H. B. Graves Succumbs at 80; Furniture Head, Churchman

HARVEY B. GRAVES

Harvey B. Graves, proprietor for 46 years of one of Rochester's leading furniture stores, and a well known churchman, died yesterday (Jan. 14, 1936), at his home, 1375 Highland Avenue. Mr. Graves, who was 80, had been ill for a long time.

D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, which Mr. Graves joined in 1883 and of which he was an elder since 1884, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. H. H. Barstow, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Union Springs. Doctor Barstow was pastor of Westminster Church when the present edifice was built, and Mr. Graves was chairman of the building committee.

In 1934, in recognition of his 50th year as an elder, Westminster Church gave Mr. Graves a testimonial dinner. The lay board of the church will be honorary bearers at the funeral. It is composed of V. G. Benedict, M. E. Bond, R. W. Bosworth, L. B. Collins, E. H. Fischer, H. I. Gordon, E. K. Huntington, C. A. LaBounty, Peter McKeown, W. B. Niven, P. W. Smith and R. H. Tullis. Active bearers will be Amasa Steele, R. B. Southgate, P. R. Smith, R. J. Kennedy, William Niven and Dr. Philny Smith.

Presbyterian Elder Had Been Active in Civic Affairs

Active in Civic Life

Mr. Graves, until a few years ago, was active in the civic life of the community. He formerly was a trustee of the Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Board of Highland Hospital. He also was a member of the Committee of 100 of Miami Beach, where he carried on a realty development. His civic interests also were expressed in helping to solve the problem of flood protection for a large section of the business district.

He was born near Saratoga Springs and came to Rochester in 1879. The H. B. Graves Furnishing Company was established in 1889 at 262 State Street. Growth caused its removal in April, 1892, to 116-118 State Street. Here Mr. Graves inaugurated the feature of completely furnished rooms to afford visitor suggestions for home making. In 1899, there was a second removal, this time to its present location at State, Market and Mill Streets. In the spring of 1909, a warehouse was completed adjoining a previously completed warehouse at 68-72 Mill Street.

In 1901, a profit sharing plan for employes was adopted. A sick benefit fund also was established, and group life insurance has been in operation for several years. In 1914, Mr. Graves incorporated the business under the name, H. B. Graves Co. Inc.

Real Estate Hobby

The Miami real estate venture was undertaken as a hobby. In 1915, he made the first of successive annual visits to the Miami district, where he got the notion of a development, Venetian in character, to which he gave the name, Sunny Isles. This project in 1918 took practical form when he purchased 1,900 acres, including more than nine miles of Biscayne Bay, Biscayne River, Oleta River, Bella Vista and Dumfoundling Bay water frontage. In 1920, ocean frontage was purchased. As the development proceeded, islands were created by the digging of canals, and the land used for homesites.

The plan calls for development of one unit at a time, by an incorporated company, of which Mr. Graves was president, with a few invited friends as stockholders. Subsequent to 1918, Mr. Graves deeded 64 acres of his Florida holdings to the federal government for a national park. It includes the largest grove of royal palms in any Florida park.

Fred P. Tosch, Rochester builder, to take charge of construction of 35 homes on Sunny Isles, to sell at around $10,000 each.
Mr. Graves is survived by a son, H. Wilbur, and three daughters, Emma L., Ruth E. and Mrs. E. R. Lakeman.

Harvey B. Graves D. & C. JAN 15 1936

The death of Harvey B. Graves removes a man who made his impress on the community not only as a successful merchant but as a man of integrity and engaging personality as well. The success of his business was based not only on his grasp of sound business principles, but on an early regard for the welfare of his employes that made of the store organization something of a family.

As the steady advance of his business increased his resources his interests and opportunities for service broadened. His leadership in the church of his choice was marked, and his counsel was valued in many civic undertakings.

His interest in Florida developed late, but he put into that interest the same enthusiasm and judgment that had made his mercantile enterprise a success. His business career in Rochester lasted 46 years, a notable tribute in itself to his ability. He made many important contributions to the community's advancement; his personality won him a wide circle of friends. He will be remembered among that honored group of citizens whose lives have helped to mould the character of Rochester and to give it its enviable distinction as a city of homes.

Blind Carpenter Builds Successful Business By Inventive Genius in Improving Machines

Makes Mops, Provides Vocation for Other
Blind Persons

Not only a living for himself, but a new industry for other blind people, is the achievement of 75-year-old Ellis D. Greene, mop maker, 75 State Street.

In the fall of 1926 Mr. Greene, a former carpenter, undertook to improve a crude mop-making machine he had purchased. John E. Wyant, then his partner in a store in North Water Street, first suggested the idea and helped buy and develop it a year or so before taking his present position in the news stand of the Court House.

Mr. Greene applied his knowledge of carpentry, acquired before he became blind at the age of 50, and began making mops with the machines. Blind schools, hearing of this new handicraft for the blind, sent for machines and instructions. The originals are now in the Halifax School for the Blind. Improved models are still being shipped to schools in the United States and Canada.

Story of Conquest

The story of their development is one the conquest of the peculiar difficulties of the blind.

Startling the next process of clamping handle holders at each end of the skein, he commented on the amount of strength required to cut through the special oil sponge cotton yarn, and the danger to a sightless person if a hand slipped. His next invention solved that problem too, as he demonstrated by cutting the skein in half and making two mops ready for handles.

A triangular shaped knife was arranged with a lever to clamp the skein in position and cut through from both bottom and top.

Another improvement was a clamp to hold the hard maple handles steady while they were being fastened to the mops. Eventually, too, Mr. Greene found nails of the same thickness held more securely than triangular shaped tacks, and offered fewer hazards to the sightless hammerer.

The business which he has built up was never better, Mr. Greene commented, smiling over an order from the Board of Education for 125 dozen. The last three months he believes to be the best he has ever had. Ever since October orders have been growing to pre-depression proportions. Lately he has been making about 10 dozen a day.

Sold Toilet Articles

Since the departure of Mr. Wyant, Mr. Greene has had assistants with sight, to help in sewing, bundling and selling.

ing, bundling and selling.

After he first became blind, Mr. Greene tramped the streets of Rochester selling toilet articles while learning typewriting and Braille in evening school. It was took up the same business and they at his suggestion that Mr. Wyant divided the city, one taking the north side, the other the south. In 1922 they went into partnership in the Water Street store, and still remain fast friends.

'Tis the Little Things---

They're Worth Thousands, Microscopist Says

Little things interest Herbert Gunnery.

Little things—but not insignificant, for Gunnery's study of little things has meant thousands of dollars to the rubber industry and won him an international reputation.

It was the fact that his work is known internationally that brought Gunnery to Rochester from England about a week ago as microscopist for Ward's Natural Science Establishment in North Goodman Street, where he will prepare microscopic slides.

A typical Englishman, white-haired and bright-eyed, on his first visit to the United States, Gunnery is loath to talk about himself.

"Just say," he suggested, "that I've been here a week and like my work—and, oh yes, I like the American people." He was much more willing to discuss our Adirondack Mountains and English hedges.

But, with his curious Manchester accent, Gunnery did reveal, piecemeal, some information about himself.

The fact that his uncle was Abram Flatters, a founder of the famous scientific firm of Flatters and Garnet in England, seems to have had much to do with Gunnery's taking up the microscope as a means toward a livelihood and a fame that has spread beyond the Tight Little Isle.

Must Be Specialist

Of course, Gunnery explained, the microscopist must be a biologist, botanist, zoologist and pathologist. Gunnery has specialized in botany, but his work here will include biology and botany.

Herbert Gunnery

"It was 'just a boyish prank' than landed Gunnery in the British tank corps during the World War. For three years, mainly in Palestine, he served as a gunner in the 'suicide corps,' as those who fought in the tanks were called. Although the tanks' maximum speed of three miles an hour made them terrible targets for the Turks, Gunnery escaped unhurt.

For more than 25 years he has squinted through a microscope, studying the intimate parts of plants, leaves, seeds. About eight years ago he went to Malaya—"Oh, no, there are no head-hunters there. They have all the amenities of life there"—to study rubber. As a result of his research, for the Rubber Institute of Malaya, growers now are able to determine from seedlings what rubber trees will be high yielders.

Where Thrill Comes In

The biggest thrill in microscopy? Well, Gunnery thinks finding something you are seeking, through the

Malay States Ex-Resident Finds Cooking Difference

Mrs. Herbert Gunnery, formerly of the Malay States, sat before a table in her apartment in Alexander Street and gazed quizzically at a soft-boiled egg (or maybe it was hard-boiled).

