Training Character of Children His Chief Aim

JACKSON GALLUP

Unknown and unsung, the teaching profession goes its way day in and day out, contributing a larger share to the upbuilding of modern civilization than any other single profession or business, yet seldom noticed by a public that has come to take its education for granted. Many a man and woman now an outstanding figure in the community, perhaps in the state and nation, owes more than he or she can ever repay to a humble, self-sacrificing pedagogue. Here, then, is the thirty-second in a series of articles on Rochester teachers, and the famous or near famous men and women they have taught.

Teaching boys and girls principles of character building so as to develop future leaders means more to Jackson Gallup, principal of No. 23 School in Barrington Street, than learning the inside of school books.

Motor Executive Learns Flying As Newest Hobby; Will Be Pilot Gallagher

Transportation and its improvement, where possible are the hobbies of Charles P. Gallagher, president of Gallagher Motor Co., Inc., Rochester Studebaker distributor. With establishment of aviation as a means of transportation, Mr. Gallagher has gone beyond the highways in pursuit of his hobby, and taken to the air. To learn the problems of this newest means of transport he has become a patron of Rochester airports and in a few months hopes to meet the qualifications for a pilot's license. Mr. Gallagher is one of those responsible for widening of Monroe Avenue, and the author of a sketch and plan for Jecking over the subway for use as a highway. Making his business his hobby in one respect, he has more than an ordinary interest in this week's auto show, having been active in the planning of this and others for the last several years. He has just completed a term as president of the Rochester Automobile Dealers' Association.

Another hobby of his in the business line has been the development of 44, 49, and 90-cent used car sales, which have brought crowds of buyers to his place of business and nationwide recognition to his firm, for dealers from coast to coast have found the idea, outgrowth of a hobby, a good one.
Students of World Affairs Will Debate Before Associated Clubs

Lewis Gannett To Oppose Charles Hodges on League Topic

Saturday noon at the Powers Hotel, the City Club will meet jointly with the Rochester Chapter of the Foreign Policy Association, the Woman's City Club, and the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, to hear a debate on the subject 'The League of Nations as International Police.'

The speakers will be Lewis S. Gannett, associate editor of the New York Herald Tribune, and Charles Hodges, assistant director, division of Oriental commerce and politics, New York University.

This meeting is the second of a series arranged under the sponsorship of the Rochester Chapter of the Foreign Policy Association for the discussion of subjects of international importance.

Native Rochesterian

Lewis S. Gannett is a native Rochesterian and was educated in the Rochester public schools. He attended the University of Rochester for a year, and then attended Harvard, from which he was graduated and honored with a fellowship. He passed the first year of his fellowship at the University in the Winter of 1913 and 1914 and passed the second year at Harvard. After his period of study at Harvard he was successively connected with the World Peace Foundation, the New York World, and relief work with the Red Cross and other associations abroad. He then became a contributor of The Nation, and contributed numerous articles on subjects of international politics to that magazine and the Survey. Among the best known writings of Mr. Gannett is "Young China.""}

Arthur F. Gay, physical culture expert of 232 East Avenue, born in Rochester, April 4, 1909. His earlier life was marked by physical weakness, but during his period of education at East High School Mr. Gay exercised systematically until he developed a physique enabling him to participate in sports.

In the World War Mr. Gay was designated the strongest man in the United States Army and Navy. In 1917 the Physical Culture Magazine held a contest to determine the most perfectly formed man in America, and Mr. Gay won first prize.

Mr. Gay married Emily G. Lewis in 1912. They have two children, Gertrude Mary and John Howard. The residence is at 1190 Park Avenue.

He is a member of the Loyal Order of Moose and Genesee Valley Post, American Legion.

DEATH COMES TO GOTTFRIED GEISLER AT 88

Recalled When Ball Park Was Part of Thriving Farm

Gottfried Geisler Has Seen City Grow Out from Line of Cliffdord Avenue to Norton Street, and Old Farms He Knew Don't Look as They Used To

BY SAMUEL B. COVEY
Death Takes Retired Head
Of Former Piano Company

Arthur J. Gibbons Dies At Age of 82 After Brief Illness

Long identified in Rochester musical circles as a keen critic and piano manufacturer and retailer, Arthur J. Gibbons, retired since 1928, died unexpectedly at 3:30 o’clock yesterday afternoon at his home, 287 Alexander Street. He was 82 years of age.

