Form No. 627-A
June 22, 1918

Certificates like the one shown herewith are beginning to be cherished possessions in Rochester homes, where a son has made the supreme sacrifice to overthrow tyranny and maintain the honor of the flag. Rudolph Dittner, 155 Herald street, has it as a token of appreciation of a grateful government. To the father it is a lasting memorial of a soldier hero son who gave his all, and whose body lies in French soil. Henry Dittner was a private, first class, in Company G, 307th Infantry. He was killed in action in France September 6th.

Funeral of Sergeant Frank F. King Held From His Late Home—Large Number of Floral Tributes.

Funeral services for Sergeant Frank F. King, whose death occurred on Sunday at Camp Dix, were held this morning at 10 o'clock from his late home at 381 Burr street and attended by a large number of his friends. Rev. C. Waldo Cherry, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, was the officiating clergyman and he paid a high tribute to the character of the young soldier who has given his life for his country, quoting a number of particularly appropriate passages of Scripture.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. King, received a letter of condolence from Captain C. H. In his death, not only have you lost a good son, but the country has lost a good soldier."

Captain James N. Clinch, of Company 37, Tenth Training Battalion, 153d Depot Brigade, sent resolutions of condolence which were adopted and in which it was said: "We have ever found him to be a kind friend, faithful comrade and a true Christian and soldier who loved his country well."

'GOOD SMILE' ON HIS FACE BEFORE BATTLE

Nov. 17
How Lieutenant F. L. Simes Went to His Death.

In a recent letter received by L. Morris, of the New York Telephone Company, from Private J. W. Blythe, of Company H, 108th Infantry, who was formerly employed by the telephone company, and whose home is at No. 7 Donlin street, is an interesting account of the last time he saw Lieutenant Frank L. Simes during the terrible battle in which the lieutenant was killed. His letter follows in part:

"We were in No Man's Land and the shells began to come back to us in all sizes, and some very close. We had gone nearly a half mile when we noticed our wire getting thin on the spool, so there we stopped to get a breath of fresh air and a short rest. We looked around, for it was getting a little lighter and we could see the spoils of the battlefield, all kinds of Jerries and plenty of them.

"We were at a road now, a half mile from our starting point and right in the middle of 'hell.' The machine-gun bullets were whizzing by too close to make you feel comfortable. The next thing I knew one of my pals from old Company H came over and told me that First Lieutenant F. L. Simes had been hit, and hit badly, and that they had carried him back on a litter.

"I will tell you about the last time I saw him. I did not get a chance to speak to him, for he was a busy man, having charge of the company. As he stood on the jumping-off spot he was giving orders to his men how they should go. Then I saw that good smile of his and heard the voice we all loved, for it was always kind, although he meant what he said when he said it. Every one in his company liked him and was with him to the last."

T. U. Nov. 1-1918

LIEUT. H. OSCAR SOMMER,
Killed in Action.

Corporal Elon Shepard, Company G, 108th Infantry, wounded in action September 25th has died. He came to Rochester in April, 1914, and was graduated by the Rochester Business Institute. He enlisted in June, 1916, and saw border service, later guard duty in this state. He left with the regiment for Pelham Bay park and was sent overseas in May. He was assistant superintendent of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Sunday school.

One son killed in all probability and the other known to be wounded severely is the result of the recent fighting for Henry B. Ayers, 1010 Bay street. Maurice Ayers, of Company H, 108th Infantry, writing from an English hospital, informs his father of some of the details of the battle in which he fell, wounded by a shell fragment. Of the reported death of his brother Fred, of the same company, he had not learned, but letters from the companions of Fred indicate that death came to him from the explosion of a large shell.

Post, Nov. 1-1918

Private Michael P. Laemmel, Company A, 310th Infantry, made the supreme sacrifice for the nation in the fighting September 25th. He went to Camp Dix April 4th and overseas five weeks later. Ranney, 382 St. Clair avenue, Toronto, and before enlisting was employed by Dunlop's florists in that city. First Aug. 13

Final Tribute To Dead Hero

July 1 - 1918

Mr. and Mrs. Asa C. Dalrymple, parents of Sergeant Theron C. Dalrymple, who was recently killed while fighting with the engineers in France, have received the distinguished service medal which would have been awarded to the son had he recovered from his wounds. A letter written by Lieutenant Vincent J. Flanagan, Company A, United States Engineers, speaks in most glowing terms of the sergeant's conduct and of his popularity among the men. Another letter from Major Charles C. Pierce, chief of Grave Registration Service, says that the body has been interned in Grave 49, American Military Cemetery, Bonvillers, France, and that the grave will be well cared for.

Private Clarence L. Carter, reported on yesterday's casualty list as having been killed in action on July 18, was a brother of Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Fox of 174 Main street east. He is also survived by a brother, R. M. Carter of 8 Ray avenue, Gates.

Mrs. Fox read in last night's Times-Union of the unsuccessful attempt to deliver the telegram of notification from the War Department. The address given by the department was Mrs. Elizabeth Fox, 411 Main street east. Times Aug. 22 - 1918

As the allies and Yanks push forward against the Hun on all fronts, the cost in human lives to Rochester homes tends to show that the troops from the city are taking no small part in the proceedings. Five fatalities are announced on the casualty lists of yesterday, three of them going down facing toward Berlin, another being a victim of disease and still another dying as a result of wounds received in action.

Another gold star is to be added to the service flag that hangs in the window at 339 Frost Avenue. Among the first to die with the American Marines at Cantigny was John B. H. Fennessy, and last night his father received word from the War Department to the effect that a second son, Joseph A. Fennessy had fallen dead in action near St. Quentin on October 12. Joseph Fennessy was supposed to be a member of the Intelligence Department and how he happened to be jumping over the top with the rest of the doughboys is a mystery to his folks back home, unless it was that he "just got the fever," grabbed a rifle and went to his death. This casualty leaves only one blue star remaining in that service flag, that one for the youngest of the trio, Richard Fennessy.

Others to die in the leap "over the top" were Corporal Frank Peckens of 166 Plymouth Avenue, son of Mrs. Charles O. Peckens of the same address. In a letter to the boy's mother, a chum of young Peckens states that he died like a true American. He was just about to reach the Hindenburg line when a Hun bullet got him. Private George Beers, the other one to be laid low by a German bullet, was a former motorman on the New York State Railways, Rochester Lines.

Forfeited Exemption Claim.

Daniel P. Allaire was a member of Company G, 108th Infantry, and was reported as slightly wounded following the drive near St. Quentin. He formerly was employed as a machinist at the American Laundry Machine Company and could have claimed exemption on industrial grounds, but preferred to help out in the field of action. Letters indicate that he died "game." Sergeant Raymond S. Hammond died of pneumonia in a hospital in France.

A number of Rochester men were wounded in driving the Huns out of their firmly entrenched positions, many of them serving with the companies that left the city with the National Guard. With the Canadian forces serving at the front it has been reported that John G. Green, who formerly lived in Clinton Avenue South, had been wounded recently while in action. As Jack Green, he was well known as a soccer football player in this vicinity, being one of the strongest members of the old Independents. He had been in the thick of the fighting from the beginning and has been wounded three times. He is recovering from his latest "run-in" with Fritz at Lord Derby Hospital.

Last night the parents of Private Max Abramson of Company G, 108th Infantry, received word that he had been gassed in action.

THOUSANDS IN LINE TO VIEW FUNERAL CORTEGE

Addresses by National Commander of American Legion and City Assessor Ogden Point Out Need for Reconsecration.

While thousands of men and women looked on, many of them with tear-streaked faces, Rochester today paid tribute to five young men who gave their lives for their country in the World War. Men prominent in public and civic life marched against a cold, penetrating wind in the funeral cortege which preceded the exercises in the big drill hall of the New York State Armory where the galleries were filled with thousands who came to pay by their presence a small measure of respect for the youths whose remains were concealed within the flag-covered caskets.

Through a blunder on the part of a railroad official in Syracuse, the casket containing the body of Private Basil A. Warner, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Warner of Webster, was removed from the train which brought the caskets containing the bodies of the other five young men to Rochester. The fact that the Webster youth's casket was missing was not discovered until it was too late to have it forwarded here in time for the services at the armory. It was explained that the Syracuse railroad official had understood that the body was to be removed there and forwarded to Webster over the R., W. & O. route.

Practically the entire membership of Troop H and 80 per cent. of the membership of the 108th Regiment was at the New York Central station at 5:30 o'clock and by the time the start was made a majority of the members of the Common Council, members of the Board of Supervisors, representatives of the city administration and a number of men prominent in the civic and industrial life of the city were on hand. When the line was formed they immediately dropped in behind Major Frederick S. Conchman and the Park Band which, with a detail of mounted police, led the procession through Central avenue from Chatham street, where the line was formed, up Clinton avenue south to Main street and thence to the armory.

There were no ceremonies at the railroad station but despite this there was a large crowd on hand to witness the removal of the five wooden caskets from the trainshed to the street. Members of the American Legion, of the Knights of Columbus, of the F. M. C. A., and the Jewish Welfare Association and the Salvation Army were among those who marched in the procession from the railroad station to the armory and all along the line of march the curbstones were lined with men, women and children, while the doorways of stores and windows of buildings in Clinton avenue north and Main street east were filled with persons anxious to get a look at the cortege.

Pay Silent Tribute.

At the intersection of Main street and University avenue the pupils of Public School 14 and of the normal school stood along the curbing with American flags and as the procession approached the armory it was greeted by the children of Corpus Christi parochial school. As the flag-draped caskets passed slowly through the crowds men stood with heads bared in silent tribute to the dead heroes and at the armory when the gold star mothers entered the building the hundreds of men gathered at the entrance paid a similar tribute to them.

More than a thousand chairs had been placed in the big drill hall for the relatives of the youths who were being honored so long after death and for the city officials and members of organizations that participated in the procession. All these chairs were filled by the time the exercises were begun and the crowd of men and women had filled all available space in the galleries on either side and at the front end of the big hall. A temporary stage had been erected and on this the speakers and others who took part in the ceremonies occupied chairs.

After the five caskets had been wheeled into the hall they were lined up in a row before this stage, a wreath upon each, and after the khaki clad members of the regiment had taken up their stand on either side of the platform the Rev. Clinton Wunder, assistant pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, stepped to the front of the stage and said "Let us look to God in prayer." He then invoked the Divine blessing upon the occasion, upon the dead before him and upon their relatives.

When he had concluded City Assessor Charles E. Ogden, as personal representative of Mayor Edgerton, without any introduction, stepped forward and delivered a beautiful tribute to the dead heroes, saying:

City Assessor Charles E. Ogden spoke as follows:

"We are here today in the presence of the unseen, with love and reverence in our minds and hearts. We are inspired by the thought of a tragedy and great sacrifices. We touch again a great war, its campaigns and battles, knowing that it takes time to read history aright and accurately measure the tremendous issues which have been involved. Great battles and wars, like mountains, need perspective. But we know that these, our dead, gave their lives in unselfish devotion to their country and to liberty throughout the world.

"And in this presence we come in contact with the infinite, as we sorrow over our dead, and realize the debt we owe them. Here we devoutly turn to life's master passions, its noblest inspirations, its choicest moments of exultation. We mourn for these young lives, cut off in the flower of youth, but we rejoice in the splendid heroism which held them to the service of their country and crown them with immortal glory.

"Life is only a short span at its longest, but it is filled with boundless opportunities. Knowledge and industry give it power to conquer the material world, to master steam and electricity, to harness the unseen forces which are hidden in the earth and air. Thought makes these its servant when it flashes intelligence through the air and under the ocean and compels the wind and waves to obey its will. It carves statuary, paints pictures and makes literature. Ambition points the way to accomplishment and the vision of youth is wide and boundless in all that it may achieve. From these high hopes and marvelous possibilities these young lives were cut off. As far as this world is concerned, the silent tomb is their pit.

Love of Country Results.

What is this great sacrifice made in vain? I take it we all have those moments of doubt which bring us in conflict with what is best and most abiding, times when we wonder if simple duty is worth while. Yet the answer comes loud and insistent when love demands its hearing. What complete effacement of itself it can make, what thrilling moments it can give us, to what heroic service it can impel men. And in the light of a great opportunity it commands men to respond to a sense of duty and to die, if need be, in answer to its call. And there is no human love more exalted, no sense of duty more compelling, than love of country. This is true of all men, everywhere. How perfectly so it is in this land of ours where political, social and moral freedom have been given their most perfect test under a government which guarantees equal liberty to all. How fine a thing it is, then, even amidst great travail and suffering, to die for one's country.

"A man was walking with an English gardener on a great estate. He saw a strange, uncomely plant, upon which the gardener seemed to bestow unusual care. 'What is it?' he inquired. The gardener answered: 'It is a century plant. My father cared for it 40 years; I have cared for it almost as long, and my son, who is my assistant, will care for it after I am gone. My father never saw it bloom, and I shall never see it bloom, but my children and my children's children shall see it bloom, and then they will think of my father and of me.'

"These, our precious dead, have given their all for the boon of human liberty. In this world they will not see the fruits of their labors and their sacrifice. But all future generations will know the story of their valor and their devotion to duty. After all, when they went to death did they not touch the top and radiance of human life? And even now, in our nearness to their sacrifice, our appreciation muffled and hid beneath the grief we feel and the tears that spring unbidden to our eyes, do we not glory in what they did, and understand that the clouds will pass away and the golden threads of memory will bind them about with our abiding love and a nation's gratitude.

Their Immortality Safe.

"Is it not true that the greatest fame that can come to men is to be used at God's critical times, to give service for the common good, to sacrifice personal hopes so as to give strength to constructive epochs, to perceive the right and have no fear of consequences, to look ahead and dare to die for righteousness? Yes, so far as these, our boys, are concerned, their immortality is safe. Their works cannot perish. Their influence lives in a country built on divine principles, in its industries, its homes, its government, its national integrity.

"In the presence of these mute bodies we must consecrate ourselves anew to our country's needs. Disaster is upon the world in its days of reconstruction. Mad radicalism threatens to dig under our own constitution, inviting disaster to our land and country. It behooves us to catch and hold up the vision of the high things for which they died, and cherish them as the mariner cherishes the guiding star which stands upon the horizon. If stormy days are upon us, we will take new faith from the suffering which these endured, and look for the sun to break through the rift in the clouds and lead us away from selfishness and despair into the light of our eternal destiny."

Mr. Ogden was followed by Frederick W. Gairbrath, Jr., national commander of the American Legion, who paid the tribute of one soldier to another as follows:

Soldier To Soldier.

"Throughout New York today the shrines of the state are where the bodies of these war heroes lie. This armory is a shrine devoted to the high and lofty spirit of this nation and these boys were the self-offered sacrifices.

"These men are not the unfortunate ones; they are the fortunate ones. They have been chosen as the greatest givers to their country. We that are gathered here to do them honor hold no brief for any nation other than America but we will refuse to sacrifice the idealism these men fought for. They rest in peace, back here in the land they loved and served so gallantly, and they rest in the belief that we will not sell or abandon the principles they went forth to protect.

"One thing is sure—these men fought for the common cause of humanity and not for any material ends, and whatever our convictions be today we must hold to that truth. There comes a time in the history of all peoples when they have to abandon their ideals or reconsecrate themselves.

"America will have to reconsecrate herself to the cause for which these men died, and we must maintain our relations with the nations whose sons died for the same cause that these men gave their lives. As we lay these boys in the soil of their homeland it is with the firm, high purpose that their sacrifice will be a means to cement us closer to our sister nations and with the determination that when the nations across the sea look to us as the Leader Out of the West, in the name of these dead heroes, we will answer to the call."

A mixed octet then sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," after which the Rev. George F. Kettell of St. Bernard's Seminary offered prayer in which he again asked God's blessing upon the occasion, upon the relatives of the dead war heroes and upon the country.

"We have taken up the torch they gave us on Flanders field and we will carry it on," he said. He concluded by praying to God for eternal rest for the men whose casket enclosed bodies lay before him. "Taps" were then sounded by Bugler Anthony Infantolima, this being the concluding and one of the most impressive features of the ceremonies.

Funeral Arrangements.

The caskets remained in the drill hall until noon when they were removed by relatives. The funeral of Sergeant Holahan will be held tomorrow morning at 8:45 o'clock from the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Holahan-Rehberg, 1496 Main street east, and at 9 o'clock from Corpus Christi Church. The funeral of Private William A. Curran will be held tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Curran, 142 Clifton street, and at 2 o'clock from Immaculate Conception Church. Services for Harvey Noone will be held in the Congregational Church in Churchville at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The funeral of Corporal Peckens will be held from Cornhill Methodist Church at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The funeral of Second Lieutenant Clovis J. Smith will be held from 745 Main street east tomorrow morning. Arrangements have been made for the funeral of Basil A. Warner, whose body was left in Syracuse, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Methodist Church in Webster.

That flag be flown at half-mast was one of the requests made by Mayor Edgerton in a proclamation covering the observance of today as a day of mourning for the dead war heroes. Both the Common Council and Board of Supervisors adopted resolutions in the form of tributes to the dead soldiers, and the Supreme Court and City Court suspended their morning sessions.

Among those in attendance at the exercises in the armory was a delegation of members of the Federation of Women's Clubs, led by Mrs. Sherman Clarke. Their tribute to the dead war heroes was a large wreath.

Paying Tribute To Men Who Died While Serving Overseas.

March 23, 1921
Something of the bitter agony, the martial fervor, the dauntless resolution, the hopes, the fears and the tears of those days when Rochester sons were fighting and dying somewhere in Europe while their loved ones at home could only wait and wonder, returned with sudden insistent force yesterday morning when five flag-draped caskets, holding the bodies of five Rochester members of the 108th Infantry who gave their lives, were conveyed through the heart of the city between lines of silent, reverent spectators, and deposited in the Rochester State Armory. Even more vividly than the return of the triumphant 27th Division just two years ago did this solemn spectacle bring home to easily forgetful Rochesterians the meaning of the war and its costliness.

No funeral cortege could have received more sincere or impressive respect and no famous public man could have aroused more genuine expression of sorrow than the sight of these five caskets slowly transported in draped funeral cars to the accompaniment of a dirge played by the Park Band and escorted by the mounted members of Troop H and the Rochester battalion of the 3d New York Infantry. Not since the scenes attendant upon the close of the war had the military atmosphere so obtruded itself upon the city. But the "home-coming" of these dead boys recalled in sharp contrast the reception given the returning heroes of the 27th two years ago, with the hysterical cheers of an adoring city, the burning of red fire, the triumphant music and the happy hearts. The five caskets yesterday provided an entirely different picture to the mute multitudes that watched.

From the New York Central Station, where the bodies arrived at 8.30 o'clock, through Clinton Avenue North to Main Street East and thence to the Armory, the solemn parade was headed by a platoon of mounted police, followed by Chief Marshal Frederick S. Couchman and staff and the Park Band. Troop H, in excellent formation and with horses freshly groomed, was commanded by Captain Kenneth C. Townson. Then came the Rochester battalion of the 3d New York Infantry, commanded by Major Arthur Smith, members of the American Legion with their band, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans, the Old Guard and women's patriotic societies, all of the last four organizations in automobiles. In addition, delegations from the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A., the Jewish Welfare Association and the Salvation Army voluntarily joined the parade at the station.

Crowds Greet Train.

Crowds filled the station long before the arrival of the train from Syracuse and watched as soldiers carried the caskets from the train to the cars waiting outside. There were no formal ceremonies at the station, and the parade was quickly formed and the march to the Armory begun.

The parade reached Main Street when morning traffic in the downtown section was at its busiest, but there was an immediate and instinctive halting of business as the cortege appeared. There was no need for the police to clear the streets. The respect and sympathy of the spectators cleared a more effective path than any amount of authority could have done. As the parade neared the Armory, the press of spectators grew denser. Near University Avenue, the children of No. 14 School lined the curbstones, waving American flags, and a little farther the children of Corpus Christi Parochial School paid a similar tribute. All along the line of march public buildings and dwellings displayed flags at half mast, in accordance with the suggestion of Mayor Edgerton.

At the Armory two lines of khaki-clad soldiers formed a lane from the entrance to the street and between it the caskets were slowly borne into the building. Thousands of persons watched from every vantage point and, as the caskets were carried into the Armory, every man, with a single impulse, bared his head. Many women wept audibly.