Mr. Gunnery stared at it quizzically, too.

Supper was ready—or rather, tea, since the Gunnerys are English. But the eggs? Well, Mrs. Gunnery wasn't any too sure about the eggs for it is only since she moved to Rochester last December that she has been thinking about how many minutes it takes to make an egg hard-boiled or when-is-a-cake-done or what-makes-a-good-steak.

Had Chinese Cook

Until her husband left his position with the Rubber Research Institute of the Malay States to become a technician for the Ward Natural Science establishment, all her culinary problems were solved by Cooksie, a Chinese man-servant, and O-Lan, the house boy.

"Really, it's just like being a bride again," Mrs. Gunnery said, eyeing a table daintily garnished with small cakes, bananas, eggs and tea. "For eight whole years, I never even boiled water."

Although their home in Kuala Lumpur, north of Singapore, was as American as any Rochester bungalow, its ways were not. Five servants made things easy for the Gunnerys.

microscope, is keen sport, but finding something no one else has discovered is the thrill supreme.

Gunnery plays golf, enjoys "a dip in the brine" and likes music though "I'm not a player." He has played golf in the Malay States, but has not swung a club in some time now. "I used to play every night. But let's not say anything about scores. I just like to play." He expects to try out Rochester's courses.

Just now he says he is "keeping bachelor quarters," but he expects Mrs. Gunnery to join him here soon.

Pride Exhibited

Gunnery is Ward's first resident microscopist and they seem mighty proud of him. They had dealt with him many years, buying his slides from him in England. Ward's was the first group to issue a catalog of microscopic slides.

The microscopist declined to tell what he hoped to accomplish here, but he did say he thought America offered a fine opportunity for his work.

"I marketed occasionally," the English woman said, "but one of the servants always carried my things for me. I never saw our cook. He merely carried out my orders and then the house boy brought it to us already cooked. Why, we never even smelled it until it was set down before us!"

Although they had several cooks during their eight years in the Orient, the Gunnerys never had a woman in their kitchen.

Women Never Cook

"The women of China never cook," she said. "They are meant only to take care of the children. If you are a foreigner and have 10 children, then you will have 10 guardians—one for each child."

Food problems, once in a while, stumped Mrs. Gunnery.

"We never had fresh meat," she declared, "unless we wanted to eat native beef—and foreigners never did that because, usually, it was anything but fresh. We had to have frozen lamb from Australia or go without."

Fish in the Malay provinces are much better than anything America offers, Mrs. Gunnery contends. "It seems so fresh when you know that it has been scooped out of water close by. And that fact alone almost makes it taste better."

Except Sundays, when it is the habit to celebrate with a native curry, the Gunnerys ate dishes similar to those prepared in their native England or in the America which they had visited.

A curry, the Englishwoman explained, is a Chinese dish consisting of rice, fried lamb, vegetables and fruit. "You just keep on eating until, finally, you come to the rice. Everything else makes up the hors d'oeuvres."

Treasures Sold at Auction
Bring Tug at Heartstrings

Rochester Public Library

115 South Avenue By JEAN WALRATH

Nightfall over that drowsy region of the Genesee Valley known as Wheatland last night etched a picture that could have passed for a cavalcade of refugees in the war zones of France two decades ago.

Black figures of men, women and children trudged along the road with bundles of blankets, with chairs and cooking utensils, tables and bedsteads. They made their way to automobiles that waited to carry off the belongings of the Garbutt homestead—the very hamlet of Garbutt itself.

A woman wearing silver fox furs slipped into a big car after depositing a basketful of dishes and bric-a-brac in the rear seat. A truck clattered up to the century-old house, a square and weatherbeaten rectangle of clapboards. Two men staggered to the truck with a massive bedstead.

Memories surging, Frank Garbutt, grandson of the first white woman born west of the Genesee, looked on all day as city folk and families of the countryside mulled through the things that womenfolk of his family had assembled there over the years since 1825. The auctioneer held up a black taffeta gown his mother wore about the time Garbutt menfolk were marching off to the Civil War. Somebody bid $8 and snatched the dress away. Many of the Garbutt women's frocks that had lain untouched for 60 years were sold, presumably for masque ball garb or stage props.

A rosewood piano, prize of the auction heap, sold for $875. Someone hauled away a rosewood parlor suite for $85. It was upholstered in red plush humped up in spots by raveled springs. An antique hunter marched away with a pair of crystal-primed candlesticks bagged for $62.

Things went high at the Garbutt auction, for in all the number of bidders that treked in during the day was estimated at 2,600. The last stragglers left at 8 p. m. Who will be the successful bidder for the Garbutt house and lands probably will not be known for several days, Edward Hogan of Lima, the auctioneer, said.

Scholarship in His Stride

Smart scholar, crack athlete . . . Norman Gay, Aquinas Institute senior, made excellent strides in both studies and sports to win a coveted University of Rochester prize scholarship. He is the only Rochester student in 25 winners.

Aquinas Senior Wins U. of R. Scholarship

A senior at Aquinas Institute is the only Rochester student in the list of 25 recipients of prize scholarships announced today by the University of Rochester.

He is Norman Gay, 18, of 107 Saranac Street, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gay.

Two more of the awards went to Rochester area scholars, Richard Slavey Woods, Albion, and Robert Wolfe Swanton, Webster.

Five scholarships are allotted to the Women's College, 20 to the College for Men.

Gay, a blond, powerfully built athlete, is typical of the men awarded the scholarships, established last year, which provide as high as $500 per year for four years.

A letterman for three years in football and basketball, sports editor of the Maroon and White, school paper, and a member of the staff of the Aquinas year book, Gay easily meets with the extra curricular requirements of the scholarship committee.

In classroom work his has been a fine record. He is a member of the St. Thomas Club of the school, to belong to which a student must have maintained an average of 90 or over for four years.

His high school major is mathematics. He intends to enter the School of Engineering.

The scholarship committee consists of President Alan Valentine, Dean Arthur S. Gale, Prof. Lester O. Wilder, director of admissions; Frederick L. Hovde, executive secretary, and Dean Helen D. Bragdon and Dr. Isabel K. Wallace, College for Women.

Of the 20 men so honored, according to Hovde, five are football players and others are trackmen, swimmers, basketball or baseball players. Many have shown leadership in other fields of school life.

"They seem to be an outstanding group," he said. "We are fortunate in being able to obtain them, because of the competition with other universities looking for the same outstanding characteristics as we are."

Norm Gay Of Aquinas Recipient

By FRED TRUAX

Brighter athletic horizons loom for the University of Rochester.

Nearly $40,000 will be dispensed in the next four years on 20 outstanding students who have demonstrated that they possess other qualities in addition to their ability as students.

It is evident to anyone familiar with the university's policies that these scholarship students, who will receive $500 annually, are fundamentally better than average scholars.

Many Athletic Scholars

In this group are quite a few who—according to Frederick L. Hovde, the man who dispensed the awards—are specimens of that rare group—the athletic scholars.

Norman Gay of Aquinas, Rochester's only student recipient, is a good example. A 180-pound football lineman, and a basketball player of three years experience, Gay has been a leader of his class while maintaining an average of over 90. He will be a welcome addition to "Cox's army" in the football wars.

Gay intends to take an engineering course, and it is to be wondered what effect the late laboratory periods and the short practice sessions on the River Campus will have on Gay's athletic ability.

Mr. Hovde claims that almost all the recipients are more than scholars. Five, he said, are good football material, several have had experience in basketball, and two or three will improve the Yellow-jackets' chances on the track and diamond.

Midwest Natives

Most of the men came from the midwest football teams. They were obtained in competition with the large universities who have recently started a hunt, aided by the big guns of money and reputation, to garner athletes with scholastic ability.

The administration has not changed its policy toward athletics. Primarily U. of R. wants scholars and "well rounded men."

The idea of "well rounded men" has always included athletics, but it wasn't until last year that they had the powerful Prize Scholarships to obtain the rare combination of an athlete with brains.

Times-Union MAY 21 1937

Times-Union MAY 21 1937

In contrast with the poor showing of most of last year's scholarship winners in sports, it appears this year that the committee has obtained an outstanding group of students who will brighten the Rivermen's athletic setup.