Deceased followed contracting of pneumonia two days ago, and he was confined to bed with a severe cold. Until that time he had been in good health and enjoyed daily exercise. Only last Thursday several friends saw and conversed with him on downtown streets.

He is survived by two daughters, Dr. Emma C. Gibbons and Miss Alice J. Gibbons, both of Rochester, and a son, Dwight Gibbons of Detroit.

Funeral services will take place at Mount Hope Chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3 o’clock with burial in Mount Hope Cemetery.

In the event, Gibbons graduated from the University of Rochester. At the latter institution he became a member of the Delta Chi fraternity. He lived for two years in Mount Hope, and his presence was greatly felt by the fraternity.

Gibbons was a man of great credit, not only to himself and his calling, but on his country and the city that gave him his early opportunities. He was a true son of Rochester, a man, well described in the honors he received.

Arthur J. Gibbons, 82, of 287 Alexander Street, died unexpectedly at his home at 3:30 o’clock yesterday afternoon. He was a former president of the Rochester Musical Society, and a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

His death leaves a vacancy in the musical life of Rochester, and his presence will be greatly missed by his friends and associates.

Death Takes Life of A. J. Gibbons

Widely Known in Musical Ranks as Keen Critic and Manufacturer—To Be Buried Tomorrow in Mt. Hope Cemetery

Arthur J. Gibbons, 82 of 287 Alexander Street, died unexpectedly at his home at 3:30 o’clock yesterday afternoon. He was a former president of the Rochester Musical Society, and a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

His death leaves a vacancy in the musical life of Rochester, and his presence will be greatly missed by his friends and associates.

Two days ago he was confined to his bed with a severe cold. He had previously enjoyed good health.

He is survived by two daughters, Dr. Emma C. Gibbons and Miss Alice J. Gibbons.

Central Library of Rochester and Monroe County
Historic Scrapbooks Collection

PRENTISS GILBERT

ROCHESTERIAN IN KEY PLACE IN EAST CRISIS

Prentiss B. Gilbert May Speak for U. S. at Geneva League Council Session

Prentiss Bailey Gilbert, a native Rochesterian and a graduate of the University in the class of 1860, will attend the League of Nations Council in the negotiations between the League of Nations Council and the United States, in connection with the Manchurian crisis involving China, Japan and the United States.

If the League offers a formal invitation, Mr. Gilbert, as American consul general at Geneva, is expected to be assigned to the negotiations on behalf of the United States with the League of Nations, and, through the League, with the representatives of China, Japan and the United States in a consultative capacity, with a vote if the invitation is issued.

Has Had Varied Career

Born in Rochester in 1838, Mr. Gilbert is the son of Col. William Wallace Gilbert, a veteran of the Civil, Spanish-American and World wars, and a brother of Clinton Gilbert, Washington correspondent for the Philadelphia Public Ledger and author of "History of Washington." His experience

CONTINUE ON PAGE SIXTEEN
JOSEPH GILES,
PRINTING FIRM
OFFICIAL, DIES
Dec. 26, 1931
Born and Educated in City, Helped Found
Locust Hill Club

Joseph M. Giles, vice-president and secretary of the Case-Hoyt Corporation, printing company, died yesterday morning at the General Hospital of complications reported as a result of a serious operation he underwent three weeks ago. He was 60.

Mr. Giles, born in Rochester, Oct.
8, 1873, was a lifelong resident of the city. He obtained his education in the public schools and was graduated from Rochester High School.
In 1912 he joined the staff of the Case-Hoyt Corporation, later becoming vice-president and secretary in charge of sales and advertising service.

One of the organizers of the Gym Club of Rochester, of which for many years he was secretary, Mr. Giles was also a founder of the Locust Hill Country Club, of which he acted as secretary and member of the board of governors for three years. He was a member of the Ad Club and Zoetland Lodge, F. & A.
M.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs.
Dorothy Zawold Giles; a daughter, Dorothy Ann Giles; a son, John Martin Giles; his parents, Mr. and Mrs.
Martin J. Giles; two sisters,
Mrs. William Weaver, Mrs. Charles McEnerny and Mrs. Edward Smalley.

Birthday
Greetings
To Rochester

The Times-Union congratulates Justice Willis K. Gillette on his birthday anniversary.

