some, he quickly turned aside. Craning his neck at the empty space in which the casket had been lowered, he shook his head. Tears began to roll down his cheeks. He wiped them with his sleeve.

Whatever John did for the little old man is a secret that John took along with him to the grave with many other secrets of the unfortunate. The wealth of good John Arth did in Rochester never will be known.

The bearers were Judge Kohlmetz, a very close friend; Andrew Weidenmann, Fred Viehman, William H. Bourne, George Stormont and John R. Bourne.

Solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated at the church in charge of the Rev. William Stauder.

T.U. Editorial John Arth. Nov. 17, 1923

Through the death of John Arth, police court investigator, the city loses a most useful public servant and many of its residents a valued friend.

If a man's personal standing in a community can be measured by the number of persons who regard him with esteem and affection, then John Arth ranked high among the citizens of Rochester.

As investigator Mr. Arth made it a point to interview nearly every prisoner brought to police headquarters. He had no connection with the police and did not necessarily take the police point of view of cases. Because of his magnetic personality, he usually received the confidence of the man or woman arrested.

Judges, faced with the difficult task of upholding the law and at the same time avoiding so far as possible imposing penalties that would react upon innocent persons, relied greatly upon the good sense and good heart of John Arth. His suggestions were usually followed.

John Arth is dead, but he leaves a memory of kindness and true manhood in the hearts of thousands.

MORTIMER SMITH, HIGHWAY ENGINEER, DIES AT HOME HERE

D.C. Oct. 1923

Mortimer S. Smith, assistant division engineer of the New York State Highway Commission and past exalted ruler of the Rochester Lodge of Elks, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 8 Algonquin terrace, aged 51 years, after an illness of about three weeks. Mr. Smith had been associated with the state engineer's office for twenty-eight years.

He was born in this city on May 29, 1872, and was a son of John R. Smith, pioneer miller of Rochester. He received his early education in the public and private schools and studied engineering under George W. Rafter, of this city. All but four years of his life, during which he was stationed in Scranton, Pa., as resident engineer of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, was spent in this city. At the time of his death he was with the New York State Highway Commission in this city as assistant engineer in charge of road work in Livingston and Monroe counties.

Mr. Smith was a prominent member of the Rochester Lodge of Elks of which he was an exalted ruler several years ago. He also was a member of the Rochester Engineering Society.

The body will remain at the home until 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning when it will be removed to the auditorium of the Elks Club where it will lie in state until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Public funeral services will take place at that hour. Rev. Albert W. Beaven, D. D., will officiate and the past exalted rulers of the lodge will conduct the Elks' service for the dead. Past exalted rulers also will act as honorary bearers and the present officers of the lodge will be the active bearers. Burial will be made in Riverside cemetery.

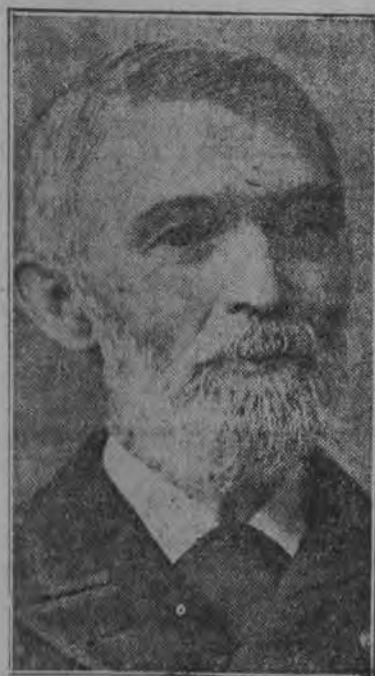

He leaves his wife, Rose M. Smith; a daughter, Helen Smith; a son, Mortimer Smith, Jr.; a sister, Mrs. Charles P. Green, of Rush, and two brothers, Charles A. Smith and Alexander George Smith, both of this city.

JAMES SCOTT, CIVIL WAR VETERAN, DIES, AGED 94 YEARS; WAS OLDEST SURVIVING MEMBER OF O'RORKE GRAND ARMY POST

Herald Nov. 19-1923

James Scott, past commander of O'Rorke Post 1, G. A. R., and oldest member of the post, died Saturday, aged 94 years. Mr. Scott was also the only surviving member of Scott's Band, the organization which played at General Sheridan's headquarters during the winter of 1864-65.

Mr. Scott was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, March 7, 1829, and came to this country in 1836 and in 1839 to Rochester, where he lived for most of the rest of his life. A plane maker by trade, Mr. Scott served his three years' apprenticeship in the shop of the late D. R. Barton. Mr. Scott worked at his trade, long after he was 80 years of age, in the same shop where he learned it.

JAMES SCOTT.

In a newspaper interview several years ago, Mr. Scott said, "I can recall standing on the steps of the old Court House and looking out into the woods, which were a little way distant, and I believe I am one of the few who attended, as early as 1840, No. 14 School. At that time the schoolhouse, a one-story wooden structure, stood at Scio Street and Summit Street, now Main Street East. When I was a boy, I played in the woods, later cleared for the campus of the University of Rochester."

Four of the Scott boys served in the Army, and two in the Navy, during the Civil War. James Scott enlisted in the Thirteenth Regiment and 25th New York Volunteer Cavalry. He was detailed to the band and served in that capacity with his brother, the late Alexander Scott. Mr. Scott was mustered out at Clouds Mills, Va., May 31, 1865.

Mr. Scott leaves one son, James H. Scott; one sister, Mrs. J. D. Tomlin, and four grandchildren, the Misses Helen and Laura Scott and Charles and Arthur Scott, all of Rochester. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from 32 Chestnut Street. Burial will be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

PIONEER RESIDENT OF VICINITY DIES

D. & C.

Death Comes to Mrs. Lemley
Day after 88th Birthday.

Nov. 19-1923

MRS. JANE LEMLEY

Pioneer history and still older legends of Indian haunts in Livingston county were well remembered by Mrs. Jane Lemley, who died unexpectedly Saturday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph H. Stutson, No. 77 Woodlawn street. On the day previous she celebrated her eighty-eighth birthday.

Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Lemley lived in Livingston county. Her father James Button, a pioneer, was a bridge contractor on the old Genesee Valley canal. While she was very young her family left her birthplace near Nunda, and moved to Caylerville, where her girlhood was spent. She played about the spring which Mary Jameson, "white woman of the Genesee" described in her book. Mrs. Lemley, then Martha Jane Button, was friendly with the Indians of the section. Her father built the first house in Caylerville.

Miss Button was married in 1853 to J. Perry Lemley, then of Caylerville. Later they went to Mount Morris. After leaving there, eight or nine years later, they came to Rochester. In this city they celebrated their golden wedding. Four years afterward Mr. Lemley died, aged 82 years.

All Mrs. Lemley's children remembered her with visits and gifts on her eighty-eighth birthday, the day before she died. Her mind was keen as ever. She had been always cheerful, fond of humor and read much.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Stutson.

Mrs. Lemley leaves a son, Cuyler W. Lemley; four daughters, Mrs. John J. Heidhart, Mrs. Katherine Hess, Mrs. Joseph H. Stutson and Mrs. Stewart J. Papp, and four grandchildren.

MRS. JANE LYNN DIES, AGED 93; LIFE OF SERVICE

T. U. Nov. 15 - 1973
Born in Ireland, She Came Here With Widowed Mother as Young Girl—Married in 1852—Lived for Time in E. Bloomfield.

Mrs. Jane Lynn died this morning at her home, 14 Lamberton park, aged 93 years.

She was born at Banmore, County
Kerry, Ireland, July 29, 1831, daughter of Thomas Groves and Margaret Buckley. As a young girl she came to Rochester with her widowed mother, and lived at Dean and John streets until her marriage to Maurice Lynn, November 1, 1852. Immediately after the marriage they left for Michigan, where they made their first home, but remained only a short time and returned to this state, settling at East Bloomfield, Ontario County, later removing to this county, where, in the town of Mendon, the family were brought up and where her husband died in 1892.

Most of her active life was passed upon a farm, but Rochester has always been her city, and she has seen it grow from about 35,000 inhabitants to its present size. She brought up 10 children, five sons and five daughters, to maturity. Seven survive her: Mrs. John Grimm, Miss Emma M. Lynn, John D. Lynn, William F. Lynn and Edward B. Lynn, all of this city; Thomas M. Lynn, of Gates and Martin M. Lynn of Riga.
Also she is survived by 21 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

She had an old-fashioned notion that as soon as children were old enough to learn to talk, they were old enough to learn to spell and read the words they were using. All of her children and many of her grandchildren, at her knee, learned to read long before they were old enough to enter school. That they should have every opportunity for school training, was the settled purpose of her life, and in carrying it out she considered no work hard and no deprivation a sacrifice.

She never had what would be called an illness. Ten days ago she was knitting socks for the approaching winter and finally, as one tired out, went to bed. She was confined to her bed but six days, and without a pain of body or mind, dozed away into the future.

The funeral will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the home and 2:30 at Immaculate Conception Church. Interment will be at Hon-eyoke Falls.

Daily Death Roll WIFE OF NOTED VETERAN DIES AT WASHINGTON

of Lieut.-Col. William Wallace Gilbert, U. S. A., died this morning at the home of her son, Prentiss B. Gilbert, 1740 Riggs Place, Washington,
D. C.

Mrs. Gilbert had been a lifelong resident of Rochester, living until only a week ago at 20 Arnold park.
She has been ill for many months but was sufficiently strong last week to move with Col. Gilbert to the home of her son, who is Chief of the Division of Political and Economic Information in the Department of State.

Col. Gilbert, who has also been in ill health due to injuries received several weeks ago in an automobile accident, is a veteran of the World War, the Philippine Insurrection, the Spanish-American War and the Civil War. He is a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Before her marriage to Col. Gilbert, Mrs. Gilbert was Miss Mary Elizabeth Chapman.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed, but it is known that interment will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

G. A. R. HAS CHARGE OF SERVICE FOR COMRADE

D. & C. Nov. 27 - 1973
The funeral service for James Scott, one of the oldest veterans of the Civil war, who died Sunday at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Bath, took place Tuesday afternoon from No. 32 Chestnut street with burial in Mount Hope cemetery. The service was in charge of the O'Rourke Post, G. A. R., of which Mr.
Scott was a past commander. Rev. G. B.
F. Hallock, assistant minister of the Brick Presbyterian Church, officiated at the grave.

Previous to the service, J. W. Johnston, representing the Johnston Memorial Pipe Band, which went to Bath to serenade the aged soldier on his ninety-second birthday, placed a wreath on the casket.

tendant of transportation, who was
Mr. Seabry's division superintendent for a great many years, said this morning that too much good could not be said of Mr. Seabry.

Mr. Amesbury, "and could be dependent upon all the time. If he was not on the job, he was home. He always took his job seriously and was out in all kinds of weather to see that things were going right."

He was a member of the Rochester Council, Knights of Columbus; Holy Name Society of Holy Rosary Church, Rochester Railway Employees' Association and the Independent Order of Redmen.

He leaves his wife, Laura Flaherty
Seabry; a brother, John Seabry, and a

THRONGS FROM ALL WALKS OF LIFE PAY JOHN ARTH TRIBUTE

D. + C.
Officials and Many Aided by City Court Investigator

Mingle at Funeral.

Nov. 20 - 1923

Officials of city and county, mingled with hundreds of men and women who had received aid and counsel from John A. Arth during his career as City Court investigator, paid tribute to his memory yesterday morning at Holy Redeemer Church, which was packed to the doors as Rev. William Standler, rector of the church, chanted the mass of requiem.

Among those who attended the funeral were Mayor C. D. Van Zandt, Chief of Police Joseph M. Quigley, County Clerk James L. Hotchkiss, Superintendent of the Penitentiary, William H. Craig, former Police Inspector, William Stein, Commissioner of Public Safety, Harry J. Barcham, Eugene J. Dwyer, City Comptroller Joseph C. Wilson, and scores of other city and county officers. Official representatives of the police department were Captain James McD. Ellis and four uniformed officers from the Joseph avenue station, while many other police officers and patrolmen attended in civilian clothes.

No more sincere mourners were there, perhaps, than those who had been aided by John Arth after some twist of fortune had brought them into City Court. The unofficial record of City Court, the vast part of it still and forever unwritten, could tell of thousands of unfortunate persons who had been aided by the kindly advice of the investigator, and of others to whom his "vest pocket fund" had brought more substantial aid. How many of these persons attended the services it would be impossible to say, but it is certain that scores, perhaps hundreds, were there who at some time had received substantial proof of his kindly and unflinching philanthropy.

City Court was suspended in tribute to the investigator, all adjourned cases being continued for later hearing and all original cases adjourned in which a plea of not guilty was entered. Judge William C. Kohlmetz was one of the hearers. Others were Andrew Wiedenmann, former sheriff and predecessor of Mr. Arth as investigator; Frederick Viehman, William H. Bourne, George Sturmont and John R. Bourne.

John Arth is dead, and there is mourning deep and sincere in scores of hearts. For John Arth had come to occupy a unique place in Rochester life and had made his contacts with strange phases of the city's social existence. He had been the deus ex machina in a hundred pitiful little tragedies of estranged hearts; he had been the fairy godfather to a host of those upon whom the hand of misfortune had been laid too heavily.

In some way, John Arth had come to stand for humanity in Rochester. In his work, where the sordid side of life is sternly dealt with, he found opportunity for doing good. Not to every man is given the same wisdom, the same discretion and the same universal sympathy that was the gift of John Arth. He knew human nature and loved his fellow men. By a jovial word sometimes, by a bit of advice, by a piece of shrewd philosophy, by a gentle pointing toward a new way, he erased difficulties and established reconciliations. With a great charity that distributed its beneficences with rare wisdom, he smoothed a hundred tortuous ways.

There are too few John Arths in our public places, too few men who have the great gift of knowing all men as their brothers. John Arth possessed that gift, and in his passing from the stage of Rochester life there departs one who leaves behind him scores to mourn, not as casual acquaintances and friends, but as men and women who had been taught the fraternalism of life and who recognize that with such men as John Arth there is a relationship that reckons nought of ties of blood or race or name, but that encompasses in its universality all humanity, both great and small.

Inevitably, in saying a last farewell to John Arth, there comes to mind that beatific promise: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." 1923

MRS. MARY E. GILBERT DIES IN WASHINGTON

D. + C. Nov. 20
Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Gilbert, wife of Lieutenant-Colonel William Gilbert, United States Army, and a life-long resident of Rochester until a week ago, died yesterday morning at the home of her son, Prentiss R. Gilbert, No. 1740 Riggs place, Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Gilbert had been ill for many months but was sufficiently strong last week to move with Lieutenant-Colonel Gilbert to the home of her son, who is chief of the Division of Political and Economic Information in the Department of State. She was residing at No. 20 Arnold park, this city.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gilbert, who has also been in ill health due to injuries received several weeks ago in an automobile accident, is a veteran of the World war, the Philippine insurrection, the Spanish-American war and the Civil war. He is a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Before her marriage to Lieutenant-Colonel Gilbert, Mrs. Gilbert was Miss Mary Elizabeth Chapman.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed but it is known that burial will be made in Mount Hope cemetery. 1923 this city for more than 30 years and was active in the founding of the Hahnemann, now the Highland Hospital.

He was an honorary member of the staff of the Highland Hospital at the time of his death, having been an active member for many years. He was born in Brooklyn on June 8, 1852 and was a graduate of the Chicago Medical School. Coming to Rochester as a young man he soon became one of the prominent physicians of the city.

He leaves his wife, Margaret MacCallum Hermance; two brothers, Harry Hermance, of this city, and Dr. S. George Hermance, of Clarkson, and a sister, Mrs. William Murrell.