DEATH CLAIMS F. D. GAYLORD

D. & C. APR 15 1937

Sodus—Word has reached here of the sudden death of Frank D. Gaylord, prominent business man and politician of Sodus, and former member of Assembly from Wayne County, last Wednesday at St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Gaylord had gone to Florida two weeks ago on a combined business and pleasure trip. He was accompanied by Mrs. Gaylord and two grandchildren.

A leader in political and civic affairs, Mr. Gaylord was one of the best known men in this section. He was born at Atchison, Kan., Sept. 24, 1860, the son of Charles and Jane R. D. Gaylord, but came to Sodus, of which his father was a native, as a child. At 16, he entered his father's hardware store and in 1881 became its proprietor. In 1900 he sold the store and purchased a department store, which he operated until 1915. In the meantime, he had organized the Sodus Canning Company, with which he was actively associated up to the time of his death.

In 1926, he became president of the Gaylord State Bank of Sodus, a banking institution originally founded by his father. He continued as president until 1932.

Mr. Gaylord was an ardent Republican. In 1889 he was elected one of the first "no license excise commissioners" of Sodus. He later served 13 years as town clerk. In 1916 he was elected member of Assembly for Wayne County, serving two terms. At the time of his death, he had served for upwards of 35 years as member of the Wayne County Republican Committee. For more than 30 years he was chairman of the Republican committee of the Town of Sodus.

With Bride
D. & C. OCT 31 1936

By cablegram yesterday, Rochester friends learned of the death of the Rev. George Geis, former Rochesterian and longtime missionary to the Orient, at his mission station in the Shan States, Upper Burma.

His death ended 44 years of missionary work begun when he was graduated from Rochester Theological Seminary in 1892.

Married the year of his graduation to Miss Katherine Floerch of Harvard Street, who died four years ago, the Rev. Mr. Geis and his bride honeymooned in India where he began his missionary work under auspices of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society.

His stations included Bhamo, Burma; Phillipine Islands, Myitkyria and Rangoon, Burma. He had been at Kutkai in the Shan States since 1930.

The Rev. Mr. Geis held a membership in Andrews Street Baptist Church in Rochester, and was widely known in Baptist circles in this city and county where he returned for regular visits every seven years.

He is survived by his second wife, the former Freda Peters of Burma, and three children, a son, Alfred, of Baltimore, and two daughters, Mrs. Frank Alepardee, Washington, and Mrs. Howard VanNoye, Rochester; six grandsons, two sisters, Mrs. Fred Shaffer, Denver, Col., and Mrs. Frank S. Bastian, Rochester.

Born in Hockenheim, Baden, Germany, in 1865, Mr. Geis came to Rochester in his early youth and was educated here. He spent his last furlough in Rochester in 1930-31.

LEADERS HONOR JACOB GERLING

Among the messages of condolence received yesterday for Jacob Gerling, Democratic politician who died unexpectedly on Saturday, was one from Postmaster James A. Farley, Democratic national and state chairman, with whom the Rochester man often corresponded.

Many floral tributes surrounded Mr. Gerling's bier yesterday in the home of his son-in-law, Raymond J. Fahrer, 570 Seneca Parkway. Prominent among them were one from the Democratic County Committee and one from the East Side Democratic Club. Across the coffin lay the symbol of Frankfurt Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which he was a member. He also was a member of the Maccabees, as well as the Forresters, the Leiderkranz and the Elks.

Active bearers at the funeral services scheduled for 2 p. m. tomorrow at 570 Seneca Parkway, will be Robert E. Keefe, Albert E. Truesdale, attorney who represented Mr. Gerling in his voting machine litigations; John F. Allen, supervisor, 20th Ward; Benjamin M. Lee; Michael Carola and Fred D. Lamb, twice Democratic candidate for mayor.

The list of honorary bearers will be headed by Mayor Charles Stanton and will include Donald A. Dalley, Democratic leader; Judge Harlan W. Rippey, Postmaster William J. Hunt, Democratic county chairman; Charles E. Bostwick, Republican leader of the 10th Ward; Congressman George B. Kelly, Senator George F. Rogers, Milton E. Gibbs, judge of the Court of Claims and Democratic leaders of political subdivisions of the city and county.

Edward J. Freckleton, secretary of the Elks Club, will be in charge of the funeral service. Burial will be in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery.

Death Takes Jacob Gerling; Had Stormy Political Career

Ardent Democrat Four Times Alderman—

Passes at 69
D. & C. MAR 21 1937

"Jake Gerling is dead."
In City Hall, Court House, hotel lobbies and wherever persons congregate, that word went round by direct word of mouth and by telephone yesterday morning. It meant that:

Jacob Gerling, 69, much loved and inveterate Democrat, had passed, ending a political career that began in the days of rough and tumble politics in the then rough and tumble 20th Ward, before he had reached his majority.

The consensus was that in the death of "Jake," as he was familiarly known to a large circle of Rochesterians, the city had lost, not only a "character," but also a man who, under an unpolished exterior, cherished a strong political idealism. He always fought "for the people."

His short stature, pulled to a stoop by his weight, his black derby hat and inevitable cigar made him a familiar figure for 40 years. In his later years he bore a strong resemblance to his father, Jacob Gerling Sr., who was a Democratic power in a day when the city verged on being a Democratic stronghold before the rise of George W. Aldridge to power.

Four Times Alderman

Mr. Gerling was four times alderman of the 20th Ward, in 1902-3; 1908-9; 1910-11 and 1914-15. On numerous occasions he carried the banner of forlorn hope for his party. In 1925 he was unsuccessful in an Assembly contest with Cosmo A. Cilano; in 1932, he bucked the Democratic organization and ran in the primaries for the congressional nomination, but was easily defeated. Last Sunday, visiting at the home of his son-in-law, and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Fahrner, 570 Seneca Parkway, he revealed his plans to "throw my hat into the ring this fall for city councilman. I think I never had a better chance for election to anything."

Obdurate foe of the voting machine, for years he entered the lists for many a joust against mechanized voting. Coupled with his objections to the machine was a bitterly fought battle against what he interpreted as constant violation of the election laws in the use of the machine. He never got anywhere on that issue.

Has Peaceful End

Of late years, he wrote many letters to the newspapers on constitutional questions and saw in the program of President Roosevelt the fruition of many things for which he had argued down through the years.

His end was as peaceful as life had been stormy. Friday night he went to bed with a slight cold. Yesterday morning, he told his son, George, he thought he wouldn't go downtown to his work as inspector in the Public Works Department. He lay down and death came a few minutes later.

Although for many years he was a resident of the 20th Ward, in later years he lived in the 10th Ward and died in his home at 102 Mason Street. He was born in Brown Street. After being graduated from the old Free Academy, he went into the milling business with his father in North Water Street. When the motion picture appeared as a commercial venture some 30 years ago, he and his father turned part of their property at Main and North Water streets into a nickelodeon, called it the Knickerbocker Theater, and for some years ran it as a competitor with the Bijou Dream, the first motion picture theater to be opened in Rochester, in the building opposite in North Water Street.

3 Deaths in Group

Mr. Gerling's wife, Pamela Forest Gerling, died four weeks ago. For many years, the Gerlings and Mr. and Mrs. William C. A. Fahrner of 789 St. Paul Street, met weekly for an evening of pinochle at the home of Mr. Fahrner's son, Raymond J., at 570 Seneca Parkway. Six months ago, Mr. Fahrner dropped dead in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery. With the passing of Mr. Gerling, death had taken three of the quartet of pinochle players within six months, the only one left being Mrs. Mary Fahrner. Last Thursday, Mr. Gerling attended the complimentary dinner to Senator George F. Rogers.

Survivors are one daughter, Mrs. Raymond J. Fahrner; four sons, Jacob Jr., George L. Russell A. and John B. Gerling; three sisters, Miss Margaret Gerling, Mrs. Robert Clifford and Mrs. Lillian Chapin; and three brothers, William B. Fred C. and George C. Gerling.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Tuesday at 570 Seneca Parkway, with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in charge of the service. The body has been moved to that address. Burial will be at the convenience of the family.

Mr. Gerling was a life long member of the Elks, a Forester and a member of the Liederkrantz.

Tribute to Gerling Paid at Funeral

D. & C. MAR 24 1937

While political leaders of both parties stood bowed in solemn tribute, the flower-draped casket of Jacob Gerling, long a Democratic leader and public figure, was lowered slowly into a grave in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery yesterday.