Supreme Court Justice Willis K.
Gillette, 63 years old today, was born in Milford, N. Y., but has spent most of his life in Rochester.
He attended Rochester Free Academy and was graduated from the University of Michigan.

Justice Gillette has served as member of the Board of Education, clerk on the Board of Supervisors and as sheriff of Monroe County. He was police justice of Rochester from 1914 to 1927 when he was appointed special county judge. In 1920 he was elected county judge and Jan. 1, 1925 assumed the office of Justice of the Supreme Court.

Justice Gillette married Clara J.
Davis, Oct. 11, 1883. The wedding ceremony was performed in Le Roy the former home of Mrs. Gillette. They have three children, Marion, Willis and Doris. The Gillette residence is 741 Chili Avenue.

Among Justice Gillette's affiliations are those of the County Bar Society, Rochester Bar Association and the New York State Bar Association.

Mr. Gillette, 63 years old to-day, will visit one of the county fair to watch harness race. They are a favorite with him. While he ever places a wager, he takes a racing digest and follows the progress of various horses throughout the year. He gets to know and love them.

His recreation is to visit a mountain camp, and "just look!"

JOHN GLOSSER

Glosser, 32 years old, of 61
Crest Street, was named service director yesterday by City Manager Stephen B. Story, at a salary of $4,500. Mr. Glosser will have charge of the information bureau in the City Hall, and take care of the business between the public and the different departments and

George A. Gillette,
Pharmacist, Too

For many years a collector of coins, George A. Gillette, attorney, who resides at 50 Kenwood Avenue,
has adopted a new hobby in conjunction with the old.

He now collects postage stamps,
but at the same time is not neglecting his coins, for there is nothing so interesting in his opinion as the discovery and collection of some coin of obscure origin.

Stamps are interesting, says Mr.
Gillette, but they have the background of coins. The oldest stamp issued has been in existence only since the early part of the last century, but coins date back to 700
B.C.

In making his collections, Mr.
Gillette has done less dealing with numismatists and philatelists than most other collectors. He visited his latest philatelic dealer in a trip to South America and South Africa
several years ago. He has pur-bought many of his stamps at his coins, in the countries whose impressed he is. There is more interest, thinks Mr. Gillette, in buying a stamp in a foreign postoffice than in sending to some dealer for it.

Of course there are a few that have aroused more than ordinary interest with him. In of the early origin he sees remain the fragments of ancient races. Mr. Gillette finds coins are attractive for geographic, historic and artistic interest.

U. Of R. Graduate
Wrote Well-Known
Volume Of Sketches

With the formal announcement of G. P. Putnam's Sons, the authorship of "The Mirrors of Washington" is out. This discerning volume of sketches of public life was written by Clinton N.
Gilbert, Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, and the volume was written from the experience of a lifetime with politics and intimate firsthand knowledge of characters in Washington and abroad.

Mr. Gilbert was born on Long Island 64 years ago. He was graduated from the University of Houston in 1915. After graduation he entered the University of Houston in 1915. After graduation he entered at once into newspaper work, starting as a reporter on the New York Post. He was then successively exchange editor, editorial writer and associate editor of the New York Tribune and then staff correspondent of the Evening Public Ledger.
Hunting, Fishing, Hobbies
Of Attorney H. R. Glynn;
Wrote Book On Angling

When Henry R. Glynn of 475 Hayward Avenue, attorney, speaks of hobbies he speaks only of hunting and fishing.

And a more ardent sportsman could hardly be found. Mr. Glynn has fished many of the lakes of Canada and treasures a store of memories of outings and campfires, blue waters, great sweeps of evergreen forests. Out of years of experience as a fisherman and association with accomplished anglers, Mr. Glynn some time ago indulged himself in his favorite diversion to the extent of writing and publishing a textbook.

Its object, it is gathered from the preface, is to present a work dealing with fishing, little more than the methods of catching fish, and a little less on preparations, journeys, and descriptions of catches. Those who have been to discover a copy of the work before it was out of print found innumerable valuable hints on angling.

Fishing is not a hobby with Mr. Glynn today; hunting. While he occasionally takes to Sodus Bay for a day of duck hunting he seldom gets into the woods for game. His reasons: the headlines in the newspapers after the opening day of any season resemble the reports of a battle.