When the caskets had all been carried inside, the public was allowed into the gallery of the drill hall, where the services were conducted, and in little more than ten minutes every seat was occupied, the spectators rising in tiers of massed humanity around the three sides of the hall. The lower floor was reserved for families of the dead soldiers, the American Legion and other military and patriotic bodies.

Officials on Platform.

On the platform were Chief Marshal Couchman; Colonel Henry W. Morse, adjutant general; members of the American Legion county committee, Russell E. Griffith, Thomas H. Remington and Secretary Allan H. Williams; Captain Albert M. Barager; Bugler Anthony Infantolino; Rev. Clinton Wunder and Rev. George F. Kettell, chaplains of the Monroe County American Legion; members of the double quartette which sang, and the two speakers, Charles E. Ogden, City Assessor, and Colonel Frederick W. Galbraith of Cincinnati, national commander of the American Legion.

Rev. Clinton Wunder opened the service with a prayer for divine blessing on the nation which these dead heroes had died to serve, and pleaded that their sacrifice be not in vain. Mr. Ogden, the first speaker, said in part:

We are here to-day in the presence of the unseen, with love and reverence in our hearts. We are inspired by the thought of a great tragedy and a great sacrifice. We touch again a great war, its campaigns and battles, knowing that it takes time to read history aright and measure accurately the tremendous issues which have been involved. Great battles and great wars, like mountains, need perspective. But we know that these, our dead, gave their lives in unselfish devotion to their country and to liberty throughout the world.

In the presence of these mute bodies we must consecrate ourselves anew to the country's needs. Disaster is upon the world in its days of reconstruction. Mad radicalism threatens to dig under our own constitution, inviting disaster to our land and country. It behooves us to catch and hold up the vision of the high things for which they died and cherish them as the mariner cherishes the guiding star which stands upon the horizon.

Colonel Galbraith's Address.

Colonel Galbraith said:
Comrades and fellow Americans: I come here to-day as a representative of the greatest organization that America has ever seen, an organization of service men and ex-service men and women, with a membership of a million and a half, to pay tribute to better men than we. All over the United States the same ceremony is in progress to-day of worshipping at the shrine of courage, heroism and patriotism. It is one of those shrines at which we reconsecrate ourselves to the cause for which they fought, that the world might be made safe, that it might never again be menaced as it was menaced before. These flag-enshrined remains say to us to-day: "Our sacrifices must not be in vain. We look to you to see that the ideals of freedom and democracy are perpetuated for all the world." These remains represent for us the idealism of the world.

The loved ones of these soldier dead have a proud privilege. With all sorrow, yet with honor and pride, they have the knowledge that their loved ones worked not in vain and that their work shall go on. From these we take the torch of patriotism and loyalty and pass it on to other loyal Americans who shall say, "Never shall the flame go out. From day to day we shall keep it fresh and pure for God and country."

The world is in a sorry plight. Europe looks to America to take the leadership out of the dark forest. America has never failed. It has a strong and virile people who believe in justice and right as against might. There remains give back the answer to Europe that we have again pledged ourselves to freedom, justice and right.

These men were the comrades of many who are here to-day. They were heroes of America, loved by all, and to them we pay our humble tribute, envying them the privilege they had and thanking God that their spirit lives and always will live in the hearts of a loyal people.

Rev. George F. Kettell pronounced the benediction and Bugler Infantolino sounded "taps." After the services the bodies lay in state and hundreds of persons viewed the caskets. On each casket was a wreath of white carnations, donated by the city. There were also gifts of flowers from the Federation of Women's Clubs, George H. Yerkes Post Auxiliary and Robertshaw Post.

Many Organizations Present.

In the front row nearest the caskets were seated members of the families of the dead heroes. Behind them were members of the Common Council, the Board of Supervisors and other city officials, veterans of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, members of the Army and Navy Union, and Sons of Veterans Camps came next. In another prominent place were the Gold Star Mothers. The Federation of Women's Clubs was represented by a committee consisting of Mrs. Eric H. Gray, Mrs. Angus Mackay, Mrs. Sherman Clarke, Mrs. Arthur Holway, Mrs. William Hennessy, Mrs. Charles Snyder and Mrs. A. B. Hendrix, and there was a delegation from the World War Mothers of the Nineteenth Ward, of which Mrs. Deloss G. Eldredge is president.

"Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" was sung by a double quartette, consisting of George W. Walton and John W. Singleton, tenors; J. Guernsey Curtis and Edward M. Horner, baritones; Mrs. Loula Gates Bootes and Miss Lucille Davis, sopranos; Mrs. Clara Howland and Mrs. Raymond Lewis, contraltos.

It was expected that six caskets would be brought to Rochester, but through a misunderstanding the body of Israel H. Warner, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Warner of Webster, was held at Syracuse to be transferred to Webster later. The father and a brother of the dead soldier were at the station when the train arrived, but left immediately for their homes when they discovered the body had not arrived. The body of Private Allan Eggleston of Company H, a former student of Mechanics Institute, was also expected, but it was sent instead direct to his parents' home at Coudersport, Pa.

The five who were honored yesterday were Second Lieutenant J. Clovia Smith, son of Adam J. Smith of 128 Rugby Avenue; Sergeant John T. Holahan, son of Mrs. Mary Holahan Reiberg of 1496 Main Street East; Corporal Frank Peckens, son of Charles D. Peckens of 166 Plymouth Avenue; Private William A. Curran, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Curran of 112 Clinton Street; Private Harvey C. Noone, son of Mrs. Mary Noone of Churchville.

Private funeral services will be conducted to-day for all five soldiers. The funeral of Lieutenant Smith will take place this morning from 845 Main Street West, with burial in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery. The bodies of Sergeant Holahan and Private Curran will be buried in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery, Corporal Peckens in Mt. Hope and Private Noone in Churchville.

Brilliant Career Cut Off By Death Of Lieut. Smith

Lieutenant J. Clovis Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Smith of 125 Rugby avenue, and nephew of the late John P. Smith, was gassed at the battle of Cantigny on May 25, 1918, and died in a base hospital on June 22 of the same year.

Following his graduation from St. Peter and Paul's School and the Rochester Catholic High School, Lieutenant Smith entered Notre Dame University, from where he was graduated with the highest honors, having the degree of Ph. B. and M. A. conferred on him. Lieutenant Smith next entered Columbia University, where he studied law for three years and was graduated with the highest honors. His remarkable power of oratory attracted wide attention.

Lieutenant Smith was born, September 15, 1894. He enjoyed the unique distinction of having completed seven years of college work at the age of 24.

On August 27, 1917, Smith enlisted in the army and was assigned to the officers training camp at Fort Niagara and was one of 20 to be commissioned second lieutenants in the regular army. He specialized in machine gun work and drew an early assignment for France. Upon his arrival in France he was sent to a French school to study machine guns, but as a call came for duty at the front he was chosen and was soon on active duty as a platoon officer in the Twenty-sixth Infantry.

For several days he was associated with Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, jr., then a major. But for his untimely death he would have been won promotion in a very few days to the rank of captain.

Lieutenant Smith was a member of Rochester Council 178, K. of C.

Private Harvey C. Noone, son of Mrs. Mary Noone of Churchville.

Private Basel A. Warner, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Warner of Webster.

City and county paid homage today with fitting demonstration to their war slain sons of Rochester's own, the Third, later 108th infantry, and to all who died on the field of honor in France.

The cold gray of early dawn already found hundreds of persons, civilians and men in uniform, grouped about the New York Central station waiting the arrival of the funeral train. As the shrill blast of a whistle sounded the approach the crowd stood with bowed heads as the colors were raised to half mast at the Joseph avenue side of the terminal.

Sheriff Frederick S. Couchman, chief marshal of the memorial parade, and a detail of men under command of Sergeant William Kavanaugh, commander of Robertshaw post, American Legion, received the bodies from the Federal escort.

Second Lieut. J. Clovis Smith.

10,000 Crowd the Armory.

Ten thousand men, women and children, crowded the large drill shed of the Armory in Main street east to render honor to those who cast away their lives for the nation. It was triumph in tragedy.

Colonel Frederick W. Galbraith, jr., national commander of the American Legion, county officials and city authorities, clergy and singers, united with the great public assembly to tell in half chanted mystic words the valor of Monroe county as typified in the five flag draped caskets that lay side by side in the Armory chancel formed by a semi-circle of palms in front of the mourning hung speakers' platform.

In Shrouds of National Colors.

Wrapped in shrouds of red, white and blue, were the bodies of Second Lieutenant J. Clovis Smith, Twenty-sixth infantry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam B. Smith of 128 Rugby avenue; Sergeant John T. Holahan, Machine Gun company, 108th, son of Mrs. Mary Holahan Rehberg, 1496 Main street east; Corporal Frank E. Peckens, Machine Gun company, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Peckens, 166 Plymouth avenue south; Private First Class William A. Curran, Co. G, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Curran, 142 Clifton street, and Private Harvey C. Noone, Co. G, son of Mrs. Mary Noone of Churchville.

The body of Private Basel Warner, Co. A, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Warner of Webster, was transferred through a misunderstanding at Syracuse. Mr. Warner, father, and a brother of the slain soldier, were at the Rochester terminal when the five bodies arrived. They left immediately for their home. Although the body of Private Allan Eggleston, Co. H, a former student at Mechanics Institute, was also expected, it was sent direct to Coudersport, Pa., to the Eggleston home.

Great Crowds Line Streets.

Throughout the long line of march from the station through Clinton avenue north, to Main street and east to the Armory the streets on both sides were flanked rows deep with persons, reverent, head-bared, and sobbing. Children from School 14 lined the north side of Main street east between University avenue and Union street; students at East High saluted the cortege as it passed Alexander street, while at Corpus Christi school, where Sergeant Holahan attended, the sisters stood with the charges at attention until the flag-draped caskets were carried past.

A cordon of mounted police in charge of Sergeant Murray headed the procession from the station. Sheriff Couchman, in the uniform of a major, followed, flanked by the following aides: Colonel Henry W. Morse, adjutant; Captain A. M. Barrager, Captain N. S. Peverill, Lieutenants B. R. Wetenhall, C. S. Cory, Machine Gun company; Morris Winter, representing National Disabled Soldiers' league; Sergeants C. S. Brayton and Eugene Howard.

Solemn Procession Moves.

Promptly at 9 o'clock Anthony Infantolino, official bugler, sounded the call to advance. Slowly and solemnly the procession moved. Following the marshal and his aides came the Park band, directed by Theodore Dossenbach; Third battalion, Third infantry, Major Arthur Smith commanding; Company H, Captain Russel Bingeman commanding; Company G, Captain Elmer G. Koch; Company A, Lieutenant Elmer F. Cole; Machine Gun company, Captain A. C. Betts; Ambulance company, Captain Walter Edwards.

The American Legion band, led by Victor Lindboe, headed delegations from the various city and county posts. These were commanded by Commander William B. Zimmer, Milton E. Lewis, Flower City, Burton Miller, Cooper, Doty, Genesee Valley, Gudiness, Guilford, Memorial, Kohlmetz, Pulaski, Engineers, Stewart, Wilson, Yerkes, Simes, Somers and Robertshaw posts had detachments in line.

Close to the head of the procession were the official representatives of the city, Herbert W. Pierce, commissioner of public works; William C. Filly, park commissioner; Judge Willis K. Gillette, and John Dunbar.

Sergt. John T. Holahan.

assistant superintendent of parks. Following them was the entire body of the Board of Supervisors, headed by William G. Staudmaier. The Veterans of Foreign Wars and Spanish War Veterans were in line. The entire body of Mechanics Institute marched.

Gold Star Mothers in Autos.

Leading the Gold Star mothers, who rode in closed automobiles, was the Salvation Army band. Mrs. Mae Murray, president, headed the automobile cortege. In another car was Mrs. Ida Evans, past president. A number of the mothers and nurses of Nightingale post, followed on foot. Throughout the long route these women, who, too, have lost sons and brothers in the World war, were accorded a demonstration. Somber bows acknowledged the crowd's appreciation of their contribution to the nation's freedom. Mrs. Sherman Clarke and members of the Federation of Women's clubs drove behind.

Troop H, commanded by Kenneth E. Townson, with Captain Wheeler Case as aide, came as escort to the mourning covered coach bearing the caskets of the five heroes, who now take their places with the immortals. On the coach was a single wreath, the tribute of Rochester Federation of Women's clubs.

Perfect Order Maintained.

The entire second platoon was on duty dividing the posts between the station and Army under command of Inspector W. A. Stein and Captain Frank E. Mehle. Perfect order was maintained, and traffic halted without murmur or comment for the hour that it took the cortege to pass. Taxi drivers and halted street car motormen reverently saluted in bared heads as the caskets moved slowly toward the sanctuary.

Inside the Armory Commander W. J. Graham posted guards of Naval Militia at intervals of twenty feet down the long center aisle and far out to the curb. Already the balconies were filled when the cortege arrived. Reverent, curious, fashionable, threadbare, lowly, proud, needy and wealthy crowded every available space to honor the enshrined heroes.

At the Armory.

On arriving at the Armory, the infantry companies filed in and formed in two long lines, from the main entrance to the speakers' platform at the north end of the building. Between these lines, the Gold Star Mothers marched in, while the troops presented arms and citizens saluted with bared heads, and took the places of honor reserved for them at the left of the platform.

Next came the flag-draped, flower-crowned caskets of the heroic dead, each born on the shoulders of six stalwart soldiers, who placed them reverently in front of the platform, to receive the tribute of their city and country. After the caskets were in place, the soldiers deployed to right and left, passing around the crowd, and formed as a guard of honor, on the rear of the platform.

Private William A. Curran.

Silver-haired veterans of the Civil war; younger survivors of the Spanish-American war, already beginning to show their years, and stalwart youths, many battle scarred, from the World war, stood at attention until the assemblage was seated. Members of the Army and Navy union and the Sons of Veterans camps also paid tribute.

Seated to the left of the shrine were the mothers, fathers, sisters and other relatives of the dead. The supervisors and city officials were given places to the right. Far to the front places were given to the Gold Star mothers, while other organizations and private mourners, found standing room in other sections of the Armory.

A hush covered the assemblage as the head of the procession entered.

An Impressive Stillness.

In the interlude every eye was turned to the pathetic group of bereaved parents. Although unable to withhold their tears, they stood through the impressive stillness, fortified in the knowledge their's was a worthy sacrifice.

The great Christian promise broke the silence—"I am the Resurrection and the Life—he that believes shall not perish;" as Rev. Clinton Wunder began the invocation. Words of tribute and hope from Charles Ogden, a stirring eulogy from the Legion's national commander, hymns by a male quartette, benediction and taps, and the heroes were given to the charge of their respective families for private burial.

Assessor Ogden's Address.

"We are here to-day in the presence of the unseen, with love and reverence in our minds and hearts," said City Assessor Charles E. Ogden in his address. "We are inspired by the thought of a great tragedy and great sacrifices. We touch again a great war, its campaigns and battles, knowing that it takes time to read history aright and accurately measure the tremendous issues which have been involved. Great battles and wars, like mountains, need perspective. But we know that these, our dead, gave their lives in unselfish devotion to their country and to liberty throughout the world."

"And in this presence we come in contact with the infinite, as we sorrow over our dead, and realize the debt we owe them. Here we devoutly turn to life's master passions, its noblest inspirations, its choicest moment of exultation. We mourn for these young lives, cut off in the flower of youth, but we rejoice in the splendid heroism which held them to the service of their country and crowns them with immortal glory."

Young Lives Cut Off.

"Life is only a short span at its longest, but it is filled with boundless opportunities. Knowledge and industry give it power to conquer the material world, to master steam and electricity, to harness the unseen forces which are hidden in the earth and air. Thought makes these its servant when it flashes intelligences through the air and under the ocean and compels the wind and waves to obey its will. It carves statues, paints pictures and makes literatures. Ambition points the way to accomplishment and the vision of youth is wide and boundless in all that it may achieve. From these high hopes and marvelous possibilities these young lives were cut off. So far as this world is concerned, the silent tomb is their all."

"Was this great sacrifice made in vain? I take it we all have those moments of doubt which bring us in conflict with what is best and most abiding, times when we wonder if simple duty is worth while."

Death from Sense of Duty.

"Yet the answer comes loud and insistent when love demands its hearing. What complete effacement of itself it can make, what thrilling moments it can give us, to what heroic service it can impel men. And in the light of a great opportunity it commands men to respond to a sense of duty and to die, if need be, in answer to its call. And there is no human love more exalted, no sense of duty more compelling, than love of country. This is true of all men, everywhere. How perfectly so it is in this land of ours where political, social and moral freedom have been given their most perfect test under a government which guarantees equal liberty to all. How fine a thing it is, then, even amidst great travail and suffering, to die for one's country."

"These, our precious dead, have given their all for the boon of human liberty. In this world they will not see the fruits of their labors and their sacrifice. But all future generations will know the story of their valor and their devotion to duty. After all, when they went to death did they not touch the top and radiance of human life? And even now, in our nearness to their sacrifice, our appreciation muffled and hid beneath the grief we feel and the tears that spring unbidden to our eyes, do we not glory in what they did, and understand that the clouds will pass away and the golden threads of memory will bind them about with our abiding love and a nation's gratitude.

Private Basel Warner.

Service for Common Good.

"Is it not true that the greatest fame that can come to men is to be used at God's critical times, to give service for the common good, to sacrifice personal hopes so as to give strength to constructive epochs, to perceive the right and have no fear of consequences, to look ahead and dare to die for righteousness? Yes, so far as these, our boys, are concerned, their immortality is safe. Their works cannot perish. Their influence lives in a country builded on divine principles, in its industries, its homes, its government, its national integrity.

"In the presence of these mute bodies we must consecrate ourselves anew to our country's needs. Disaster is upon the world in its days of reconstruction. Mad radicalism threatens to dig under our own constitution, inviting disaster to our land and country. It behooves us to catch and hold up the vision of the high things for which they died, and cherish them as the mariner cherishes the guiding star which stands upon the horizon. If stormy days are upon us, we will take new faith from the suffering which these endured, and look for the sun to break through the rift in the clouds and lead us away from selfishness and despair in to the light of our eternal destiny."

Frank W. Galbraith, National Commander of the American Legion, followed Mr. Ogden.

They Typify the Spirit.

Colonel Galbraith opened his address with a tribute to the men who broke the Hindenburg line, and especially those who made the supreme sacrifice in that achievement.

"But," he said, "these men represented the entire spirit of the corps—all that is fine in man and manhood. To-day the shrine of the nation is wherever these services are held. These shrines represent the spirit of the nation.

"One thing this country must remember—to consider—is that we fought a common cause—the cause of humanity. Whatever belief we now hold that is the truth. We fought for the preservation of civilization. There comes a time in all civilizations when they have to abandon the ideal for which they fought or reconsecrate themselves to that cause. Now the cause that affects America is perfectly clear to me. We hold no brief for any nation other than America except that we refuse as a nation to sacrifice the ideals for which we fought. We fought for no material thing. We fought for ideals and self-preservation, and we have to reconsecrate ourselves and redeem our relations with the peoples with whom we fought for humanity.

"These men are fortunate," said the speaker, pointing tenderly to the flag-covered caskets. "They are not the unfortunate ones. They typify the spirit in which the American troops fought. They rest in peace in the belief that we will not sell our ideals ever or abandon our idealism and that in the end America will be the great force that will cement all the nations together—the Leader out of the West for whom all the nations of the world have been looking, and for whom they are still looking."

Singing by Double Quartette.

At the conclusion of the speaking, a double quartette sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." The quartette consisted of Professor George W. Walton and John W. Singleton, tenors; Gurnsey Curtiss and Edward M. Horner, bass; Mrs. Loula Bootes and Lucille Davis, sopranos, and Mrs. Claire Howland and Mrs. Raymond Lewis, contraltos.

Rev. George F. Kettell, of St. Bernard's seminary, delivered the closing invocation, and the exercises were concluded with "taps," sounded by Anthony Infantolino.

The Private Funerals.

Members of the various legion posts will provide burial escort for the slain soldiers. Sergeant Holohan's funeral will be held to-morrow from Corpus Christi church; a solemn requiem will be said at Immaculate Conception church for Curran; Lieutenant Smith's funeral will take place also to-morrow morning from 645 Main street west; in the afternoon, Peckens will be buried from Corn Hill Methodist church; at 3 o'clock Noone will be buried from the Congregational church at Churchville. Services will be held Friday for Warner at the Methodist church in Webster. Firing squads will sound the last salute at the graves.

Lieutenant J. Clovis Smith.