Delegations from the Elks, Odd Fellows, Maccabees and Foresters participated in the final rites.

Services at the home of Mr. Gerling's daughter, Mrs. Raymond J. Fahrner, 570 Seneca Parkway, were conducted by the Rochester lodge of Elks, Frederick D. Lamb, in charge of the service, eulogized their dead associate for his loyal public service.

Among the telegrams of condolence received were messages from Gov. Herbert A. Lehman and family; James A. Farley, Alfred E. Smith, Vincent Dailey and Clinton N. Howard.

Funeral Rites Today For Jacob Gerling

Funeral services for Jacob Gerling, Democratic politician who died unexpectedly Saturday, will be at 2 p. m. today in the home of his son-in-law, Raymond J. Fahrner, 570 Seneca Parkway, with city officials and party leaders among the honorary and active bearers.

Edward J. Freckelton, secretary of the Elks Club, will be in charge of the service. Burial will be in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery. Mayor Charles Stanton heads the list of honorary bearers.

Jacob Gerling

Death of Jacob Gerling removes a well-known Rochester figure. The number of persons who were included in his acquaintance was large.

And if you knew "Jake," you probably stopped to chat with him on the political topics of the day. Though city born and bred, he had that keen interest in public affairs which used to be characteristic of the farming population, in the days of the general store.

Always a staunch Democrat and active in politics, Jacob Gerling was often a candidate for office. But during his early years Democrats were seldom elected in Rochester and Monroe County, and in more recent years he was somewhat out of touch with the guiding spirits of the local Democracy. In 1910 and again in 1914 he was elected alderman for the 20th Ward.

Mr. Gerling frequently contributed letters to the newspapers which were short, pithy and vigorous.

He will be missed by that wide circle of Rochesterians who knew and liked him.

Quits 3d Church Pulpit Because Of Ill Health D. & C. FEB 22 1937

Terminating 12 years' association with Third Presbyterian Church as senior minister, the Rev. Andrew Gillies, D.D., submitted his resignation yesterday to the congregation.

Ill health resulting from a breakdown Doctor Gillies suffered some 20 years ago was given as the reason for the resignation to become effective Sept. 1. The congregation will meet after services next Sunday to act on the resignation and to authorize the appointment of a committee to seek Doctor Gillies' successor.

The retirement of Doctor Gillies, who was ordained a Methodist minister 42 years ago, is the second vacancy of an important Rochester pulpit within the last few months. The Rev. Justin Wroe Nixon resigned from Brick Presbyterian Church to resume teaching at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. Like Doctor Gillies he was called to a Presbyterian charge from ministry in another denomination, having been ordained a Baptist minister. Both men have been known as liberal leaders.

"Really Great Church"

The statement to the congregation read yesterday by Joseph Paterson, clerk, expressed the minister's reluctance to leave the pulpit of what he described as "a really great church, a liberal church of the finest type, a church with spiritual convictions and an unusual social consciousness."

"It is favorably and strategically located," he continued. "It is in a healthy condition. Its opportunities for a ministry of increasing scope and value to mankind are almost unlimited."

"But the realization of those opportunities depends upon the leadership which this church follows during the next quarter of a century. It depends upon the vision of the task in its totality, made real and compelling to this church's membership and especially to the youth of that membership. May you be guided, therefore, in your choice of your leader in the pulpit and your leaders among the laity."

105TH YEAR

Reluctant to Quit
Expressing his reluctance to give up active work, he said: "It has not been an easy decision to make. We have worked together in absolute harmony for almost 12 years. You and all that relates to your well-being have become integral elements in my life. Your sorrows have become my sorrows; your joys, my joys; your problems, my problems; until I have thought of life in no other terms than as your friend and minister."

"For two years, however, I have been made conscious of a steadily failing strength and the equally steady increase of ominous symptoms until I dare take no further risks."

Doctor Gillies will become minister emeritus of the church, officers of the congregation said yesterday, and if his health permits will return occasionally to the pulpit. He will continue to make his home at 134 Nunda Boulevard.

Born in Scotland

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, Aug. 3, 1870, the son of Peter and Agnes Clark Gillies, he was brought to the United States the same year. He was graduated from Genesee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima in 1891 and later from the Wesleyan University with the degree of bachelor of arts with honors. He married Martha Elizabeth Smith of Hilton in 1895.

His first charge was in White River Junction, Vt., where he was minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Later he held pastorates at Montpelier, Vt., Troy, N. Y., and then went to St. Andrew's Church, New York City. From the latter church he went to the Hennipin Avenue Methodist Church in Minneapolis, Minn., which he served from 1908 to 1916, resigning because of ill health. He accepted a temporary appointment to preach in Third Church in 1925 and in January, 1926, became senior minister.

Doctor Gillies is the author of "The Minister as a Man," published in 1913, and of "The Individualistic Gospel," published in 1919.

THIRD CHURCH LOATH TO LET DR. GILLIES GO

Makes Him Pastor Emeritus, Lauds 12 Years' Work D. & C. MAR 1 1937

Appreciation for his work and regrets in his retirement were voiced by a large congregation of Third Presbyterian Church yesterday morning as the people met in formal congregational session and agreed to the resignation of the Rev. Andrew Gillies D.D.

After having served the church as its principal minister for 12 years, Doctor Gillies submitted his resignation last week. At the conclusion of his sermon yesterday, in which no reference was made to his leaving, he departed and the Rev. Whitney M. Trousdale, associate pastor, presided as moderator of the congregational meeting.

In accepting Doctor Gillies' resignation, effective Sept. 1, or when a successor has been selected, the congregation by unanimous vote made him pastor emeritus.

Albert E. Copeland was appointed chairman of a committee to call a new minister. Other members are Harold E. Akerly, Joseph D. Paterson, Don C. Allen, Dr. Paul W. Beaven, Mrs. M. Herbert Eisenhart and Mrs. Paul Moore Strayer, widow of the Rev. Paul Moore Strayer, predecessor of Doctor Gillies.

Resolutions adopted eulogizing Doctor Gillies were prepared by a committee composed of Alexander Russell, Mrs. Walter Post and Mrs. H. P. Brewster.

Walter Wild for the Session and Charles A. Alexander for the trustees were named to prepare a resolution for presentation to the Rochester Presbytery, notifying it that the congregation joins with Doctor Gillies in requesting his pastoral relations with the church be dissolved. The Women's Guild will name a third member.

Dr. Gillies Resigns From Pulpit

The Rev. Andrew Gillies, D. D., minister and author, will leave the Third Presbyterian Church Sept. 1, because of ill health.

Doctor Gillies' resignation from the church at East Avenue and Meigs Street, of which he has been senior minister 12 years, was read to the congregation yesterday by Joseph Paterson, clerk. Officers of the congregation said he would become minister emeritus.

Will Seek Successor

Action on the resignation and authorization of a committee to seek Doctor Gillies' successor will take place next Sunday. The retiring minister will continue to live at 134 Nunda Boulevard and is expected to take the pulpit occasionally.

Doctor Gillies was named senior minister in January, 1926, after being appointed temporarily to preach in 1925. He was ordained a Methodist minister 42 years ago, after graduation from Genesee Wesleyan Seminary in Lima and Wesleyan University.

Second To Resign

Doctor Gillies is the second liberal minister to resign a Rochester church pulpit in the last few months, the Rev. Justin Wroe Nixon, D. D., having resigned as minister of Brick Presbyterian Church to assume a professorship at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School.

Dr. Gillies is the author of "The Minister as a Man" and "The Individualistic Gospel."

TIMES-UNION FEB 22 1937

DR. ANDREW GILLIES

Doctor Gillies to Resign

After 12 years as senior minister of Third Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Andrew Gillies, D.D., has submitted his resignation to the congregation, to become effective Sept. 1.

Doctor Gillies has not enjoyed robust health since he suffered a breakdown some 20 years ago. He now feels unable to sustain longer the burdens of active work, though as pastor emeritus he may occasionally return to the pulpit.

Ordained to the ministry 42 years ago, Doctor Gillies accepted a temporary appointment to preach in Third Church in 1925 and in 1926 became senior minister. He is considered one of the ablest and most inspiring preachers in the city. His viewpoint has been liberal and sanely progressive with respect to religious and social questions and responsibilities, thus following the traditions of Third Presbyterian Church.

Doctor Gillies resignation will be viewed with regret, not only by the members of his congregation, but by many other residents of Rochester who have admired his ability and appreciated his notable service.