Death Calls
EX-LEADER IN MANHATTAN

Charles Goetzmann, 69,
Was Industrialist,
Realty Operator

Goetzmann, 69, retired real estate operator and former industrialist, who died Tuesday, at his home, 67 McNaughton Street, will be conducted there tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Burial will be at Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Before entering the real estate field 15 years ago, Mr. Goetzmann was president of Goetzmann & Company, piano manufacturers, located for a number of years in Clinton Avenue North. He also was a member of the firm of Phelps & Lyddon, piano case manufacturers, and secretary and treasurer of the old Standard Brewing Company as it existed before the days of prohibition.

His real estate offices were in the Powers Building. He was a son of the late Frederick and Salome Goetzmann and lived for years with his parents in the old Goetzmann homestead at 16 Hyde Park. This house long

Swayne P. Goodenough Named Vice-President Of Lincoln-Alliance Bank

Swayne P. Goodenough today assumed his duties as a vice-president of Lincoln-Alliance Bank following his election to that post Saturday night. His election was announced by Raymond N. Ball, president of the institution.

Prominent in Rochester business activities for a number of years, Mr. Goodenough was associated with the Morgan Machine Company from 1919 to 1929 as a director and sales manager. During the last two years he has been with the brokerage firm of Hibbard, Palmer & Kitchell.

In 1908 he came to Rochester and graduated from the University of Rochester in 1912. He accepted a post of teacher of English in East High School, and in May, 1917, entered the Officers' Training Camp at Madison Barracks. Receiving a commission, Mr. Goodenough was stationed at Camp Hancock until January, 1918, when he went to France as a first lieutenant with the 17th Artillery, Second Division, this unit being a part of the famous Marine Brigade. He served on six different fronts and was cited at Chateau Thierry. Following the Armistice, his division formed a part of the Army of Occupation in Germany.

Mr. Goodenough was president of the Rochester Ad Club, 1927-28.
Harry Goodwin’sashes Cast Into Air by Own Request

“Since I was in physical being, being cremated and the residue from such disposal be thrown into the air, because the body of a person who has been the victim of an accident, I conceive the idea that such action, my remains, along with my clothes, would return to the home of the Father.”

Thus read a message sent to former City Councillor Harry C. Goodwin, in which he directives funeral services be simple.

Harry C. Goodwin

“DECENT DISPOSAL”

Whence and how came my physical form and composition, I know not. What I do know after what I consider decent disposal is, in a question of my own conscience. Therefore, I would ask that my physical being be cremated and the residue from such disposal be thrown into the air. I would return to the home of the Father.

“May I have so lived that my family and friends will always be glad to recall that I did live and that they own some of their happiness to things I have done to bring them such happiness, May God bless them.”

The statement was written by Mr. Goodwin two months ago, after he had attended the funeral of a relative in New York.

Friends and Political Adversaries at One in Lauding His Qualities

Friends and political opponents of Harry C. Goodwin last evening joined in paying tribute to the sterling qualities of Mr. Goodwin, City Manager Stephen H. Storer said of Mr. Goodwin that “in everything he did, he had an honest and upright purpose in it. He knew himself well, and knowing him realized that he always was guided by his judgment.”

“I consider his death a very real loss to the city,” said Vice-Mayor Isaac Adler. “He was an extremely useful public servant. One of his particular services was his insistence upon openness and frankness with respect to all matters affecting public welfare. He was always earnest in doing what he thought best for the people. He was never afraid to stand for his beliefs, regardless of whether they were popular or not.”

George J. Nichols, former commissioner of public safety, told me, when he went into office, that he was going to fight for everything that was for the interests of the people. He was always anxious to find out what the people wanted, and he believed that, during his term of office, he conscientiously strove to carry out those ideals.

The death of Harry Goodwin greatly distresses me,” said Clinton H. Howard, “Mr. Goodwin was a man above suspicion. He had the highest respect for his opinion. He was a fighter and at the same time a good friend. I believe that he always tried to do his best for what he thought was for the best interests of the public.”

Goodwin Memorial
Adopted a Council

By ruling vote the City Council adopted a memorial to Harry C. Goodwin, former mayor, who died on Aug. 25, 1919. The memorial, prepared by Vice-Mayor Isaac Adler, says: “Harry C. Goodwin, who served a term of two years as comptroller of the city, was a good loser. I am sorry he has gone.”
EDITOR, TIMES-UNION:

If everybody knew Harry C. Goodwin as I do, they would surely vote for him. I don't mean that he is right every time, but he comes mighty near being right nine times out of ten, and he is always honest.