Lieutenant Smith died June 22, 1918, from the effects of a gas attack at the battle of Cantigny, May 25th, and was buried in a hospital cemetery. He was born in Rochester, September 15, 1894. He received his early education at St. Peter and Paul's school and was graduated in 1917 with a record standing of 100 per cent. in every subject. He was graduated from the Catholic High school in 1911 and made his college course at Notre Dame, where he received the highest honors in his class. In 1917 he was graduated from the law school at Columbia university, the winner of the Vanderbilt scholarship. He enrolled for the officers' training camp at Fort Niagara in August, 1917, and was one of the very few at the camp who was awarded a commission in the regular army. He was sent to France in January, 1918, and assigned to a machine gun school. Later he was put in command of a machine gun platoon of the Twenty-sixth infantry. He was a member of Rochester council, Knights of Columbus. Smith was the first member of the Bar association to die for his country in the war and at a meeting of the association to-day called for the purpose suitable resolutions were adopted.

Williams, 383 Monroa avenue. Yesterday they motored to the home of Mrs. Claude Woodworth, sister of Dr. Stallman, who live near Glen Edythe. About 5 o'clock Dr. Stallman and his daughter went out on the bay in a rowboat. Dr. Stallman wearing a bathing suit. Rowing to a point about 150 feet from shore Dr. Stallman dove

Mrs. Stallman and Mrs. Woodworth were on the shore and hearing the cries of the child Mrs. Woodworth obtained a boat and rowed quickly to the spot where Dr. Stallman went down. The water at the point where the fatality occurred is not very clear and no trace of the body could be found. Mrs. Woodworth towed the boat containing the child to shore and summoned help. Mrs. Clark Long, who lives near Glen Edythe rowed to the spot where Dr. Stallman went down to extend aid and after all efforts to locate the body had failed Coroner Killip was notified.

Morgue attendant Benjamin Corcoran went to the scene but owing to the heavy growth of weeds dragging was difficult. The water at this point is quite deep and after considerable time in trying to locate the body Morgue Attendant Corcoran was obliged to abandon the task owing to darkness. Dragging was resumed this morning when the body was found and taken to the Moore & Fiske undertaking rooms at 31 Lake avenue.

Guardsman and Young Business Man Stricken With Pneumonia Near Argonne Forest—Served on Mexican Border. July 16, 1921

The body of Sergeant, First Class, Charles J. McInerney, veteran of the World War and a prominent member of the national guard and popular to an unusual degree in business and social circles, has been returned from France, where he died of pneumonia. Word was received from the government piers at Hoboken, N. J., yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Mabel E. McInerney, who resides at 28 Danforth street.

SERGEANT C. J. M'INERNEY.

Few Rochester men reach the age of 25 years who enjoyed the popularity and loyalty of friendship that characterized the brief life of "Mac," as the deceased soldier was known to his host of friends. His life will forever be a shining example to his friends of just what good fellowship means. "Mac" always did just a little more than his share in any undertaking. He was of the type that was perhaps just a bit retiring, perhaps a little slow to "warm up" to new acquaintances, but once a real friendship was formed there was no breaking of the ties. Loyalty characterized his every motive in life.

Sergeant McInerney lived most of his life on Danforth street, in the Twentieth ward. As a boy he attended School 29 and was bright to an unusual degree, graduating at an early age. He then attended West High School for a number of terms.

Early in life he made a connection with the brokerage firm of Erickson Perkins & Company, and this was the only position he ever held. He was promoted from time to time through various minor positions until he became one of the bookkeepers. He was given leave of absence when war was declared, and it has always been a matter of keen regret on the part of his employers that Mac did not return to again take up his civilian duties.

Sergeant McInerney enlisted in the Hospital Corps, 3d N. Y. Infantry May 26, 1910, for a period of five years. On June 22, 1915, he again enlisted, this time for a period of one year. A year later, at the time of the trouble on the Mexican Border, he again enlisted and was sent to Pharr, Texas, with his unit. From the first Sergeant McInerney showed a liking for the military game, and he was promoted through all the grades until he attained the highest position possible for an enlisted man—that of sergeant 1st class.

On April 13, 1917, Sergeant McInerney answered the call of the President for service in the World War. For many months he served long hours while local troops of the 108th Infantry were being prepared for the hard days in France. Finally, in September, 1917, he moved with his regiment to Spartanburg, S. C.

A few months later circumstances developed that removed Sergeant McInerney from his regiment. Major W. W. Percy, who later became lieutenant-colonel, was transferred from the Hospital Corps of the 108th Infantry to the First Pioneer Infantry, and he took Sergeant McInerney with him to act as his senior noncommissioned officer. McInerney held his high rank to the day he died in France. His regiment was serving near the Argonne Forest when he was stricken with pneumonia and lived but a few days.

Old comrades of the service will have charge of the military part of the funeral. Through the courtesy of Yerkes Post, American Legion, every honor will be accorded the deceased soldier, who will be laid to rest in Riverside Cemetery. It is not known when the body will arrive in Rochester.

Sergeant McInerney is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mabel E. McInerney and two sisters, Hazel E. and Mabel J. McInerney.

ONE MASS SAID
OVER REMAINS OF 3 HEROES

Times Union
St. Patrick's Cathedral
Crowded This Morning for Service and Streets
Lined With Silent Throngs of People. Sept. 1821

Rochester paid final tribute today to three more of its soldier dead when military funeral services were held at 9 o'clock this morning from St. Patrick's Cathedral for Private James Vogel Viggiani, Corporal Louis C. Whitman of 194 Conkey avenue and Wigbert A. Flen of 1094 Lyell avenue. Solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by the rector, the Rev. J. Francis O'Hearn. The Rev. Matthias Hargather of St. Michael's Church was deacon and the Rev. Charles J. Bruton was subdeacon; Harold Miller, a student, was master of ceremonies. Among the priests in the sanctuary were the Rev. William Brien, the Rev. Chester McCauley, the Rev. Edward Ball, the Rev. George Doud, the Rev. Joseph Wurzer and the Rev. Ignatius Cameron.

Bearers for Private Viggiani were Earl J. Imo, Ross J. Turner, H. E. Jaynes, Casper George, Harold Newman and Frank Retinger; for Corporal Whitman they were Harold Clark, Charles P. Gottry, Joseph Kelly, Frank Perry, John Gilbert and James Kane, and for Wigbert A. Flen were Frank Voit, Alfred L. Keinz, George Pardee, Mason McKinney, Charles Hans and Harry Nell.

Services were conducted by Cooper Marine Post of the American Legion and were in charge of First Sergeant Frank Welthorn and First Sergeant Louis H. Kohler, the latter in charge of the local marine recruiting office. Delegations from Cooper Marine Post and the Gold Star Mothers attended the services at the church and at the grave. The guard of honor consisted of J. Leistman, Ward C. Davis, H. Christner, L. Coakley, A. P. Whipple, H. M. Harmon, H. P. Button and R. G. Horton.

Interment was made in the family lots in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery. As the bodies were lowered into the graves taps were sounded by First Sergeant Lewis H. Kohler. Salutes were fired by a firing squad consisting of Milton D. Cushman, James Conheady, Lewis Corke, Frank Maler, L. L. Reynolds, Forrest Spencer, George G. Brown and E. Francis Doyle in charge of First Sergeant Fred J. Welthorn.

Long before the arrival of the bodies of the three men, whose remains were taken to the church at the same time streets near the Cathedral were thronged with people. Seldom if ever has Rochester witnessed a more solemn sight. As the hearses containing the remains of the three men came in view of the cathedral the bell began to toll. Some factories and business places in the vicinity paused work for a short period while their employees lined the windows to look upon the caskets of the dead boys. Men and women stood with bared heads and even the small boy of the street stopped for a moment to pay child-like tribute to the men who had made the supreme sacrifice.

Bearing Bodies Of Soldiers From St. Patrick's Cathedral

Through lines of service men in uniform, and surrounded by hundreds of friends remains of men who gave their lives over sea were born from church to last resting place.

After the bodies had been borne into the church many persons who had gathered in the street went into the sanctuary for services. The crowd was so large it was difficult for all to find seats and many stood in the platform of the church. In a corner in the rear of the church was the pathetic figure of a gray haired man sobbing bitterly as he prayed. As the choir began to sing the responses many in the audience began to weep and it was only a short time before there was hardly a dry eye in the large church.

Upper—Crowd outside of St. Patrick's Cathedral at funeral services of three heroes of the United States Marine Corps.

Lower—Carrying the caskets from the Cathedral to the funeral cortege, showing Marines standing at attention.

HUNDREDS of silent Rochesterians lined the walks and filled to overflowing St. Patrick's Cathedral, where the bodies of three members of the United States Marine Corps, who made the supreme sacrifice at Belleau Woods and Chateau-Thierry, were brought for final blessings at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The bodies were of Corporal Lewis C. Whitman and Privates Wigbert A. Fien and James V. Viggiani.

The hushed and solemn attitude of the spectators, who uncovered as the funeral cortege passed on the way to the church, was a fitting and simple tribute to the men whose deeds will always be perpetuated in the annals of history, in participating in the great battle that was the forerunner of similar struggles that finally broke the back of the German defenses on the Western front.

The Marine guard that escorted the caskets to the edifice was lined from the main entrance to the curb, while members of the Gold Star Mothers' Association preceded the bodies as they were borne aloft on the shoulders of their comrades to the altar. Rev. J. Francis O'Hern officiated at solemn high mass of requiem, assisted by Rev. Mathias Hargather and Rev. Charles Bruton.

Military services were in charge of William H. Cooper Post of American Legion, under the direction of First Sergeant Louis H. Koehler of the Marine Recruiting Station. Burial was made in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery.

FELL WITH HIS FACE TOWARD THE ENEMY

Sept. 11-1921
Body of George H. Knebel Is Brought Home from France.

GEORGE H. KNEBEL.

The body of Sergeant George H. Knebel, of Company C, 325th Infantry, arrived Friday night and was taken to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Knebel, No. 68 Lorenzo street.

Sergeant Knebel enlisted in Company C, in September, 1917. He was sent to Camp Dix, New Jersey, and was in training for three months. His devotion to duty soon won him a promotion to corporal. From Camp Dix he was transferred to Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., and from Camp Gordon, in the month of May, 1918, was sent overseas. News soon was received that he had been promoted to sergeant. Soon afterward he was in action in the front-line trenches but he always found opportunities to write cheerful, uncomplaining letters to his family and friends.

On November 10, 1918, the day before the armistice was signed, official notice of Sergeant Knebel's death in action on October 12th was received by his parents.

Sergeant Knebel belonged to a splendid type of young manhood. At the Rochester Bakery where he was employed for several years he was known as an excellent worker and was well liked by employers and employees. Concerning him, Rev. Paul Taylor, chaplain of Company C, 325th Infantry, wrote to one of Sergeant Knebel's friends:

"I found him on the battlefield with his face to the enemy. . . . To know him was to love him. . . . He was not only a soldier, but a man and a Christian gentleman as well, and as such he died."

Sergeant Knebel will be buried in Holy Sepulchre cemetery to-morrow morning after appropriate services at the family home, No. 68 Lorenzo street, and at the Holy Family Church, of which he was a member.

Three Rochester Marines Who Died in Action in France Are to Be Buried Together from Cathedral

The funera services of Corporal Lewis C. Whitman, Private Wigbert A. Fien and Private James Vegg, U. S. Marine Corps, will be held from St. Patrick's Cathedral, at 9:00 A. M., Tuesday morning.

Corporal Whitman enlisted in the Marine Corps on April 25, 1917, at Rochester. He sailed for France June 11, 1917, with the 43rd Company, 5th Regiment Marines. He was killed in action June 11, 1918, at the Battle of Belleau Woods. He was a member of the Crimson football team, and a member of the Cathedral High School basketball team while attending that school, being one of the best amateur basketball and football players this city has had.

Private Fien enlisted April 8, 1917, at Rochester. He sailed for France June 11, 1917, with the 47th Company, 5th Regiment of Marines. He was killed in action June 25, 1918, at the Battle of Belleau Woods.

Private Vegg enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1910. He saw service in Mexico and was among the marines who landed at Vera Cruz. He stayed in Mexico from April to September, 1914. He also served in Cuba. In the late war with Germany, he re-enlisted in the Marines February 18, 1918, and sailed for France the following day. The first word received by his kinsfolk here was in August, 1918, when he wrote that he had been over the top twice. At the time of his writing he was in a rest billet, waiting a call to go to the front again. Presumably he lost his life on his third leap from the trenches. He was a member of the 96th Company, 6th Regiment Marines. Before enlisting he was a sergeant, Company E, Rochester National Defense Contingent. He was an employee of the Eastman Kodak Company for a number of years.

Members of the William H. Cooper (marine post, American Legion, are requested to attend funeral of these three marines. Those attending the funeral will meet at the New York State Armory at 8 A. M.

especially worthy of commendation.
Residents of this city whose recollections cover events of about 65 years ago will remember that on important election days of that period, a very old man wearing the uniform of a soldier of the Revolutionary War, was in the habit of riding a horse through the principal streets, beating a drum. The veteran was the great-great-grandfather of Harry A. Millener and the drum he cherished was one that he carried as a boy in the war that established this republic. A portrait of the Revolutionary veteran is one of the interesting relics in the Municipal Museum.

This man was Alexander Millener, first, who was 105 years of age when he died. He was buried in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Identification Tags Found '92 On Body Of Dead Soldier; Placed There By Commander

Times Union Dec. 31-

The absolute identification of at least one dead soldier whose body has recently been shipped here for burial was accomplished in a curious manner yesterday by William C.
Menges of 309 Portland avenue, an undertaker, when preparing for burial the body of Charles W. Calligan, private, first class, and during war mounted orderly to the late Major Frederick S. Couchman. Menges discovered attached to the body a bottle containing the "dog tags" or identification disks worn by Private Cal-an enemy shell in the dugout in which he was examining prisoners at

St. Souplet, France, October 15, 1918.

Private Calligan's body arrived in Rochester yesterday from the army base at Brooklyn, after its arrival from France December 18.

Before his entry into the American military service, he served with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, 97th Battalion. He was discharged from the Canadian army after an attack of illness, and following his recovery, enlisted with the 108th Infantry.

After leaving Rochester for Spartansburg, N. C., Private Calligan was appointed mounted orderly to Major Couchman, and held that post until his death.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Florence

MAJ. COUCHMAN
SHERIFF MONROE COUNTY, DIES

Past
DEATH COMES AT HOSPITAL AT 6.05 A. M. TO-DAY.

Nov. 17 1921
FOLLOWS OPERATION MONDAY

His Military Career—Was Prominent in Military, Fraternal and Civic Affairs—Military Funeral.

Major Frederick Stuart Couchman, sheriff of Monroe county, died this morning at 6.05 o'clock in St. Mary's hospital, following an operation for appendicitis performed Monday. His illness developed Friday and, though suffering from considerable pain, he took part in the Armistice day ceremonies of the American Legion. It was not until Sunday night, however, that he sought medical advice and Monday morning he collapsed and was rushed to the hospital where the operation was performed by Dr. William W. Percy, a warm personal friend and regimental medical officer with the 108th Infantry, in which regiment Major Couchman served as battalion commander in France. Dr. Percy was assisted in the operation by Dr. C. Oakley Sayres.

The appendix was found to be gangrenous, but Major Couchman rallied from the operation and appeared to be doing well until yesterday morning, when there was a weakness of the heart action. This morning he again was seized with a heart attack and died soon after. His wife and mother were at his bedside constantly, and with Dr. Percy and Colonel Henry W. Morse were with him when death came.

Born in Port Hope, Canada.

Major Couchman was one of the best known of Rochester's citizens. He was born in Port Hope, Canada, in 1874, and came to this city when 13 years old. For some time he worked as a tailor. More than twenty years ago he entered the employ of Louis Holtz & Sons, Inc., where until going to France he was eastern representative of the company. On his return from war he entered the retail clothing business as president of Couchman Clothing company, in Main street east, but gave up this position on becoming sheriff. He had been interested in republican politics for many years, and until this year was supervisor of the Sixth ward.

His Military Career.

Major Couchman enlisted as a private in the National Guard, June 4, 1898, and served through the Spanish-American war. He worked his way up the line successively as corporal, sergeant and at the outbreak of the World war was ranking National Guard officer in this city. He accompanied the guardsmen to the border at the time of the Mexican troubles, and on August 16, 1917, left Rochester for Pelham Bay to take part in the World war.

In September of that year the men were transferred to Spartanburg, S. C., and sailed for France from Newport News, May 10, 1918. When leading his men in the drive on the Hindenberg line he was wounded in the shoulder and gassed. He was cited for valor and ordered relieved from duty, but refused to leave his men.

On Governor's Military Staff.

Major Couchman was appointed a member of the military staff of Governor Whitman in January, 1916, and when he received his commission as a major in the guard the presentation was made before an audience of 3,000 persons at the state armory at one of the most brilliant military reviews and parades ever held in Rochester. The presentation was made by Judge George A. Benton and Colonel Edward S. Jennings, commanding officer of the Third infantry, presented Major Couchman a gold medal for twenty years' service in the Guard; also a complete riding outfit, a gift from officers and men of the battalion. Major Couchman was the first major of the Guard in Rochester since the days of the old Fifty-fourth regiment.

Active in Fraternal Circles.

Major Couchman was active in both military and fraternal circles and was to have been marshal of the parade Monday night in honor of General Diaz. He was a member of George H. Yerkes post, American Legion, and intensely interested in Legion affairs. He was a past commander of L. Boardman Smith camp, Spanish War Veterans; Yonnondio lodge, 163, F. and A. M.; Rochester consistory; Damascus temple; Rochester City lodge, Knights of Pythias; Rochester lodge of Elks; Sons of St. George.

He leaves his wife, Jennie, also a daughter, Thelma M., his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Couchman of Port Hope, Ontario, and one brother, Walter H. Couchman of this city. Arrangements for the funeral are under way and it is understood that the services will be of a military character.

Expressions of Regret.

Expressions of regret on Major Couchman's death were heard from all classes to-day. One of the men who knew him best, Max L. Holtz, said:

"Major Couchman was a man of unusual ability but of a reserved nature. He had many loyal friends to whom he was always staunch and true. It is not known to many, but he was slated to run as nominee for the office of sheriff at the time he was called to the Mexican border. When his country called him he immediately dropped all thought of civil office and personal advantage and went with his men. When he returned he still had an opportunity to receive the nomination but left with his men for Spartanburg. When he returned from France some ambitious persons tried to induce him to run for mayor, but he decided to run for the office he was first interested in. He was a most interesting conversationalist and had in his home one of the finest collections of trophies of the recent war that can be found in the city."

Major Couchman is the second sheriff of the county to die in office from appendicitis. Sheriff Harley Hamil having died from the disease March 11, 1914. The vacancy is filled through appointment by the governor.

MILITARY FUNERAL FOR SHERIFF COUCHMAN, WHO LED ROCHESTER BOYS IN HINDENBURG LINE SMASH

Herald Nov. 18-1921

Many expressions of sorrow were heard yesterday in military, fraternal and administrative circles over the death of Sheriff Frederick S. Couchman, who died at St. Mary's Hospital at 6.05 o'clock yesterday morning, following an operation for appendicitis on Monday morning. Dr. W. W. Percy, who performed the operation, says the precise cause of death was due to the giving out of the heart muscle. Sheriff Couchman, he said, had a bad case of appendicitis, but if it had been only appendicitis, he probably would have recovered. Before the operation was performed, the doctor said, it was noticed that the heart was not acting properly and gas was given for the operation, instead of ether, as a precaution. But the heart never got back to normal functioning from the time Sheriff Couchman was first examined Monday morning.

Military Funeral Planned.

Plans for the funeral are going forward under the active direction of Colonel Henry W. Morse, for many years a close friend and associate of Sheriff Couchman, in conjunction with members of the family. Mrs. Couchman was prostrated with grief yesterday. Funeral services for the members and immediate friends of the family will be held at the jail residence of the Sheriff at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The body will be taken from the jail residence to Asbury Methodist Church, East Avenue and Anson Place, where the many friends of Sheriff Couchman will be given an opportunity to see him. At 3 o'clock a military funeral will be held at the church and will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Ralph S. Cushman, pastor. The funeral cortege will then proceed to Mt. Hope Cemetery, accompanied by a military and naval escort. On arrival at the cemetery, Frank L. Simes Lodge of Masons, of which Frank S. Noble is master, will conduct a military funeral. Members of Company A, 108th Infantry, Major Couchman's old regiment, will fire the customary three volleys across the grave, and the ceremony will end when Anthony Infantino, who served as bugler for Major Couchman in France, sounds taps.