His wide circle of personal friends will be glad that he intends to remain a resident of Rochester. Times-Union FEB 23 1937

DEATH ROBS CITY JEWRY

Hyman Goldman, Fatally Stricken In Palestine

Hyman Goldman, former Rochester civic and religious Jewish leader, died yesterday in Tel Aviv, Palestine, after three-week illness, a dispatch to his son, David Goldman of Rochester, said last night.

Mr. Goldman, who was 71, left Rochester in 1926 to live in Palestine. He founded Rochester Hebrew School, the Congregation Beth Hamedresh Hagodel, known as "the big synagogue" in Hanover Street, and Oheb Chesed Free Loan Society. He was president of these organizations when he left Rochester. As a real estate operator, he owned a number of large properties here, including the Elwood Building.

In Palestine he was instrumental in forming the Free Loan Society and other organizations in the all-Jewish community of Tel Aviv. Mr. Goldman returned to Rochester for visits in 1929 and 1932.

Notified of his death last night, Vicemayor Joseph E. Silverstein said:

"Mr. Goldman's activity in Rochester not only in the interest of the Jewish community but in the city in general is something of which the entire city can well be proud. His interest in all community work was most helpful to the progress of the city."

Besides his widow, Celia in Tel Aviv, Mr. Goldman leaves nine sons; Harry and Isadore of New York; Abraham of Chicago; David, Henry, Albert, Ephraim and Reuben, all of Rochester, and Jacob of Tel Aviv; a sister, Celia Lipson of Los Angeles; two brothers, Abraham of Rochester and Louis of Buffalo, and 17 grandchildren. Burial will be in Tel Aviv.

Hyman Goldman OCT 2 1936

The career of Hyman Goldman, whose death is reported from Palestine, covered a wide range of interests.

Starting as a poor boy, he early displayed keen business ability, and eventually acquired large real estate holdings in Rochester.

As he prospered, he desired to aid others, showing deep interest in cultural and religious and charitable undertakings.

He founded the Rochester Hebrew School, was an original and constant supporter of Congregation Beth Hamedresh Hagodel, and established the Chesed Free Loan Society.

Becoming a contributor to the Zionist movement, he finally went to Palestine and made his home there, though he frequently re-visited Rochester.

Hyman Goldman's life was varied, full of usefulness, and made his name honored.

Goldman Dies At Age of 71 In Palestine

Prominent in Rochester Jewry for many years, Hyman Goldman, 71, died yesterday, Sept. 29, 1936, in Tel Aviv, Palestine.

An extensive holder of large real estate properties here, including the Elwood Building, Mr. Goldman founded the Rochester Hebrew School, Congregation Beth Hamedresh Hagodel in Hanover Street, and the Oheb Chesed Free Loan Society. He was president of both organizations when he left Rochester.

By W. DE WITT MANNING

OUT of the not too distant past, when Rochester was just beginning its career as a city, has come a tale of romance and constancy, adventure and escape, that rivals the latest thriller of current fiction.

It was brought to mind by a little wooden box, carved from a single block of cherry wood, its cover cut from the same block and neatly grooved and fitted to close tightly like the best of modern machined products. Yet the box was carved and finished entirely by hand, with a small pocket knife as a tool. Inlaid in the cover and on each side are small slabs of hard maple on which are inscriptions still clearly legible. Both box and inlays are highly polished, and the upper surface of the cover is rounded like this year's stream-lined car bodies.

From end to end the box is four inches; it is two inches wide and an inch and half high. Inside it is carefully finished, and only on the inside of the bottom can knife marks be distinguished, where the wood was chipped away bit by bit to reduce it to the required thinness.

For many years the little example of woodcarving has been a treasured possession of Edgar Orville Gould of 140 Reynolds Street, who, previous to his retirement in 1930, had been an employe of Mt. Hope Cemetery for 37 years. Mr. Gould received the box from his father who had come to Rochester from Canada to make his home until his death in 1898. The father, Abden Lee Gould, was a nephew of Joseph Gould, the man who carved the box and whose career was closely parallel with that of William Lyon MacKenzie, leader of the Canadian uprising of 1837, first mayor of Toronto and for a time a political prisoner in Rochester.

Frontier Atmosphere

When Joseph Gould was a young man, Canada was divided into two parts, known as Lower Canada, or Quebec Province, and Upper Canada, or Canada West, corresponding to what is now the Province of Ontario. The period was one of rough pioneering. Roads were mere trails through the forests, settlements were clannish and suspicious of strangers. It was a frontier atmosphere in which men fought one another not only with the ballot, but with sticks and stones and fists.

Of the 400,000 population of Upper Canada, approximately a quarter were classed as Americans from the "States." Migration across the Niagara River and the lake had been heavy. There was a brisk trade and passenger traffic out of Charlotte to Canadian ports even then, and family ties across the frontier caused events in Canada to produce immediate reactions in Western New York.

Joseph Gould was a son of Jonathan, who had spelled his name Gold, and who came of a consuming desire to educate himself in all possible ways. Such books as he could obtain he read and reread; he went to Toronto as a youth and learned the carpenter's trade as an apprentice, returned to Uxbridge and proceeded to erect buildings, including a new house for his father. Within a short time, he amassed considerable means and began to acquire property, including a valuable mill.

Not unnaturally, with prosperity seemingly assured, he began to think of a home of his own, and soon, in the little community the news traveled about that Joseph Gould was paying court to Miss Mary James, the daughter of a Quaker household.

Among the yellowed records which time has spared are family histories which record the migration of many families from Pennsylvania through Western New York into Canada about the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. Some of the Pennsylvania Quakers on their way westward settled in New York state; others found new homes in the forests and clearings of Ontario, and among these was the James family.

Courtship Progresses

The courtship of Joseph Gould and Mary James progressed rapidly. The young man was determined, impetuous and ardent; the maid demure, as a Quaker girl should be, and seemed not unwilling to look with favor on the most prosperous young man in the village. Her family received him as a welcome visitor. It seemed that there could be no serious obstacle to their early marriage.

Then war intervened; the bitterness of wars, a rebellion in which brother fought brother, and fathers opposed sons, friends became lifelong enemies, and neighbors hunted one another like savages.

For a number of years there had been unrest and dissatisfaction among the settlers in Can-

2 AWARDS WAIT STUDENT HERO

D. & C. NOV 4 1936

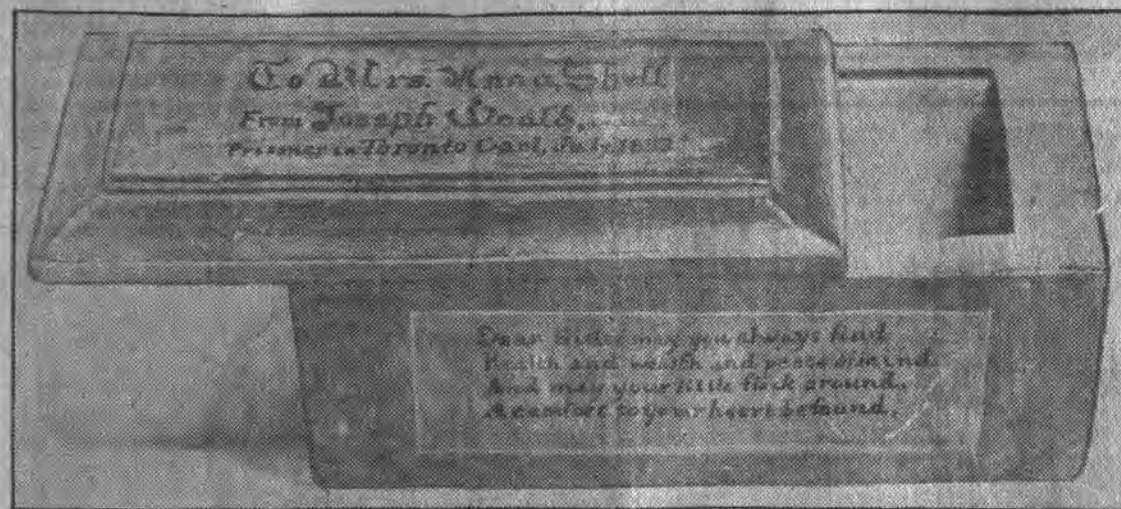

Heroism in the rescue of a man and woman on Canandaigua Lake last summer when their boat capsized in a squall, will win a double award next month for Thurl Martin Goff, 20-year-old Rochester student.