T. U. Daily Death Roll Mrs. Hannah B. Leach Dies At Home Of Her Daughter, Mrs. Hotchkiss Nov. 30 - 1923

Mrs. Hannah Bowers Leach, mother of Mrs. James L. Hotchkiss and proprietor of the Rochester Dyeing and Cleaning Works, died yesterday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss, 750 East avenue, where she resided. Mrs. Leach's son, J. William Leach, died in Rochester a month ago. Besides her daughter, Mrs. Hotchkiss, Mrs. Leach leaves two grandchildren, Jeanne Leach Hotchkiss and Leah Mae Leach of Buffalo.

Mrs. Leach was born in Manchester, England, and came to Rochester with her husband in 1880. Her husband, William Leach, died in 1901, and Mrs. Leach took charge of the dyeing and cleaning company which he founded. The business originally was in Andrews street, but in recent years has been at 20 Clinton avenue south. Mrs. Leach combined a sociable and kindly nature with a business ability of high degree and won a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. Leach was a member of Brick Presbyterian Church and of Ruth Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. The funeral service will take place from the home of her daughter at 750 East avenue at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Rev. G. B. F. Hallock of Brick Church will officiate.

Daily Death Roll T. U. Dec. 1 - 1923 Mrs. Herman L. Fairchild.

Mrs. Alice Egbert Fairchild, wife of Herman Le Roy Fairchild, emeritus of the University of Rochester, died yesterday at her home, 106 Winteroth street, aged 75 years, after a prolonged illness. Mrs. Fairchild came to Rochester 25 years ago with her husband.

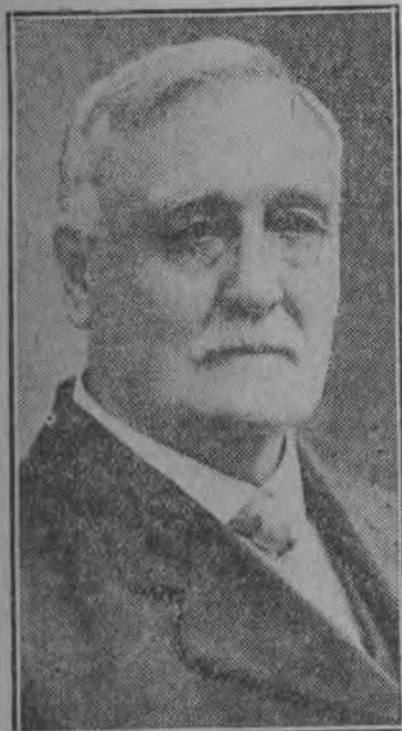

Besides her husband she leaves a son, Le Roy F. Fairchild of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. Charles T. Lewis of Caney, Kansas, and Jessie Fairchild of this city; and one brother, James H. Egbert of Nampa, Idaho. The funeral service will take place Monday afternoon at Mount Hope Chapel with the Rev. Ralph S. Cushman, D. D., officiating.

Thomas Dransfield, Oldest Living U. of R. Alumnus, Dies, Aged 87 Years.
Nov. 28 - 1923
LAST RITES TO-MORROW

Born in Rochester, He Was Active in Many Fields of Useful Endeavor.

THOMAS A. DRANSFIELD.

The funeral services for Thomas Dransfield, well known in this city for many years as a teacher, business man and public official, who died yesterday morning at his home, No. 15 Myrtle Hill park, aged 87 years, will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home with burial in Mount Hope cemetery. Mr. Dransfield, who had been seriously ill for several months, died as the result of a paralytic stroke suffered last July.

Rev. Sherman J. Divine and Rev. William H. Gallbreath, of Central Presbyterian Church where Mr. Dransfield had been a member since 1851, will officiate at the services. William A. Hubbard, Jr., will represent the elders of Central Church, and P. V. Caltenden will represent the trustees. The active bearers will be Charles F. Wray, Arthur B. McCall, Robert Tait, J. Stuart Page, George C. Haines and H. Guy Holt, all elders of the church.

Mr. Dransfield was an elder of Central Church where he had been active in many affairs. He at one time was superintendent of the Sunday-school and for several years was chairman of the New York State Sunday-school Association.

Mr. Dransfield was born in Rochester in 1836 in a house on the corner known as "Fiddlers' Green." This plot of land was at the junction of the old Erie and Genesee Valley canals. He attended No. 2 School, then a small brick structure in Ford street, and won one of the first scholarships offered by the University of Rochester. He was graduated from that institution in 1858 and up to his death was the oldest living alumnus.

Teacher, Official and Business Man.

During school and college days he helped to pay his way by carrying papers for the Rochester Democrat, now the Democrat and Chronicle. After graduation he taught at No. 9 School, later at No. 4 School. Following a career as a teacher for eight years, he gave up this work to enter into business and bought an interest in the retail store of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company in the Arcade, where he remained for twenty years. Later he purchased a controlling interest in the White Swan Soap Company. Then he retired from the soap business and devoted his entire time to his real estate interests, a large part of which were in the Fifteenth ward.

Mr. Dransfield was in politics when Abraham Lincoln was President. He is quoted as saying, "I was in politics when Abraham Lincoln was elected. My father was a politician and school commissioner."

Held City Posts.

It was while he read the newspapers he was carrying that he decided to be a member of the Republican party, although his father was a Democrat, he said. His first entry into politics was his election to the Board of Education. He continued in that post until he was made City Clerk of Rochester, serving from 1910 to 1916.

Presiding over the marriage license desk, Mr. Dransfield always greeted approaching couples with a warm smile, accompanied by his congratulations. On a few rare occasions, when the marriage ceremony took place in the bureau, he cheerfully hunted up a "parson" and took such an affable concern in aiding the bride and bridegroom that they have invariably departed invoking blessings upon his head. The need of more time for his business interests led him to resign this position.

The marriage of Mr. Dransfield to Miss Elizabeth Bell, second, took place in 1862, in a house that still stands in Spencer street. She was a teacher at No. 9 School until her marriage.

Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dransfield. They are Mrs. F. S. Jenkins of Pasadena, Calif.; Mrs. H. A. Tompkins, of this city; Mrs. H. A. Hamilton, school commissioner of Elmira; Mrs. A. C. Bell of Chicago; Mrs. C. D. Stone, of Brooklyn and Thomas Dransfield, Jr., of Boston. There also are thirteen grandchildren.

Daughter Is Noted Writer

His daughter, Mrs. Clarence D. Stone, better known as Jane Dransfield, writer, lecturer and dramatist, often visited her parents here. Mrs. Stone's career was followed closely by friends of the family as well as by those in the literary world. She was engaged last summer with the Steward-Walker Players, who produced several of her plays.

Mr. Dransfield took great pride in his Sunday school work. He was superintendent of the Allen street German Evangelical Church for twelve years and at the formation of Salem Evangelical Church he organized the Sunday school there and took charge for five years. On his return to the Bible school of Central Presbyterian Church he was made superintendent. He was a member of Class 42.

Mr. and Mrs. Dransfield had lived in their home in Myrtle Hill park for more than forty-five years.

MEMBER OF PIONEER FAMILY HERE DIES

D. & C. - Nov. 28
Mrs. H. C. Munn Was Daughter of First Elected Mayor.

1923
Mrs. Henry C. Munn, life-long resident of this city, died early yesterday morning at her home in Plymouth avenue. She formerly was Ednah Virginia Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah F. Smith, who early settled in Rochester and were numbered among its most respected and useful citizens.

Mr. Smith held many offices of public responsibility and in 1841 became the first mayor to be elected by the people. He was deeply interested in philanthropic work and was one of the first trustees of the Rochester General Hospital, at that time the City Hospital. One of the oldest of the important business houses in the city was the E. F. Smith Company, commission merchants, established in 1826, which later became the Smith-Perkins Company.

Mrs. Munn for a number of years attended private schools in Rochester and was graduated from the Emma Willard Academy in Troy. She supplemented her education by foreign travel.

While she for many years had led a retired life she maintained a constant interest in church and charitable work. Her connection with First Baptist Church, which began in childhood, remained uninterrupted until her death, and for more than fifty years she was a visitor and manager of the Rochester Female Charitable Society.

Of her children, her son, E. Smith Munn died in 1918 and her daughter, Miss Emily Lester Munn, is the only surviving member of her family.

VETERAN FACTORY EXECUTIVE IS DEAD

D. & C. - Nov. 28
J. I. Hammond Was 47 Years in Taylor Firm's Employ.

1923
John I. Hammond, an employee of the Taylor Instrument companies for more than forty-seven years, died yesterday afternoon at his home, No. 317 Frost avenue, aged 67 years, after a prolonged illness. Mr. Hammond was head of the department of thermometer engraving. While with the company he became a personal friend of the late J. Merton Taylor, its former president, and accompanied him on a trip to the western mining regions.

Mr. Hammond was born in England and came to this country with his parents when a boy. The family settled in Spencerport, later moving to Rochester. Mr. Hammond first became engaged in the drug business and later became associated with the Taylor Instrument Companies. He was a member of Jefferson Tent, K. O. M.

He leaves his wife, Mary Jane Wiggins Hammond; a daughter, Pauline G. Hammond, and two sons, I. William and Earl F. Hammond. The funeral will take place Friday morning at 8:30 o'clock from the home and at 9 o'clock at Immaculate Conception Church with burial in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

DEATH CLAIMS MAN WHO CAME HERE IN CITY'S EARLY DAYS

Herald Dec. 20

When John De Wolf, 91 years old, died Monday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John De Hollander, 175 Marion Street, one of the few men who have seen the city come up from a small place to a community of more than 300,000 persons, passed away.

Mr. De Wolf came to this country from Holland 66 years ago. East Avenue, now a famous throughfare, was a wilderness in those days and forests abounded on all sides of the community. He helped to build the first bridge across Irondequoit Creek at Atlantic Avenue.

With many others of Holland birth he settled in the Eastern part of the city and worked for ten years on the Blossom farm. With the instincts of frugality and perseverance which he brought with him from Holland, he saved a little money and bought a ten-acre farm in what is now the fashionable Browncroft and operated it as a truck garden for 28 years.

Although Mr. De Wolf attributed his longevity to his temperate manner of living, this does not seem to have extended to his working hours. When he first came to these parts he worked from 4:30 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock at night and sometimes later, for $9 a month.

Two years after coming to Rochester Mr. De Wolf married Johanna De Back, who died in 1897, leaving him nine children, eight of whom are living. They are:

Mrs. John Riemasma, Sioux City, Iowa; Mrs. John De Hollander, Mrs. Johanna Salter and Mrs. Carrie Keeler, all of Rochester; John De Wolf of Chili, Joseph De Wolf of Geneva, and Peter De Wolf of East Rochester, and 32 grandchildren.

Funeral services will take place at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home of his daughter, and at Brighton Reformed Church at 2:30 o'clock. Burial will be in Brighton Cemetery.

Jacob Bodine, Landscape Architect, Dies At His Home

T.U. Dec. 20, 1923

Jacob Bodine, landscape architect, died yesterday at his home, 802 Blossom road, aged 73 years. Mr. Bodine was an active worker until within two weeks of his death.

He was born in Holland and at the age of 21 years he came to this country. He made the voyage in a sailing vessel and spent 27 days in the journey. He settled in Wayne county, but moved to Brighton 33 years ago where he lived until his death. He had resided in the house where he died for 27 years.

He and his wife, Jeanette Cortaville Bodine, celebrated their 53d wedding anniversary last September.

Besides his wife he leaves seven daughters, Mrs. Ida Wolf, Mrs. C. Willink, Mrs. A. DeWitt, Mrs. A. Brandt, Mrs. J. Lash, Mrs. C. Wall and Mrs. J. Johnville, all of this city; three sons, John Bodine, of Syracuse; James Bodine of Marion, and Benjamin Bodine of Nunda; 28 grandchildren, and 12 great grandchildren. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at Brighton Reformed Church. Interment will be in Mount Hope Cemetery.

E. J. BECHTOLD LOSES LIFE IN BUFFALO FIRE

Herald
Former Rochesterian Suffocated As He Attempts To Save Papers.
Dec. 3 - 1923

Edward J. Bechtold, aged 43, who formerly lived at the old Bechtold family home at 340 Brown Street, was suffocated while attempting to save records and valuable papers from the office of W. A. Case & Son, plumbing manufacturers, at 31-33 Main Street, Buffalo. The fire that destroyed the factory, Saturday night and caused a loss of $200,000, took two lives; Bechtold's and that of another workman, Martin Guenther.

Bechtold, formerly connected with Samuel Sloan & Company of Rochester, was manager of the steam fitting department of the Case plant. Only six weeks ago he sold his Rochester home and moved with his family to Buffalo, where he purchased a house in Linden Avenue, near Parkside. His brother is Charles E. Bechtold of 649 Seneca Parkway, a prominent Rochester attorney.

Rescuers Driven Back.

The fire started late Saturday afternoon in bales of oakum in the factory store room. Dense smoke filled the stairways, and in spite of efforts of firemen, the blaze spread rapidly. About 8 o'clock, the firemen made a determined effort to rescue the former Rochester man, who was known to have gone into the building for some papers left in his office, but the rescuing party was driven back by the flames. It was nearly an hour later, when the body was found.

Attorney Bechtold returned to this city last night, with his brother's body. Besides his brothers, Charles, Harry J. and George Bechtold, all of Rochester, Mr. Bechtold left his wife, Mrs. Mabel MacVicar Bechtold and two children, David and Eleanor Bechtold.

The victim was a member of the Buffalo and Rochester Athletic clubs, and a former champion skater. He was a member of the Rochester Consistory and Damascus Temple. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the chapel of Mt. Hope Cemetery.

EDWARD J. BECHTOLD

Rev. A. H. Kinney, Retired, Dies At T. U. Age Of 79 Years

Dec. 13 - 1923

The Rev. Albert H. Kinney, prominent minister of the Erie Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, comprising the southern part of the state, died yesterday at his home, 158 Plymouth avenue south, aged 79 years. He retired from active church work about 18 years ago.

Mr. Kinney had lived in this city with relatives since he retired and was well known in Methodist and G. A. R. circles here. He was prominently identified with the organizing of the G. A. R. Veterans' Colony at St. Cloud, Florida, serving as post master. He also organized the Veterans' Association of St. Cloud, and served for several years as president.

He served in the Civil war for three years under General George H. Thomas and was with General Sherman on his march through Georgia. Mr. Kinney marched in the grand review at Washington at the close of the war.

Mr. Kinney was a graduate of Allegheny College at Meadville, Pa., where his father, also a prominent minister, served as trustee. He was active in church extension and evangelistic work for many years.

He leaves his wife, Flora A. Kinney; two daughters, Mrs. S. S. Squires and Miss Mabel B. Kinney, and a son, Robert H. Kinney, all of this city. The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at the home with burial in Mount Hope Cemetery.

OFFICER OF SPICE COMPANY IS DEAD

D. & C. Dec 9 -
Norman M. Van DeCarr, 62,
Succumbs After Illness.

NORMAN M. VAN DE CARR,
Newly Elected President of Optimist Club.

Norman M. Van DeCarr, secretary and treasurer of the Van DeCarr Spice Company and prominent church worker in the city, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 11 Amherst street.

He was born at Greenbush, N. Y., in 1861. He obtained his education in the Rochester public schools and Albany Academy and lived in this city from his early boyhood. He became associated with his father in the business which bears the family name and attained a prominent place in the business life of the city. He was married in 1894 to Mary C. Van DeCarr of Stockport, N. Y.

Mr. Van DeCarr was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and was active in Sunday-school work. For the last fifteen years, he was treasurer of the Sunday-school and in the absence of Harper Sibley during the war, he was acting superintendent. Mr. Van DeCarr never missed a session of the school unless ill and he was personally known, loved and respected by the teachers and pupils. He was a member of the Building Committee for the new church school building in Vick Park B now nearing completion.

He was a member of Yonondio Lodge, F. & A. M., and of the Optimists Club. He was president of the Optimists Club in 1917.

He leaves his wife and three children, Katherine Durne, Norman Arnold, and Richard De Loe; his father, Reuben De Loe Van DeCarr, and a sister, Bertha A. Van DeCarr.

The funeral will be to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence. Burial will be in Mount Hope cemetery.