Active and honorary bearers will be announced to-day. The funeral will be attended by representatives of the many organizations of which Sheriff Couchman was a member. These include the American Legion, Old Guard, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Spanish War Veterans, Frank L. Simes Lodge of the Masons, and other Masonic organizations, Knights of Malta, Elks, Moose, Commercial Travelers, Kiwanis Club and several others. Sheriff Couchman was a member of Yerkes Post 99, American Legion.

Born in Cobourg, Canada.

Sheriff Couchman was born in Cobourg, Canada, in 1874 and came to Rochester with his parents when he was 3 years old. He married in 1896, the year following his enlistment as a private in old Company A, 3d Regiment. He was promoted to the rank of major in 1916, after more than twenty years of service in the National Guard, which included service in the Spanish-American War, at the Mexican Border and in the World War. He enlisted in Company A, June 4, 1895, was made lance corporal July 1, 1897; corporal, January 17, 1898; sergeant, May 10, 1900; second lieutenant, January 6, 1902; first lieutenant, April 28, 1902; captain, March 7, 1906, and major, March 3, 1916.

When the war broke out, Major Couchman left the city with the 108th Infantry of the 27th Division as major of the 1st Battalion. After being at various camps, he sailed for France ahead of his men with Captain A. M. Barager on May 8, 1917, for France on the U. S. Washington in a school detachment. The regiment left a month later and from the time the men arrived in France he was with them in all the engagements of the 27th Division down to the breaking of the Hindenburg line and the Battle of Saint Souplet, at both of which engagements he was gassed. At the breaking of the Hindenburg line, he was acting lieutenant-colonel, and for his bravery at the front was cited for valor.

He returned home with the men April 1, 1918, and marched at the head of the victorious troops into the Rochester State Armory, where they were given an ovation that is one of the memorable events in the history of the city.

In speaking of the characteristics of Major Couchman, Captain Barager yesterday said: "Fred was liked by the men in his battalion, and I think he could call 90 per cent of them by name. He also was popular with the other officers of the regiment. He had a likeable way with him, and was never too stuck up to go down to the men and inquire about their sore feet and their food and their clothing. He saw that they got what they were properly entitled to. I have known the major to go out under fire and personally accompany the transports to see that the men got their food when they were in the trenches. He was loyal to Rochester men all through the war, and it wasn't too much trouble for him to go four or five miles so that we could share with him a letter or a newspaper he had received from home. He had a host of personal and loyal friends among the enlisted men."

Republican in Politics.

The Sheriff was always a Republican in politics. He represented the Sixth Ward in the Board of Supervisors from 1913 to 1920, inclusive. In the fall of that year he resigned to run for the office of Sheriff. He was in France when he was elected Supervisor the last time, in the fall of 1918. At the time R. Andrew Hamilton was appointed commissioner of public safety, Couchman was seriously considered for the place. He was slated to run for the office of Sheriff when he was called to the Mexican border, but passed up that honor to answer the military call. He was elected Sheriff last fall and took office January 1, 1921, the term of his service being slightly less than eleven months.

Sheriff Couchman leaves a wife, Mrs. Jennie Couchman; a daughter, Miss Thelma M. Couchman, who arrived home from college at midnight last night; a father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Couchman, and one brother, Walter H. Couchman of Rochester.

MAJOR FREDERICK S. COUCHMAN.

Among the military orders issued yesterday were instructions to members of L. Borden Smith Camp 25, U. S. W. V., to assemble at Union Street and East Avenue at 2.30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon; Yerkes Post members, to assemble at the Armory at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon; all local companies of 3d Battalion, 108th Infantry, to be at the Armory in uniform with overcoats at 2.15 o'clock; Old Guard, to be at East Avenue and Alexander Street at 2.30 o'clock, and all commissioned officers and enlisted to report at the Armory in uniform, service blue, leggings, overcoats and watch caps at 2 o'clock. These orders were issued by the commanding officers in each instance, and the various military bodies will act as the military escort.

Out of respect for the late Sheriff Major Frederick S. Couchman, Genesee Valley Post, American Legion, will not hold its smoker this evening as had been planned.

Thousands of Civilians and Soldiers Attend Couchman Funeral

Herald Nov. 26 - 1921

Upper left—FOSTER, Troop F horse which marched behind the caisson, bearing the major's saddle and horse equipment used on his overseas mount, Shovel.

Upper right—Bearing the body of Major Couchman from his Exchange Street residence to the caisson for transfer to Asbury Methodist Church, where it lay in state yesterday afternoon.

Lower—Crowds standing in the roadway of East Avenue in front of Asbury Methodist Church as the body was being placed on the waiting gun carriage for the march to Mt. Hope Cemetery.

THREE crashing volleys of the burial salute, the flame from the rifle barrels splitting the early darkness of the November evening; soft, sweet notes of a bugle sounding the soldiers' last call of "lights out"; low voiced commands, as the military escort lined up to leave the cemetery; rain, a moving mass of humanity, men and women, old and young, outlined here and there by the glancing lights of long lines of crawling automobiles, and the funeral of Sheriff-Major Frederick S. Couchman, for which all Rochester and Monroe County, as well as military friends from all Western New York, turned out yesterday to show the honor and affection in which the departed was held, was over.

"Rochester is, to-day, like a great family," said Rev. Dr. Ralph S. Cushman, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church, in his discourse at the funeral service at the Church, "here to pay a tribute of love and respect to an honored member, and to talk together about the great, outstanding things of his life that made impressions on us. He was a typical American, truly democratic in his unselfishness, a friend to every man. That is what everyone, old and young, on the streets of this city, to-day, is saying."

Memorable Demonstration.

Never was there a greater demonstration of popular and kindly feeling in Rochester than was evidenced yesterday by the people; the kindly words of sympathy on every lip; the great crowds from every walk in life that visited the Couchman home in Exchange Street all morning, until the body was borne to the church in East Avenue to lay in state during the early part of the afternoon; by the throngs at Asbury Methodist Church at the time of the public funeral, and which lined the streets along the line of March to Mt. Hope Cemetery.

The populace began to fill the church by early afternoon, and at 3 o'clock, when the funeral services began, hundreds had to be turned away because the church was filled. East Avenue, from Chestnut Street to the west of the Church, to Prince Street, to the east, was lined on both curbs with parked motor cars, as were all side streets leading into the main thoroughfare. For two blocks on either side of the Church, all traffic was turned aside by police, to allow free movement to the escort bodies and carriages of the funeral cortege.

The crowds entering the church were ushered up the north aisle, past the foot of the pulpit, where the body lay, guarded by veterans of Major Couchman's old command in the grim looking uniforms they had worn overseas, then back down the south aisle to assigned seats. The lower floor and balcony were filled and the walls were lined with people. The casket, draped with the American flag, was all covered with a wealth of floral tributes, which were also banked over pulpit and choir loft and rose high on the stairways to the balconies on either side.

Many View Remains.

In the long procession of persons that moved past the bier were gray haired men, representative citizens of Rochester; young men, active in the affairs of the city, and men in uniform, whose insignia showed membership in almost every fighting division of the A. E. F. There was the Old Guard of Rochester, in civilian clothes, every member a veteran of some war. Also groups of men representing Masonic bodies, Elks, Moose and Commercial Travelers. Outside the church, a big throng stood patiently in the rain.

At the conclusion of the brief but solemn service at the church, the casket was borne through lines of soldiers on the shoulders of six former service men to the awaiting artillery caisson, with its six black horses, and the column formed for the march to Mt. Hope Cemetery. The active bearers were: Captain Charles F. Mosher, commander of the Howitzer Company, 108th Infantry, who served under Major Couchman in France; Lieutenant Lewis R. Decker, A. E. F., chairman of A. W. O. L. Club; Private James F. Gallivan, A. E. F., commander of Genesee Valley Post, American Legion and former legion district chairman; Captain Fred E. Wegner, A. E. F., vice-commander of George H. Yerkes Post; Lieutenant Alan H. Williams, the Sheriff's adjutant in France; Lieutenant William F. Butler, commander of Yerkes Post, and former member of Major Couchman's A. E. F. Battalion.

Honorary Bearers.

The honorary bearers were: George W. Aldridge, Collector of the Port of New York; Colonel F. Judson Hess, representing the Old Guard; Captain A. M. Barager, representing Frank L. Simes Lodge of Masons; Dr. Ralph E. Fitch, representing the county committee of the American Legion; County Judge Willis K. Gillette, representing the Supervisors and ex-Supervisors' Association of Monroe County; Charles S. Owen, representing the Rochester Ad Club; James L. Hotchkiss, County Clerk, representing city and county officials; Jams S. Bryan, representing Rochester Lodge of Elks; Sydney E. White, representing Shriners; J. P. Willard, representing the Knights of Malta; Freeman F. Boyer, representing United Spanish American War Veterans; Lynn Hite, Charles R. Taft and other representatives of organizations of which Major Couchman was a member.

It was 3.45 o'clock when the long funeral procession, consisting of Troop F, 101st Cavalry, Park Band, Rochester Battalion of 108th Infantry, 104th Sanitary Company, 3d Division of Naval Militia and band, American Legion, United Spanish War Veterans, Old Guard of Rochester, Army and Navy Union, Veterans of Foreign Wars, United Commercial Travelers, city and county officials, the honorary and active bearers, the caisson, followed by a fully accoutered and riderless war horse, with saddle, and the long line of motor cars bearing relatives and friends, left the church, and moved to the slow beat of a funeral march to the cemetery by way of East Avenue, Alexander Street, Monroe Avenue, Meigs Street, Linden Street and Mt. Hope Avenue.

Roads to Cemetery Lined.

Besides the crowds of waiting people along the route every available bit of parking space, the curbs, driveways and entrances to the cross streets, were occupied by automobiles, and at the grave, where a canvas canopy had been erected, and flowers were banked high about the place of burial, many more persons were assembled. Hundreds of them, unable to attend the services at the church, stood about the grave through the long, rainy afternoon.

It was almost dark when the funeral party reached the cemetery. The military formed in line and stood at the salute while the casket was lifted from the caisson and carried to the grave, and then, after the solemn Masonic burial service was performed under direction of Worshipful Master Howard G. Noble of Frank L. Simes Lodge, the rifles of Company A, 108th Infantry, barked their salute, and Anthony Infantolino, Major Couchman's bugler, orderly during his service in France, sounded "taps."

Jan. 2-1919

Captain A. M. Barager, commanding officer of Company H, 108th Infantry has written a letter giving full details of the death of Lieutenant Frank L. Simes, who was killed in the drive of the 27th Division upon the Hindenburg line, September 29, and also full details of that part of the great engagement in which Company H was involved. The letter is addressed to Mrs. Frank L. Simes of Rising Place. It follows: "It's a pretty hard task, writing you this letter. I believe the hardest one I have ever undertaken. The most sincere sympathy I can attempt to offer you seems so small when I consider the very bitter sorrow of yourself and little Helen.

the deepest feelings of my heart go out to you in this, your great sorrow and trouble.

"Frank was my best friend, not just a comrade, but friend, and the fact that he gave his life for his country, that he is one of the heroes of the Great War does not lessen my own sorrow at his loss, so I can just dimly realize the great grief of yourself and Helen. I want to tell you as simply and clearly as I can how bravely and nobly he gave up his life that day.

"We left Doullous where I believe he wrote you last on the 23rd of September and three days later were at a place called Tincoux. We were there two days living in iron huts in the woods.

"We were not under shell fire at this time, but could hear distant artillery firing. Here we learned that we were to 'go over the top' on the 29th. We were told that we were to take a part of the Hindenburg line, called the Tunnell Sector. Here we consulted with officers of the Tank Corps of the supporting artillery, the aircraft and the other elements that were to support us in our attack.

"Every phase of the contemplated action was gone into in detail. Frank and I were the only officers with our company at this time, and we both worked hard that the work assigned Company H might be carried out successfully. I know I fully realized the seriousness of the coming engagement and I believe Frank did also, but he did not appear at all worried and went about his work in the same cheerful, methodical way as usual. On the 27th of September we marched about eight miles and halted back of a small hill. Here we had supper. It was a cold clear night and on account of the Boche aircraft we could make no fire. Frank and I lay down together in a small shelter dug in the bank. We had no blankets, but our trench coats protected us somewhat from the cold.

"At about 9 p. m. an order came to move out, and shortly after leaving this place we came under enemy shell fire. Several times gas shells were dropped near us and several times we were compelled to put on our gas masks. Many shrapnel shells were dropped near us, but we were fortunate enough to have no serious casualties.

Under Constant Fire.

"At about 12:30 a. m. (the 28th) we arrived at the trench assigned our company, which proved to be an old sunken road. At this place we were about 500 yards from the Hun lines and were under constant fire. Frank and I placed the men in their places along this sunken road and then went into our company headquarters, which proved to be a dugout about 20 feet deep. We found the place filled with British artillerymen.

"In their usual selfish way, they did not want us in the dugout, but we made them give the two of us a little room about three feet square. We found a box and sat on that and got a little rest until morning. When daylight came we found the trench was a mass of mud and battle wreckage. It had but recently been taken from the Huns and was filled with old broken guns and other supplies abandoned by the Germans.

"All that day we continued our preparations for the morrow. It was a raw rainy day and very disagreeable in the mud of the trench.

"Battalion headquarters were about one-half mile in our rear and I was called there many times that day, leaving Frank in command each time. Our final conference was held at about 9 p. m. and after I returned to the company, Frank and I spent the balance of the night issuing supplies, ammunition, rations, water, etc., to the men. At about 1 a. m. (the 29th) I received a sealed order marked 'secret' that stated that we were to start at 5:50 a. m., the zero hour. At 3 a. m. they brought us hot coffee and a hot stew. Neither of us was hungry but we ate a little. So the night wore on. Frank carried his haversack and wore his trench coat. The sky had cleared but the air was heavy with fog. There was a heavy frost.

"At 5:30 a. m. we moved the troops over the top of the sunken road or trench and in absolute silence took our places. Frank was in command of the first wave or line and I was in the center of the company.

"At promptly 5:30 the artillery and machine guns opened up hundreds of cannons and guns, and we started. The First Battalion under Captain Smith was in our rear in support.

"Almost immediately the Germans returned the fire and in 15 minutes we were under a perfect hail of shells and machine gun bullets.

Simes Cool and Courageous.

"Frank moved about among his men, cool, courageous. I saw him several times in the first 20 minutes but was not near enough to speak to him.

"The Germans had thrown a regular curtain of smoke and gas in our front, this seemed to settle in a little valley. I saw him enter that with his men still leading and directing them. The shells were falling so thick at this time that it seemed a miracle that anyone could escape them.

"So he led his men on, brave, calm—no excitement there, no fear. An officer should set an example to his men. If he shows no fear they trust him, and he was the ideal officer that day—a beautiful example of the old traditions of the army of the United States. He represented the very highest that could be attained by any man—a brave, courageous hero of our army, and I am very proud that he was my friend and comrade.

"I did not see him again until after he was wounded, but his men report that he kept on through smoke and gas and shell and bullets. They report that occasionally he stopped and took his compass bearings and consulted his map, then continued his advance.

"I had sent him a message by a runner and the man had just delivered the message when the fatal bullet reached him. He was then a few yards in front of a trench. The runner and a wounded corporal assisted him into the trench where they were protected from the machine gun fire. Here they gave him first aid. The bullet had entered his neck, coming out beneath the right shoulder, or rather under the arm. Shortly after I came up. As he heard the men speak my name he called me and as I knelt by his side, he said, 'Is that you Barry?' and then, 'Yes, they hit me twice'.

Said "Good-Bye" to Barager.

"I talked with him a few minutes, saw that he had been bandaged, told him 'good-by' and went on. I sent for a stretcher and a short time later he was removed to a hospital.

"As soon as we were withdrawn I sent Corporal Fishbaugh to try to find out how badly he and the corporal's brother were wounded. He could find no trace of them. Later a report came in that he had died the next day, the 30th of September.

"After I was sent to the hospital, Lieutenant Mosher found the place where he was buried. The grave was then marked with a small cross with his name. Later members of the company visited the spot and report that the grave was marked with a large white cross with his name, rank and regiment. A small railing surrounds the grave also.

"I regret very much that I was unable to visit his resting place before we left that part of the country. The contents of his bed roll and bag were checked up by me and turned over to the Effects Department and should be forwarded to you. His personal effects that he carried when wounded should also reach you.

"Again let me express to you my own sympathy and the sympathy of every man in the company and every officer in the regiment. Lieutenant Simes was loved and respected by every man that knew him and we all feel deeply his great loss. He lived a true gentleman, a loving husband and father, and loyal friend. He died a brave man, a gallant soldier, and to us that knew him best his memory shall never die."

LIEUT. SIMES DROPPED WITH SMILE ON FACE

Private J. W. Blythe Gives Vivid Description of Battle in Which Many Rochester Men Were Killed and Wounded. Nov. 16-1918

A vivid description of the terrific battle in which Lieut. Frank L. Simes was killed is given in a letter from Private J. W. Blythe of Company H, 108th Infantry, written to D. L. Morris at the New York Telephone Company's office, 95 North Fitzhugh street. Blythe was formerly employed by the telephone company and lived at 7 Donlin street. He says:

"I suppose you have read and heard about this big and terrible drive we just made. It was awful and, don't know how I managed to come out so lucky. I will try and tell you about it but don't know if it will get by the censor. We got our orders on a Friday, so out we went with our pack on our back. Our first hike was not bad or not a long one, but our pack was a little heavy. We hiked 10 miles and on our way we went through some towns with not a house or a wall left standing. We made our home out in a big field where not a tree or bush was standing. Here we left our personal things and our overcoats, blankets and everything we did not need, or was in our way, so all we had was a pack carrier, rifle, belt, 200 rounds of ammunition, little shovel, mess pan, cup and water bottle and our old friend—the 'raincoat.' "After we got all our things marked and our packs made, we made our camp for the night. It was a good thing it was not snowing or zero weather for we would have frozen. When bedtime came we went in all directions, so as to avoid Jerry drop-in bombs on us.

"My little pal and myself found a spot under an Aussie (Australian) supply limber—that is, a two-wheel wagon. Here we stayed and tried to sleep. We stole some burlap bags from the kitchen and laid on them and for a cover we got a piece of the limber's canvas, then we put our raincoats on and buttoned them up and for a pillow used our pack carrier, which makes a nice one. We slept for only a short while. Woke up frozen and walked around to get warm and then went back to try and sleep again, but in the morning both of us were stiff so we started a fire and thawed out. All day long it rained and made everything muddy and sloppy and we got wet to the skin. We sat around the fire and dried one side while the other got wet.

"At night we received orders to be ready to move and here we got a lot of dope on what to do and where to go. At 10 or a little later, we got our traveling rations for three days. Some of the boys sat around and did some thinking of what was ahead of them, while others walked around to keep warm. It was a dark night with few stars out. At 3 a. m. the bugle sounded, indicating the time had come for us to move.

"We received orders to do no talking, light no lights or cigarettes while moving. We went down a road a short ways, then crossed a field to another road and here we made out a long line of trenches and big guns all around, with piles of rations for Jerry. They are known as iron rations and he gets a lot of them, too.

Ready To Go Over.

"A voice was heard to single out and not make any noise. Walking was bad and we had to step over a big gun now and then and some times would fall into a mud hole and go up to our necks in sloppy mud or else duck our heads for a shell that went over it. Some fun doing this. We kept on going until we met some of our other company that had gone on ahead and were then ready to go over the top. Here we had to squeeze and herd down to crawl over to get past them. Then we came to the spot where we were to go over the top. Still dark, but luck was with us, for it had stopped raining. The time had come, 6 a. m., our time to go over.

"Machine guns were tearing off clip after clip and the big guns roaring somewhat awful. You had to yell to make yourself heard and this was kept up for some time. The barrage was on and our company was on top ready to go. First Lieutenant Simes had gone forward and we followed close behind. It was beginning to look bad with dead bodies here and there. Now our bunch of signal men started laying wires to keep in contact with the men. Had not gone far when one of the boys in our bunch got shot in the leg just below the knee. He got a nice trip to Blighty for a few weeks. This could not stop us from going on. At this time we got a dose of sneeze gas, so on went our masks. We stopped and cut on our line to get word back that we were in a gas attack. While we had the line open Captain Smith came over—he had been shot in the leg—we got his lieutenant and he told him to take charge of the company as he was done for.