In a ceremony at the Chamber of Commerce Dec. 31, Goff will receive a Red Cross certificate of meritorious service signed by the President of the United States and a special award from the Chamber Safety Council.

Goff, now attending Syracuse University, risked his life last July to save the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Hurd Miller of Buffalo. Their boat tipped in rough water and their cries were heard by the youth on shore. He rowed the choppy waves to the capsized boat. The man had disappeared. He hauled Mrs. Miller into his craft and dived until he had recovered her husband, then lifeless. Back on shore he administered artificial respiration with the aid of B. James Goodwin, reviving Miller before the arrival of a pulmotor from Thompson Memorial Hospital, seven miles away.

The Red Cross certificate will be presented by Mrs. Howard H. Imray of the executive committee of the Rochester chapter. Red Cross officials and the Safety Council of the Chamber will attend. The parchment Goff will receive is signed by President Roosevelt as president of the Red Cross and by Dr. Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Canada's Struggle for Freedom Century Ago

The little wooden box which Joseph Gould fashioned while confined in prison after the unsuccessful uprising.

ada. The government was managed from London through a selected council and Governor General on whom the mass of the people had no check. Taxes were high, privilege was in the hands of the few. Demands for reform, voiced by William Lyon MacKenzie, first through a printing press obtained in Rochester, were rejected. MacKenzie, expelled repeatedly from the lower house of the Upper Canada Parliament, only to be re-elected, became first mayor of Toronto in 1834. Even while he served as mayor, he was again elected to Parliament. Then came the final rejection of demands for a responsible form of government. Quebec exploded in violent outbursts of popular wrath; MacKenzie called on the people of Upper Canada to take similar action.

Joseph Gould had been an admirer of MacKenzie for years and had been a Reform leader in his own district. Despite his peaceful inclinations, his large property holdings that would be jeopardized, his plans to be married, he found himself swept away in the torrent of political passion. Against his will, he was made a captain of Patriot volunteers and found himself unable to resist the demand that he march with MacKenzie.

His detachment was stationed on the Yonge Street road just north of Toronto, where most of the Patriots assembled. There was little military organization, few firearms were at hand, nobody seemed to know what was being planned. Yet historians still debate the causes of the Patriot failure, since the government forces were almost equally disorganized and unprepared. But with the beginning of actual fighting, the discipline of the few government troops quickly turned the tide. MacKenzie escaped to Grand Island, whence he went to Buffalo and came to Rochester. Joseph Gould was captured with many of his friends and confined for a year in the old Parliament building in Toronto, the only place available, since all other public buildings also were jammed with prisoners.

It was while he was awaiting a decision as to his fate that he carved the little box of cherry wood now preserved as an heirloom by his grandnephew. The days were tedious; there was little opportunity for amusement or for communication with the outside world. The skill he had acquired in woodworking was turned to account in producing a splendid example of old style craftsmanship.

Besides, the work served to relieve the strain of anxiety and uncertainty. Many of the Patriots met death on the scaffold; there was a plan on foot to transport Joseph Gould and his friends to Van Diemen Land, south of Australia, and a large number of the Patriots actually were sent there to join the British penal colony. By the merest chance, there was a delay in deciding the fate of Joseph Gould, and following the accession to the throne of Queen Victoria, a political amnesty was declared. Under parole, Jacob

Gould was permitted to return home.

But the Patriot sacrifices were not in vain. Within a few years virtually all the reforms for which they had struggled were granted under the wise administration of Victoria.

It is recorded that the return of the released prisoner to Uxbridge was in the nature of a triumph, but that the rejoicing of the community, his friends and his family was merely a background against which took place the joyous reunion of Joseph Gould and Mary James. Like a true Quaker maid, she had awaited her lover's return with quiet constancy, refusing to believe that all would not be well with him.

Their marriage followed soon, and according to the records it was a happy and prosperous union.

Joseph Gould filled a large number of positions of trust, including various public offices, serving for a time as a member of the Upper Canada Parliament, to which MacKenzie also was returned, following his return from exile in the United States. Joseph Gould died in 1886, at the age of 78 years.

On a bit of inlay in the cover of the box which he carved, is the inscription:

"To Mrs. Anna Shell

From Joseph Gould, a state prisoner in Toronto Gaol, July, 1838."

Mrs. Shell was a sister of the prisoner. Her family of promising young children, of whom he was extremely fond, seemed to be on his mind as he worked, day by day, in the shadow of the gallows, for on the inlays on each side of the box he inscribed these stanzas:

"Dear Sister, may you always find
Health and wealth and peace of mind,
And may your little flock around,
A comfort to your heart be found.
"And may your daughters in their youth
Be taught to know and love the truth,
And may your sons hold heroes be,
For equal rights and Liberty."

Harry LeB. Gray

D. & C. JUL 16 1936

Progress in modern industry leans much on science, and the tremendous success of the Eastman Kodak Company owes much to the early and intelligent recognition of this fact by its founder. Men of scientific promise have been vital factors in the company's development and their work has had both national and international recognition.

The death of Harry LeB. Gray removes from its service a man of eminence in the field of cellulose chemistry and a man of attainments well recognized in local and national scientific circles. Mr. Gray came to Rochester following his graduation from Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1899. He was made superintendent of the film department in 1901 and superintendent of the organic research department in 1914.

He has been active in the American Chemical Society and in its Rochester section. He also has become well known and prominent in many community activities. His death is a loss not only to science and to the Kodak company, but to the community as well.

Seth Green Son Recalls Early Feats

WILLIAM C. GREEN

There's no doubt about the truth of the old saying, "Like father, like son," in the case of Seth Green, Rochester's most famous fisherman, and his son, William C. Green, Cincinnati.

"I was pretty nearly born with a fly rod in my hand," the jolly 76-year-old son laughed last night as he reminisced at the home of his nephew, Dr. Eric S. Green, over his father's piscatorial achievements during the 19th century.

"Father spent years stocking the Finger Lakes with salmon trout. When I was about 10 years old I started fishing with him and ever since then it has been my only hobby," Green, who is a heating and ventilating engineer, declared. "After the lakes were stocked people couldn't seem to catch the salmon trout so father invented a rig to help them out. He also introduced the Seth Green fly."

Deep sea fishing holds no interest for Green. Granting that there may be a little more sport to it than using a pick and shovel for several hours, he says that salt water fishing is no more fun than manual labor. However, the largest fish he ever caught was a 110 pound tarpon that he wrestled with for more than an hour. After that he was ready to go home and sleep, he remarked.

"Alibing is what I do best, though," Green declared. "I have all the excuses on the tip of my tongue and have used them on Mrs. Green many times when I came home with no catch. I had a rod in my hand for two hours today with no results. If I'd been on the same lake last July I would have caught some bass, but not today."

Green was enthusiastic over the display of his father's equipment, letters, medals and records in the Rochester Historical Society Museum. On his last visit to Rochester in 1935 he attended the dedication of a monument at the Caledonia fish hatchery which Seth Green founded in the 1860's. He will return to Cincinnati with his wife tomorrow.

Green, Kin Of Anglers' Friend, Dies

Funeral services were to be conducted at 182 East Ave. today for Seth Green, 53, grandson of the late Seth Green, "patron saint" of trout fishermen in Western New York.

Mr. Green, formerly connected with the clothing industry, succumbed Sunday to an illness of more than a year. He was the son of the late Chester K. and Carrie Steel Green.

Mr. Green's grandfather, for whom he was named, won fame as a fish culturist. A monument in his memory has been erected at the Caledonia fish hatcheries.

Surviving the grandson are his sister, Mrs. Jessie S. Ogden, with whom he made his home at 140 Rosedale St.; one brother, Dr. Eric S. Green, medical director of County Hospital, and two nephews, Horace G. Ogden and Kenneth S. Green, all of Rochester.

Burial was to be made in Mt. Hope Cemetery today.

Mr. Green was a life member of Genesee Falls Lodge, F&AM.

SETH GREEN NAME URGED FOR HATCHERY

Rochester Public Library
Founded Famous Breeding

NOW OWNED BY STATE

SUGGESTION MADE THAT IT BE-COME A MEMORIAL TO ITS ORIGINATOR.