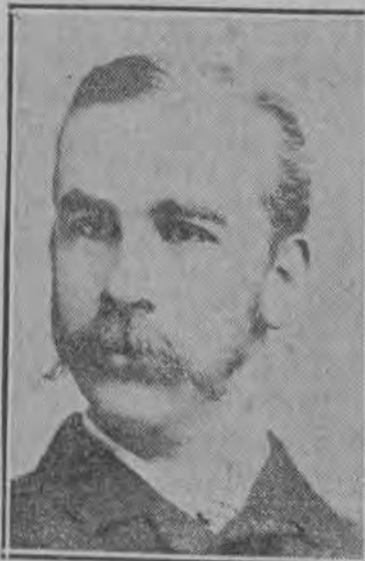

HOLD FUNERAL OF S. CORNING FROM OLD HOME

Connoisseur Who Died in New York Member of Old Family of Which Miss Anna Corning Is Only Remaining Member.

Funeral services were held this afternoon for Sherwood Corning, of New York, formerly of this city, from the Corning family home, 860 St. Paul street. The service at the house was read by the Rev. Dr. F. C. Doan, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, who also officiated at the interment made in the family lot at Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Corning was born in Webster on August 12, 1855, his parents being William Corning and Lucy G. Rich Corning. The family is descended from that of John Howland who came to America on the "Mayflower." William Corning was in the banking business in Penfield before coming to Rochester where he established a private banking house about the year 1860.

Sherwood Corning was educated in private schools and in the Collegiate Academy of this city. He developed a discriminating taste in many branches of art, and during many winters spent in Italy, where he maintained an apartment in Florence, he collected furniture, paintings, statuary, tapestries and other objects of art with which he created a veritable museum in the family home in St. Paul street and in his home in New York city and at Asbury Park where he has lived for the past 25 years.

Mr. Corning was a poet of no mean ability, but always refused to publish his works because he felt that they failed to reach the highest standard which he had set for himself. He also experimented with painting and he designed the monument and individual stones in the Corning lot at Mount Hope, the stones being finished in Italy from his designs. The face of the large figure of an angel bearing a palm which keeps guard over the lot is said to resemble that of Augusta Corning, one of Mr. Corning's sisters.

Mr. Corning never married and his constant companion in his travels was his sister, Miss Anna Corning, the only one of the six brothers and sisters now remaining. Until the World War it was the practice of Mr. Corning and his sister to spend each winter at their apartment in Florence. This apartment Mr. Corning retained throughout the war years, as it was the repository of many of his art treasures collected during his years of travel. Last year, receiving word that the apartment must be relinquished unless it was inhabited by the owner; this being a provision of the new rent laws adopted in Italy as the result of a shortage of housing facilities, Mr. Corning went abroad to make arrangements about the property, but was taken ill at Palermo. From this illness he never fully recovered and about three months ago his illness became acute and he entered a New York hospital where his death occurred three days ago.

The Corning home in St. Paul street has been left in the hands of caretakers for a number of years except for occasional visits paid it by Miss Anna Corning, but on her brother's death Miss Corning felt that she desired to have him buried from the house where he had spent his boyhood and to which he had brought many of the beautiful things that he had collected. The body was therefore brought to the house this morning and placed in the great salon which extends across the entire front of the house.

The Corning family has owned the St. Paul St. house, which is familiarly known in that section as "The Castle," since 1878, when William Corning bought the property from Isaac R. Elwood by whom the house was built. The house stands far back from the street behind a brick and iron fence. It is screened from the railroad line on the south by a hedge of trees and bushes but at the time Mr. Corning bought the place the railroad had not been put through and the ground to the north was a private park in which deer were kept.

Private funeral services will be held at the family home Monday, with interment at Mount Hope Cemetery Tuesday.

Daily Death Roll DEATH CLAIMS BUSINESS MAN KNOWN TO MANY

Nov. 26-1923
Bernard Feilock, 73, of 84 South Union street, former well-known liquor dealer of this city, died Saturday afternoon in Highland Hospital a short time after he had been taken there from Main street east and Gibbs street where he collapsed. He was not identified until some time after when his son-in-law, Bertram E. Wilson, general passenger agent of the New York State Railways, called at the hospital.

Mr. Feilock was one of the best known business men in Rochester. For 35 years he conducted a liquor store at 135 Main street east. With the passage of the 18th Amendment, Mr. Feilock closed out his business.

BERNARD FEILOCK

Mr. Feilock was born in Rochester and received his education in the public schools. As a young man he was employed by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Club, then a small concern. Later he embarked in business for himself.

Mr. Feilock leaves his wife, Mrs. Adeline Hager Feilock; a daughter, Mrs. Bertram E. Wilson, and a son, William Bernard Feilock.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID VETERAN NEWSPAPERMAN

T. U. Dec. 28
Homer H. Rowell, for 70 Years Active in Newspaper Work, Laid at Rest in Riverside Cemetery by Associates. 1923

Final tribute was paid yesterday afternoon by business men and newspaper men to Homer H. Rowell, veteran newspaper man, whose funeral was held from his late home, 485 Meigs street. Mr. Rowell, who died Sunday morning, had been in newspaper work for about 70 years, having completed his career as financial editor of the Democrat and Chronicle after 45 years. Services were conducted by the Rev. Samuel J. Clarkson, D. D., of Monroe avenue Methodist Church. He read from the scriptures and offered prayer. Toward the close, he read Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" and also, "The Land of Beginning Again", by Mrs. Booth Tarkington. Mrs. William B. Dingman sang "No Sorrow There", a selection for which she wrote both words and music, and a hymn "Some Day the Silver Cord Will Break". Interment was in Riverside Cemetery.

The following acted as honorary bearers: Herbert J. Winn, president of the Rochester Printing Company; Frederick S. Todd, general manager; Allan C. Ross, managing editor; Norman S. Esterbrook, associate editor; Harold W. Sanford, news editor; Gardner B. Ellis, financial editor; John H. Davis, superintendent; Frederick G. Beach, advertising manager; Nelson P. MacVicar, foreman of the composing room; Charles R. Park and Thomas Elliott, of the composing room; E. O. T. Thomas, foreman of the press room; James McNaught, foreman of the stereotype department, and David Myers, superintendent of the carriers.

Members of Valley Lodge, F. & A. M., conducted the burial service with the Masonic ritual at the grave. Dr. Clarkson pronouncing the benediction. The delegation from the lodge included Master Alexander Kramer, Master-elect Charles R. Poulton, Joseph A. Barr, John W. Merriam, Avery W. Tuttle, Myron L. Dox, Frank Thompson, The Rev. Bernard J. Tepas, Joseph Blum and Louis P. Teitenberg.

HOMER ROWELL, Dec. 26- VETERAN EDITOR, DIES AT HOME

Herald Dec. 28 1923
Homer H. Rowell, for many years financial editor of the Democrat and Chronicle, died at 12.30 o'clock yesterday morning at his home at 485 Meigs Street. He had been suffering from bronchitis for three weeks. Mr. Rowell, who was 86 years old, leaves his wife, who is in her 80th year, and a son, Albert W. Rowell.

Mr. Rowell's funeral will take place from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Burial will be made in Riverside Cemetery, in charge of Valley Lodge, 109, F. & A. M.

Mr. Rowell went to work in a newspaper office as an apprentice printer when he was 15 years old. He started to work on the Rochester American and when that paper consolidated with the Democrat and later the Chronicle he continued in its employ.

In the office of the Rochester American Mr. Rowell received a thorough training in all branches of the printing trade—job work, press work and typesetting. That he did not lose touch with the mechanical improvements is shown by the fact that at the time of his death he was able to operate a linotype machine, an invention which came into existence after he had transferred his activities to the editorial department. Mr. Rowell lost his parents when he was 15 years old, a loss which compelled him to leave school.

Mr. Rowell was born on July 26, 1837, in a house that stood opposite the site of the present Whitcomb House in Main Street East. The Ashbury Methodist Church stood where the East Side Savings Bank now is, and opposite, on part of the site now occupied by Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Company, stood a Baptist church.

During the Franco-Prussian War Mr. Rowell was called upon to perform two duties for the Democrat and Chronicle. He was engaged as marker and telegraph editors at that time and required eighteen hours' work a day to do the duty well. He was a member of Valley Lodge, F. & A. M., and a veteran of the Civil War. He saw fifteen months' service as a member of the First New York Light Artillery (Reynolds Battery).

loc. T. U. Jan. 12-1924 Funeral of Bertha Cogswell

Funeral services for Miss Bertha Cogswell, kindergarten teacher in Lake View School 7, were held this afternoon from the home, 256 Augustine street. Burial was in Mount Hope Cemetery. Miss Cogswell was one of the first kindergarten teachers in the system, beginning the work in 1885. She was one of the six young women who graduated from the first kindergarten training class at Mechanics Institute in 1887. She was assigned to the kindergarten at what now is Henry Lomb School 20, and four years later was assigned to a kindergarten which had been established at 39 Phelps avenue.

The services were conducted by Rev. Albert W. Beaven, D. D. Bearers were Ray K. Savage, principal of Jefferson Junior High School and former principal of Lake View School; A. G. Burdick, Herbert Lauskey, Conrad Mochlmann, C. Rowe and Samuel Patrick.

Hendrik Van Ingen, Noted Architect and Department Head at Mechanics, Dies

D. R. C. Dec. 7, 1923

Hendrik Van Ingen, for twenty-one years head of the architectural department of Mechanics Institute, died yesterday afternoon at his home, No. 74 Avondale park,—the home in which he had spent all of his married life. He was born in Poughkeepsie on January 22, 1871, the second son of Henry Van Ingen, director of the art school at Vassar College, and the first lecturer on the theory of art in this country. Hendrik Van Ingen was born in the old Vassar homestead in Poughkeepsie while his father was at the head of the art school at Vassar. Both his father and mother came from The Hague, Holland, his mother having been Josephine Koelman.

Hendrik Van Ingen was educated in private schools at Poughkeepsie and at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn. But much of his art education was received in his father's studio, and he practically thereby took the art course at Vassar, so that he was really a neagraduate of the art department of that great woman's school.

Designed Public Buildings.

He had no desire to become an artist, his bent being toward architecture. To get first-hand experience and knowledge of the problems involved in house construction, he went to Tampa, Fla., with an architect and laid brick and did other actual work of construction. Then he came back north and took the architectural course at Pratt Institute. At 21 he became a regular faculty member there, and he remained there about six years. He then went into the office of William J. Beardsley at Poughkeepsie as a designer and a renderer of water colors.

While in Mr. Beardsley's office, he made the original designs of a number of private and public buildings in Poughkeepsie, among them those for the Dutchess county court house. He first drew plans for a Dutch colonial which fitted in admirably with the atmosphere of the old Dutch town, but the commissioners would not appropriate sufficient money to carry them out. He then altered the design, and afterward the commissioners when it was too late, appropriated as much money as would have been required to construct the beautiful building he had originally intended.

In May, 1902, after Captain Henry Lamb and Eugene Colby had made several previous attempts to get him to come to Mechanics Institute, they had a conference with him in New York, and under an arrangement whereby he was to have plenty of time to practice his profession and teach at the institute, he consented to take up his work in Rochester. He became a member of the faculty at the institute in September, 1902, and at his death held the record for giving the greatest number of teaching hours, and for spending more hours at school than any other man connected with the institute.

Organized Art School.

When Mr. Van Ingen went to the institute there was no art school, and no day classes in architecture. He worked out the blueprints for the courses of study for a separate art school, and drew the preliminary designs and was the consulting architect for Bevier Memorial building, which was erected in 1903.

HENDRIK VAN INGEN.

Early in his career at the institute he initiated a series of lectures on house construction and the history of architecture that remained popular throughout the years. Girls were especially interested in them, and always formed the most appreciative and attentive part of his audiences.

Mr. Van Ingen was a registered architect and a member of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architecture. He did a great deal of residence work in Rochester and vicinity. During the war he won third prize in a nation-wide water-color contest, and in his younger days won in a competition with New York architects in providing the designs for the handsome wrought iron gates at the entrance to Vassar hospital in Poughkeepsie. In that contest were entered some of the most competent architects of the country.

He had a hobby for wood carving, and he often worked designs drawn and carved by himself into his plans. Sometimes it was a keystone, sometimes a lantern, but always it was something that gave individual touch.

Honored by Officers.

Both President John A. Randall of the institute and Clifford M. Uip, director of the School of Applied Art, said last night that Mr. Van Ingen had unusual facility and ability in pencil sketching and water color rendering, and they paid a tribute to his fine character, keen sense of humor and the humanness that always made him see the other fellow's point of view and made him willing, often at a great expense to himself, to help that other fellow along in his work. He was of kindly disposition, the life of any party, refined and highminded, absolutely in love with life and his work. In any gathering or assemblage he was a distinguished figure, for he was very tall, and his keen, intellectual face was an open index to his comradeship and his kind heart.

During his years at Pratt Institute, Mr. Van Ingen met the woman who was to become his wife, and in every sense to be a helpmate and inspiration. She was Ethel Mae Bell, a student at the institute and afterward an art teacher, first connected in a supervisory way with the State Department of Education, and afterward connected with one of the large educational concerns of New York as a special representative to demonstrate certain art materials with which she had been unusually successful in her school work. Later she became supervisor of the art work in the schools of South Omaha, Neb. While she was engaged in this work she married Mr. Van Ingen. They came to Rochester and shortly afterward took up their residence at No. 74 Avondale park.

Stricken with Paralysis.

Besides his wife, Mr. Van Ingen leaves a daughter, Wilhelmina, a student at Vassar; three brothers and a sister. One of the brothers is Gilbert Van Ingen, a geologist, now president of the Academy Board of United States Military Aeronautics at Princeton University; Philip Van Ingen, of Albany; and Daniel Van Ingen, of Chardon, Neb. The sister is Josephine Van Ingen, a student at the Art Students' League in New York.

Mr. Van Ingen was stricken with paralysis last August, after a number of days of very close attention to work in his office at Mechanics Institute. There never was much hope from the beginning that he would recover, so severe was the first shock.

Funeral services will be held at the Third Presbyterian Church, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Paul Moore Strayer, pastor and long-time friend,

WOMAN ONCE WELL KNOWN HERE DIES AT ITHACA HOME

Herald Jan. 21

Rochesterians of an older generation who knew Mrs. Elizabeth P. Baker formerly of Shelter Street, were pained to learn yesterday of her death Saturday afternoon in Ithaca, at the home of her son, John W. Baker. While a resident of this city she lived at the home of her son-in-law, Harry Tatlock, but following the death of Mrs. Tatlock, her daughter, she removed to Ithaca.

Mrs. Baker was a regular attendant in Rochester Cornhill Methodist Church. She was well known to most of the older members of that church and was active in many branches of congregational work. She would have been 87 years old had she lived until next April.

Besides her son, John W. Baker of Ithaca, she leaves two other sons, Frank S. Baker of Eldred, Pa., and George W. Baker of Worcester, Mass. She also leaves 22 grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will take place tomorrow afternoon at the Baker residence in Ithaca. Burial will be made in the Ithaca Cemetery. Rev. E. P. Hubbard, former pastor of Cornhill Methodist Church, a lifelong friend of the Baker family, will officiate.

LOUIS C. PIPER DIES AT HOME; ILL 4 MONTHS

T. U. Dec. 20

Was Prominent in Wholesale Coffee and Spice Business—Vice-President of Exempt Volunteer Firemen's Association.

Louis C. Piper, well known business man, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 26 Boardman street, aged 64 years. Mr. Piper was engaged in the wholesale coffee and spice business under the firm name of L. C. Piper and Son. His place of business is located at 73 Stone street. He was actively engaged in business until he became ill about four months ago.