"Now we were in No Man's Land and the shells began to come back to us in all sizes and some very close. We had gone nearly a half mile when we noticed our wire getting thin on the spool, so here we stepped to get a breath of fresh air and a short rest. We looked around, for it was getting a little lighter and we could see the spoils of the battlefield, all kinds of Jerrys and plenty of them. We were at a road now, a half mile from our starting point and right in the middle of 'Hell.' The machine gun bullets were whizzing by too close to make you feel good. The next thing I knew one of my pals from old Company H came over and told me that First Lieutenant F. L. Simes had been hit and hit bad and that they had carried him back on a litter. I will tell you about the last time I saw him. I did not get a chance to speak to him, for he was a busy man, having charge of the company. As he stood on the jumping off spot he was giving orders to his men how they should go. Then I saw that good smile of his and heard the voice we all loved, for it was always kind, although he meant what he said when he said it. Everyone in his company liked him and was with him to the last.

Had to Keep Going.

"In this same place several other officers were killed and lots of our boys were wounded. This was bad but the worst was yet to come. No stop, we must go on for it meant life or death to us, so we crossed the road only this time the big tanks went with us. The barbed wire was 100 feet deep in some places. One big tank was stalled a little further, so we used it as an advance telephone and dressing station and it was some busy place. We stayed there until the Australian troops came up to give us a hand. At 9 a. m. we went on and this time reached a German trench. There was some fighting. Here we cut in and gave reports back how things were going. Then we made another short advance. We got a lot of Jerry's big iron coal boxes, they are high explosives and carry a lot of junk in them.

"We had only just jumped into a big shell hole when my little pal was hit on the shoulder and put out. I helped him dress his wounds and took him back to shelter, then went back to the station. This time our line was cut, so we fixed it up and then Jerry saw us and started after us with machine guns. He cut the top of our shell hole, so he changed his range and so did we, but this time we were in the first line of machine guns and with the 'Aussies.'

"We stayed here a while and established a station, only to fail to make (telephone) connection. He saw us so we spread out. There were ten of us in two small bunches a little ways apart. He started to find us and dropped his first shell 60 feet too long and the next one 30 feet shorter and then one way back of us.

"Two of us thought it was getting too hot, so we moved back a little ways and we just got set when a shell dropped in the middle of the bunch we just left, five were killed and the rest wounded. I was thrown up in the air and covered with mud, but not a scratch on me. I lay stiff for a minute and one of my pals thought I was dead so went back to first station and reported. I didn't stay there long after I came to and sure did do some hurrying back to get help.

"When I got back to my post I was told to stay there and take charge of it, so I did not get a chance to see the wonderful Hindenburg line with all its fine dugouts, so I cannot tell you much about it, but I did get a Jerry and turned him over to my partner to take back. I don't think he got back for he returned in three minutes. We saw many prisoners and used them for litter carriers. They are good at that.

Three Days and Nights.

"This battle lasted three days and nights. On the second day while I was on a case of line trouble a shell broke close by and I ducked but not fast enough for I got a piece in the middle of the back. Luck was with me again for it only tore my raincoat and cut my belt. A piece hit my partner and knocked him down and out, so I was left alone again. I found the trouble and then went back and told my story to the sergeant. He told me to take a short rest and believe me I sure did cut some wood.

"When I woke up it was 10 a. m. and the first thing I looked for was eats and there was plenty of it so I filled to the rim. I heard shortly after that we had only seven men out of 30, most of them had been killed. I went to the advance station. Another company had advanced about 11-2 miles and were in Jerry's big and strongest trenches. At this very point the British had tried five different times and failed and this was our first time at them. It cost Jerry many lives and prisoners.

"In the afternoon we got orders to move out to rest and to reorganize. We came out at 5 p. m., coming down the new road we had captured we saw many, many dead Jerrys. We walked about two miles and then met our friends, the Red Cross. They gave us hot chocolate, cigarettes and candy. It sure was good. We sang a few songs, fell in again and went back a little further where we met our kitchens and had heavy eats, then went back to a field to sleep.

"The next day we got our belongings we had left behind and went out to get cleaned up and take life easy. They checked the company to see who was alive and who was missing and we had one-third gone.

"Sunday afternoon they held a special services for the brave boys who were killed. The band played a funeral march as the company marched into an old convent. We sang a few hymns, the colonel talked to us, telling us of the hard time we had had and of how the big officers of the English and Australian armies spoke of the good work we had done. He said we had not only taken our objective but had gone on and taken some other company's objective.

"While there the reports started to come in of the boys who died at the hospital and it was here that I heard that First Lieutenant Simes had died. That broke Company H up and every one who knew him.

"We did not stay in this town long for we moved up again and we are still on the move. The enemy are still going back fast and I hope they keep going. I wish this war was over and we were back home again for it is no good. All they do is to fight and hike.

"Tell Mr. Baxter I sent him a gas mask and also a Jerry helmet. They were both taken off a Jerry by Yours Truly on the Hindenburg line. Some class to me. The belt is also taken from a Jerry machine gun. I cut it in half to pack it. The bullets are what they call tracers. Hope they are received.

"We just got orders that we could send a few things so if I can find anything else that will pass I will send it to you.

"I hope you will get this young story. I will try and write again soon, but we are on our way back to the front again, so here goes to try my luck again. The weather is fair, only cold at night. We are sleeping in dog tents. I am writing this from the battle field not far from that big city we just captured."

Lieutenant Simes Proved Real Hero When He Fell in Charge That Smashed Hindenburg Line

D.J.E.

Mch. 16-1919

One cannot mingle long with the men of the 108th Infantry at Camp Merritt without hearing them sing the praises of one of their officers, Lieutenant Frank L. Simes, of Rochester, who died on October 1, 1918, of wounds received on September 29th, when he went over at the head of his company in their successful attack on the Hindenburg line. It is not alone the men of his own unit, company H, who speak of the gallant officer in terms of praise, but every member of the regiment, from Colonel Jennings down, feels that in the death of Lieutenant Simes the regiment suffered the loss of one of its bravest and most capable officers.

By what perhaps was more a fortunate circumstance than anything else the Democrat and Chronicle representative, when he visited Camp Merritt after the Rochester men had landed from the Marretania, happened upon one of the members of company H, who was at Lieutenant Sime's side when he was struck by the machine gun bullet that caused his death, and who aided the young officer to gain a position of safety after receiving his wound. This soldier was Corporal Armando Ellroy, of New York city, himself cited for "gallant bravery in carrying messages under heavy machine-gun fire" and his story of Lieutenant Simes' death, as told to the Democrat representative, is as follows.

Went in First Wave.

"It was hardly light when we went over that morning on the 29th of September. Company H was in the first wave and Lieutenant Simes took us over. We had scarcely got through our own wire when Lieutenant Simes dropped. Though we were under orders to succor no wounded but to proceed until we dropped or had taken our objective, I stopped to see how badly Lieutenant Simes had been hit.

"I've got it bad, Ellroy," he said. "I guess I'm going out. Have you got a cigarette? Don't mind me, give 'em hell." "I happened to know that the lieutenant had been smoking Piedmonts and having some in my pocket I lit one and placed it in his mouth. By the way he puffed at it, so eager I mean, I could see that he was pretty badly hit, and I made up my mind to get him back to shelter.

"A stretcher-bearer was going by. It was Private Allan L. Eggleston, of East Rochester. I called to him for assistance and he started toward me, but before he could reach us he fell with a machine-gun bullet through his neck. Two others were wounded before we finally got Lieutenant Simes back into the trench. Then we went ahead again. Two days later we heard that he was dead and the whole regiment mourned his death. He was a regular fellow and a fine officer."

Corporal Badly Hurt Later.

Corporal Ellroy went through the battle of the Hindenburg line with only slight wounds but in the St. Souplet affair he received machine-gun bullets in the shoulder and in the leg, beside mustard gas burns on his back and sides.

Captain Harry Farmer, of Syracuse, commanding officer of company C, of whom it is told that he went over the top with a cigar in the corner of his mouth, coolly swinging a cane, paid a brilliant tribute to Lieutenant Simes when he said:

"Lieutenant Frank Simes was the finest officer I have ever known. His coolness and bravery was unequalled. Simes and I went over together at the Hindenburg line and through the smoke barrage I saw him carried out on a stretcher. He was not dead but there was a bad look on his face and I knew that he was all in. 'Good-by and good luck, Farmer,' he said. Two days later he was dead."

Praise from Colonel.

Colonel Edgar S. Jennings said that he had watched Lieutenant Simes from the time that he was a sergeant and that he had considered him one of the most promising officers in the regiment, and his loss was a blow to the whole regiment.

The final tribute, however, is a poem written by the men of company H and dedicated to Lieutenant Simes. Innocent of rhyme or rhythm, the verses yet express the heart-felt sympathy of the men for their officer and their sorrow at his untimely loss. The verses follow:

BELLECCOURT.

To the east was Catelet,
North by east the Hindenburg line,
On the south, shell-scarred Bellecourt
South by west, the Guillemont farm.

'Twas there we waited orders,
In a field of ripened grain,
Thus the day 'twas hell and slaughter
Thus the night 'twas death and pain.

Food was scarce and so was water,
One by one, death set us free,
In the crimson slopes near Bony,
There in hell's own cemetery.

But at last we got the orders
To take the line across the way,
Then New York she went over,
While the Boches lay at bay.

Faces bleached but no one faltered,
As machine-gun bullets played
Staunch and firm through that hell's fire
Went the doughboys to the fray.

'Twas a sight you'll long remember
That gleaming line of steel,
As the boys, all sweat and panting,
Charged madly 'cross the field.

Down the hill and through the wire,
'Cross a patch of trampled grain,
Through a hollow filled with bushes,
O'er the trenches and on again.

'Twas there we lost our Lieutenant,
Like a Trojan, in the fight,
He shouted, as we passed him:
"Give 'em steel with all your might."

On the way the line grew thinner,
But it never once gave way;
One by one the guns were silenced,
One by one the gunners paid.

When at last the line broke over,
With a good old Yankee yell,
Word came back by runner
"The line is ours; all is well."

Dedicated in honor of Frank L. Simes, first lieutenant, company H, 108th Infantry, who died in battle October 1, 1918, from wounds received September 29, 1918. Composed by the men of company H, 108th Infantry, to which he belonged.

Sends Letter Of Sympathy On Death Of Walden Smith

A touching letter has been received by Mrs. Amy Rosenkrans of 72 Maryland street from Division Chaplain Robert H. Gearhart, 78th Division, concerning the death of her son, Walden Frank Smith of Company A, 310th Infantry, who was killed in action. The letter follows:

"One of the hardest tasks that can come to anyone is before me. I must tell you of your son's death. On October 18 while at his post of duty, performing that duty without fear, with excellent efficiency, he was instantly killed.

"I know that no word of mine can make light the burden that has come to your heart. Our Master who loved and cared for His mother even in the hour of death knows your woe and feels your heartbreak. He knows that you have given one of your own flesh for your country, to Him I commend you.

"Tenderly we laid your son in one of the sun kissed fields of France. Words are empty at such a time as this. We have lost a comrade, the nation a splendid soldier, the world one of nature's noblemen, but you have lost a son. In all sincerity and deepest sympathy our hearts go out to you."

Last Chat with Harold G. Smith, Feb. 10 Who Met Death in France, Told in Letter from Private C. F. Gardner

In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner of 421 Augustine Street, Private Chester F. Gardner tells of a meeting he had in France with Harold G. Smith of 132 Curtis Street, who was killed November 1. Private Gardner is a runner for the 78th Divisional Headquarters Troop now stationed at Semur, France, and for two months he was in active service at Thiaucourt, Grand Pre and Argonne Forest. His letter, in part, reads as follows:

"I read in a Rochester paper of December 8, given to me by Sergeant Lyons, who is of the headquarters troop here, and who also comes from Rochester, a notice of the death of Harold G. Smith. I knew him quite well, and to learn of his death made me very sad. He was a fine fellow who was liked by every one. I certainly have deep sympathy for his parents and his brother.

"I met Smith twice after we entered the army. I talked with him at Camp Dix, but I didn't see him again until we were at the front in our first sector. I met him then in the road when I was returning from delivering a message and when Jerry was shelling the sector which was near Thiaucourt. He was hurrying down the road to meet his battalion, which was just back of the lines for a little rest. He told me he was battalion runner. That was the last time I saw him.

Gardner Had Close Call.

"The account of his death says he was killed on November 1, and I plainly remember that day. We were in our second sector, near Grand Pre, and at 3 o'clock in the morning our barrage started. Big guns roared all around us, and, believe me! Jerry shot a bunch of iron and steel at the same time. Two other runners and I had a close shave that morning about 5 o'clock. A captain was killed and a couple of engineers were wounded within a few feet of us."

Private Gardner says that, while he is glad to have done what he has for Uncle Sam, he greatly desires to re-

JAMES SCORSE.

Mrs. Anale Scorse, of Barnard, has received a letter from Lieutenant E. M. Martin, telling her of the death of her son, James Scorse, who was killed in action on October 4, 1918, while on duty at the telephone switchboard near the town of Very, France. No official notice has been received.

Private Scorse was wounded before on September 28th. A letter was received from him by his wife and parents, but this was the last they had heard from him. He served four years in the Navy and saw service on the Mexican border with New York Guard. He enlisted on June 6, 1917, and went to Camp Robinson to receive training. He left for France on October 29, 1917.

Private Scorse leaves a wife, Rose A. Scorse, and a child, James L. Scorse, 15 months old. He also leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Scorse; one brother, Carl, and one sister, Della.

The letter received by Private Scorse's parents follows:

Your letter relative to the death in action of your son, has reached this office, and we hasten to give you the information you desire.

Private James Scorse was killed by a shell fragment on the morning of October 4, 1918, at the Headquarters Second Battalion, 7th F. A., while on duty at the telephone switchboard just outside the town of Very, France, east of the Argonne, and west of the Meuse. It was in the morning that we attacked northwest of Verdun, and during the severe artillery fire to which we were subjected, that your son died at his post doing his duty. Death came suddenly and he suffered no pain.

Your son was an excellent soldier with an enviable record. He saw service in Alsace-Lorraine, the Paul sector, Monthidier and Cantigny, the counter attack at Soissons, the St. Mihiel offensive and the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

It is to be regretted that he was called to give up his life, but you should rest assured that he died performing his duty in the service of his country. Your sorrow must be great at the death of such a son and I realize that no words of mine can hope to lessen that sorrow. However, on behalf of the officers and men of this organization, who know and loved your son, I wish to express our profound sympathy, and to tell you that the example of good discipline and conscientiousness to duty which he gave us will always remain fresh in our memory.

Private Arthur D. Stevens, Company K, 108th Infantry, died from wounds received in action August 23. He arrived in France early in April and was wounded so severely in the drive of July that it was necessary to amputate his right leg above the knee. Private Stevens made his home with Walter Wyatt of 128 Baldwin Street and was employed by the Stromberg-Carlson Company. He leaves his parents, who live at Fairhaven, Mass., one sister and four brothers. H. Jan. 4 - 1919

CABLE CONFIRMS HIS SON'S DEATH ABROAD

Received by Father of Corporal Isaac Scheerens.

N. & C. Feb. 9-1919

CORPORAL ISAAC SCHEERENS.

Jacob Scheerens, of No. 235 Hennekey park, received word on January 27th that his son, Corporal Isaac Scheerens, died on December 14, 1918. Mr. Scheerens has not yet received any official notice from the government, but the report has been confirmed by cablegram on February 5th from Mass Hospital No. 67 in France.

Corporal Scheerens enlisted in the Signal Corps under Lieutenant A. M. Lindsay on July 19, 1917. He left for Camp Jackson, S. C., on October 15th, where he received most of his training. He sailed for France about August 1, 1918 and was wounded on November 11th.

Memorial services will be held in the Brighton Reformed Church, on Sunday with a sermon by Rev. A. Stegenga, pastor of the church.

FORMER CONDUCTOR HONORED BY FRENCH TWO SOLDIERS DIE

Another Rochester soldier has been awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French government. He is Corporal James Quigley, formerly a conductor for the New York State Railways, and at present a member of Casual Company 307, composed mostly of New York State troops. Corporal Quigley landed in New York Saturday from the transport Pueblo. He was awarded the decoration for assisting to dig out 24 soldiers, buried in the collapse of a dugout in the Lorraine sector. Only three of those buried were recovered alive. Quigley was wounded last July at Chateau-Thierry. His brother, Owen Quigley, lives at 479 Court Street.

Private Sol H. Holtzman, brother of Meyer H. Holtzman of 420 Harvard Street, was killed by the shock of an exploding shell on the last day of the Lys-Escout offensive, November 4, according to a letter received from Lieutenant Wesley Morris of Company F, 148th Infantry. The company to which Private Holtzman was attached was intrenched in a railroad cut, when German heavy artillery near Ghent got their range and put down a barrage. The shock of one of the huge exploding missiles must have killed the Rochester boy as there was not a mark on him when he was picked up.

Nothing has been heard from Private Michael O'Brien of Company C, 325th Infantry, since his sister, Mary O'Brien of 52 Mayberry Street, received a letter from him on September 26 from a French base hospital. At that time he had lost three toes in an accident, but was recovering. All efforts to get in communication with the soldier have failed.

Private Raymond J. Quinlan of 89 Pullman Avenue and Private Edward R. Strains of 170 Main Street West are reported on to-day's casualty list as having died of disease. The following are reported wounded: Corporal William Warren, 359 Selye Terrace; Corporal George C. Raker, 86 Weddall Way; Private Stefan Gerenski, 17 Clay Avenue; Private William Criddle, 277 Kenwood Avenue; Private William H. Reynick, 84 Clarissa Street; Private Joseph Salatino, 350 Smith Street.

Home Defense League Participates in Funeral Held To-day.

The funeral of Corporal William A. Stich of Company B, 12th Ammunition Train, who died at Camp McClellan, Anniston, Ala., took place this morning from his home, 154 North Union street, at 8.30 o'clock, and from St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. The following members of the Home Defense league participated:

Musician, Sergeant B. Y. Munson; firing squad, Lieutenant Frank Curtis, Sergeant Theodore B. Copenhagen, Privates Ernest Clark, W. S. Baird, Leon Christensen, L. Holloway, Robert Breary, V. C. Oderkirk and Sidney Pugh. Burial was in Holy Sepulcher cemetery.

Rev. Joseph Schonhart, C. S. R., officiated at solemn requiem mass, assisted by Rev. Joseph Strauss, C. S. R., as deacon and Rev. John Lieberth, C. S. R., as subdeacon. Sisters of Notre Dame, who taught the dead soldier when he was a pupil at the parochial school were present at the services and a delegation from the C. Y. M. A. of which he was a member, when called to the colors.

Six veterans of the C. Y. M. A. in army uniform acted as bearers. They are: Henry Schueler, Walter Schlitzer, Raymond Bayer, William Ernst Florian Mura and Henry Sehm. The casket was draped with the national colors.

Music was by the men's and boys' choir of the church. Corporal Stich had been a member of the choir and Charles J. Stupp, the choirmaster, arranged a special musical programme for male voices. The women members of the choir attended the funeral in a body.

When a Hun bullet found Machinist George H. Yerkes in the smash through the Hindenburg line, September 29th, and killed him instantly, his cousin, Roy E. Palmer, son of Mrs. Ellen Palmer, was with the medical detachment of the 315th Signal battalion, but a few miles away, under heavy fire, in constant danger. He escaped unscathed and is with the army of occupation in Germany according to a letter received by his mother. Yerkes lived at 15 Pearl street and had been in the service many months when death came to him.

First intimation that his cousin had been killed came to Palmer in a letter from home and he writes in reply: "On the day he died we were in the St. Mihiel front and our boys were hammering the Germans for good. We were under shell fire three weeks and I expected to cash in any day but got through it O. K. There is one French town about a mile back of the line I will never forget.

"We were at Romagne and the Germans were throwing about 30 shells an hour at us. I learned to do the St. Vitus dance and they had me on my stomach more than once.