Yards and yards of miniature cement canals, supplied with water gushing over little, artificial falls, form a network in the grounds around the headquarters of the largest fish colony in the world, known to the public as the New York state hatchery, of Caledonia. Through the clean, gray channels flow the waters of Spring creek, the favorite fishing ground of the Senecas of long ago, and to-day a stream unrivaled in the world as a home for trout on account of its abundance of natural food and the valuable peculiarity that its temperature scarcely changes during the heat of summer or the frosts of winter.

In the buildings, also, are rows of cement waterways where fry and fingerlings, the youngest of this huge community, pass the first few weeks of their existence. Forty-eight troughs in one building and thirty-one in another, with eleven races outside, each containing 20,000 fish, comprise the housing capacity. If one has a head for figures, one may calculate the exact number of inhabitants of this fish village without an actual count. The furniture is meager, only a few tables here and there, on which are arranged in appetizing manner, for a fish at least, pans of a pinkish, raspberry jelly-like substance.

Fed on Liver.

From these pans an attendant takes a large spoonful, beats it light and foamy with an egg-beater, and scrapes it into a sprinkling can of water. With this concoction he walks back and forth between the troughs, slowly pouring it into the water. The fish are not long in recognizing its presence and quickly huddle to the spot where it is thickest. It is not raspberry jelly, however, but calves' liver ground to a paste. Each day between three and four hundred pounds of this delectable delicacy are consumed, meal being served regularly every hour for eight hours.

FOUNDER OF HATCHERY

Seth Green.

Eight employees are kept busy in this fish nursery, in which the work of hatching and shipping is more extensive than in any other place. Last year 28,596,275 fish were exported from the hatchery, each shipment containing twenty cans accompanied by two attendants, who kept the water fresh by aerating once an hour.

Labor-Saving Device.

This process consists of holding a dipperful of the water four or five feet above the can and slowly pouring it back, thus eliminating the arduous method of earlier days, of continually changing the water. In one artificial lake a pair of large sturgeon among so many tiny fish arouses curiosity. Their function in life is not to aid in increasing or raising the standard of fish population, but merely to look their best and brightest at the state fair.

If a man make a mouse trap better than any other, the world will make a beaten track to his door though he hid himself in the woods, said Emerson. A man once produced fish better than anyone else had done, and now, after three-quarters of a century, the world goes in throngs to the spot where he lived and experimented, and where his discoveries, put into practice and expanded, have resulted in the most famous fish hatchery not only in the United States, but in the world.

This man was Seth Green, born 165 years ago in a log cabin in Irondequoit, where the corner of Clifford avenue and Culver road is now. Always a lover of nature and a student of the ways of wild life in stream and woods, he soon realized that, unless fish were propagated by artificial means, many of the valuable varieties would become extinct. This conviction was forcibly impressed upon him one day when in 1837, while tramping through Canada, he concealed himself in the overhanging branches of a tree on the bank of a stream and watched for hours the movements of a school of salmon. He observed that the male fish immediately ate nearly all the spawn, leaving only a small part, which the mother fish carefully guarded and hatched.

It was not until 1864, however, that he established his hatchery on Spring creek, where he was able to use many ideas cherished from boyhood. After years of experimenting he had succeeded in hatching 95 per cent. of the spawn and also in developing a method of artificially impregnating dry spawn. When it is observed that a female shad will spawn more than 100,000 eggs, of which only a few hundred will be hatched in the natural way, it may be realized what a wonderful achievement Seth Green's "hatching box" accomplished when a 95 per cent. production was attained. In a short time his work here created such an impression among scientists and sportsmen that fish commissioners of many states urged him to conduct similar propagating operations in their sections. He established "Seth Green's Shad Nursery" on the Hudson, and at a hatchery in Holyoke, he hatched 15,000,000 shad in two weeks.

Transplanted Shad.

About this time he successfully transported shad to California, and in a few years millions were sold on the Pacific coast, which was not their natural habitat.

The first member of the first fish commission of New York state, formed in 1868, was Mr. Green, and soon after the state bought the hatchery of him, appointing him superintendent of fisheries, in which capacity he continued to serve until his death. In 1875 additional land and larger buildings were necessary, and the work of propagating and experimenting increased. Besides hatching artificially twenty or more species of fish, Mr. Green produced new varieties by crossing striped bass with shad, brook trout with salmon trout and California salmon, salmon trout with whitefish, shad with herring and others. He also invented many devices along this line, among which is the "Seth Green rig" for deep water fishing.

Although no method has been devised by which the number of visitors during a season at the Caledonia hatchery can be estimated, it is certain that a "beaten track" would be made to the home of the man who excelled all others in the art of fish culture, if sidewalks had not been provided. Few, however, know whose humble home once stood upon the premises or to whose life work the hatchery owes its existence. Long before the season reached its height the walks and aisles were almost impassable and all available parking space was in use. Seth Green devoted his life to increasing the food supply not only of the United States, but of the entire civilized world and in providing means of recreation by rich and poor, yet nothing has been done to perpetuate his memory either by the United States, the state, the city or even Caledonia, and to remind the coming generations by whom this great work was accomplished. A memorial on the grounds with a suitable inscription and changing the name from the State hatchery to the "Seth Green Hatchery" has been suggested as appropriate.—F. D. A.

Ex-Preacher of 'Stern Wheeler' Maps Suit Against Mission

Ellis D. Greene, blind deaf-mute, who "sailed" the Mississippi River in a "stern wheeler" 30 years ago to preach the gospel of the Megiddo Mission faith, today took legal steps to regain property of his wife, which he alleges was illegally transferred to the Mission Home at 481 Thurston Rd.

Funeral to Be Tomorrow For Ex-Rochesterian

Burial services for Arthur V. Greene, 34, former Rochesterian whose death at Cincinnati Saturday (Oct. 2, 1937) followed by two days that of his brother, Harry W. Greene, 58, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Morton Cemetery.

Mr. Greene, who had made his home with his elder brother, also a former Rochesterian, since going to the Midwest city about a year ago, is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Maybelle Clough and Mrs. Herman H. Manzler, two nieces and a nephew, all of Rochester.

Through his lawyer, Merwin Morehouse, Greene was named administrator of his wife's estate today by Surrogate Joseph M. Feely for the purpose of bringing suit to recover $30,000 real estate and $10,000 in cash and securities he contends are now held by the Mission Home.

Member of Original Crew

Greene, who for years resided at the Mission Home in a small apartment, conducts a store for janitors' supplies at 75 State St. According to Morehouse, Greene was a member of the original "crew" of a large river steamboat that toured cities along the Mississippi at the beginning of the century under command of the late Capt. L. T. Nichols, founder of the Megiddoites.

After the steamboat was scid in Kentucky, Greene followed Captain Nichols to Rochester in 1904, when the present Megiddo colony was founded here.

Suit Authorized

In the letters of administration granted to Greene today, Greene was authorized by the court to file suit against the Mission, Percy J. Thatcher and Mrs. Ella M. Skeels, present heads of the Mission, to recover title to four pieces of real estate and $10,000 in bank deposits and securities.

Greene's wife, Mrs. Olaevia Greene, died Dec. 24, according to the papers filed in Surrogate's Court. Greene contends the Mission and its officials wrongfully induced his wife to sign over her property to them before her death, and that the property rightfully belongs to her estate.

Death Takes G. S. Griswold, Publisher of Batavia News

RWF Biography G.

GERRIT S. GRISWOLD

Death Takes Batavia Publisher

Gerrit Smith Griswold, 79, whose rise from printer to publisher once brought him to Rochester and work on the old Rochester Democrat, was dead at his Batavia home today, victim of a year's illness. He succumbed at 11 o'clock last night.

Mr. Griswold was copublisher of the Batavia Daily News, which he took over with Andrew J. McWain in 1881.

He began a 64-year newspaper career by publishing his own paper, The Sunbeam, at 15. He attended Batavia Union School, then worked as a printer's devil on a weekly. As a roving newspaperman he worked here and for the old Syracuse Standard in Syracuse.

He was a charter member of the reorganized Associated Press.

Surviving are his wife, Evelyn Holden Griswold; three daughters, Mrs. John R. Osborne, Batavia; Mrs. Malcolm S. Jones, Boston; Mrs. Theodore Hobson, Lowell, Mass., and one son, Laurence W. Griswold, managing editor of the Batavia Daily News.

Funeral Rites to Be Next Monday in St. James' Church

Batavia — Funeral services for Gerrit Smith Griswold, 79, publisher of the Batavia Daily News, who died near midnight Friday in his home, 304 East Main St., after a 15 months' illness, will be in St. James' Episcopal Church here at 3 p. m. Monday.