Will you please publish the attached, taken from a Watertown paper four years ago, and run it as an advertisement, sending the bill to me.

A FRIEND.

He was born in Antwerp on Aug. 7, 1877, and he came into the world unsurrounded by luxuries. The habit of hard work was impressed on him early, and his mother has stayed with him. When only eight years old he lost his father, and was left with his mother and a brother to make his way. Newspaper selling was his first business venture, and at the tender age of nine, with his mother acting as manager of the enterprise, he got a monopoly of all papers sold in Antwerp, on the theory of the less competition the less danger.

When eleven years old, young Goodwin went to live with an aunt in Chenango County, because thus he could attend a country school. At 13 he was back north, hopping bails at the old Hotel Woodruff. At 14 he returned to Antwerp, went to school, and did odd jobs outside of school hours. Frindship looked like a good thing to trade and he worked for a time in the office of the Antwerp Gazette. He then alternated between visiting his aunt down state and working in Antwerp, until at the age of 19 he was graduated from Ithaca Seminary.

While at the seminary he won some notice as a debater, and in a debate with Governor High School he carried the case by the argument so well that William S. Augustus, now Senator, complimented him declaring he would "go far as a public speaker."

By selling a patented article from house to house one summer, Goodwin earned enough money to enter Hamilton College, where he remained a year before his funds gave out. Just at this time an opportunity to serve as editor of a Northville, N.Y., newspaper presented itself. He took the job, but soon switched with the Sixth Missouri Regiment for service in the Spanish-American War. He spent nine months in the army, and returned to Northern New York in the spring of 1899.

While working for the Water- town Standard as a reporter, Goodwin was given an assignment that tested his mettle. Colonel Thomas S. Goodale, who came to Watertown to campaign for McKinley, had declared that he would give no interview to any newspaper man. The city editor of the Standard told Goodwin to get the interview or get out. He got the interview, by breaking through the lines of police that surrounded Roosevelt and talking to him from the steps of his carriage.

The result of this interview was to put Goodwin on special train which was taking Chauncey M. Depew on a stump ing trip around the state for McKinley, and when he returned from the jaunt he wrote a character sketch of Depew that brought him an offer from the Buffalo News. This chance he turned down to go with the E. W. & O. division of the Central as advertising manager. When his work there was accomplished, he secured a position in the business office of The Times, under the late Henry A. Brockway.

As a reporter Goodwin won the esteem and friendship of such men as John N. Currie, the late Senator Elon R. Brown, former Secretary of State Robert L. Balch, and former Mayor Francis M. Hugo. He knew how to get news, but better still he knew how to respect confidences.

When Mr. Goodwin left the Rochester Herald he was Sunday editor. He became city editor of the Post-Express, and succeeded in gaining the friendship of big business men in Rochester as readily as he had in Watertown. After leaving the Post-Express he became publicity agent for a group of business men who wanted to locate the New York Central station over the Genesee River, William C. Barry asking him to this position.

He then went with the E. Kir kelein Sons Company, manufacturers of Shar- on glasses, as advertising manager, and became a director in the company when he resigned to do free lance ad writing. Four years ago he formed his own advertising firm of H. C. Goodwin, Inc. He has done much public speaking, and is in constant demand by chamber of commerce.

Harry's business is advertising—himself and others.

No. II HARRY C. GOODWIN

(Following is the second of a series by J. Cody Waller, introducing candidates for council to the public. Tomorrow—Isaac Adler.)

By J. CODY WALLER

“F”ROM Newsboy at Eight to Headline Monopolizer at Fifty-Two-

Shades of Heratf Alger!

Voter, meet Harry C. Goodwin, the ubiquitous City Councilman—No. 2 on the voting machine for the election on November 5. He is the five hundredth man at the table who has a voice in the election. And ubiquitous he is, on the City Council floor, in Chambers of commerce, in Y. M. C. A.'s, and the like. He was the sixth president of the Rochester Ad Club.