"We are now in Germany and have been since November 6th. We left Mareville, France, October 30th and were marched through Belgium and all the way through Luxembourg. We are at a small German town called Cues. The German people like the American soldier and do everything they can to please us and we treat them the same way. We are having cold and rainy weather now. I can think of only one disagreeable thing we have to do and that is eating our meals out in the cold. We have no barracks and our field range is out in the open and it is rather chilly eating. Feb. 12

Rochester Hero's Last Thoughts of Mother before His Death in Herald Action; Pays Tribute in Verse

Memory of Corporal Fay F. Fessenden, Company M, 310th Infantry, a former employe of the American Express Company in Rochester, which long will be cherished by his friends here, is now touched with reverence by the news that just prior to his death he paid a loving tribute to his mother in verse that was mailed to her in his last letter home.

Corporal Fessenden left Rochester for Camp Dix April 4, 1918, and sailed overseas May 20. He was killed in action September 22.

"Absolutely faithful to the end in the execution of his duties—the type of man that made it possible for our country in so short a time to strike such telling and victorious blows for the cause of world liberty—ready to perform any duty that was demanded of him," are some of the tributes paid to him by First Lieutenant Irving E. Goldsmith in a letter of comfort to his mother in which the commander made it plain that the Rochester hero was also a soldier who was liked and respected by all who came in contact with him.

Corporal Fessenden's poem is entitled "Mother" and reads:

And here's a line to Mother,
The best of all the lot,
With a simple little message,
Just a sweet forget-me-not,
It's sent to her from some one,
Sealed with a kiss of love,
To wish her joy and comfort
And blessings from above.

May it find her well and happy
As the morn I went away,
May it make her burden lighter
As she works from day to day;
May it chase away the wrinkles
From her apt-to-worry brow,
And keep that smile a-smiling
Till we've finished up this row.

There's a brighter day a-coming
For us, and those back home;
There are ships of Joy and Happiness
To sail us o'er the foam,
And sights will be most wonderful
As loved ones greet each other,
But none will be so tenderly
When Sonny meets his Mother.

Tribute to Rochester Soldier

Chaplain of 17th Field
Artillery. Mch. 4-19

L. W. Oster.

Mrs. George Oster of 676 Avenue D has received the following letter from Chaplain Ovid R. Sellers of the 17th Field Artillery on the death of her son, Private Lester W. Oster, who was killed in action on October 9:

"On October 9 the Second Division, working with the French, made an attack on the famous Blanc Mont in the Champagne front. After two desperate attacks the infantry drove the Germans over the ridge of this hill nearly to St. Etienne. The artillery kept up with the advance and by the 6th had positions just south of the north ridge. The Germans were making a hard resistance and shelled our artillery positions constantly. The First Battalion—A and B Batteries—with which I traveled during the battle, was subject to particularly hard shelling. We were at the disadvantage of being in a place that the Germans had occupied for four years and which they knew thoroughly.

"On the night of October 9 word came that a German battery had been located in a wood and B battery was ordered to fire on that wood. This German battery was one that had fired on us almost constantly and had caused a great deal of trouble. About the time that B battery began its fire the German battery replied and it had the range exactly. One shell came through the shield of our No. 1 gun and hit the rim of the wheel. Your son was No. 1 of the gun crew and his position was just beside the wheel that was hit. He was killed instantly.

"Four or five other men were wounded by the same shell and before the wounded could be carried to places of safety other shells hit a number more. About a dozen men were wounded, some of them severely, by the shelling, but your son was the only one killed that night.

"Of course, B Battery was silenced temporarily, but A Battery, which was just a few yards away, took the firing data and gave a furious shelling to the German battery. Evidently the firing of A Battery was effective, for this German battery was inactive after a few more shots, and did no more firing from then on.

"On the morning of the 16th it was my sad privilege to conduct the funeral of your son. His comrades had prepared a beautiful grave on a nearly wooded slope, beside the grave of Lieutenant Bauer, whom we had buried the day before.

"His body enclosed in his shelter-half, was carried on a stretcher by six of his friends. I came behind the body, following me marched the squad composing the guard of honor. Then came the entire battery, which Captain Waters had turned out for the funeral. At the grave I read the

Resting in France, in the last long sleep before the Judgment Day, are a number of Rochester youths, heroes who gave their lives for the great cause which carried an army of 2,000,000 men from "the land of the free and the home of the brave" to Europe to combat the devilish onslaughts of the Hun, to drive him back and make the world free from the tyranny of militarism.

Lieutenant-Colonel Who Was Close
by When Death Blow Came Writes
Parents Details of Final Fight of Son in the Argonne Forest Battle

Apr. 27 - 1919
First Lieutenant Frank Merritt Stewart was struck down by a German bullet while fighting the Huns in the Bois de Chatel in the Argonne forest with the odds against him, and later died of his wounds, according to a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel Edward J. Mehan, of the 109th Infantry, with which Lieutenant Stewart was adjutant of the First Battalion. The letter, dated April 2, 1919, follows in part:

"It was my pleasure to first become acquainted with your son at the First Corps Replacement Battalion camp, near Maron, France, on or about October 1, 1918, when both he and I were there en route from hospital back to the line. While there I met him several times in a very casual way, and though I did not know him and had not ever previously seen him, I was impressed during this very slight acquaintance with his fine personality and soldierly characteristics. The next time I saw your son was at the headquarters of my regiment at Apremont on or about October 5th, which was a few days after I had rejoined the regiment; your son had been assigned to the Twenty-eighth Division and division headquarters had in turn assigned him to the 109th Infantry.

Became Battalion Adjutant.

"I was a captain at the time, but was commanding First Battalion and your son and myself were both very much pleased when, the First Battalion having no adjutant at the time, he was assigned to me as battalion adjutant on the morning of October 6, 1918. During that day and the early part of the following day, he and I with the battalion were on duty in positions in front of Apremont, from which we moved forward and occupied Chatel Chehery without much difficulty on the morning of October 8th, from which place we moved toward noon to the Bois de Chatel, west of the town named.

"At 1 o'clock on the afternoon of October 8th we attacked the enemy in the Bois de Chatel and met with very strong and very destructive resistance. Your son and I went forward with the battalion through very thick undergrowth, which acted to make very difficult the keeping together of the companies of the battalion, with the result that both he and I were under the necessity of directly taking command of small groups of the men and guiding them forward.

When Fatal Wound Came.

"The group which your son was leading on the right of our line encountered a strong position of the enemy in their immediate front which was holding up the advance of the greater part of our line, and unhesitatingly Lieutenant Stewart went forward against them. The number of men that your son had with him was small.

FRANK M. STEWART.

"I was in the center with my group and hearing the action on the right I hastened in that direction in time to see your son, who had been wounded, being assisted into a rifle pit by a soldier who had been with him and who was less seriously wounded. Going directly to the rifle pit I found that your brave son had been mortally wounded by a machine-gun or rifle bullet, which had struck him just below the heart; he was sinking rapidly, but was bearing himself in a truly splendid manner. He spoke to me bravely but haltingly and made an effort to give me his home address in Rochester, New York, and then smiled and asked that 'if he went' I should look after his belongings and then he smiled again with great effort, and said very bravely, 'But I am not going,' and closed his eyes.

Was a Trying Moment.

"You can understand that the moment was a very trying one. We were constantly under fire, and to show one's body in an upright position was to bring direct fire upon himself. Messages had to be sent to the brigadier-commander and the general stress which is present in all battle actions was all around us, but I was able to arrange within the next few minutes to have litter bearers bring a litter near to the place where we were, to carefully and guardedly get the lieutenant out of the rifle pit on to the litter and back to the dressing station in the rear. Of course, I was unable to go with him to the dressing station, but when we were relieved from the line I went there and made inquiry and found that he and his small bag, which contained all the possessions he had with him, had been sent on to the field hospital, to which place your son had been sent very promptly in the hope of saving his life. Feeling attached as I did to your son it was with profound sorrow that I was informed some time later that the lieutenant had passed away in the hospital.

Worthy of Pride.

"Though I know your son only briefly I feel that I knew him well and I entertain for his memory a positive affection. From my personal observation of him and his conduct during the two very trying days I can tell you that he was a son and a husband that any mother or any wife might well be very proud of; he was a good man, a brave man, and a devoted soldier.

"I regret exceedingly that you are called upon to make this great offering to a country's cause, but feel that if my dear were compelled to make a similar offering I would be very happy to have her know of me the things I have been able to tell you of your splendid son."

Born in Penn Yan.

Lieutenant Stewart was born in Penn Yan, and moved to Rochester with his parents ten years ago. In 1912 he was graduated from East High School, where he had distinguished himself as a track athlete. He was a member of the 1917 class of Michigan Agricultural College.

In August, 1917, he received a commission of first lieutenant at the Plattsburg Camp. On January 8, 1918, he sailed for the front. He was first attached to the 369th Infantry, with which he was shell-shocked and gassed on August 21, 1918. After a month in a hospital in Southern France he was reassigned, and became connected with the 109th Infantry.

The last that his parents and wife heard from him was in the form of a letter received from him on September 25, 1918. However, on December 10th, they received an official notice of his death from wounds received in action on October 12, 1918. The above letter explained the first details as to how Lieutenant Stewart met his death.

The unfortunate officer served on the border with Troop H. He was 26 years old. He was a member of the Third Presbyterian church and the Y. M. C. A. In the latter he always took part in the athletic events staged.

Lieutenant Stewart leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders Stewart, of No. 95 Meigs street, and his wife, Mrs. Blanche Stewart, also of Rochester.

Where Rochester Boy Lies Buried in Hallowed Soil

Apr. 24 - 1919
The last resting place of a Rochester boy, Charles Samuel McGinnis, was viewed by Lieutenant Courtney Ryley Cooper of the Marine Corps, while he was paying a visit to the battlefields of France. Lieutenant Cooper writes from the little village of Lucy la Bocage:

Just outside this battered, roofless, shell-torn little town is a tiny cemetery. It rears its crosses beside a laughing, tinkling little stream which flows from Belleau Wood—where Germany met the shock of the United States Marines in June, 1918, and recoiled in a retreat that ended only with her surrender.

It is in this little graveyard, with its shelter of trees, its smooth kept graves, its American flag insignia on every cross, that Private Charles Samuel McGinnis was killed in the taking of Belleau Wood early in June, 1918.

Private Charles Samuel McGinnis is the son of Mrs. Hannah McGinnis, 351 Caledonia Avenue.

Private Fred A. Meyers.

Private Fred A. Meyers of 173 Cypress Street, a member of Company H, 108th Regiment of the famous 27th Division, died Thursday at Fort Ontario, Oswego, as a result of having been gassed in October on the Hindenburg line. He was invalided to America, arriving in New York City in January, and was sent to the hospital at the fort. He enlisted in Company H in April, 1916.

Private Meyers leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Meyers; two sisters, Mrs. Louis Karle and Mrs. August Klenberg of Rochester, and two brothers, Clarence Meyers of Kirkwood and Louis Meyers of Rochester. Herald Apr. 5, 1919

PRIVATE WALLACE T. STELLWAGEN.

Private Wallace T. Stellwagen of Company K, 310th Infantry, 78th Division, has been officially reported killed in action on September 22 of last year near Thiancourt. He was reported previously as missing in action. Considerable mystery surrounded the disappearance of Private Stellwagen, and in the hope of obtaining more particulars Herbert Stellwagen, a brother of the missing soldier, communicated with Charles F. Mooney of Buffalo, who was in the same company and who was reported to know the facts of Private Stellwagen's death.

According to a dispatch to The Herald from Buffalo, Mr. Mooney said that he last saw Private Stellwagen on the morning of September 22 at 2 o'clock, as the company was advancing under terrific fire. Stellwagen was in his place as the right guide of the company. After the engagement Stellwagen was reported missing and no one saw him again. Some thought that he had been killed, while others believed he had been captured.

He was a brave boy and very well liked by all," said Mr. Mooney.

Private Stellwagen left Rochester for Camp Dix on April 4, 1918, and went overseas in May. His home in Rochester was at 349 Orange Street.

Descendant of City's Founder Died with "Lost Battalion" a Year Ago

P. 151
Oct. 10 - 1919
In the early dawn one year ago to-day a battalion of the 307th Infantry forcing a way forward in the face of galling machine gun fire established connection with the famed "Lost Battalion" for six days holding out against a superior force of the enemy. There were Rochesterians in that detachment, some of them seriously wounded in the six days' fighting. Some were numbered among those 252 who came back out of a force of 679 who went into action on October 2d. Included among those who died in that glorious combat was Sergeant Nathaniel N. Rochester, descendant of the founder of this city, who gave his life only the day before relief was accomplished by the 307th.

ROCHESTER SOLDIER SURVIVES FIVE BATTLES IN FRANCE, BUT DIES TWO WEEKS AFTER RETURN TO HIS HOME

Heard Oct. 20 - 1919
Surgical shock, resulting from an operation performed Saturday night, caused the death in Dr. Lee's Hospital early yesterday morning of Gustave A. Baltzer, 25 years old, one of the most popular men of the Class of 1919 at the University of Rochester who responded to the country's first call to arms. Mr. Baltzer, who was the son of Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Baltzer, retiring pastor of Trinity Evangelical Church, arrived in this country from France on September 19, and only returned to the home of his family in Child Street two weeks ago.

Enlists at Outbreak of War.

In less than a month after the United States had declared war on Germany, Mr. Baltzer went to Governor's Island and applied for service in the Intelligence Service of the army. He successfully passed the required examinations and was called into service in January, 1918, and assigned to duty at Camp Hancock, Georgia.

As a member of the intelligence staff of the Twenty-eighth Division, composed of Pennsylvania National Guard units, Mr. Baltzer sailed for France in April, 1918. From Chateau Thierry to the Argonne, he saw service in five major engagements. He was commissioned a lieutenant late in the summer, and assigned, after the signing of the armistice and the occupation of German territory had commenced, to join the staff of Major General Smith at Luxembourg.

Assigned to Duty in Germany.

After the American army had occupied Coblenz, Mr. Baltzer was assigned to the staff of the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission, and later acted as secretary to the American High Commissioner, Pierpont Noyes, in which capacity he served until he was ordered to America.

Mr. Baltzer had been offered a position with the International Harvester Company in Chicago which he had expected to assume as quickly as his physical condition permitted. The position had been tendered him by Mr. Noyes, one of the officers of the harvester company, who had been impressed with the young man's capabilities as shown during his service with the Inter-Allied commission.

Mr. Baltzer was a member of Beta Phi chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. Before matriculating at the University of Rochester, he was a student at West High School.

Funeral Arrangements.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a sister, Miss Wanda E. Baltzer, and a brother, Armin S. Baltzer. The funeral will be held at 2.30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon from Trinity Evangelical Church. Burial will be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery at the convenience of the family.

Three Rochester Men Met
Death in Waters.
May 7-1920
NO WORD FROM THEM

Friends Here Have Waited Long Time Anxiously.

Two Street Car Men and Camera
Worker on Way Home Presumed Killed in Disaster.

Friday, May 7th, five years ago to-day, a torpedo from a German submarine found the Lusitania as it was rushing toward the coast of Ireland, and 1,150 met death in the waters. Included among them are two and probably three Rochester men, on the way back to their homeland either to visit relatives or to enlist for war service. The passing of years has brought no word of them to their Rochester associates and their names have not appeared in the casualty lists and the presumption here is that their bodies have not been recovered, or that they are among the unidentified dead buried in Queenstown cemetery, where special memorial services were held for them to-day.

Three Rochester Men.

George Smith had boarded at 1403 Main street east with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Palmateer. His "pal," Albert N. J. Goodman, lived at 388 Webster avenue. Their parents in England were becoming old and enfeebled, and the two Rochester men obtained thirty days' leave of absence from the New York State Railways where they were employed, to go home to see them.

Regardless of the fears and expostulations of their friends they sailed aboard the Lusitania on the ill-fated trip which ended with the disaster. Mrs. Palmateer who knew both of them said to-day that she had received no word from them since the day they sailed and though she had scanned every list of survivors and of the known dead they did not disclose their names.

Mourned Dead Brother.

Jasper Norman, employed at the Camera works of the Eastman company, was on the same ship. He had lived here with a sister, since returned to England. His brother had been killed in action in France but a short time before he was notified of the serious illness of his mother in England, and he, too, desired to return home, with the intent probably of taking his dead brother's place in the English army. Nothing has been heard from him too by his Rochester friends.

HONOR THE FIRST AMERICAN TO DIE IN WORLD WAR

Dr. Gannett Unveils Tablet to His Namesake Who Served in French

Ambulance Corps.

May 21 - 1920
"The only adequate honor we can give our soldier dead is to live for the ideals for which they died," Rev. Ludwell H. Denny said in his sermon yesterday morning in the Unitarian church. He took for his text, "Greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for his friend." "We mourn not for them but that our civilization was such that it required such a terrible sacrifice," he said. "They have not died in vain for the ideal of democracy, their deaths give new sanctity to the ideal and new power which will bring victory in the future." Mr. Denny also read "The Dead," a poem by Rupert Brooke.

Following the regular service a memorial service was held in Gannett house where an altar had been prepared beneath a bronze tablet commemorating Paul Gannett Osborn, a member of the church, who enlisted in the French army and was the first American to give his life in the world war on the soil of France. He died on the day on which General John J. Pershing landed in France and two French generals delivered eulogies at his grave. The soldier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Osborn of Montclair, New Jersey, were among those present at the ceremony.

The tablet was unveiled by Rev. Dr. William C. Gannett, minister emeritus of the church, for whom the soldier was named. Dr. Gannett gave the warrior's record as a boy and in the French ambulance service in which he was wounded, quoted from the address given by one of the French generals at the service in France and told of the dropping of a wreath on his grave from an airplane. He also paid a tribute to Floyd Whitmarsh who returned from the war disabled.

On one side of the tablet was the American flag and on the other the church service flag containing thirty-two stars. Many of the men represented by the stars attended the service.

The familiar crash of baggage and trunks, the hurrying and bustling of men in the baggage room of the station stopped abruptly while the six flag-draped plain wooden boxes were taken from the train and carried to waiting hearses. The boxes were marked and tagged with the name and address of the dead soldier and the name of the person to whom the remains were consigned. A car full of soldiers from Camp Dix are accompanying the train and handling the details relative to the delivery of the bodies.

POEM IN SATURDAY EVENING POST FIRST BRINGS ROCHESTER GOLD STAR MOTHER STORY OF SON'S DEATH IN ARGONNE WOOD

Handled Sept. 22, 1922
Atlantic City, Sept. 21.—A poem message to Whittlesey—a message never delivered.
Not a word was learned of Quinn's fate until four months after the armistice. After lying out in the jungle depths of the Argonne all winter, Quinn's body was accidentally found by an American burial squad. The message, with an unposted letter to his mother, was found on his body, the papers being hardly legible. Nearby the fallen runner were the bodies of three boches. It was clear from the manner in which they had fallen that all three had been crawling up to Quinn, who must have killed them even as their bullets hit him mortally.
When the military authorities tried to notify the courageous doughboy's mother, she could not be located. Every means of tracing her was exhausted when, nearly a year after the runner had fallen, Captain McKeogh's poem appeared, describing the incident in detail and dedicated specifically to Quinn. Mrs. Caroline Quinn then wrote explaining that she had moved to another city, leaving no forwarding address, and that the poem was the first notice she had of her boy's brave death.
Private George W. Quinn of Rochester, N. Y., was attached to the 1st Battalion Headquarters of the 308th Infantry from New York City and lost his life in attempting to carry a message between Colonel Charles W. Whittlesey and the latter's adjutant, Captain McKeogh. The episode occurred during the operations immediately preceding the German occupation of ground to the rear of Colonel Whittlesey's famous command, the "Lost battalion." The adjutant had been sent back with a score of light machine gunners to silence machine gun positions that had cut communications with the rear during the night. The adjutant gave runner Quinn a

LIEUT. ANDREWS DIES AT HOME IN SCOTTSVILLE

T. C. — Feb. 17
Long Illness Resulting From Aviation Injury Ends in Death of Officer Who Rendered Distinguished Service. 1923

Scottsville, Feb. 12.—Harold Vickery Andrews died at his home in Scottsville, Friday afternoon after a long illness, which resulted from injuries sustained when an airplane in which he was a passenger crashed to earth at Pensacola Field, Florida in 1918.

Lieutenant Andrews was one of the best known World War veterans in this section of the county and while his health permitted was an active worker for Scottsville Post American Legion.

He was 30 years of age and during a long period of naval service had been on many cruises in distant waters, having served under Captain T. Evans, son of the famous "Fighting Bob." His promotion in the navy was rapid and he was rated as an expert electrical technician.