Mr. Piper was born in Luxemburg, Germany. He came to this country at the age of eight years and moved to Rochester when a young man. He engaged in various occupations and after several years entered the coffee business, maintaining a coffee roasting house in Aqueduct street for many years. About 10 years ago he entered the ice business, but returned to his former vocation when his ice house in the Scottsville road was destroyed by fire twice in one year. This time he entered the coffee and spice business with his son, Glenwood R. Piper. The firm was established in Stone street, where it has remained for the last 10 years.

He was first vice-president of the Exempt Volunteer Firemen's Association having served with the Active Volunteer Hose about 30 years ago. He also was a life member of Rochester Consistory and Damascus Temple, and a member of Valley Lodge, F. and A. M.

Besides his son he leaves his wife, Clara Wright Piper; a daughter, Mrs. V. G. Turnbull of Toronto; a sister, Mrs. R. Prein; two brothers, Charles Piper of this city, and A. M. Piper of Toronto; two grandsons, and several nieces and nephews. Interment will be made Saturday afternoon in Mount Hope cemetery.

MRS. SEARS, ACTIVE IN MANY FIELDS OF ENDEAVOR, IS DEAD

D. & C. Jan. 7
Member of Old Family Here Was Gifted Playwright and Art Critic.

Jan. 8, 1924
Mrs. Georgiana Hicks, Sears died yesterday morning at her home, No. 1 Amherst street, after a long illness. The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock at Blessed Sacrament Church.

In both her ability and personality, Mrs. Sears had marked individuality. Owing to the fact that she had lived in a number of cities, she became a magnetic member of various circles.

Georgiana Cady Hicks was born in Warren, Pa. Her father was the late Colonel George W. Hicks, who was a native of Pittsford. Colonel Hicks's oil and promotion enterprises took him to various cities, the change of residence giving his family an opportunity to get into the social life of many places. His wife, before marriage, was Elizabeth Cady, who came from an old New England family, and was a woman of exceptional attainments.

At one time the family lived at the famous old Hyga Hotel in Old Point Comfort, where the daughter became a favorite figure in the social life at that resort.

After several years of living in many states, Colonel Hicks had a longing for his home town, and returned to Rochester. They lived at one time in North Goodman street.

Mrs. Sears inherited from both father and mother qualities which made her win friends without, apparently, the slightest effort. From her long association with her mother, she became a critic in art and literature. So highly was her opinion valued by producers of new plays that certain managements asked for her opinion when initial plays were put on at the leading Rochester and Buffalo theaters, where she formed many lasting friendships with theatrical people. Mrs. Sears had been asked by the Schubert Company to write a play for Nazimova. She was working on this, as well as other plays, when her health began to fail.

Mrs. Sears developed a love for athletic sports, becoming a horsewoman and an excellent shot with the rifle.

When Sir Oliver Lodge was coming into prominence for his psychic research, a colleague, Admiral Moore, of England, who visited America, became much interested in Mrs. Sears's attainments along those lines.

WOMAN LEADER OF SPIRITUALISTS IS CALLED BY DEATH

D. & C. Jan. 7
Mrs. T. U. Reynolds, Assistant Pastor Here, National Church Figure, Dies.

REV. TILLIE U. REYNOLDS.

Rev. Tillie U. Reynolds, assistant pastor of Plymouth Spiritualist Church and a nationally known figure in the world of Spiritualism, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her niece, Miss Harriet Brewster, No. 35 Hobart street.

Rev. Mrs. Reynolds was born at Troy about eighty years ago and for the past forty years she had been actively engaged in spiritualist work both as a medium and lecturer.

She had known John Slater, of Oakland, Calif., internationally known medium, since his boyhood and was one of the first persons to encourage him in his early work.

As a national missionary she had traveled all over this country. She had been a trustee of the New York State Assembly of Spiritualists for many years and began her work with the Plymouth Church six years ago.

Rev. Mrs. Reynolds had been confined to her home for several months. She had not been in good health since an illness last winter.

The body will lie in state at the Plymouth Church Saturday from 10 o'clock in the morning until the funeral at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. Will J. Erwood, pastor of the church, will conduct the service. Burial will be at Troy.

PNEUMONIA CLAIMS LOVE F. SEYMOUR, ARDENT CHURCH SUPPORTER; WELL KNOWN FOR NUMEROUS PHILANTHROPIC WORKS

Heard Dec. 10-1973
Miss Love F. Seymour of 27 Caledonia Avenue, long an ardent communicant of the Episcopal Church of this city and well known throughout Western New York as a philanthropist, died early yesterday morning

MISS LOVE F. SEYMOUR.

In Homeopathic Hospital. She was taken suddenly ill last Wednesday. Death was due to pneumonia.

Miss Seymour was the granddaughter ter of Eli and Margaret Green, among the earlier settlers of Marion, Wayne County. Although long a resident of this city, she never forgot the home of her grandparents and frequently made gifts to that village. Among her most recent gifts was that of the impressive Masonic Temple structure, with furnishings complete. In 1916 she purchased the Marion Christian Church, of which her grandparents had been members, and presented it to Marion Lodge, of which her grandfather had belonged. The dedication took place November 21, 1916, with Justice S. Nelson Sawyer officiating as Acting Grand Master.

She was also the donor of the beautiful soldiers' monument, erected in memory of her grandparents; the Helen D. Green Memorial Chapel, dedicated in 1915 and many other gifts.

Gifts to Rochester.

In Rochester she led a quiet life but was always active in church work. She was a communicant of The Church of the Epiphany in Jefferson Avenue. She gave two memorial stained glass windows to this church, and purchased the pews. To St. George's Episcopal Church of Charlotte she gave a number of memorials, among them being the choir stall, the eucharistic candelabra for the altar, and a complete vestment for the choir.

There were no racial bars in her life and her loss will long be mourned by the congregation of Zion Church in Favor Street, the members of which had long looked upon her as a friend.

She was a near relative of Hetty Green, who at the time of her death, was considered one of, if not the richest, woman in the world.

The funeral service will be conducted from the chapel of Ingmire & Thompson at 127 Chestnut Street Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Burial will be made at Marion.

Pays Tribute to Miss Loveridge.

D.C. Nov. 13
To the Editor of the Democrat and Chronicle:

Sir: In the death of Miss Jessie F. Loveridge, on the morning of November 11th, Rochester lost a rare and truly beautiful character. Although possessed of a dignity which impressed one and armed always with a degree of reserve; Miss Loveridge was really so quiet and unassuming that the breadth of her interests and strength of her character were scarcely known to many who had met her casually.

She was possessed of an aspiring mind and had read widely. One was impressed with her eagerness to know and her persevering endeavor to broaden her knowledge and to add to her store of information. Her love of literature, art and nature led her to use the resources of Rochester for the deepening of her appreciations and the broadening of her horizon. She was one of that increasing group of citizens of Rochester who are deeply grateful for the service rendered, to our city by broad-minded philanthropy in making available resources in education, art and music. She was, moreover, a lover of nature, and gratified her interest in flowers and birds by frequent visits to the parks, especially to Highland Park.

Instead of keeping aloof from the newer elements of the city in which she had grown to womanhood, Miss Loveridge sought to know her city. She had a broad and sympathetic understanding of the racial groups which make up our city and especially of the "new Americans." She sought in a variety of ways, through civic organizations, her church and Young Women's Christian Association, to make her good will effective. She was an understanding older sister to a great many girls and young women whose privileges in life had been less than her own.

Miss Loveridge was a woman of deep religious faith, and yet, at the same time, she welcomed fresh interpretations of religious truth and sought in her own thinking to get behind the forms and conventions of religion to that which lies behind. She was disciplined by her own struggles and experiences, so that life seemed to her of deeply serious moment. And she sought to bring the fruitage of her own matured life to the uses of those who needed her.

When those who knew her best think of her, they reckon that she was of that fine type of American womanhood of whom the best communities are always proud, the sort of womanhood which makes the high traditions of our best community life worthy of perpetuation because it sees their inner meaning and interprets them afresh. Miss Loveridge took a just pride in Rochester, though she was not blind to the faults which need correction and she strove to do her part toward building a city where the common lot should be a happy and worthy one. And such a life as hers will live on in the love and deeper insight, the appreciation and effort of those whom she served.

Herald Dec. 16 1923

Rev. Dr. William Channing Gannett, eminent author and clergyman and pastor emeritus of First Unitarian Church, died last night at his home at 15 Sibley Place. Rev. Dr. Gannett suffered a partial stroke in October, 1922, and November 21 of this year was operated on for appendicitis.

It was believed he was recovering from the operation until early last night, when his condition suddenly became worse.

Rev. Dr. Gannett leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary Thorn Lewis Gannett; one

He was graduated from Harvard University with the Class of 1860. After taking time off to go to the South to work among the Negroes during the Civil War, he returned to the North to find his father in failing health and ordered by his physician to go abroad. The young man accompanied his parent on the trip and on returning to America entered the Divinity School at Harvard. On completing his course there in 1868, he went to Milwaukee for his first charge.

Not desiring to remain in the Middle West with his father in poor health in the East, Rev. Dr. Gannett gave up his Milwaukee parish and took charge of a small church in Rev. Dr. Gannett's interest in the negroes survived to the last. During the last year he was active in the controversy over the admission of negroes to the freshman dormitories at Harvard. There is a school in the South, named after the preacher.

Unusual interest was also shown in boy's work in the city by Rev. Dr. Gannett. He founded the Boys' Evening Home, representing the first settlement work in Rochester. That institution continued its work for 25 years. Among its early graduates was Meyer Jacobstein, now Congressman from this city.

The pastor was one of the equal suffrage pioneers. Among the members of his congregation were Susan B. Anthony and her sister, Mary S. Anthony. The minister was an intimate friend of the Anthony sisters and aided the famous suffragist in much of her work.

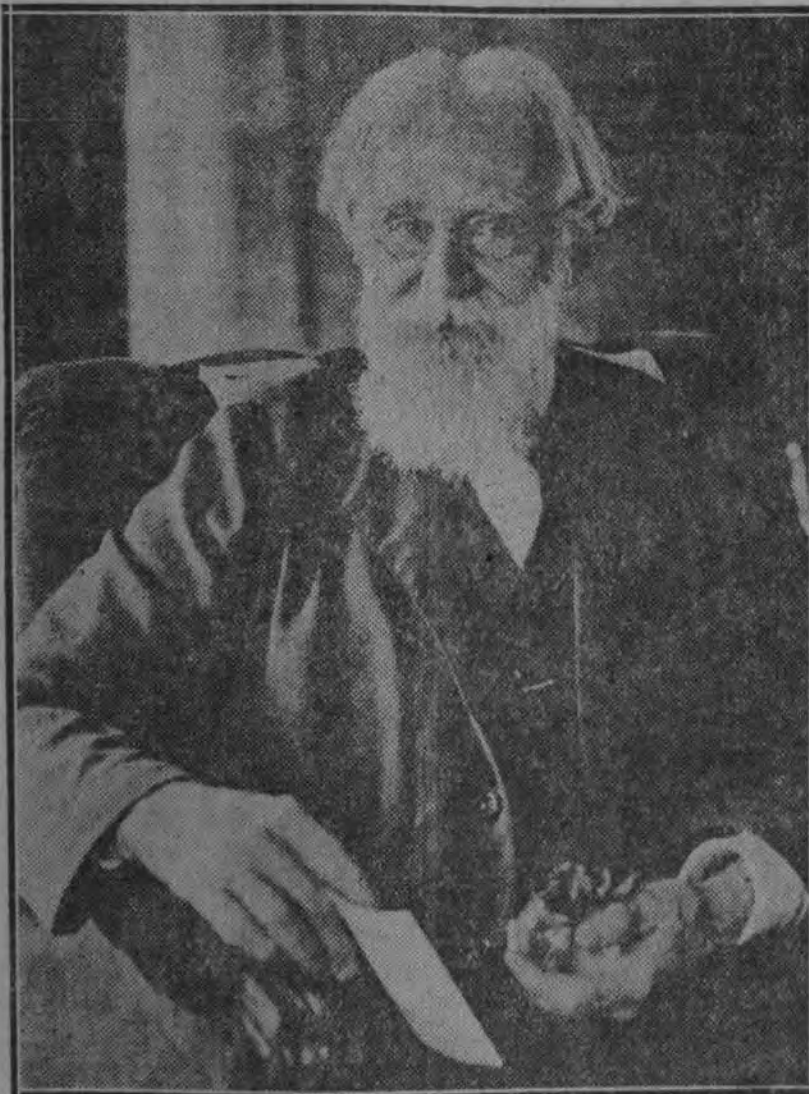

Becoming pastor emeritus of the church in 1907, his interest did not cease in the congregation and he attended many church functions and gatherings. On the occasion of his 81st birthday, the church Sunday school made him the center of a unique celebration.

Degree Awarded.

In 1898 the minister was given the doctor of divinity degree by Harvard University. He was the author of many books of poems and published a volume of verses with Rev. Frederick Homer of Boston. One of his best known works is "Blessed Be Drudgery," published in English and translated into Italian, Swedish, German, French and Japanese. The volume has had an exceptionally wide circulation and won great praise from churchmen in all parts of the world.

This was originally written as a sermon and was published with three other sermons by Rev. Dr. Gannett and four by another clergyman, Rev. Dr. Gannett was also the author of another booklet entitled, "The Year of Miracles," and has written a number of pamphlets and lessons for Bible school work.

The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from First Unitarian Church. Arrangements for the service had not been completed at an early hour this morning.

REV. DR. WILLIAM CHANNING GANNETT.

daughter, Mrs. Charlotte G. MacDowell and one son, Lewis Stiles Gannett.

Was Born in Boston.

The clergyman was born in Boston March 13, 1840, the son of Rev. Ezra Stiles Gannett, a prominent Unitarian clergyman of his time and the successor of Rev. William Ellery Channing as pastor of the old Federal, now Arlington Street, Church in Boston. Rev. Dr. Gannett is the descendant of a line of six New England clergymen.

Lexington, Mass. After his father's death, he spent three years in writing and then took a parish in St. Paul, Minn. He also served as pastor in Hinsdale, Ill., before coming to First Church in Rochester in 1882.

This was the year of the Johnston flood. Among the first duties of the new pastor was the asking of contributions for the sufferers in that disaster. Many members of the congregation when Rev. Dr. Gannett took charge, still belong to the church.

T. U. Marcellus E. Hazen Jan 14 1924

Marcellus E. Hazen, Civil War veteran, and one of the few survivors of Company B, 49th New York Volunteers, of Palmyra, died yesterday morning at his home, 128 Linden street, aged 80 years. He suffered a stroke about a week ago, which resulted in his death. Born in Palmyra in 1843, Mr. Hazen enlisted in that town on August 28, 1862, at the age of 18 years, and served for three years with the Army of the Potomac. He was wounded in the Battle of the Wilderness. Upon receiving an honorable discharge in June, 1865, he made his home in Fairport. He came to this city 28 years ago and had resided here since. He was a charter member of Myron Adams Post, G. A. R. Funeral services will take place tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home. The Rev. Clinton Wunder will officiate. Interment will be made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Fairport.

He leaves his wife, Mary Lee Hazen; a son, Byron Hazen, and two grandchildren, Howard and Virginia Hazen.

Strong Tribute Is Paid To Dr. Gannett's Memory; Funeral Held Tomorrow

T. U. Dec. 17-1928

REV. WILLIAM CHANNING GANNETT, D. D.

Funeral services for the Rev. William Channing Gannett, D. D., minister emeritus of First Unitarian Church, who died Saturday evening at his home at 15 Sibley place, will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in First Unitarian Church.

The Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers, D. D., minister of First Unitarian Church at Cambridge, Mass., a close friend of Dr. Gannett, and the Rev. Frank C. Doan, Ph. D., present minister of the Rochester church, will officiate. The Rev. Dr. Richard Boynton of Buffalo and Dr. Max Landsberg, rabbi emeritus of Temple Beth Kodesh, may also have a part in the services, following which the body will lie in state for a short time.

Ushers at the church will be: J. Vincent Alexander, George F. Slocum, Nelson E. Spencer, Isaac Adler, and George Herbert Smith. Burial will be in Buck Hill Falls, Pa.