Death of Griswold broke up a partnership established in 1881 with Andrew J. McWain in publishing Batavia's only daily newspaper. The firm is now known as Griswold & McWain Inc.

Starting at the age of 15 with an amateur publication, "The Sunbeam," Griswold had been in the newspaper business 65 years. He was once a member of the reportorial staff of the old Rochester Democrat and later was with the Syracuse Post Standard before returning to Batavia.

Charter Member of 'AP'

When the Associated Press was organized, he was one of its charter members. He was one of the original members of the Associated Dailies and its past president; a member of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, the National Editorial Association, the New York State Publishers' Association and a member and past president of the New York State Press Association.

He was born in Batavia on July 30, 1853 of New England parents. His father was Dr. Chauncey D. Griswold, a native of Hubbardton, Vt. An uncle, Rufus Griswold, was a close friend of Edgar Allen Poe and one of the famous poet's biographers.

Prominent in community and business affairs, he served as a director of the Genesee County Savings & Loan Association for 40 years and was its president for 17 years. He also was a member of the Board of Visitors of the New York State School for the Blind.

Was Rotarian

He took great pride in his affiliation with The Fossils, a national organization of old-time publishers of amateur newspapers. He also was a member of the Rotary Club.

Griswold is survived by his widow, Evelyn Holden Griswold; a son, Laurence W. Griswold, vice-president and managing editor of the Batavia Daily News; three daughters, Mrs. John R. Osborne, Batavia; Mrs. Malcolm S. Jones, Brookline, Mass., and Mrs. Theodore F. Hobson, Newton Center, Mass.

He remained active in the affairs of his paper until Nov. 6, 1936 when taken ill. His condition had been critical for the last two weeks.

He Helped Build Batavia

The significance to a community of a newspaper devoted to its interests has been illustrated by the growth and continuance of the Batavia Daily News. Attention now is called to this service by the death of the man who has carried it forward for many years—Gerrit Smith Griswold.

Mr. Griswold was Batavia-born; at the age of 15 he started an amateur newspaper; later he learned city newspaper methods on the Rochester Democrat and the Syracuse Post-Standard. Then he went back to his home city and has conducted a vigorous newspaper that has grown as Batavia has grown.

The proprietor of a local newspaper in a small city, or in a large one for that matter, to be successful must be part of the community's life. Mr. Griswold was recognized as such in Batavia. Every movement for the community's betterment had his support; he was actively identified with many community enterprises and organizations.

Mr. Griswold, the News and Batavia progressed together. He was one of the charter members of the Associated Press, one of the original members of the Associated Dailies and its past president, a member of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and a member and past president of the New York State Press Association.

But his newspaper is his eulogy and his monument. It was and continues to be a community bulwark.

Retiring as financial secretary of the Central YMCA after 44 years with that organization, Josiah R. Groff, right, receives the good wishes of General Secretary S. Wirt Wiley.

D. & C. JUL 1 1938
 Central 'Y' Secretary Retires, G
 Honored at Testimonial Dinner

The only man to serve 44 years at the Central YMCA, who worked under seven general secretaries, and who for 24 years has been financial secretary of the institution, last night retired.

Josiah R. Groff, 158 Shelter St., last night was guest of honor at a testimonial dinner at the Central Y, marking the termination of his 44-year tour of duty. He will be succeeded as financial secretary by Vernon Kelley, 950 Bay St., formerly assistant manager of the "Y" Store.

Some 150 fellow-workers and friends gathered to pay tribute to the 61-year-old man. Groff joined the organization as stenographer in 1894 and worked his way from that position to bookkeeper, to membership secretary, to financial secretary.

It was said he has handled over 10 million dollars of association money during his career.

"Just to keep him on his toes" the Railroad YMCA presented him with $200 in nickles, dimes and quarters "so that he can keep his hand in by counting." Fred Lamb made the presentation.

Harper Sibley, president of the Rochester Association, spoke briefly on Groff's loyalty and community interest while Ernest A. Paviour, vicepresident, presented him with a framed list of resolutions attesting his work.

Herbert Brigham, membership secretary, presented him with a life membership in the association. S. Wirt Wiley, general secretary, presided.

By Harriet Van Horne

HIS 67 years have seen the automobile edge, the horse and buggy into near oblivion; his keen eyes have watched the airplane ascend on ever-stronger wings, but Josiah (J. R.) Groff has walked his way through life.

When he retires July 1 from his post as cashier at the Central YMCA, J. R. will have established some sort of shoe-leather express record. He has walked to and from work every day for the past 44 years. And it's a good three-mile hike from his home at 158 Shelter St. to his office in the Gibbs Street Y building. But whatever the weather, whatever the season, J. R. has walked.

"Why do I walk?" J. R. mused a moment. "Why do I? Well, because it's the best exercise in the world. And a man has to exercise to keep his health."

Until a few years ago J. R. was not content with his six-miles-a-day stint. He also took a daily workout in the Y gym and swam in the pool at least once a week. A trifling accident—"really nothing, but you know how these doctors are"—forced him to discontinue this routine.

Josiah Groff was born in 1871 in a tiny Mohawk Valley village known as Krum Creek, which, at that time, boasted three houses and a postoffice. There are half a dozen houses there now, but no postoffice. It was a three-mile trek from the Groff farm to the village of St. Johnsville where the boy attended school. J. R. still remembers these daily walks, spring mornings with the earth still smelling of night freshness, and the sun creeping over the majestic walls of the valley.

TAKES ALL KINDS OF PEOPLE

JOSIAH R. (J. R.) GROFF

"Beautiful country, the Mohawk," he reflects. "God's country. No place like it."

Josiah walked to school in the winter, too, taking the sharp, clean punishment of a driving snow in his face, and wading through tall drifts.

This six-mile habit, firmly rooted, has stuck. J. R. walks now, not only for the exercise, but because it seems the natural thing to do. He works five days a week, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; never eats lunch, and spends summer evenings puttering in his garden.

Josiah Groff was a stiff-collared young man of 23, residing in Herkimer, when he received a telegram offering him a position in Rochester. At that time he dreamed of becoming a physical education instructor, and thinking that was what the position offered, he accepted it promptly. But he was appointed cashier-secretary on his arrival at the old YMCA building on the northeast corner of Court Street and South Avenue. Since 1894 J. R. has handled all moneys coming into the Y, including the campaign funds which built the present headquarters in Gibbs Street.

Groff has watched the YMCA grow from a few club rooms where youth gathered to sing hymns and "discuss," to the far-reaching organization which has now a national membership of more than a million men and boys.

J. R. looks back fondly to his days at the Court Street Y.

"Basketball was the game in those days," he recalls. "Badminton, squash and these other new-fangled games hadn't come in yet." Leading activities at that time was a group known as the Young Fellows' Band which conducted Bible classes, sponsored bean dinners and competitive games. Many business and professional leaders in Rochester today, J. R. will tell you, once played basketball for the Y against local Sunday-school teams, and cashed their pay-checks at his desk.

J. R. never forgets a face. Men whom he last saw as awkward lads with changing voices meet him today, and Groff needs only a moment to reconstruct an old mental picture saying jovially, "Well, if it isn't Peter Soandso!"

A modest, unassuming man with a mustache whose ends curl optimistically, Josiah Groff is known to thousands. With his wife, he lives quietly in Shelter Street, has two sons, one daughter, and two grandchildren.

J. R.'s plans for the future are vague. He'll work in his garden, play with his grandchildren and oh yes—he'll take a walk every day.

Final Tribute Paid To Ralph H. Gorsline

Funeral services were to be held this afternoon for Ralph Gorsline, well-known Rochester business man who died Saturday at his home, 435 Columbia Ave. Burial was to be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Gorsline succumbed to a heart attack that seized him as he sat listening to the radio Christmas night. He was 70.

The son of W. H. Gorsline, construction firm founder who built the Powers Building in Main St. W., he attended Rochester Free Academy and Cayuga Lake Military Academy. He was graduated from Cornell University in 1889, and was a charter member of the Cornell Club of Rochester. He was one of the first members of the Automobile Club of Rochester, a member of Masonic orders, and a third generation member of Brick Presbyterian Church.

Before entering business with his father, Mr. Gorsline taught for a short time at Cayuga Academy. He consolidated the Rochester Sewer Pipe and the Standard Sewer Pipe companies into New York State Sewer Pipe Line Company about 25 years ago, becoming its president.