Upon outbreak of the World War he applied for assignment with the naval air service and was assigned to duty in Florida. His last flight was made voluntarily with a student aviator whose inexperience led to faulty manipulation of the plane controls which caused an accident which led to the instructor's loss of health.

Lieut. Andrews was one of the pioneer radio amateurs in Western New York and following his retirement he devoted much of his time to radio experiment. Surviving are his wife, Nora W. Andrews; one daughter, Marion; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Andrews; one brother, William Jr., and one sister, Mrs. J. Milling.

Funeral services will be held from his late home tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock and at 2 o'clock from the Union Presbyterian Church in this village. The Rev. R. M. Conal, pastor, will conduct the services and the Masons will have charge of services at the grave. Members of Scottsville Post American Legion will act as guard of honor and will sound taps and fire a volley at the grave.

Scottsville, Feb. 12.—Harold Vickery Andrews, lieutenant in the United States navy, who died at his home in Oatka place, Friday, after a long illness, was born in Buffalo, September 18, 1894. He entered the navy in 1913 and became lieutenant in 1917, making many long cruises in the meantime. During the World war he was an instructor in the aviation service in Pensacola, Florida, where the value of his services was so great that he was prevented from going overseas.

He spent more than a thousand hours in the air and had several falls in his airplane while instructing inexperienced student aviators. His last flight ended in his plane falling into the bay at Warrington, just outside of Pensacola, when he received injuries which led to his final illness. In the hope of regaining his health, Lieutenant Andrews passed two years in Colorado. Deriving no benefit there, he returned East. He was a member of the Masonic society and of Smith-Warren post of Scottsville, American Legion.

He leaves his wife, Nora W. Andrews, a daughter, Marion; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Andrews, a sister, Mrs. J. C. Milling, and a brother, Herbert, all of Rochester. Funeral services will be Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Union Presbyterian church. Smith-Warren post will have charge of the services at the church and the Masons at the grave. MILITARY INQUIRY INTO DEATH OF ROCHESTER DOUGHBOY, WHO WAS KILLED BY X-RAY MACHINE

Herald

Official military inquiry will be made at the direction of Lieutenant Colonel M. S. Funnell into the circumstances surrounding the death of Private Russell H. Fishbaugh of Rochester, who was killed Tuesday by a spark from an X-ray machine while he was undergoing an examination at Fort McHenry Base Hospital in Baltimore.

This information was contained in a special dispatch to The Herald from Baltimore last night, which added that the body would yesterday afternoon be sent to the home of the young soldier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Fishbaugh of 21 Greeley Street. In the report of the accident printed yesterday morning the name was sent out in news dispatches as "H. S. Fishbaugh."

So far as the facts have been unofficially reported, it appears that Private Fishbaugh was having a photograph taken of a wounded right arm, when he rose to change his position. The current in the X-ray machine had been turned on, and as his head neared the electric poles a spark of 50,000 volts, breaking the air gap between him and its conductor, penetrated his body. He died an hour later.

Recently Home on a Furlough.

Private Fishbaugh was recently home on a furlough. He had planned to enter a college through the rehabilitation provision made for wounded army men. Young Fishbaugh received a bullet wound in the right arm on September 29, when the assault on the Hindenburg line enabled the 27th Division to break through. Fishbaugh was a member of Company A, 108th Infantry, with which he saw service at Chateau-Thierry and in the Argonne.

The wound did not respond to treatment or operations, and accordingly surgeons at the Fort McHenry Hospital set about making a thorough examination, in the course of which the fatal accident occurred.

One of Five Brothers in War.

Private Fishbaugh was one of five sons of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington M. Fishbaugh who enlisted in the service during the war. Whittier, the eldest son, is in the naval aviation service and is now stationed at Philadelphia. Wendell, the second son, is a private in the 319th Signal Battalion, still in France. Russell was the third son. Corporal Lloyd E. Fishbaugh is attending the Marine Corps officer's training school at Quantico, Va. Private Maurice, the youngest, is in Germany with the Army of Occupation.

RUSSELL H. FISHBAUGH.

Principal Albert H. Wilcox of East High School spoke highly of young Fishbaugh yesterday, when he heard of his sudden death, saying that he had distinguished himself in his last two years of study. Russell was prominent in athletics and other activities of the school. He showed exceptional ability as a speaker, while his work in dramatics and elocution was especially commended. He was also gifted with a fine baritone voice, and he wrote considerable for his school paper.

Besides the brothers mentioned, Private Fishbaugh leaves two younger brothers, Frank L. and Willard E., and a sister, Miss Melba Fishbaugh. He was a member of Spencer-Ripley Church and of the Hoover Class of that church.

The funeral will be held from the family residence, 21 Greeley Street, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Private Raymond E. Greeley, of Company M, 110th Infantry, and Private James H. Greeley, Jr., of Company M, 109th Infantry, took part in all the fighting their units were engaged in, including Chateau-Thierry, up to July 28th, when Raymond was killed in action while advancing at Clerges, and James was captured by the Germans and taken to Rastatt, Germany, where he was released on December 8th. He has been honorably discharged from the service and has returned to his home, No. 762 Union street, Philadelphia. James, when a boy, was employed by Scrantom, Wetmore & Company during school vacations. The parents formerly lived in Rochester and the boys attended school here.

The grave of Raymond has been located by the relatives through the efforts of Senator William H. Bright. A cablegram telling of the location has been received from General Pershing. Major Joseph F. Hodgson, 45 years old, formerly with the advertising department of the Eastman Kodak Company, who died in Walter Reid Hospital in Washington, D. C., Saturday, was buried today in Arlington Cemetery with full military escort.

Major Hodgson is the brother of Milard B. Hodgson, manager of the medical division of the Eastman Kodak Company. He saw service with General Pershing's punitive expedition into Mexico after the bandit Villa and later fought overseas in the St. Mihiel Drive, in which he was gassed badly.

Nearly three years ago he came to Rochester in the hope of recovering from the effect of the gas, but a short time ago was forced to return to the Washington hospital where he died.

Sergeant Howard L. Shepard of Company G, 108th Infantry, was wounded in action on September 29 and died the following morning at a base hospital, according to information which has come to his father, F. E. Shepard of Fairport. He left his position as assistant cashier of the Fairport National Bank to join the army immediately after war was declared. guard before the war, having seen service on the Mexican border. For some months before he went into service he was employed as assistant cashier at the Fairport National Bank.

Two weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Shepard received a letter from their son, dated September 15, in which he told of hearing of other companies going to the front and it galled him and his companions because they seemed to be getting further from the front instead of nearer to it. It is believed that he went into action soon after writing that letter.

World War Veteran Drowned In Attempting To Save Life Of Little Girl In Sodus Bay

Times Union Aug. 20, 1923
George Gibson, 39, of 155 Reservoir Avenue, Jumps Into Water From Boat in Which He Was Rowing Janet Young, 9, of Syracuse, When Child's Hat Blows Off and She Topples in Trying To Regain It.

George Gibson, 39, of 155 Reservoir was drowned in a portion of the avenue, a railway mail clerk and beach which has been dredged to veteran of the World War, was drowned in Sodus bay about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was attempting to rescue Janet Young, 9, of Syracuse, who was in a boat with him.

The child fell into the water while attempting to recover her hat which had blown off. She sank almost immediately and Gibson dove in after her. The accident was witnessed by a crowd of bathers on the shore, only a short distance away. The girl was rescued by Ernest Sage of Syracuse, but it was 30 minutes before Vincent Roach of Newark recovered the body of Gibson.

He was placed on the lawn in front of the cottage of O. C. Farak and first aid methods were used in an effort to resuscitate him. An ambulance from Highland Hospital made a record run but Gibson expired before it reached the scene.

Gibson, with a party of friends, left Rochester Saturday night to spend the week-end at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Young of Syracuse, parents of Janet Young. Gibson was able to swim and it is not known whether he was seized with a cramp or an attack of heart trouble. The spot where he was drowned is in a portion of the beach which has been dredged to deepen the bay.

Coroner George B. Winchell of Rose issued a certificate of accidental drowning.

Gibson was a member of the Caledonia Lodge of Masons and had been a railway postal clerk for nearly 15 years. For the past few years he has been on the run between Rochester and Buffalo. He joined the postal branch of the service soon after the United States entered the World War and aided in opening the first American postoffice of the American Expeditionary Forces in France. He served throughout the war and was among the last of the members of the postal branch of the service to return to this country.

He was unmarried and leaves two sisters, Jennie Gibson and Mrs. J. J. Holahan of this city; three brothers, Dr. William Gibson, with whom he lived; Charles Gibson of this city and David Gibson of Caledonia. The funeral will take place from the home of his sister, Mrs. J. J. Holahan, 4 Rundel park, at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and the body will be taken to Caledonia for interment in the Mumford Rural Cemetery.

Veteran Commits Suicide; Throws Self Under Car

Sept. 1923
Thomas Burke, 32, of 95 Kerr street, a World War veteran, committed suicide shortly after 7 o'clock last evening by throwing himself under the wheels of an eastbound street car in West avenue near Gardiner avenue. The car had to be jacked up by a wrecking crew before the body could be removed from under the trucks. Burk was dead before a surgeon from St. Mary's Hospital arrived with an ambulance.

As many people looked on, Burke plunged under the car. Women shrieked and their cries attracted the attention of Motorman George Merkle. The car was crowded with passengers. Merkle told the police he was unable to stop the car in time to prevent the accident.

The body was taken to the morgue where identity was established by Milton Dix of 65 Mt. Reed boulevard, Charles O'Brien of 499 Main street west, and William Duda, with whom Burke boarded. Duda said Burke went to work yesterday at the stone crushing plant of the Dolomite Corporation in Buffalo road, but returned home in the afternoon, saying he had been injured by a load of stone being dumped on him. Duda told officials Burke apparently suffered no serious injuries. Duda said that the dead man has a sister living in Syracuse and a brother in Erie, Pa.

Burke served in the army, having seen service on the Mexican border and in France. He held the rank of sergeant when discharged from the army.

T. U. Gave His Life. Editorial

In the effort to save a child who had fallen out of a rowboat at Sodus Bay, George Gibson, of 155 Ravine avenue, lost his own life.

His instant response to the cry for aid is an example of that quiet heroism and sense of responsibility which reveal the real nature of a man in an emergency. That George Gibson was drowned while the little girl was rescued by others, is a tragic turn of events which detracts nothing from the fact that he gave his life to save another.

While such men as George Gibson are to be found in all walks of life this country remains sound and secure. We may praise the man who has achieved some striking material success, but character, courage and sacrifice are qualities which endure.

ESCAPES INJURY IN WAR TO MEET DEATH BY TRAIN

D. & C. — Mel. 12
Victim of Crossing Crash

Saw Hard Service in Battles in France. 1924

After successfully eluding death-dealing machines in the World war, Raymond F. Haines, 33 years old, of No. 33 Aberdeen street by a strange irony of fate, met his death before an onrushing locomotive. As a private in the Eighty-first Division, Haines went over the top numerous times in France and escaped without a scratch while companions all about him fell. Early yesterday morning, alone in his automobile, he was struck and almost instantly killed by a fast New York Central train at the York street crossing.

Corner Thomas A. Killip announced he would conduct an inquest into the tragedy while the police are searching the city for a Yellow Taxicab which preceded Haines across the tracks. Haines followed close behind the cab, thinking, it is believed, that there was no danger. The cab cleared the tracks on which the section of eastbound train No. 4 was coming at a fast rate. It struck Haines's car, carrying it a quarter of a mile. Haines was thrown through the roof of the automobile landing on top of the locomotive. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital but died a few minutes after being admitted.

Patrick Raube, of No. 8 Birch crescent, and C. Thompson, of No. 216 Avis street, who were in an automobile at the other side of the crossing waiting for the train to pass, said the watchman, Arthur O'Brien, of No. 408 Ridge-way avenue, did everything in his power to prevent the crash. Thompson took Haines to the hospital after the accident.

Haines was a foreman in the lacquer and finishing department of the Camera Works of the Eastman Kodak Company and had been in the employ of the Kodak Company for the last ten years. Previously he had held a position in the engraving department of the Rochester Herald.

Haines was a member of Memorial Post, American Legion. He also was a member of the Rochester Lodge of Elks.

The funeral will take place Friday morning and will be conducted by Memorial Post.

Haines leaves his parents, Clarence D. and Mary L. Haines, and a sister, Jean Haines, all of this city.

LEGION EXTOLS WORK OF DEAD DOCTOR HERE

War Record of Dr. Joseph R. Culkins Recognized by Service Cross.

The Americanization Committee of the American Legion of Monroe County in checking up the names of former service men who were granted medals of honor for service during the war have just finished the investigation of the record of Dr. Joseph R. Culkin, who died in this city June 9, 1922. Dr. Culkin was the wearer of a distinguished service cross, which is the highest honor granted by the United States government for service back of the actual line of battle, and it has seemed fitting at this time to recall the circumstances which prompted the conferring of this medal.

When the United States declared war on Germany in April, 1917, Dr. Culkin was 53 years old and would ordinarily have been excused from any active war service. So eager was he, however, to serve his country in the field of war as he had done in times of peace, that he enlisted and was commissioned a captain in June, 1917. He was sent to Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C., in November for preliminary training, but was shortly transferred to Camp Upton, N. J., and appointed surgeon in charge. He remained in Camp Upton until the end of the war. He was commissioned a major in July, 1918. After the Armistice he was made Chief of the surgeons Certificate of Disability Department because of his expert knowledge of diseases of the heart and lungs, and remained for some months, but was finally retired as a lieutenant colonel in the Reserve.

During the winter of 1918 the influenza epidemic was at its worst in this country and seemed to be particularly virulent in the crowded camps and barracks of the great cantonment. The remarkable treatment of the epidemic and the scientific organization of the forces in Camp Upton brought that camp through with a very low mortality record, and full credit for this work was given to Dr. Culkin as chief surgeon. The commanding general recommended him for the distinguished service cross, and it was conferred soon after. In spite of the fact that Dr. Culkin was a very popular and well known man in this community, many of his friends had never heard of this honor.

The Americanization Committee of the Legion believes that too much emphasis cannot be placed upon this recognition of one of Rochester's most loved men, as it emphasizes the value of a thorough training combined with a great personality.

Native of Oswego.

In reviewing Dr. Culkin's life it is noted that he was born in Oswego, afterwards going to the University of Michigan, Bellevue Hospital at New York, and from there to Vienna, Paris, and London for final training. In preparation for his work at Camp Upton, he had had nearly 30 years of experience in general practice, with special emphasis on diseases of the heart and lungs, and he was well known as one of the leading physicians of this community both because of his scientific knowledge and ability and his excellent character and splendid personality. To his friends Dr. Culkin presented the picture of a man of few words but high ideals, careful and conservative in business matters, but exceedingly generous and open handed in personal matters. To his patients he was a tower of strength in whom they could put every confidence because he was always sincere and honest in his statements.

There was another class, however, to whom Dr. Culkin is still known as something more than human, and these were the people for whom he sometimes forsook his well-to-do patients to take charge of an emergency case where the family was unable to pay for the services of even the poorest physician. Hundreds of persons in Rochester doubtless know of occasions where the dignified form of Dr. Culkin has stepped from his car into a lowly habitation to study and treat some humble citizen. There was never any publicity given to this work. In matters of charity Dr. Culkin was an example of a true Christian.

In bringing these matters to the attention of the public, the Americanization Committee of the Legion wishes to do homage to the memory of Dr. Culkin and to point to his life as one which followed the highest and truest ideals of Americanism.

Army Work, Following Ideal of Private Practice, Won Highest Recognition.

The Americanization Committee of the American Legion of Monroe County, which is checking up the names of former service men who were granted medals of honor for service during the war, has finished the investigation of the record of Dr. Joseph R. Successful in Checking Influenza.

During the winter of 1918 the influenza epidemic was at its worst in this country and seemed to be particularly virulent in the crowded camps and barracks of the great cantonments. Friend of the Humble.

In bringing these matters to the attention of the public the Americanization Committee of the Legion wishes to do homage to the memory of Dr. Culkin and to point to his life as one which followed the highest and truest ideals of Americanism.

WILLIAM DUGAN, WAR HERO AND EXPLORER, DIES

J. U. Sept. 1924
Son of William E. Dugan,
President of Dugan and Hudson Shoe Company,
Succumbs to Fever at Patchogue, L. I. 1924

W. E. DUGAN

William E. Dugan, jr., 34 years old, of Rochester, who served as an aviator in the Lafayette Escadrille, receiving the medal of the Legion of Honor for valorous service, died yesterday afternoon in the Patchogue Hospital, Patchogue, a victim of tropical fever contracted while exploring banana lands in Columbia, South America. Dugan had been in the employ of the United Fruit Company for the past six years and also served this company prior to his enlistment in the World War.

Dugan was the son of William E. Dugan, of 21 Arnold park, president of the Dugan and Hudson Shoe Company. He attended grammar school here and later the University of Rochester. He left Rochester in 1910 and was employed in the Panama Canal Zone.

Not long after, he was employed by the United Fruit Company at Costa Rica, and rose to be manager of one of the plantations of the company. He was later sent to South America.

Dugan joined the Foreign Legion in France at the outbreak of the World War. He had been in London on business. He was sent to the front, and a year later was wounded at Verdun. Following recovery from his wound, he entered the French Air Service, training for pilot. He was later breveted.

After five months service in the air forces of France, he joined the famous Lafayette Escadrille, performing heroic service, receiving the medal of the Legion of Honor. He was also awarded the French War Cross for his service at Verdun. Though he took part in many daring raids over the German lines while an aviator, he escaped injury.

In September, 1917, Dugan returned to Rochester and later married Ramona Adams at Bronxville. At the time he returned here, he was the guest of honor at a dinner attended by more than 300 of Rochester's most prominent citizenry at Oak Hill Country Club.

Mr. Dugan, re-entering the employ of the United Fruit Company traveled extensively prospecting for fruit. It was on one of these trips in South America that he contracted the fever which resulted in his death. A few years ago, Mr. Dugan's wife and infant daughter died in Costa Rica.

Returning to New York about two weeks ago, Mr. Dugan went to Patchogue to visit his grandmother. At that time he sent word to his father here that he would come to Rochester in the near future. He was prevented from making this visit by illness, but his family here had no knowledge of the seriousness of his condition, and did not learn of his death until this morning. Yesterday a final effort was made to save his life by a blood transfusion.

William E. Dugan, sr., will leave Rochester tonight for Patchogue, where the funeral will be held. The body will not be brought to Rochester.

Mr. Dugan is survived by his father and mother, four brothers, Charles, Harold, Colburn and Frank Dugan, and one sister, Mrs. Louis S. Foulkes, jr.

Sergeant Schmanke was found dead in bed yesterday morning, his death being attributed to apoplexy.

Sergeant Schmanke had been with his parents since January of this year, a few months before his retirement from the regular army on April 11, 1924. He was widely known as a bird fancier, having been a director of the International Roller Canary Breeders' Association and president of the Rochester Roller Canary Club. He spent a great amount of time raising pedigreed canaries. He was contemplating a trip to Arkansas within a few weeks and had arranged his business affairs preparatory to making his home in the West permanently.

Born in this city on July 22, 1877, Sergeant Schmanke attended old No. 9 School. He enlisted in the regular army in 1897 and was assigned to the Engineer Corps at West Point, joining the force in Cuba the following year. At the close of the Spanish-American war he was transferred to the Signal Corps and stationed in the Philippines for the next three years. He was then assigned to Fort Ethan Allan, and later was sent to Fairbanks, Alaska, to take charge of the government wireless station there. He remained there for four years. The next few years he was on duty at various points, being stationed finally at Fort Wood, where he remained until the outbreak of the World war. He was sent to France with the first expeditionary force and soon was assigned to organize the carrier pigeon service, earning the rank of second lieutenant. Returning from France in 1919, he was again stationed at Fort Wood, with his rank reverting to his former title, master signal electrician. He remained there until his retirement.

Davis, No. 68 Rose-dale street, following a long illness. Mr. Davis, who was graduated from the University in 1913, was active in student affairs throughout his course, being a member of the college musical clubs and playing on his fraternity basketball five. He was a member of Phi Epsilon, now Theta Chi, fraternity.

Since 1919 Mr. Davis, who is also a graduate of the Landscape Art School at Cornell University in the class of 1915, had resided in Pasadena, Calif. He returned here from the west coast some time ago to fight off an illness which forced his retirement from his work as a landscape artist. He was born in Rochester on February 11, 1892, and spent the greater part of his life here. He was a graduate of East High School.