Dr. Gannett suffered stroke of paralysis more than a year ago and his life was at that time despaired of. His strong constitution brought him through this illness, however, and he had so far recovered this fall that he was able to walk for short distances near his home. About two weeks ago he again became ill and underwent an operation for appendicitis from which he was unable to rally, his life drifting slowly away until the end came.

Dr. Gannett was born in Boston March 13, 1840, his parents being the Rev. Ezra Stiles Gannett and Anna Tilden Gannett. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Harvard in 1860 and in 1863 after several years' work with the freedmen on the Sea Islands off the Carolina coast was graduated from the Harvard Divinity School. He received the degree of doctor of divinity from Harvard in 1908.

On Nov. 3, 1887, Dr. Gannett married Miss Mary Thorn Lewis of Philadelphia. The beauty of the home life of the Gannetts has been an inspiration to all who knew them and throughout Dr. Gannett's ministry Mrs. Gannett has been always at his side, assisting him in his church work and collaborating with him in several of his writings.

Dr. Gannett entered the Unitarian ministry in 1868 and held pastorates at Milwaukee, East Lexington, Mass.;

St. Paul and Hinsdale, Ill., before coming to the First Unitarian Church in this city in 1889. He served the First Church as active pastor until 1908, since which date he has been pastor emeritus, preserving an active interest in the affairs of the congregation and taking part in the special services of the congregation and taking part in the special services until prevented by his last severe illness.

Shut off from much of the social life in which he naturally would have taken part, but for his increasing deafness which first began to trouble him about the time he came to Rochester, Dr. Gannett devoted much of his time to study and writing.

In 1875 he completed a biography of his father, Ezra Stiles Gannett, one of the notable figures in the New England ministry of the early part of the last century. Among his other writings were "The Childhood of Jesus," "A Year of Miracle," "The Faith That Makes Faithful," (with Jenkin Lloyd Jones), "Of Making One's Self Beautiful," "A Wicket Gate to the Bible," "The Little Child at the Breakfast Table," (with Mary T. L. Gannett), "The Hate That Heals," and a number of essays. One of his essays, "Blessed Be Drudgery," has gone through a large number of editions and has been translated into French, German, Swedish, Italian and Japanese. With Frederick L. Hosmer he edited "The Thought of God in Hymns and Poems."

"Dr. Gannett," said one of his parishioners who has been a member of First Unitarian Church for as many years as Dr. Gannett has been pastor, "was not alone pastor of First Church, he was minister to the entire city. He was never content that his church should hold a provincial view of its duty and he, himself, until his last illness, was always ready to counsel with anyone who sought his advice in the solving of personal problems."

"Dr. Gannett believed in freedom and liberty in religion and was one of the foremost leaders in the contest for freedom in this matter, and through his writings, he was known far beyond Rochester and he had many opportunities to go to other larger cities. In Rochester he organized a number of activities which reached far beyond the boundaries of the church itself. Among these was the Emerson Class which was formed to study writing of Emerson and other authors; and the Boys' Evening Home, which was probably the first organization to make an attempt to furnish healthful influences and recreation for the newsboys and other youths of the city. The work of this organization was later taken up by the Y. M. C. A. and the Boy Scout organization and the Boy's Evening Home was disbanded, but there are many successful Rochesterians, today, who look upon its influence and their association with Dr. Gannett as the most valuable things in their lives."

Dr. Gannett was a familiar figure in the life of the city. Many who did not know him personally will recall the white-haired man who, long after his 70th birthday, rode about the city on a bicycle accompanied by his faithful red setter, "Thetia."

Susan B. Anthony was one of his parishioners, but long before they came to Rochester, he and Mrs. Gannett were known among the pioneer advocates of woman suffrage. Dr. Gannett, who grew up in abolitionist circles in Boston and was one of the first to undertake the education of the freed slaves was also a friend of Rochester's greatest colored man, Frederick Douglass. Dr. Gannett never ceased to urge the cause of justice and equal rights for the colored race. Even in the sickness which weakened his last years, he found strength to pen a protest to the president of Harvard University when that official barred a colored student from the college dormitory.

In his later years Dr. Gannett might have posed as a type of beautiful old age, but to the last he retained a spirit of youth and a delightful humor which betrayed itself in his twinkling eyes and gentle, whimsical smile. Younger persons who sought his advice found in him a quick comprehension of their problems and a ripe wisdom, born of experience and tempered with kindness; and went away filled with the vision of what life might be when lived with sincerity and in the true spirit of service.

Always cheerful and uncomplaining under the burden of his loss of hearing, Dr. Gannett nevertheless found in this affliction the great trial of his life. Only his closest relatives and friends realized how great a deprivation it was to him that he could not hear and join in the rapid interchange of conversation at public gatherings. Less and less often in his later years he accepted invitations to such gatherings and confined his social life to the home where his friends could gather close about him.

Dr. Gannett leaves his wife, his daughter, Mrs. E. Carlton MacDowell of Cold Water Harbor, L. I.; his son, Lewis Stiles Gannett of New York City, and two grandchildren, Michael Ross Gannett and Ruth Stiles Gannett.

Dr. Crothers served the Unitarian Church in St. Paul, Minn., a few years after Dr. Gannett went from there to Hinsdale, Ill.

Tribute was paid to Dr. Gannett at services at First Unitarian Church yesterday, when Dr. Doan gave a eulogy and the congregation bowed in silent tribute.

Dr. Landsberg early became associated with Dr. Gannett through the Boys' Evening Home established at First Unitarian Church, and he said yesterday that the loss was like that of a brother. A resolution of sorrow was drawn up on behalf of the congregation of Temple Beth Kodesh by Dr. S. J. Appelbaum, president of the congregation, and Rabbi Horace J. Wolf.

Strong tribute was also paid to Dr. Gannett by President Rush Rhees of the University of Rochester and the Rev. Paul Moore Strayer, D. D., pastor of Third Presbyterian Church.

Representative Meyer Jacobstein left Washington last night to attend the funeral of Dr. Gannett. He paid the following tribute:

"Mrs. Jacobstein and I treasure Dr. Gannett's twenty-five years of friendship as the most precious of gifts. He has been a constant source of inspiration in our lives.

"He was a poet with a rare genius for sensing the beautiful in the common things of life. He had an unusual gift for getting hold of spiritual values and his ability to translate these values for each individual made him a truly great preacher.

"In the establishment of the Boys' Evening Home for newsboys twenty-five years ago, Dr. Gannett did something that is remembered with deep gratitude by his former boys, now grown men, scattered in all walks of life throughout the country. It was my good luck to have been one of these boys."

T. U. William Channing Gannett.

Some men are remembered when they have gone on by what they gave to the better thought of the race; others, by what they gave to the active life of their time, in institutions and instruments of social progress. The greatest men are remembered as contributors to both streams of progress.

It was in this higher group that a biographer would place William Channing Gannett, whose funeral was held this morning in the First Unitarian Church, which he served as minister for many years.

Those who knew Dr. Gannett intimately were made profoundly aware of a life of rare beauty and gentleness, although of great strength and power: firm in its devotion to the high moralities, always sure of itself, but sweetened with a rich and never-failing sense of humor. To the larger community he stood not only as a man whose inner life was thus sensed and felt, but as a leader in the social work of the city, a pioneer in fields which are now cultivated by many to whom he helped show the way.

In the Boys' Evening Home, carried on in the parish and community house afterward named for him, Dr. Gannett helped to establish the first systematic work among boys in Rochester. Many of these boys, who were led to higher levels of cultural and spiritual life than they could otherwise have reached, are now active in carrying on the best work of their communities in all parts of this country. Their passing on of Dr. Gannett's work and his spirit in their widely scattered communities, are his greatest memorials. And the work among boys was only one aspect of his many-sided interest in social service.

Dr. Gannett was known to the country at large as a preacher of great power and eloquence, a poet and a prophet. His writings are a part of the inspirational literature of his time, and his hymns are of the spiritual heritage of the English-speaking peoples.

A descendant of New England families known and honored for several generations, Dr. Gannett yet became, in his earlier ministry, a storm center of philosophical discussion in his church, by reason of the freshness and vigor of his point of view and the strength and fearlessness with which he expressed it. It was a part of the greatness of his character that he could so vigorously stand for things then deemed by many to be dangerously radical, supporting his position with great strength and ability, and yet express in his personal life a charity and gentleness that made devoted personal friends even of those who fought against him. No greater proof of such strength of purpose, coupled with rare gentleness of spirit, could be offered than that in the West he was known as "the radical saint."

Dr. Gannett has affected his time for a good that is of the essence of immortality. No life that ever touched his failed of inspiration to higher purpose. He has left this community richer for what he gave it.

Dec. 18-1923

Funeral Of Dr. Gannett Attended By Sorrowing Friends Of Late Pastor

First Unitarian Church Filled With Citizens—Tribute Paid to Deceased Clergyman by the Reverend Dr.

Samuel McChord Crothers of Cambridge, Mass. Dec. 18-1975

The loving reverence which is held by the citizens of Rochester for the Rev. William Channing Gannett, D. D., for so many years pastor of the First Unitarian Church, was feelingly shown by those who attended his funeral this morning. When the services began at 10 o'clock, the pews of the church were filled. Not only were members of his parish in attendance, but there were present many persons of other faiths, denoting his far-reaching influence and the deep regard for his religious teachings held by all who knew him.

It was a service of marked simplicity, entirely in accord with the sincere personality and simplicity of manner of the man. The casket, banked with lilies and carnations, rested at the foot of the pulpit.

"It Singeth Low In Every Heart," was the opening of the service. This hymn, by Dr. Chadwick, an old friend of Dr. Gannett's, was one of the latter's favorite hymns. A poem, "All's Well," was then read by Margaret Louise Smith.

The great influence for good which Dr. Gannett exerted upon those with whom he came in contact was told by the Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers, D. D., minister of the First Unitarian Church of Cambridge, Mass., who for many years had been a close friend of Dr. Gannett.

"Thirty-five years ago I first was made to feel the tremendous influence of Dr. Gannett, when I succeeded him at the Unitarian Church in St. Paul," said Dr. Crothers, "and it became my one desire to be worthy of the heritage of the one who had served before me."

"It still was and is today Dr. Gannett's church. The deep love and reverence for this man was not held alone by the older members of his parish, but by their children. These children had learned to love and revere one who had helped their parents."

"To me this handing down through time, from parent to child, the memory of a man, is the greatest of tributes. It is a wonderful thing that after 35 years a man is still a living power in the community in which he served. As he is a living power there, so is he a living power here today."

"I know no other who more fully fulfilled the mission of making people feel that the divine life can make itself felt through a human life. For me he has made the word 'piety' live again. No other word so expressed his life. His was natural piety, there was no self-consciousness."

"I do not want to speak of him in the past, he is of the present and future. He lives. His is not a lost radiance, but a living radiance. His speech could not be misunderstood, and, though he often differed in opinion with others, he was always gracious. He carried on the religion of the spirit."

"I never knew a man so unspotted by the world. He believed that love is stronger than hate. He has ever striven for the undefiled reward."

"There is no sadness in this farewell; no prostration. His life as he saw it was not alone, but a part of the universe. We have seen a life of graciousness, a life of no regret but of infinite promise. In him we have seen the power of endless right."

The hymn, "Their Silent Ministry," "I cannot think of him as dead," was followed by the reading of a resolution adopted by the Board of Trustees of the church by the Rev. Frank C. Doan, Ph. D., the present pastor. In part, it read:

"Those who knew him intimately will never cease to be grateful for that privilege. Those who by reason of their briefer association with this church have had less opportunity for acquaintance with him will cherish the memory of a beautiful presence and an inspiring character. Those of us who never knew him are fortunate nevertheless to share in the rich heritage which he has left us by reason of the impress of his spirit and the work done by him. His example in accomplishing so many things for the community as well as for the church, his spirit of reverence in worship, his broad tolerance, his lasting contribution to the cause of liberal education are all a part of this heritage."

Dr. Max Landsberg, rabbi emeritus of Temple Berith Kodesh, in paying tribute to Dr. Gannett, declared that he was the greatest teacher of practical religion with whom he had ever come in contact.

"Dr. Gannett could teach by his very presence," said Dr. Landsberg. "He was a man of power who spoke with authority. No man could remain in his presence for even a short time but he felt an improvement in his character."

Dr. Doan then offered prayer, and then while the choir sang the hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," Janet Wile, one of the children of the Sunday-school, stood at the head of the casket with a rose in her hand. "The rose," said Dr. Doan, "expressed the sweetness of his spirit."

At the close of the services people slowly filed past the casket.

The ushers at the church were J. Vincent Alexander, Leroy Snyder, George P. Slocum, Nelson E. Spencer, Isaac Adler and George Herbert Smith.

The following tribute to Dr. Gannett was paid by Dr. Richard W. Boynton of First Unitarian Church, Buffalo:

"He was of New England, and yet something more—some older, deeper heritage—was also his. For he was a mystic—of that great strain, the authentic sons of God, the pure in heart who see Him, and live consciously in His eternal presence. A prophet he was, and a poet—a poet first, and then a prophet because he was a poet. He belonged, above all, to the company of Jesus. How many, since Francis of Assisi, have lived closer to that mighty heart and soul? He would have been, he was, a beloved disciple! He loved what Jesus loved—the flowers, the birds, the little children, the poor and afflicted, the sick of soul—all who needed help and faculty for parable-making; hence the common people heard, and read, him gladly. Few in our time have been so truly, so deeply, so inwardly Christian. He preached, because he lived, the gospel life. He was a Unitarian; yes, through all the earlier years of stress and conflict a radical one, of the second generation of Transcendentalists. But he was also profoundly Evangelical in the original meaning of that much-abused word.

"His public prayers were breathings of the very spirit of trust and love and high aspiration. He was a devoted pastor and a good citizen of every community in which he lived. But his greatest gift, I think, was for friendship."

"Who can speak fittingly of the friendship of such a life? First came the friendship of his early years in the Harvard Divinity School, especially with two poet-teachers of New England origin like himself—John White Chadwick and Frederick Lucian Hosmer. With Dr. Hosmer there has been a very special intimacy lasting through all the years. They have been yoke-fellows in service and in song."

"Then came the group of later friends, 'fellow-workers in the West,' in one of the most rapid and remarkable periods of the development of liberal religion in this country—Jenkin Lloyd Jones, James Villa Blake, John C. Larned, Henry M. Simmons, and George A. Thayer. One cannot name all the laymen who were this man's friends."

"Dr. Gannett had the secret of those who live in the Interpreter's House. For many years he led the members of his Unity Clubs and other study classes into a fuller appreciation of Channing, Emerson, Browning, and his other favorite authors, not forgetting the Bible writers. He prepared, in earlier years, some of the best Sunday-school manuals that have been written, especially those on The Childhood of Jesus and the Flowering of Christianity."

"In the '80s Dr. Gannett was at the forefront of that 'movement in the West' which brought our somewhat complacent, older Eastern Unitarianism out into the larger place which it now occupies. The story of that remarkable advance, and of the men who led it, still remains to be written. By voice and pen, in pulpit, on platform, and in the columns of Unity, William Gannett toiled assiduously to further it. He knew as few others the whole history from the inside, but some of its phases remained so painful in retrospect that in later years he could never bring himself to write of it. Some day it can be told, and few episodes in the history of liberal Christianity are better worth the telling."

"This is not the place to appraise Dr. Gannett's theology. Starting from his early transcendentalism and assimilating the two master-thoughts of evolution and the sympathy of religions, it was a theology of the heart and of the spirit fully as much as of the reasoning intellect. For many years a neighbor and friend of Dr. Augustus H. Strong, the conservative president of the Rochester Theological Seminary (Baptist), Dr. Gannett drew in from this and similar contacts a deep sense of the spiritual vitality and ethical potency of the so-called "evangelical" position. Taking up the best of these elements into his own inherited and wroughtout faith, he gradually became what we may not unfairly call an Evangelical Unitarian.