The Councilman Goodwin probably has irritated more prominent people than all the other councilmen combined. He has irritated Mayor Joseph C. Wilson to a point of exasperation. He has annoyed Vice Mayor Isaac Adler. There have been times when his conferees who are aligned with the Republican organization would have felt content had the candidate for mayor opened up and swallowed Councilman Goodwin.

Just now the whole Republican organization would welcome an assassin, or any other disturbance to remove Mr. Goodwin for his activity in disclosing the alleged illegal voting in Republican strongholds.

Worst of all there is no indication Mr. Goodwin will ever shut up. He went to Albany to have the governor authorize a special Grand Jury investigation of elections here. He was rebuffed with a polite statement by Acting Governor Herbert H. Lehman that an investigation could not be authorized until it was shown Dis-
In the Council, in his newspaper statements and in his every utterance, he has condemned the professional politician, ... and as an after-dinner speaker
HARRY C. GOODWIN
Citizens' Republican Committee
Candidate for Councilman at Large

---

When he took office two years ago he planned to be straight-laced with a new city. When boys and girls seeking playground jobs solicited his endorsement he declined, he proclaimed from the house top that he would not be guilty of a sin. He was city manager in his choice of city employees.

In about two months his straight faced stand was cast to the winds. He found Mayor Joseph C. Bostwick had chosen jobs for friends. He did not intend the mayor should build up his Nineteenth Ward organization. Bostwick was Mr. Goodwin's own ward, the headlines.

Mr. Goodwin has been the most open defender of City Manager Bostwick and the City Council. At the same time he has been the most critical.

He has declared city employees for serving political leaders before their government. But he has never made any specific charges, only allusions. With him it may be just a guess that Charles E. Bostwick, Tenth Ward leader, was sitting on the City Hall before Mr. Story died.

---

HARRY C. GOODWIN

---

In 1903 he joined the repertorial staff of the Rochester Herald. He was Sunday editor of the Herald, when he edited night work for the Morgentown Post Express. Mr. Goodwin left the Post Express to write publicity for the Michigan Railroad which was the foremost of the present Civic Center plan.

Next jump was to advertising writing for the Kirshna Sons Company, after which he organized the H. C. Goodwin advertising agency of his own.

The political he began to buzz in the Goodwin head about eight years ago. He threatened to run for Congress several times before he got down to actual competition in the Republican primary in 1916. He took defeat with a smile.

1923 he first bobbed as a hot Republican insurgent. Mr. Goodwin, by the way, was a Democrat before he came to Rochester and for a considerable time afterwards. He was active in Republican insurgency in the last six years. In 1927 he was a member of the Rochester City Council Republicans and finally was one of their choices for the City Council. He was elected.

Mr. Goodwin is married, resides at No. 1225 Rockingham Street, has two children. His son, Robert, is touring with Jane Cowl in a new play. His daughter, Helen, is a sophomore at Sweet Briar College, Virginia.

Mr. Goodwin has only one request of newspapers and newspapermen:

"Say something about me; anything but do not neglect me in the headlines."

Lincoln Republican Council
The following resolutions on the death of Mr. Goodwin were adopted by the executive committee of the club:

The executive committee of the Citizens Republican Club especially feels its loss. In his participation in the cause which this club represents, Mr. Goodwin exemplified the qualities which were appreciated by the wider constituency of city and county.

He had a large sympathy for the common people, even when he was forced to take issue with some of them concerning matters in which he could not honestly agree with them. It was this, as well as his active and original mind, his courage and good humor, that made him valuable in political life, as well as in the wide field of civic activities outside of politics.

---

Friends Continue Tributes
To Former Councilman
And Civic Leader

---

Mr. Goodwin was deeply sympatizing with the loss of his friend, Mr. Goodwin gave to this movement, often at the expense of his family life.

Sheriff Fred Semple was a splendid fellow, an excellent politician and a friend worth having. We did not agree politically and Semple was warm personal friends. I feel I have lost a sincere and real friend.

Charles E. Bostwick, Ward 10 leader: I was very sorry to hear of his death. I liked Harry. He always struck openly and fairly.

---

Harry C. Goodwin, Citizens' Republican Committee candidate for councilman-at-large, was born at Auburn, N. Y., in 1877, and received his early education in the schools of that place, later attending Hamilton College. He left college to enlist in the Spanish American War and served in Col. E. Fitch's 1st New York Engineers, leaving the latter position to become public relations manager of the Wilkes Plan Co., then serving as advertising manager for E. Kirshna Sons Co., and about twelve years ago establishing his own advertising agency. In 1928 he was president of the Rochester Ad Club.