Mr. Davis was awarded the degree of master of landscape design at the conclusion of his Cornell course and declined an instructorship in the Ithaca school in order to practice his art. During the World war he served as an athletic director at Camp Dix and won commendation from military officials for his service there.

At the close of the war Mr. Davis and his wife moved to Pasadena, where he rapidly was making a name for himself when illness forced his return to Rochester.

While in Rochester Mr. Davis was a member of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Church and the Wheeler Sunday-school Class. As a boy he sang in the choir of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church in East avenue.

Funeral services will take place from the home of his parents at 2:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Rev. Samuel J. Clarkson, D. D., minister of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Church, will officiate.

Two months after that accident, Sergeant Rosa was a passenger with Major Martin, later the commander of the American world flyers, in the transcontinental race. The plane was wrecked in Omaha, the two passengers escaping injury.

Sergeant Rosa joined the air service after his return from two years in the Motor Transport Corps in France. He was attached to the Ninety-ninth Observation Squadron, Bolling Field, Washington. He was honorably discharged in May, 1921, as a staff sergeant. A native of Rhode Island, Rosa made his home in Rochester after his discharge from the air service.

Rochester's Part In World War Contains Records Of 609 Who Made Supreme Sacrifice

Times Union
Great-Great-Grandson Of City's Founder Killed In Argonne Forest
Not in 1924
One Rochester Man Received Congressional Medal,
Others Were Awarded Recognition for Gallantry
—Six Young Rochester Women Gave Their Lives in Service of Their Country.

The Times-Union makes public today the first accurate and authoritative list of the 603 men and six women of Rochester and Monroe county who gave their lives in the World War. This list has been compiled after more than three years of research and investigation of private and government records by Edward R. Foreman, city historian, and the result of his monumental work is embodied in the forthcoming volume on Rochester's part in the World War. This edition is limited to 1,000 copies of 652 pages each. One copy will be presented to each Gold Star family with the inscription in gold: "Presented by the City of Rochester in Memory of" the name of the gold star man being inscribed.

In this memorial volume have been included the biography and service record of 609 men and women of Rochester and vicinity wherever they entered the service, as well as the names of all who entered service of the government in this city. Upward of 467 photographs are reproduced. The fact that up to the time of reading proof on the press matter, kinsfolk and others were in communication with the city historian respecting alleged inaccuracies in published accounts, stresses the good judgment of the city administration in withholding consent to a permanent memorial of the war dead until this accurate and authoritative list had been compiled.

The biographies perpetuate 512 names in the city and 97 in the county. It also is brought out that one hero received the Congressional Medal of Honor, one the distinguished service medal, 16 the distinguished service cross, five were cited in general orders for gallantry in action; one citation certificate; 54 received foreign decorations, and nine Y. M. C. A. secretaries decorated by foreign governments.

The volumes are now in the hands of the binder and it is expected that a copy suitably inscribed will be presented to each gold star family within the next two weeks. The demand for copies is already very heavy, and a second printing may be necessary.

Included in the biographies is the record of Sergeant Nathaniel Norman Rochester of Santa Ana, Cal., who was killed in action October 8, 1918, in the Argonne Forest. Rochester was made a sergeant before he was 20 years old, and took part in the fighting of the famous Lost Battalion. He had been named after his great-great-grandfather, Colonel Nathaniel Rochester, the founder of this city. His body rests in the American Battle Area Cemetery at Binarville, Marne, France. Had he lived one month longer he would have been 21 years old. When his mother, who was Mrs. Edith Grensted Rochester, a writer of considerable note, who died shortly after the close of the war, was asked if she desired the body of her son to be transferred to his native land, she answered: "I think it is better to let our boys, who have given their lives 'over there'—rest where they are—but I should want to know that their resting place was properly cared for and marked."

Six Women Give Their Lives.

Noteworthy among the thrilling records of heroism, which enliven the volume, are the stories of six women who also gave their lives.

Catherine Rose Connelly, graduated by Homeopathic Hospital, entered service September 30, 1918, as Red Cross nurse, and died a victim of influenza, October 16, 1918, at Camp Gordon, Georgia. She was 23 years old.

Lillian Frances Cupp, a classmate of Miss Connelly, was one of the first nurses in this city to enroll with the Red Cross. She left Rochester October 3, 1918, while ill. She was stricken with pneumonia at Camp Gordon and died October 7, 1918. Her body rests in a little cemetery of her native town, Trout Run, Pa.

Cecil Josephine Cochran was a graduate of St. Mary's Hospital and enrolled with the Red Cross May 10, 1918. She administered to the soldier victims of influenza in camp at Huntsville, Ala., and contracted the disease within 10 days. She died October 15, 1918. A military funeral was held at Batavia and the body removed to St. Francis Cemetery at Le Roy.

Anna Marie Williams, daughter of Mrs. J. H. Williams of Fredonia, joined Base Hospital 19 in Rochester and sailed overseas June 14, 1918. She died in line of duty at Vichy, October 15, 1918.

Blanche Adelle Rowley of 658 Main street east sailed overseas as a Y. M. C. A. canteen worker. She died February 23, 1918, at Liverpool, England, a victim of influenza and pneumonia.

Frances Johanna Raetz of 609 Lake avenue entered service as a war worker September 22, 1918. She died of pneumonia October 5, 1918, at Washington, D. C. Her body rests in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

POLICE UNABLE TO LOCATE WITNESSES TO FATAL STREET CAR ACCIDENT THAT RESULTED IN DEATH OF HILARY CURRAN

Herald Feb. 27-1920
Police from the University Avenue Station have not been able to locate any witnesses of a fatal accident at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, when Hilary F. Curran, aged 28, well known amateur golf player and athlete, was crushed to death beneath the wheels of a trolley car near his home at 1122 Park Avenue. He was instantly killed.

Curran's body was dragged about 300 feet before the car could be stopped. The first intimation that the car crew had of the accident was when the trucks tilted over the man's body.

The Park Avenue car that struck Curran was manned by Motorman C. H. Ferris of 18 Charlotte Street and Conductor Lawrence Scheffel of 253 Parsells Avenue. Coroner Maggio will hold an inquest. At his request, the police attempted to locate other witnesses.

Curran lived with his mother, Mrs. Joanna Curran. She was awake at the time of the accident, heard the crash and called her other son to investigate, as she feared some accident might have happened to Hilary.

During the war, Curran served with a United States Navy destroyer on convoy duty. He was a student at Fordham College at the time he enlisted in the service.

HILARY CURRAN.

Hundreds of acquaintances, old and young, paid their last tributes to Hilary F. Curran, of No. 1122 Park avenue, who was run down and instantly killed by a street car in front of his home early Thursday, yesterday morning. Scores of relatives and close personal friends packed the house as brief prayers were said over the body of the young man, while a crowd which completely filled St. John's Church in Humboldt street, gathered there at 10 o'clock when solemn high mass were celebrated.

Rt. Rev. J. J. Hartley, rector of St. Bernard's Seminary and a cousin of Mr. Curran, was celebrant of the mass. Rev. J. B. Sullivan, pastor of St. John's Church, was deacon and Rev. James E. Wood, of Sonoma, was sub-deacon. Rev. Joseph J. Cameron, pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, was master of ceremonies. In the sanctuary were Rev. J. Francis O'Hern, vicar-general; Rev. Thomas Connors, of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament; Rev. Charles F. Shay, of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and Rev. A. A. Hughes, of Holy Rosary Church.

A uniformed firing squad from the American Legion acted as an escort from the church to the cemetery. Taps was sounded and a final salute fired as the body was lowered into its resting place in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

A large delegation from Rochester Council, Knights of Columbus, attended the services.

Tribute to the popularity of Curran was paid Thursday when hundreds filed passed the casket at his home. Between 2 o'clock in the afternoon and 11 o'clock at night there was a continuous stream of visitors to the house. While many of the visitors had known Curran intimately, many others, who had been only remotely associated with him, came to pay their last tribute to his winning personality.

DEATH BRINGS RELIEF TO BOY WAR VETERAN

J. L. Mel. 26
Lad's Gallant Spirit Which Had Borne 12 Operations Without Complaint
Flickers Out As Disease
Conquers. 1925

After a battle for life which carried him through 12 operations and years of hospital existence, the gallant spirit of young Fred Burgie, World War veteran, flickered out last night in his little room in the General Hospital. He was one of the simple, unsung victims whose lives were not snuffed out in the roar and madness of battle, but which trickled away slowly as day of pain followed day of pain in the long, hopeless battle against disease.

Burgie was not a war hero in the accepted sense of the term, he was just a plain every-day sort of hero who could grin and bear as they hacked him slowly to pieces. For more than two years he lay on his back in the General Hospital, waiting, just waiting for the next time they would roll in the little white table which meant another trip to the operating theater.

Poor Fred Burgie didn't have much luck. He was just a plucky 16-year old kid when he enlisted in the navy in January, 1918. For a year he served on divers ships in different places. Then an attack diagnosed by the ship surgeon as German measles sent him to the sick bay. A week later they reported him "duty" and he went back to the sailors' routine. It was not long after, however, before he came down with an obstinate cold and this time he was sent to a naval hospital at Hartford, Conn. Here he passed 50 weeks suffering from a combination of measles, pleurisy, bronchitis and pneumonia. Finally he was discharged from the hospital and from the navy as supposedly cured. He returned to Rochester, married, and then the old trouble began again. He went to the mountains, to the Monroe County Sanitarium, but apparently his trouble was not tuberculosis.

Then he had his tonsils removed and it was found that poison from the infected tonsils had caused an abscess on the lung. After that the operations started.

No, poor Fred hadn't much luck. Only sixteen when he enlisted, most of the fun and joy of a man's best years passed him by. He was only 23 when death came. Just one of the many for whom the war isn't ended yet.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mildred Fisher Burgie, a son, Robert; two brothers, Daniel and Kermet; a sister, Miss Hattie Burgie and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Green, all of Rochester.

The funeral, a military one, will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home, 55 Jackson street. Burial will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Members of Milton L. Lewis, (All Navy) Post are asked to assemble at the Main Street Armory at 1:15 o'clock Saturday for the funeral.

Captain Peverill Buried with Military Ceremonies

Placing casket of Captain Peverill on gun caisson at start of march to cemetery.

Body Lies in State at Armory; Units Here Pay Respects.

The body of Captain Norman S. Peverill was buried with military ceremony in the soldiers' and sailors' plot in Mount Hope cemetery yesterday afternoon.

Captain Peverill, treasurer of the Monroe County American Legion, and a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, died Tuesday in the Marine Hospital in Brooklyn. Yesterday the body lay in state in the State Armory for an hour, where it was viewed by scores of Captain Peverill's friends and military associates.

The military funeral services started at 2 o'clock on the floor of the Armory, with Rev. Arthur O. Sykes, D. D., of St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, officiating. The casket, covered with an American flag, was surrounded by floral tokens from many of the American Legion posts of the city and several non-military organizations with which Captain Peverill had been identified.

At the close of the services in the armory, the casket was placed upon an artillery caisson, drawn by four black horses, and carried to Mount Hope cemetery. The body was accompanied by a platoon of mounted police, a detachment of the National Guard, Slager Band, American Legion, and representatives from the city engineering department, military, patriotic and civil organizations.

A short service was conducted by Dr. Sykes at the grave, after which a volley was fired over the casket by an armed detachment of the National Guard. Taps was sounded as the casket was lowered into the grave.

Music at the services and for the funeral cortege from the Armory to the cemetery was furnished by Slager Band.

Military Funeral at Rochester
State Armory for Captain
Norman S. Peverill

Mch. 29 - 25
Captain Norman S. Peverill, veteran service man and National Guardsman, who died Tuesday at Marine Hospital in Brooklyn, was buried with military honors in the Soldiers' and Sailors' plot in Mt. Hope Cemetery yesterday afternoon, following an impressive funeral service at Rochester State Armory.

Military Escort.

The body, escorted by a detail of Mounted Police, an armed detachment of National Guard and former service men, Slager Post Band of American Legion and a large representation of Rochester Old Guard, American Legion Posts, Spanish War Veterans and the City Engineers' Department, was taken from the Armory on a field artillery caisson drawn by four black horses, to the cemetery where the military burial service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Arthur O. Sykes of St. Thomas Church, a veteran of the Spanish War.

Twilight was gathering as the service at the grave was completed and the parting salute, three crashing rifle volleys, left the hillside echoes contending with the wailing bugle notes of "taps," the soldiers' last call. Then the escort reformed for the return march and the band, according to military custom, began a cheery quickstep as the column left the cemetery gates. "A good man's gone," the music says. "We, who are left behind, must carry on."

No more fitting testimonial of the esteem in which a citizen soldier was held by his comrades and friends could be shown, was the general expression of persons attending the ceremony at Rochester State Armory, than was expressed by the simple services attending the funeral of Captain Peverill, a man with no close family connections in Rochester, but who for more than a quarter of a century had called the city his home.

There was a great assemblage of Rochester residents at the Armory when the funeral took place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The casket stood on the drill floor, opposite the main entrance, flanked with flowers and palms, and flanked by field pieces of the Howitzer Company, 108th Infantry. Members of the family of Captain Peverill, from Nova Scotia and New Jersey, were seated on the right of the casket and the bearers and honorary bearers were on the left. A guard of honor, composed of National Guardsmen and Legion members, stood at the head and foot of the flag-draped casket during the ceremony and while the body lay in state at the Armory, from 11 o'clock in the morning until 2 in the afternoon.

Edward C. Wildman of the City Engineers' Office played the organ as the attending friends entered the drill hall and Dr. Sykes took station to conduct the Episcopal funeral service. A quartet composed of Herbert H. Senior, Carl H. Tuppe, Chester T. McDonald and Edwin T. West, sang "Lead Kindly Light," "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" and "Still With Thee."

At the close of the service at the Armory Slager Post Band, stationed at the Main Street entrance, played a funeral dirge as the body was borne past the long lines of attending veterans to the awaiting artillery caisson.

The active bearers were Gordon S. Kipp, Frank Peers, Victor J. Arette, Frank Kearney, A. H. Gordon and Robert Brown.

The honorary bearers were, Nathan Ball, August Larsen, Albert F. Smith, Charles P. Simpson, Arthur Rathjen, Theodore Briggs, Fred Wegner, George Clancy, Meade B. Rappleye, Charles G. Schoener, Edward C. Widman and Leonard A. Kelly.

—Served Overseas.

Stricken in the hey-day of his youth, Frederick E. Fox, a veteran of distinguished service in the World War, lawyer and an active worker in the ranks of Masonry, lies dead at his home in Southern Parkway, Brighton, a victim of a disease of the lungs. He was 27 years old.

Mr. Fox became seriously ill several months ago. He was ordered to bed by his physicians, and little or no hope was entertained for his recovery. His friends were not aware of the serious condition. A story of love and devotion is revealed in the constant care and bedside attendance of the young man's mother, Mrs. Caroline Fox. In true motherly fashion she ministered to her son night and day until the long "watch" ended yesterday afternoon.

Known to his wide circle of friends as "Freddy," Fox, possessing an unusually pleasant disposition, made friendships of a lasting nature. He was destined to success in the practice of law.

Answering the call of his country, Fox, with a bosom companion, John Shirley, of Ontario, enlisted in the Medical Department of the 108th Infantry (old Third New York) and served with distinction in France and Belgium. He escaped shot and shell and the torture of gas, many times in a miraculous manner, to minister to his comrades. During his two years of service he was called on to do many classes of work. His former officers, including Lieutenant-Colonel William W. Percy, of 12 West avenue, speak of his record in the highest terms.

He was one of the first veterans to enroll in Yerkes-Couchman Post, American Legion, and was a member of that organization at the time of his death. He was one of the first service men to be raised in Frank L. Simes Lodge, F. and A. M., and was elected secretary.

Following his graduation from Albany Law School, Mr. Fox was associated with the law firm of Hubbell, Taylor, Goodwin and Moser, Rochester, for several months. He later opened a law office under his own name and was building a successful practice at the time he was stricken.

Besides his mother, Mr. Fox is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Norman Esterheld and Mrs. Herbert E. Lux.

Mr. Fox is the seventh officer of Simes Lodge to die within the last three years. Frederick S. Couchman was the first. Others were Dr. Charles Gallagher, Royal Herzberger, Lawrence N. Reed, Jay Fowler and William S. Ernisee.

GEORGE STURLA, REPORTER, WAR VETERAN DIES

D.C. Sept. 20
Former Newspaper Man

Saw Service in France with Pioneers of A. E. F.

George A. Sturla, of No. 1593 Main street east, a former reporter on the Democrat and Chronicle and the old Post Express, died yesterday at Saranac Lake after an illness of several years. His mother was with him when he died and she will bring the body to Rochester to-day, when funeral arrangements will be made.

Mr. Sturla saw extensive service in the World war, being one of the first Rochester men to enlist in the army after the outbreak of hostilities in 1917. With a unit of the First Division of the regular army he went overseas in one of the earliest contingents to embark. He was among the comparatively few American soldiers that took part in those stages of the battle of the Marne which marked the actual entry of United States troops into the hostilities.

A touch of poison gas and an attack of influenza contracted in the trenches incapacitated Mr. Sturla after he had seen considerable decisive action with the pioneers of the American Expeditionary Forces, and he was returned to America to recuperate in 1918. Sent to a western army school, he was about to be commissioned a lieutenant for further service in France when the armistice was signed.

After his return to Rochester Mr. Sturla was employed for a time in the office of the Keystone Carting Company. Later he joined the staff of the Democrat and Chronicle and worked for some time as police reporter. Subsequently he joined the staff of the Post Express and he was so engaged when he was taken ill.

Mr. Sturla was a member of Genesee Valley Post, American Legion, and an officer of the Saranac Lake organization of Disabled American Veterans of the World War. He served for some time as Saranac Lake correspondent of the Syracuse Post-Standard and also wrote for the Adirondack Enterprise. He was graduated from the Rochester Catholic High School, now Aquinas institute, in 1916.

HUNDREDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF SUBMARINE S-51 VICTIM

A.C. Feb. 16 - 1926
Flower-covered Coffin Lowered into Grave with Full Honors of Naval Ceremony.

As the clear notes of taps rang out in the quiet, sunlit afternoon, hundreds of friends of Chief Gunner's Mate Valentine Hiltbold, victim of the Submarine S-51 disaster, yesterday stood with bowed heads beside the flower-piled grave in Mount Hope cemetery to pay their last respects to the dead sailor.

With former naval service men of the Milton L. Lewis Post, American Legion, and members of the Naval Militia, who had acted as a military escort, standing at attention and the crowd of civilians who formed a wide circle around the grave standing quietly in an attitude of reverence, not a sound or a movement marred the impressive ceremony.

The flag-draped coffin was borne to its last resting place by chief petty officers of the post and militia. Then the flag, which the dead sailor had served for sixteen years, was folded and laid aside, and the casket sank slowly to rest as the words of the commitment service were read by Rev. Harry G. Greensmith, minister of the North Baptist Church. The three volleys of the military salute, fired by a squad of twelve American Legion men, rattled sharply through the stillness. Taps, sounded by Bugler George J. Jones, of the Marine Corps Reserves, closed the service.

The funeral service, conducted in Mount Hope Chapel by Rev. Mr.

Greensmith, was impressive in its simplicity. Gold Star Mothers and several disabled veterans were among the crowd of mourners that filled the chapel.

In speaking of the sacrifice which Chief Gunner's Mate Hiltbold had made in the service of his country, the minister praised the unselfishness and bravery of young men who offer their lives to their government. Both in war-time and in peace they go out to perform their duty, often in the face of certain death, he said, and become true heroes through their self-sacrifice.

A short service was conducted at the undertaking rooms in Cady street, where the body had lain since its arrival in Rochester Tuesday. Relatives and friends visited the rooms throughout the day and the flowers they sent covered the casket.

Chief petty officers who were bearers yesterday, under the command of Ensign F. H. Haldt, were: Edward Schrader, George J. Ritter, L. F. Faust, E. H. Smith, A. W. Martin, J. P. Orlando and Frank Schultz. The firing squad and escort, in charge of Petty Officer Frank A. Butterfield, was composed of Edward Dietz, John L. Jaeger, Wilfred G. Cole, Clarence R. Pickens, Edward H. Gerstner, Leo J. Herman, J. A. Robbins, William O'Brien, W. A. Spaulding and Frank L. Shafer.