"Finally, what of Dr. Gannett as a poet and hymn writer? He belongs to that small, but precious band of mystic singers, the poets who had and voiced the very heart of religion, 'the life of God in the soul of man.' He stands with George Herbert and Henry Vaughan of an older time, with Samuel Longfellow and Samuel Johnson his elder contemporaries, and above all with his friend, Frederick Hosmer. None saw the heavenly vision more clearly than did he."

A Christmas Spirit Passes. D.C. Editorial

Some years ago in an appreciation of the work of Dr. William Channing Gannett, done in this city and for this city's moral and physical betterment, Dr. Charles C. Albertson, then pastor of Central church, spoke of Dr. Gannett as "animated always by the Spirit of Christmas—that spirit which hopes much from love, from the frank evidence of love for all men, and in particular for the faith and hope and charity of childhood which persist in men."

This was a beautiful tribute to the spirit which animated Dr. Gannett in all his activities. He spoke wisdom for years from his pulpit. He gave advice that made for mutual good will in this particular spot of earth; he was an ardent believer in peace and good will. He was more than an adviser; he was a leader in demonstrations of how peace and good will are practically made to exist and kept existent.

In the fulness of time Dr. Gannett passes from us. Such a life as his, so long as it lasts, is an asset to the welfare of the community in which it is lived. There is a constant spiritual influence which radiates from it to influence those who are doing things. Matters of creed and doctrine lie in the domain of rational reactions to facts; conduct is constantly in touch with life everywhere. No matter what intellectual affiliations a man may choose, if he radiates the "Spirit of Christmas" in speech and act, he is a power for good.

Just as we are on the eve of another Christmas, a Christmas spirit passes from physical communion with our people. But spirit is pervasive; it is not past the capacity of death to involve it; it is influence that cannot be confined or measured. We may not estimate by definite data what Dr. Gannett has done. We know that it is good, and that it is good which cannot vanish as he himself goes beyond our ken.

Many of us will light our Christmas candles to typify the Spirit of Christmas; as they shine, "so shines a good deed in this naughty world." Dr. Gannett's good deeds shone for years to brighten our community life.

TRIBUTE PAID LATE MINISTER BY CLERGYMAN

Herald
Work of Rev. Dr. William C. Gannett Wins Praise of Philadelphian.

Jan. 21, 1924

Glowing tribute is paid the late Rev. Dr. William Channing Gannett, former pastor of First Unitarian Church of Rochester, by Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes in a letter published in The Nation. Rev. Mr. Holmes is a well known Unitarian preacher and author of Philadelphia.

His letter says in part:

"I feel sure that you will be glad to grant me a little space in your valued paper to pay tribute to a great and good man, dead on December 15 last, who must have been known and revered by many of your readers. I refer to the late Dr. William C. Gannett, of Rochester. He was one of the outstanding leaders of his communion, beloved as a friend, honored as a teacher, revered as a saint and prophet. Nor were his activity and influence limited to his church; on the contrary, throughout all his career he was a dominant and adored figure in the community at large.

Habits Acquired.

"Reared in the tonic atmosphere of New England transcendentalism, when Emerson was meditating in Concord, Parker thundering in the pulpit of the Boston Music Hall, and Garrison crusading at the head of the Abolition movement, Rev. Dr. Gannett early acquired the habits of clear thought, honest speech, and dauntless courage which marked him all his years. In the furious controversy which rent the Unitarian body in the eighties of the last century and which swung that church at last to the extreme left of theological radicalism, Rev. Dr. Gannett was in the van fighting fearlessly for those large liberties of thought which are now the chief glory of religious liberalism everywhere. No man was more uncompromising than he, yet no man more sympathetic in his understanding of his opponents or more gracious in his treatment of them. He was all tenderness for men, whatever their opinions or perversities. Love was as much the atmosphere of his heart as fragrance the atmosphere of flowers.

"At bottom, after all, this man was more the mystic than the prophet, though his service as a leader of thought and life can never be forgotten. But it was in the deep places of the spirit that he dwelt most easily and gladly. It was here that he wrote his immortal sermons which have reached their hundreds of thousands of readers—'Blessed Be Drudgery,' 'Wrestling and Blessing,' and others. It was here that his heart broke out in the songs which rank him among the unforgettable hymn-writers of America. It was here that he fostered friendships which voked him with a score of precious souls as David was voked with Jonathan. It was here, finally, in these mystic places, that he grew to the serene stature of sainthood. Rev. Dr. Gannett was one of the

"I never knew a man so unspoiled from the world," said Dr. Samuel M. Crothers at his funeral.

William Channing Gannett. Herald, Dec. 16, 1923

In this community, rich in the talent that produces service of genuine value, there is sincere mourning over the departure from this life of William Channing Gannett, a gentleman of the old school, a clergyman of vision broader than creed, a scholar, a friend of humanity. Dr. Gannett exemplified the best traditions of that cultured New England circle from which he came; he also endeavored with marked success to practice those principles of social service which are now recognized as fundamentally just, but which, in the days when his far-seeing vision led him to that work, had little standing in either the economic or social world.

Hundreds of Rochester boys now grown to manhood treasure in memory the happy hours that were theirs through the kindly ministrations of Dr. Gannett. Particularly to those ambitious youths who found a friend to extend them a helping hand when the way was rough, news of the passing of Dr. Gannett brings a feeling of genuine grief. In endeavoring to smooth the way for those less fortunate than himself he was actuated by "no motive less than a sincere regard for the welfare of his fellow beings, a real love of humanity.

It is one of the tragedies of life that men such as Dr. Gannett proved himself to be are not more common. Perhaps it is because of their comparative rarity that they are so sadly missed when they are called from the visible to the invisible world. Yet the community that knew him, saddened though it be by the departure of such a man, is thankful for his having lived and for the high ideals of genuine service and unaffected leadership which he exemplified.

ARCHITECT DIES AFTER ILLNESS OF MANY WEEKS

Charles C. Evans Assisted in Designing of Numerous Rochester Buildings.

Charles C. Evans, prominent Rochester architect of 671 South Avenue, died yesterday afternoon in the General Hospital. Mr. Evans was taken to the hospital several weeks ago. His death had been expected momentarily for a number of days.

Mr. Evans was born in Barneveld October 9, 1878, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sampson Evans. While a small boy, his family moved to Forestport, where he received his early education. His father was a contractor and builder, specializing in rustic construction. Many of the more pretentious cot-

Learns Trade from Father.

After leaving Forestport schools, Mr. Evans took up his apprenticeship with his father and remained with him until his father's death in 1895. He then worked with other contractors in the Adirondack region for a number of years.

Upon his mother's death in 1903, Mr. Evans moved to Utica, where he became a foreman for Hughes & Company, contractors. He began his architectural studies during his residence in Utica, using such sources as were available.

In 1910 he located in New York City, teaching woodworking in one of the New York schools and continued his architectural training under Frank Alvah Parsons and in the New York School of Design. Later he took an extension course with Chicago Uni-

Two years later he became affiliated with Cross & Cross and had charge of the construction of the "General" Rosalie Jones House at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island. The next year he was sent by the firm to Worcester, Mass., to construct the Park Building, the first of the skyscrapers of that city.

Upon the completion of that building he returned to New York City and soon afterwards severed his connection with Cross & Cross and took up his work with Foster & Gade. Shortly afterwards he was sent to Rochester as a representative of that firm.

The firm is well known in this city, having designed the Memorial Art Gallery and other buildings. When Gade withdrew from the firm, Mr. Evans entered a partnership with Mortimer Foster and in 1921, when Foster withdrew, Evans began business for himself, Foster acting as consulting engineer.

Gets Engineering Captaincy.

Shortly after the breaking out of the late war, Mr. Evans passed his examination for a captaincy in the U. S. A. Engineers and was ordered to Camp Humphries, but before his departure the armistice had been declared.

Among the more notable buildings in the city in which he had a part of the construction was the Chamber of Commerce, Friendly Home, University Stadium and other University buildings and many residences.

Mr. Evans was a Boy Scout leader at St. Paul's Church and was the organizer of the Junior Engineers of the Y. M. C. A. He is also a past president of the Rochester Society of Architects, Rochester Engineering Society, a member of the Community Conference Board and a member of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce.

WM. LIVINGSTON PASSES AWAY UNEXPECTEDLY

William Livingston, for many years managing editor of the Utica Saturday Globe in Rochester, and well known business man, died unexpectedly at his home, 335 West avenue, this morning, aged 71 years.

Mr. Livingston was in charge of the Utica Globe office while it was located in Rochester and later entered the real estate business. He was manager of the Rochester Securities Company with offices in the Ellwanger & Barry Building. This company completely developed the Gardiner Homestead tract on West avenue.

William Livingston was born in Rochester and had always made his home here. His connection with the newspaper profession brought him in contact with many of the city's influential business men and politicians, and he was well known here.

He was a charter member of the Rochester Real Estate Board and a former member of the old Rochester Press Club and the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Livingston had not been in the best of health, but his death comes as a great shock. He had just finished breakfast with his wife when stricken. Medical aid was summoned, but he expired before a physician arrived. He had been under the care of a physician who had been treating him for heart trouble which is believed to have caused his death.

He leaves his wife, Louise K. Livingston, and two sons, Clarence A. and Mortimer Livingston, and three grandchildren.

ASSOCIATES PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO VETERAN EDITOR

Homer H. Rowell, Dean of City's Newspaper Men, Is Laid to Rest.

CO-WORKERS MOURN LOSS

Simple Rites Mark Funeral;
Masonic Lodge Conducts Services at Grave.

Newspaper men and followers of kindred occupations yesterday afternoon paid their last tribute of regard to Rochester's veteran editor, Homer H. Rowell, whose funeral took place at the home, No. 485 Meigs street. Mr. Rowell, who died Sunday morning, was connected with newspapers for seventy years, completing his career as financial editor of the Democrat and Chronicle after forty-five years. Representatives of the Democrat and Chronicle occupied a room at the services. As the casket was borne from the door to the hearse, his former associates in the work he loved so well lined the walk and many followed the body to its final resting place in Riverside cemetery.

Rev. Samuel J. Clarkson, D. D., minister of Monroe Avenue Methodist Church, conducted the services. He read from the Scriptures and offered prayer. Toward the close, he read Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," and also "The Land of Beginning Again," by Mrs. Booth Tarkington. Mrs. William B. Dingman, soprano, sang "No Sorrow there," a selection for which she wrote both words and music, and a hymn, "Some Day the Silver Cord Will Break."

Associates Are Bearers.

The honorary bearers were Herbert J. Winn, president of the Rochester Printing Company; Frederick S. Todd, general manager; Allan C. Ross, managing editor; Norman S. Esterbrook, associate editor; Harold W. Sanford, news editor; Gardner B. Ellis, financial editor; John H. Davis, superintendent; Frederick G. Beach, advertising manager; Nelson P. MacVicar, foreman of the composing room; Charles R. Park and Thomas Elliott, of the composing room; E. O. T. Thomas, foreman of the press room; James McNaught, foreman of the stereotype department, and David Myers, superintendent of carriers.

Members of Valley Lodge, F. & A. M., conducted the burial service with the Masonic ritual at the grave, Dr. Clarkson pronouncing the benediction. The delegation from the lodge included Master Alexander Kramer, Master-elect Charles R. Poulton, Joseph A. Barr, John W. Merriam, Avery W. Tuttle, Myron L. Dox, Frank Thompson, Rev. Bernard J. Tepas, Joseph Blum and Louis P. Teitenberg.

LAST CO-WORKER OF TWO ANTHONY SISTERS IS DEAD

Mrs. Millar, Active in Early Suffrage Campaign, Was 92 Years Old.

DREW UP ANTHONY WILLS
Dec. 18 1923
Worked in Surrogate's Office and with Law Firms for Many Years.

When death claimed Mrs. Helen Mar Shoecraft Millar Sunday night at her home in Canandaigua, it removed, so far as known, the last of the contemporaries of Susan B. and Mary S. Anthony who worked with them in the early fight for equal suffrage. Mrs. Millar was 92 years old. She was a sister-in-law of the late Judge William Dean Shuart, of Rochester, and until some months ago lived in this city. Her home for many years had been with the family of Judge Shuart, and her last days were spent with his two daughters, her nieces, Mrs. W. N. Tubbs and Miss Stella Shuart. She drew up the wills of the Anthony sisters.

Mrs. Millar prepared for the practice of law before women were admitted to the bar of New York state. When the laws were changed, Judge Shuart told her that with experience as confidential clerk in the surrogate's office which she had had for sixteen years, admission to the bar would add nothing to her legal reputation.

It was said at the time that women first had the franchise in New York state that Mrs. Millar was the oldest in Rochester to exercise that new privilege. She had been interested in women's citizenship since shortly after the Seneca Falls convention in 1848. She became a member of the Rochester Political Equality Club at the second meeting.

Mrs. Millar, who formerly was Helen Mar Shoecraft, daughter of Peter and Mary Ross Shoecraft, was born at Penfield on May 10, 1831, in a log house, while her father was building a new home. She began to teach school in 1853, at old No. 11, now Samuel A. Lattimore School. The late Dellon Dewey, for years associated with the famous baritone, Tom Karl and William W. Webb were among her pupils.

She taught until 1863, the year of her marriage to Robert W. Millar, who was connected with the Merchants Despatch in Buffalo. Mr. Millar died three years later, soon after they buried their infant daughter, Mary.

Returning to Rochester, the young widow taught in Wadsworth School, No. 12, for three months as a substitute. Her next step was to enter the office of her brother-in-law, then surrogate. She remained there sixteen years. Then she joined the law firm of Shuart & Sutherland. After the death of Judge Shuart, in 1900, Mrs. Millar went to the office of William A. Sutherland, staying there until his death. She left this office for that of Harvey F. Remington, where she stayed until 1911, at the time she met with an accident, fracturing her hip. She then was past 80 years old. Only last month at the age of 92, she drew up a will for a friend.

Recalled Drawing Will.
When Mrs. Millar was seen one evening while she lived in Rochester she told of an incident connected with the drawing of Susan B. Anthony's will.

"I had been to the Anthony home, and we had drawn the will," said Mrs. Millar. "I had included all the gifts she wanted made to various persons. A neighbor had been in and served as witness.

"Well, I feel perfectly satisfied with that will," said Miss Anthony.

"I don't feel satisfied with it," I said a little later.

"Why?" she asked.

"Because you have remembered this and the other person, it will be printed throughout the country. It will be widely read. When certain persons see it they will say, 'I have done so and so for Miss Anthony. I think she ought to have remembered me.'"

"I would suggest that you leave everything to Mary, and write a letter telling her what you want done with everything. You know that Mary will be only too glad to do this."

"Miss Anthony took the suggestion, and other wills were drawn. She and Mary left everything to each other, and the one remaining longest was to carry out the other's wishes."

Told of Birthday Celebration.

Another occasion which Mrs. Miller remembered was the celebration of Miss Anthony's seventieth birthday. The festivity was a banquet at the Riggs House in Washington. Rochester equal-suffragists had gone to that city to help in effecting a merger of two associations. For a week no other guests but the suffragists were taken at the hotel. Women from every state in the Union were at the dinner. John Van Voorhis, then representative in Congress from Rochester, was present and many prominent men of this city, including the late Senator Cornelius R. Parsons, then mayor, wired congratulations. Clara Barton, founder of the Red Cross, was among the guests.

"One of the women was Jane Marsh Parker, then president of the old Ignorance Club of Rochester, and when called on to speak, she said:

"I am not a suffragist. I am an anti-suffragist. I am from the Ignorance Club of Rochester, and I am here representing that city to tell how much I think of Miss Anthony."

The funeral of Mrs. Millar will take place this morning with a few friends and the family meeting in the room where she died in Canandaigua. Rev. H. L. Gaylord, of the Episcopal Church, Canandaigua, will officiate.