In 1926 Mr. Goodwin entered the Republican organization candidacy for representative in Congress from the Thirty-eighth District. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the City Manager League in 1928, and was one of the original advertisers in the League of America. Mr. Goodwin is well known for his work among boys and as an after-dinner speaker.
EDWIN GORDON
FUNERAL RITES
TO BE FRIDAY

Senior Member of Architectural Firm, Aged 65,
Succumbs Quickly to Attack of Pneumonia

Funeral services will be conducted Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock for Edwin S. Gordon, senior member of Gordon & Kaelber, architects, who died last night at his home, 197 George Street.

Burials will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Mr. Gordon, 65, succumbed to pneumonia. He was stricken about a week ago.

Some of Rochester's finest buildings, including the Eastman Theater and the new University of Rochester, stand as monuments to the genius of Mr. Gordon and his associates.

Worked on Center Plans

More recently he had been giving much of his time to plans for the proposed civic center, the proposed Rundel Memorial Building and buildings contemplated for the Women's College of the University of Rochester.

Mr. Gordon was born in Rochester, March 23, 1867, his parents being Henry R. and Jane Benton Gordon. He attended the Wadsworth School the Rochester Free Academy and Mechanics Institute. Later, he become instructor in architecture at Mechanics, teaching night classes there for 14 years.

In 1888 he became draughtman for the firm of Fay & Dryer and later was similarly employed by the James G. Cuyler, then a well-known architect of the city. He spent four years as a partner of Claude Bragdon and William E. Craddock and was afterwards a draughtman with J. Foster Warner for eight years.

Becomes Partner

On the expiration of that period he became a partner of William V. Madden in the firm of Gordon & Madden, which during the period of its existence designed Corpus Christi Church, SS. Peter and Paul's Blessed Sacrament, St. Stan's, Paul's, Blessed Sacrament, St. Stan's and other important buildings.

Since the first of May, 1918, Mr. Gordon had been associated with William G. Kaelber under the firm name of Gordon & Kaelber although the business association of the two men goes back 30 years. They were architects for the new University of Rochester buildings and the Eastman Theater, the latter in association with McKim, Mead & White. They designed First Church of Christ, Scientist, the Monroe and Armitt Y. W.C.A. buildings, the Hiram Sibley building, Rochester Dental Dispensary, The Democrat & Chronicle building, additions to the Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Company, the Security Trust Company, and Traders Bank. Mr. Gordon was the architect of all of the public, primary and high school buildings constructed here between 1912 and 1924.

Mr. Gordon was a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, a member of Central New York Chapter, A. I. A., and of the Rochester Society of Architects, the Rochester Engineering Society, and a director of the Mortgage Reserve Board Corporation. He was well known in club circles, belonging to the Rochester Club, the Rochester Ad Club, the Rochester Auto Club, City Club, the Torch Club, and the Oak Hill Country Club. He had also membership connections with the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, and the Young Men's Christian Association.

He leaves his wife, Mary Larke Gordon, a son, Stewart H. Gordon, two daughters, Mrs. Eugene J. Vincent and Miss Ruth Gordon, all of Rochester, and five grandchildren.

DEATH TAKES
E. S. GORDON,
ARCHITECT

Designer of College Buildings, Church
Edifices of City

Edwin S. Gordon, senior member of the firm of Architects of Gordon & Kaelber, died last night of pneumonia at his home, 157 George Street. Mr. Gordon, who was 65 years of age, had been in ill health for the past year and a week ago was stricken with a severe cold which developed into pneumonia.

The buildings on the new River Campus of the University of Rochester stand as a monument to architectural ability of Mr. Gordon and his associates. More recently, Mr. Gordon has been devoting much of his time to plans for the proposed Rochester Civic Center, the new Rundel Memorial Library building, and the buildings contemplated for the Women's College of the University of Rochester.

Native of Rochester

He represents a family that has long been established in Western New York. He was born in Rochester, March 23, 1867, his parents being Henry R. and Jane Benton Gordon. Henry Gordon was a merchant tailor. Edwin attended the Wadsworth School and

This is the nineteenth in a series on My Favorite Sport and Why. The next article will appear tomorrow.