Mrs. Millar leaves four nieces and one nephew, Mrs. W. N. Tubbs and Miss Stella Shuart, of Canandaigua; Mrs. J. N. Shannahan, of Hampton, Va.; Mrs. Fred J. Davis, of Windsor, N. Y., and Charles D. Shoecraft, of Buffalo.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN BURIED.

Funeral services for Marcellus E. Hazen, Civil War veteran, who died Sunday at his home, No. 128 Linden street, took place yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home. Rev. Clinton Wunder officiated and Miss Carris, of the Baptist Temple, sang. Members of Myron Adams Post, G. A. R., of which Mr. Hazen was a charter member, acted as bearers and as a guard of honor, conducting the services at the house and at the grave in Mount Pleasant cemetery, Fairport. *D. & C. PIONEER RESIDENT OF VICINITY DIES

D. & C. Jan. 1
Mrs. Ballard, 91 Years Old, Was Active Until Death.

MRS. ABIGAIL H. BALLARD.

Mrs. Abigail Holt Ballard, aged 90, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary A. Lockwood, at No. 187 Summit Grove park. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Mary A. Lockwood and Mrs. Abbie E. Davis, eight grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Mrs. Ballard was born in West Webster in 1827, when Western New York was sparsely settled and Rochester only a small place. Her parents were among the first settlers in West Webster. Her father was John Granger and her mother, Elizabeth Cleveland, cousin of Grover Cleveland. Mrs. Ballard spent her girlhood and much of her life in West Webster, moving to Rochester about thirty-five years ago. She joined the Webster Methodist Church in 1848, when she was 21 years old.

Though in her ninety-seventh year, Mrs. Ballard remained in the full possession of her faculties, enjoyed the life going on around her and entered into the plans and activities of her children and grandchildren. Recently a birthday party was given in honor of her ninety-sixth birthday which Mrs. Ballard enjoyed heartily. At that time she recalled many similar celebrations in past years and discussed changes that have taken place during the span of her life. She maintained an interest in people and their lives until the last.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Lockwood, at No. 187 Summit Grove park. Burial will be made at West Webster.

MORTUARY RECORD

Mrs. Jane Eliza Clarke, widow of F. Dewitt Clarke, died yesterday in this city. She leaves one son, Roswell S. Clarke. The funeral will take place from 685 Main Street East and will be private.

FORMER PASTOR IN ROCHESTER PASSES AWAY

T. U. Dec. 26-1923

Rev. Thomas J. Bolger Succumbs to Pneumonia in Elmira—Well Known for His Active and Useful Career—Funeral Friday.

The news of the death last night, at the Arnott-Ogden Hospital in Elmira, of the Rev. Thomas Johnson Bolger, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in that city, comes as a sorrow to large numbers of people throughout Central and Western New York, where Mr. Bolger had become widely known and loved through his activities in church and Masonic circles.

Mr. Bolger suffered an attack of influenza two weeks ago and in his anxiety to get back into the preparations for the Christmas season at his church he over-exerted and had a relapse which turned to pneumonia and caused his death just before midnight last night.

Mr. Bolger was born on December 31, 1881, in Parkhill, Ontario, Canada, his parents removing to Chicago in 1884. He received his early education in the public schools of Chicago and at Lewis Institute, that city, and was graduated from Denison University in 1906 and from the Rochester Theological Seminary in 1910.

He served as assistant pastor of the First Baptist Church in Cleveland, Ohio, from May 1, 1909, to January 1, 1910. He was ordained to the Baptist ministry in Chicago, June 10, 1909. He returned to the Rochester Theological Seminary on January 1, 1910, and at that time began his work as assistant pastor at Central Presbyterian Church, this city.

At the time of his graduation from the theological seminary the following May, he was asked by the Central Church boards to remain as a regular member of the ministerial staff of the church.

er from the Rochester Presbytery to the General Assembly in May, 1914, and conveyed the invitation of Central Church to the assembly to meet in Rochester in May, 1915, and succeeded in his effort.

He was elected teacher of the Central Class for men in the Central Bible School in May, 1911. He was interested in Y. M. C. A. work.

Mr. Bolger was called to the First Presbyterian Church of Elmira January 1, 1914. The church has grown and prospered under Mr. Bolger's pastorate and his influence and powers of leadership has been felt far beyond the local church.

In the civic life of Elmira, Mr. Bolger played a large part in bringing about needed reforms.

Before the organization of the Red Cross canteen service, during the time the national guardsmen were being sent to the Mexican border in 1916, Mr. Bolger organized a canteen service in Elmira and secured fruit, cookies, tobacco, etc., which he delivered to the soldiers as they passed through the city.

In the organization of the Elmira Rotary Club, Mr. Bolger took an active part and was one of the charter members and the past-president.

Shortly after the outbreak of the World War Mr. Bolger volunteered for welfare work, was given leave of absence from his church and served several months with the Y. M. C. A. in camps in this country.

Mr. Bolger has been a prominent Mason for many years, belonging to most of the masonic bodies in Rochester. When the movement was started in Elmira to organize a new lodge, Mr. Bolger took an active part and was selected as the first master of Jesse L. Cooley Lodge, 966, F & A. M. He later became deputy grand master in the Elmira district. He was also a high officer in the Rose Croix.

Mr. Bolger took a keen interest in the work for service men following the war and one of his last visits to Rochester was on Armistice Day, 1922, when he delivered the principal address at the big mass meeting held at Convention Hall under the auspices of the American Legion.

Mr. Bolger was a man whose honesty and straightforwardness won the respect and liking of all men irrespective of whether they agreed or disagreed with him.

In July 1911 Mr. Bolger was married to Miss Carolyn Myrtle Heffer of Irondequoit. Besides his wife he leaves three sons, Thomas Robert, Stacy Kittredge, and Stuart Bruce. He also leaves his father, Thomas J. Bolger of Chicago, and two sisters, Mrs. Theodore Elworth and Mrs. James L. Wood Mills, both of Evanston, Ill.

Funeral services will be held from First Presbyterian Church at Elmira Friday afternoon, the hour not having been decided. They will be marked by simplicity and there will be no official fraternal representatives. Interment will be in Rochester Saturday at the convenience of the family.

MINISTER'S BODY WILL ARRIVE IN CITY TOMORROW

House
Dr. Thomas J. Bolger To Lie in State in Central Church Saturday Afternoon.

Dec. 27-1923
The body of Rev. Dr. Thomas Johnson Bolger, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Elmira and former assistant pastor of Central Presbyterian who died in Arnott-Ogden Hospital Tuesday from influenza, will arrive in Rochester Friday evening at 9:30 o'clock. From 1 o'clock until 2 o'clock the following day it will lie in state in the auditorium of Central Church at which place a funeral service will be held at 3 o'clock.

REV. THOMAS J. BOLGER.

The service in Elmira will be conducted by Rev. Dr. C. W. Patty of Pittsburgh, a classmate of Rev. Dr. Bolger at the Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary and the service at Central Church will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Albert W. Beaven, also a classmate of the deceased. The bearers will be members of Central Class who were taught for a number of years by Rev. Dr. Bolger while he was assistant pastor of the local church. Burial will be made in Rochester at the convenience of the family.

Death Greatly Mourned.

The death of Rev. Dr. Bolger will be greatly mourned here, for even after his departure from this city he frequently returned and was well known for his Masonic work here.

He was born in Parkhill, Ontario, Canada, December 21, 1881. Three years later, his family moved to Chicago. Here he received his early education in the public schools and in Lewis Institute. He was graduated from Denison University in 1906 and the Rochester Theological Seminary in 1910. He was ordained in the Baptist ministry in 1909 and was assistant pastor in First Baptist Church in Cleveland. He returned to Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary January 1, 1910 to complete his study.

While a student at the seminary he was assistant pastor at Central Church and upon his graduation he was asked by the board to continue as such, which he did for four years. He was elected a commissioner from Rochester Presbytery to the general assembly in 1914. In that same year, he was called as pastor to First Presbyterian Church in Elmira.

He was a prominent Mason for many years, belonging to most of the Masonic bodies of this city. He was a high officer of Rochester Chapter of Rose Croix, A. A. Scottish Rite; Damascus Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and others. In Elmira he was the founder and first master of Jesse L. Cooley Lodge 966, F. and A. M. Later he became deputy grand master in the Elmira district.

Rev. Dr. Bolger married Miss Carolyn Myrtle Heffer of Irondequoit in July, 1911. Besides his wife, he leaves three sons, Thomas R., Stacy K., and Stuart B. Bolger; his father, Thomas J. Bolger of Chicago and two sisters, Mrs. Theodore Elworth and Mrs. James L. Wood Mills both of Evanston, Ill.

Rev. T. J. Bolger¹⁹²² Is Eulogized By Elmira Clergy

T. J. Bolger, Jan. 3, 1922
A tribute to the memory of the late Rev. T. Johnson Bolger passed by the Ministerial Association of Elmira speaks of him as of a "dynamic nature, a man who believed intensely and lived vigorously." His brother clergymen affirm that "the influence of this stalwart Christian, tireless worker of righteousness, broad-gauged citizens, and big-hearted man will live on through the years. This community will be richer throughout time for this vigorous, earnest, serviceful life. He did not live and he did not die in vain."

The death of Mr. Bolger has brought up again the project proposed and dropped some time ago, of uniting the First and Lake Street Presbyterian Churches. Each church has more than 700 members, both are prosperous and occupy valuable properties. First Church has recently considered the rebuilding of its entire plant to meet its increasing needs. The duty of seeking a successor to Mr. Bolger has brought the idea of a merger into the foreground.

ALDERMAN PAUL W. FRIEDLER IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Had Been Representative of Fifth Ward in City Council Eight Years.

COUNCIL MEETS TO-DAY
Dec. 31
Will Take Formal Action on His Death at Noon.
Funeral Wednesday.

Paul W. Friedler, of No. 80 Lowell street, for eight years alderman of the Fifth ward, and prominent in fraternal and social organizations of this city, died early yesterday morning at his home. Mr. Friedler had been ill about ten days. On Wednesday evening he sent a communication to the Common Council expressing regret at his inability to attend the session that would mark the close of his aldermanic career. He was not a candidate to succeed himself in the last election.

Abram DePotter, president of the Common Council, last evening announced a special meeting of the council to adopt resolutions on Mr. Friedler's death and to appoint a committee to attend the funeral services. Mr. Friedler was a popular member of the council and served on a number of its important committees. He was chairman of the Committee on Parks and was a member of the Special Committee on the Standardization of Salaries.

A Native Rochesterian.

Mr. Friedler was born in Rochester on April 5, 1860, and was educated at Henry Lomb School, No. 20. In 1887 he established a soda and mineral water bottling business and had engaged in that enterprise up to the time of his death. He was vice-president of the New York State Bottlers' Association.

For eight years Mr. Friedler had been president of the Rochester Maennerchor. He was a member of the United German-American Societies and the Rochester Liederkreis, Damascus Temple, Rochester Lodge of Elks, Siegel Tent, Knights of Maccabees; Monroe Lodge, Knights of Pythias; the Eagles, the Rochester Turnverein, the Erie Social Club; Chamber of Commerce, Rochester Consistory of Scottish Rite Masons; Germania Lodge of Masons; Germania Lodge of Perfection.

Mr. Friedler was a lifelong Republican. He never held public office until he was elected alderman of the Fifth ward eight years ago. Warm tribute to Mr. Friedler was paid last evening by James L. Hotchkiss, Republican leader. Mr. DePotter said that he was a very conscientious and highly respected member of the Common Council.

On September 17, 1885 Mr. Friedler married Miss Mary A. Snyder of this city.

PAUL W. FRIEDLER

The funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. The Masonic ritual will be used. There will be a prayer at the home, No. 80 Lowell street, and services at the Chapel at Mount Hope cemetery.

Mr. Friedler leaves his wife; two sons, Albert J. and Paul W. Friedler, Jr.; a daughter, Mrs. Ralph Wilkinson; two brothers Leonard Friedler and Herman Krapp; four sisters, Mrs. Mary Frank, Mrs. Dora Smarck, Mrs. William Reuthling and Mrs. Caroline Wagner, and five grand children.

GEO. H. WALDEN, PRINCIPAL OF SCHOOL 10, DEAD

T. C. Jan. 7
Was Oldest Principal in City but One in Point of Service — Death Results From Injuries Received in Fall on Dec. 14.

George H. Walden, oldest school principal in Rochester in point of service, but one, died Monday evening in Highland hospital, aged 68 years. Mr. Walden fell in Meigs street on Dec. 14 and broke his hip, the accident resulting in his death.

Mr. Walden had been principal of Eugene Field School 10, Chatham st., for 37 years, being appointed to that post in 1886. He came to Rochester in 1883 and was assigned to Whitney School 17 as principal. After a year there he was transferred to Andrews School 9, succeeding William H. Bosworth, where he served until being transferred to School 10.

Mr. Walden's service is exceeded only by the record of Miss Nellie F. Cornell, principal of Ellwanger and Barry School 24, Meigs street.

Before Mr. Walden came to Rochester he had considerable experience in country schools of Otsego, Steuben, Livingston and Ontario counties. Both there and in Rochester, the homelike relations between Mr. Walden and his pupils was considered a standard for others to follow. He was born April 13, 1855 in Honeoye Falls.

He had been on the executive committee of the State Teachers' Association for nine years, was one of the organizers of the Council of Grammar School Principals of the State of New York and was its first presiding officer. He was a member of the State Science Teachers' Association. He was a former president of the Rochester Teachers' Association and a member of the executive committee.

Mr. Walden was known in Rochester as the father of the teachers' pension system which he advocated for many years before its adoption by the local school board in 1905. He was always intensely interested in the development of the system and his fondest hopes were realized when the local system was merged with the state system in 1921.

Mr. Walden leaves his wife, Kate Brewer Walden; one son, George H. Jr., of New York city; one granddaughter and two nephews, Harry L. and Homer W. Bush of this city. Prayer service will be held at the home, 63 Edmonds street, at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, followed by funeral services at Mt. Hope Chapel at 1 o'clock.

FUNERAL RITES FOR G. H. WALDEN THIS AFTERNOON

Many of Former Associates to Attend Services for Teacher.

SCHOOL HEAD 40 YEARS

Was Leader in Educational Activities and Oldest Male Principal.

Funeral services for George H. Walden, principal of Eugene Field School, No. 10, who died at the Highland Hospital, Monday night, will be held in the chapel at Mount Hope cemetery this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Friends, including members of the Rochester school system, are invited to attend these services. There will be a prayer service at the family home, No. 63 Edmond street, which will be strictly private. Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, assistant pastor of Brick

GEORGE H. WALDEN.

Church, will officiate at both services. Mr. Walden's death came unexpectedly and was a great shock to his friends. On December 14th he was returning to school after lunching at home, and when approaching the Meigs street bridge he fell and fractured one of his hips. He was taken to the Highland Hospital, where he was believed to be making good progress. His wife and son had been at his bedside all Monday afternoon, and then scarcely had reached their home in Edmond street, when they received a call from the hospital that Mr. Walden had passed away. Embolism had attacked the right lung.

Mr. Walden was born in the eastern part of the state on May 13, 1855. He spent most of his early life in Otsego and Herkimer counties. He was educated in Hartwick Seminary and the Rochester Free Academy, graduating about 1878, by completing three years' work in one. In the school at the time was Edward Hanna, now Archbishop Hanna, of San Francisco.

Aided Pension System.

After graduation from the academy, Mr. Walden began teaching in the village schools near Rochester. He taught during this period at Honoye and at Livonia. While teaching in the latter village, he was appointed to a place in the Rochester school system. His first appointment was in September, 1883, as principal at Whitney School, No. 17. The following September he was transferred to the principalship of Andrews School No. 9, where he remained for two years. In September, 1886, he became principal of Eugene Field School, No. 10, where he remained until his accident.

Mr. Walden was the father of the Rochester teachers' pension system, for which he worked hard and earnestly. Then as the time arrived when it seemed advisable to merge with the state, he worked tirelessly for the merger. A number of years ago, he was president of the Rochester Teachers' Association, and throughout his career was deeply interested in all things that affected the schools or the teachers.

Next to Miss Nellie F. Cornell, he was the oldest principal in point of service in the system, and was affectionately known among the teachers and administrators of the schools as "The Dean." For many years he was an elder at Brick Presbyterian Church, and three of his bearers will be his brother elders.

Honored by Reception.

When Mr. Walden had been twenty-five years at Eugene Field School, alumni, teachers in the school and his associates in the school system gave him a reception at East High School that was one of the largest events ever held in honor of a school man here.

He was on the Executive Committee of the State Teachers' Association for nine years, was one of the organizers of the Council of Grammar School Principals of the State of New York, of which he was first president. He was a member of the Rochester Schoolmasters' Club, and of the State Science Teachers' Association.

He leaves his wife, who was Miss Kate Brewer, and a son, George H. Walden, Jr., of New York; a grandchild, Jean Mildred Walden and two nephews, Harry L. and Homer W. Bush.

The bearers at his funeral will be: Herbert S. Weet, S. P. Maultsby, Mark W. Way and J. Sankey Mullan, representing the schools, and Edward B. Leary, and Charles P. Coit, elders with him in the church, as was also Mr. Way.

HUNDREDS AT FUNERAL FOR

T. J. BOLGER

T. U. Dec. 29
Simple Services at Central Presbyterian Church for Former Assistant Pastor
—Dr. A. W. Beaven Pays
High Tribute to Man.

1923
Hundreds of men and women who came in contact with the Rev. T. Johnson Bolger during his assistant pastorate at Central Presbyterian Church in this city filed sorrowfully past his body as it lay in state in the church auditorium this afternoon preceding the funeral service which took place at 2 o'clock. The body was brought from Elmira last night, following services in the First Presbyterian Church of that city of which Mr. Bolger was pastor for the past eight years.

"The services this afternoon were simple in character in accordance with the known preferences of the late Mr. Bolger. Soft strains from the organ played by Mrs. Ruth Maybee Vick formed a prelude to the invocation which was spoken by the Rev. S. L. Divine, pastor of Central Church, Dr. A. W. Beaven, pastor of Lake Avenue Baptist Church and for years a close friend of the Rev. Mr. Bolger, spoke briefly of his work as a minister and his character as a friend.

"He was a large-hearted man with a remarkable sense of his obligation to the community," said Dr. Beaven. "He was a born leader of men and had the gift of making friends with whom he was always ready to share his abounding fund of good cheer. As a minister he interpreted his calling in the light of his own manhood and the work of the Christian ministry. He was always a man and a real man and his ministerial work supplemented that conviction rather than detracted from it."

The brief Scripture reading was by Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president of the Rochester Theological Seminary of which Mr. Bolger was an alumnus.

The services were attended by members of the Rotary Club and the Masonic Fraternity and by a delegation of members and officers of the First Presbyterian Church in Elmira. Bearers were William J. Fuller, Robert Tait, H. Guy Holt, R. Andrew Hamilton, E. A. Davies, Joseph R. Wilson, Jesse B. Millham and John E. Burr.

Burial will be in the Irondequoit Cemetery at the convenience of the family.

There was no eulogy at the services conducted yesterday in Elmira by the Rev. C. Wallace Petty of Pittsburgh, but an eloquent tribute was paid the Mr. Bolger by the Rev. Walter D. Cawert at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Elmira on Thursday. He said:

"Tom Bolger was a man; a man of strong character and high ideals. He was fearless, and because he had a strong sense of moral values, he often acted where others would have been idle. He was the outstanding leader of many movements worth while in this community, and his greatest monument is the many good things which he has done for this community which he served so faithfully and so well during the last 10 years.

"Tom Bolger was more than a preacher of the gospel. He was a prophet, speaking boldly as God gave him to speak; and, like the prophets, he was criticised, even slandered at times, but great will be his reward, as the Scriptures say.

"There is a vow, which we Presbyterian ministers take when we are ordained, in answer to a question that is put to us, 'Do you solemnly promise that you will uphold the great truths in the face of any opposition or criticism?' It was in faithfully keeping that vow that the Rev. Thomas Johnson Bolger spoke and acted as he did. The Bible tells us of a new Jerusalem coming down from Heaven. So, Mr. Bolger saw, not only the Elmira that is, but the Elmira that ought to be. Long will his memory be cherished in this community, which owes so much to him."

The club men stood in silent prayer for a moment in tribute to Mr. Bolger's memory.

DEATHS

CHILDREN PAY HONOR TO GEORGE H. WALDEN AT FUNERAL SERVICES

T. U. Jan. 11 - 1924
Funeral service for George H. Walden, principal of Eugene Field School, No. 10, were held yesterday afternoon in the chapel at Mount Hope cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, assistant pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Walden was an elder.

After the body had been deposited in the chapel, eighth grade children from Eugene Field School formed a guard of honor, lining up on each side of the casket with the school stand-bearer holding the flag. After the services the children filed past the casket, taking a last look at the face of the principal who had guided their school careers with patience, justice and fair play, who had encouraged and aided them to do things for themselves and the school. Some of the children were children of former pupils who had passed through the school under Mr. Walden's direction.

School men and women, and representatives of the central office of the Board of Education, including most of the executive staff, attended, as did associates of Mr. Walden in the Brick Presbyterian Church.

After the services the body was placed in the vault to remain until next spring. Before the services in the chapel there was a brief prayer service at the home, No. 63 Edmond street, attended only by the family.

FORMER PRINCIPAL PRAISED BY BOARD IN RESOLUTIONS

Herald Jan. 5
At a meeting of the Board of Education yesterday, resolutions were passed on the death of George H. Walden, principal of No. 10 School.

They follow in part:

"It was no mere accident that George H. Walden was known among his colleagues as 'The Dean.' It was to him, as to no other, that the inexperienced principal, just beginning his work, turned for wise counsel. To him, more than to any other one person, was due the credit for the patient, intelligent and long continued work that finally brought about, in 1905, a local pension system. Not until three years ago was this merged with the state system and the ambition of Mr. Walden thereby realized.

"In the death of George H. Walden, Rochester has lost the kind of a citizen it can ill afford to lose. He was a wise and devoted teacher, who put service above self and thereby dignified the profession of which he was a member. He possessed at all times that sound and wholesome interest in public affairs that made him an honor to the city in which he lived."

Bids for the work on No. 15 School were rejected.

Fred B. Periss was appointed a member of the advisory committee on commercial vocational education, with special reference to employment in retail stores, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. L. March.

Wm. Livingston Laid At Rest In Mount Hope Today

T. U. Jan. 11, 1924
Funeral services for William Livingston, who died suddenly Friday, were held from the family residence, 335 West avenue, this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Services were conducted by the Rev. Clinton Wunder of the Baptist Temple and the Rev. David Hamel of Andrews Street Baptist Church. The bearers were Leon Lovejoy, Allyn Kettering, Norman and Nelson Copp. Interment was at Mount Hope.

William Livingston was well known in this city, especially in political and business circles. He was for many years editor of the Rochester edition of the Utica Saturday Globe giving up the management of the Globe to assume the development of the Gardiner Homestead Tract. While engaged in the work he was placed in control of the Luitwieler Pump and Engine Company of Rochester during a process of reorganization. This work really closed his active business life.

WM. H. EMERY, OLDEST LOCAL REALTOR, DEAD

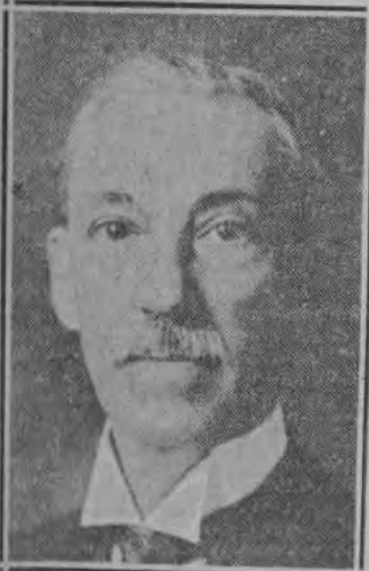

T. U. Jan. 7
Organizer and First President of Rochester Real Estate Board Passes Away—In Business Here Since 1897. 1974

William H. Emery, dean of Rochester realtors, died this morning at his home, 216 Magee avenue. Mr. Emery came to this city in 1897, and since that time has played an important part in the real estate business.

Born in Liverpool, England, April 21, 1865, Mr. Emery came to this country in 1874, locating in Grand Rapids, Mich., where he remained three years. It was on a trip to Syracuse that he met Mrs. Emery. Shortly after, he moved his business to Syracuse, residing there 20 years.

In 1890, with other citizens, he organized the Eastern Building and Loan Association. This organization was one of the few of its type that weathered the panic of 1905 and 1906, paying 100 cents on the dollar to those of the stockholders who had retained their stock.

It was in May, 1897, that he came to Rochester, in the interests of the organization, locating in the German Insurance Building under the name of Emery Real Estate Agency. Twenty-two years later, he moved to the Powers building, where until his death he headed the firm, Emery and Son. He was always interested in church matters, and was trustee and chairman of the Building Committee of the Delaware Street Baptist Church in Syracuse. He was treasurer of Lake Avenue Baptist Church.

WILLIAM H. EMERY

He believed in organization, and was one of three men, who organized in Syracuse what is now known as the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards. He was treasurer of this organization for two years, and played an important part in committee work.

In July, 1910, he personally sent out a call to the leading real estate men of this city with a view of organizing a local real estate board. This effort resulted in the formation of the present Real Estate Board. He was president its first year and was re-elected the second year. In later years he again served in that office for two years.

At the annual meeting of the Rochester board in December, he was unanimously elected to life membership, and an executive committee member.

He leaves his wife, Ida B. Emery; two daughters, Mrs. Charles E. Lathrop and Mrs. George R. Ogilvie; one son, H. Albert Emery, and nine grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home, 216 Magee avenue. Burial will be in Riverside.

DR. HOLT IS PAID HIGH TRIBUTE AS MEDICAL LEADER

Dr. Rhees Among Many Here Who Feel Loss in Death of Eminent Physician.

D. & C. Jan. 16
WAS U. OF R. GRADUATE

Child Health Authority Was Born at Webster, Began Practice in City.

Dr. Luther Emmett Holt, one of the pioneers in working out the diseases of childhood in this country, who died Monday in Peking, China, had been a trustee of the University of Rochester since 1902. He was born at Webster on March 4, 1855, living there until he came to the University of Rochester, from which he was graduated in 1875.

Dr. Holt's book "The Care and Feeding of Children," is known in nearly every household in this country where there are children and the book has been translated into the language of every civilized country in the world. It was Dr. Holt who founded the Babies' Hospital in New York, the first institution of its kind in the world and one which has served as a model for similar institutions in many parts of the world.

Was U. of R. Graduate.

Dr. Holt received the degree of master of arts from the University here in 1878 and his M. D. at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University in 1880. He returned to Rochester, serving two years as an interne at the General Hospital, and practiced medicine here a few years. He then became professor of the diseases of children at the New York Polyclinic.

In 1901 he took up his duties as clinical professor of the diseases of children at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, establishing there a model school for the study of children's diseases.

Dr. Holt was a man of small stature, light complexion and with a very pleasant disposition, according to Dr. Paul W. Beaven, of East avenue, who studied under him at Columbia. At one time Dr. Holt was known as "the biggest little man in medicine." Joseph T. Ailing, who was a member of the class of 1876 at the University, said that Dr. Holt was a bright, active student, whose studies gave evidence of a promising career. He was a close friend of the late Edmund Lyon, and attended his funeral here.

Dr. Rhees Pays Tribute.

President Rush Rhees, of the University, said yesterday:

"The death of Dr. Holt brings a severe loss to the world. Dr. Holt went to the Chinese capital a few months ago to give lectures in the Peking Medical College on the diseases of children—a subject to which he had devoted a singularly active and productive career. In this specialty he had attained a position of recognized eminence through many years of scientific study, skillful practice and constant publication of the results of his investigations and experience. In recent years he had given his thought and wisdom to nation-wide movements for the betterment of the health of children and for the public health in general.

"He was a graduate of the University of Rochester, in the class of 1875, and a trustee of the university since 1902. As a trustee he had been a counsellor of great wisdom and fidelity, and as an alumnus he had been loyal and generous in his devotion and gifts to his Alma Mater.

"He was especially interested in the development of the new Medical School of the University, and advised with the wisdom of long practical experience in the forming of the plans and the selection of the faculty for the school.

"As a man he bound friends to him inseparably by his integrity, his sympathetic understanding and his fine Christian character.

"The University of Rochester has lost, in his death, a counsellor and a friend whose value cannot be measured."

Was Child Health Leader.

Dr. L. L. Burton and Dr. Albert Kaiser, both of whom specialize in the diseases of children, said yesterday that Dr. Holt's death was a great loss to students of children's diseases. His writings, they said, have been the basis of much of the progress which has been made recently in this field of study.

Dr. Holt was a member of the Board of Directors and secretary of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research. He was accorded the unusual honor of having been re-elected as president of the American Pediatric Society. His fame rested not only on his ability as a scientist, but also upon his work as a teacher, and his pupils hold chairs of pediatrics at Johns Hopkins, Columbia and Toronto universities.

In 1886 he married Miss Linda Mairs, who was with him in China at the time of his death. He also leaves three sons, Harry and Calvert Holt, of New York, and Dr. L. Emmett Holt, Jr., of Johns Hopkins; a daughter, Mrs. Philip Lowry, of New York, and two grandchildren.

MRS. CLARKSON, WIFE OF MINISTER, IS DEAD

D. & C. Jan. 16
Mrs. Jennie Frey Clarkson, wife of Rev. Samuel J. Clarkson, D. D., minister of Monroe Avenue Methodist Church, died yesterday at the Highland Hospital after an illness of two weeks. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Monroe Avenue Methodist Church.

Ten physicians attended Mrs. Clarkson at one time or another, and in addition to consultation of Rochester physicians, Johns Hopkins University was consulted on the long-distance telephone. From the first, her case was regarded as critical. Hope was revived not many days ago, but pneumonia, on Friday, baffled the medical skill.

Mrs. Clarkson was born in 1873, to what then was Charlotte, her parents being the late John B. and Mary Bemish Frey. She attended Genesee Wesleyan Seminary. Twenty years ago she married Rev. Samuel J. Clarkson. The wedding took place in 1903, in her father's home at the lakeside. For the first three years of their married life, Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson lived in Niagara county. Their next home was in Middleport. After five years they went to Batavia for three years; then to Lockport. Mr. Clarkson was appointed to a church there for six years, then was sent to Rochester. He and Mrs. Clarkson had been in this city for three years.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Clarkson leaves three brothers, Julius G. Frey, of Sodus; George H. Frey, of Norfolk, Va., and John B. Frey, of Rochester, and a sister, Mrs. M. H. Lotta, of this city.

DIES IN PEKIN

T. U. Jan. 14
New York Physician Was Trustee of University of Rochester—Had Received
Many Honors. 1924

Pekin, Jan. 14.—(United Press).—Dr. Luther Emmett Holt, New York physician, died today in the Rockefeller Hospital here, of cardiac trouble.

Dr. Holt was born in Webster, N. Y., March 4, 1855, and was the son of Horace and Sarah Curtice Holt. He received the degree A. B. from the University of Rochester in 1875, and his master's degree in 1878. On completing his studies in medicine and surgery at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, he received the degree M. D. in 1880. He was a trustee of the University of Rochester.

His work attracted wide attention and he was honored by several universities. Rochester conferred the LL.D. on him in 1902, and Columbia made him a Doctor Science in 1904 and Brown University in 1914.

Dr. Holt married Linda Mairs in April 26, 1886. He was professor of diseases of children at the Polyclinic in New York 1890-1901. He was a member of the board of directors and secretary of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, and also member of leading medical associations.

As an authority Dr. Holt wrote a number of works on diseases of children and also numerous articles on this subject for medical magazines and periodicals.