UNTIL fifteen years ago Tom C. Goodwin played every sport.

Those were the days of hurling football players in the broken field and wedge plays to start sacks for precious yardage.

Tom took so many beatings on the gridiron that inflammatory rheumatism set in. Consequently, he has been using crutches for years. But the flame of interest in things athletic has burned undiminished. He is probably the most regular customer at sporting events in these parts.

Convinced of the worth of the Centrals, Tom is one of the many hopefuls praying for Jack Neiman's boys in their Richard Gorsline, 80, vice-president of the Gorsline & Swan Construction Company and member of a family which has been active in building development in Rochester for nearly a century and a quarter, died yesterday at his home, 23 East Boulevard, after eight days illness following a stroke.

Three generations of Gorslines have been builders, and each generation has contributed its share of outstanding structures in Rochester, including educational, professional, business, industrial and church edifices.

Grandfather, Builder of Aqueduct
Richard Gorsline, the grandson, came to Rochester from East Bloomfield in 1816. He was of professional name, but though the business association of the two men goes back 38 years, Mr. Gorsline is the architect for the New University of Rochester campus and the Eastman Theater, the latter in association with McKim, Mead & White. They designed the First Church of Christ, Scientist, the Monroe and Arnot Y. M. C. A. buildings, the Hiram Shirley Building, the Rochester Dental Dispensary, the Democrat & Chronicle building, additions to the Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Company, and Traders Bank.

Mr. Gorsline was the architect for all of the public primary and high school buildings constructed between 1912 and 1924.

Mr. Gorsline was a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, a member of Central New York Chapter, A. I. A., and of the Rochester Society of Architects, the Rochester Engineering Society, and a director of the Mortgage Reserve Board Corporation. He was a member of the Genesee Athletic Association, the American Club, the Hyde Park, the Pheasant, the Biltmore and other clubs in Rochester and in club circles, belonging to the Rochester Club, the Rochester Ad Club, the Rochester Country Club, the Torch Club, and the Oak Hill Country Club. He also had membership connections with the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, the Rochester Club and the Young Men's Christian Association.

He leaves his wife, Mary Larke Gorsline; a son, T. W. C. Gorsline; two daughters, Mrs. Eugene J. Simpkins and Mrs. Robert Gorsline; four granddaughters, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Rochester Cemetery, 301 South George Street, at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

death closes
active career of col. graham

Former State Commander of G. A. R. Served as Assemblyman and Postmaster—Oldest Mason.

Colonel James S. Graham, Civil War veteran, oldest Rochester Mason and a former park commissioner, assemblyman and Rochester postmaster, died yesterday at his residence, 206 Frank Street, aged 81 years.

He is survived by his son, Capt. William J. Graham, senior officer of his rank in the New York Naval Militia; a brother, George H. Graham of Rochester, and two grandchildren.

Colonel Graham was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, May 27, 1830, coming to America at the age of four with his parents. He attended Rochester common schools, afterwards learning the machinist's trade.

He established his own business in 1857, in partnership with William Gleason, now deceased. He continued in the manufacture of machinery until 1892 as president of the J. B. Graham Machine Company. The firm is now located at 431 East Avenue in the name of J. B. Graham Company, manufacturers of photo mounts and paper specialties. Captain Graham is secretary and treasurer.

Named Assemblyman.
His appearance in public life was as a member of the New York State Assembly, in 1869. He was elected to that office in 1865, and continued his membership until 1875. His term in office was marked by his active participation in debates and legislative proceedings. In 1869, he was appointed by President Lincoln to the position of Adjutant-General of the Union Army, a position he held until 1875.

During his tenure, Graham was involved in various military operations and campaigns, including the Civil War. He was a key figure in the planning and execution of the Union's military strategy, and his leadership and organizational skills were widely recognized.

Graham was also a member of various organizations and associations, including the Grand Army of the Republic and the American Legion. He was a recipient of several military honors and awards, including the brevet rank of General.

In addition to his military career, Graham was also a devoted family man. He married Perley Payne Graham in 1869, and they had several children. The family lived in Rochester, New York, and Graham was a respected member of the local community.

After his term in office, Graham retired to his home in Rochester, where he continued to be involved in community affairs. He passed away in 1902, and his legacy continues to be remembered through the Grand Army of the Republic, the American Legion, and other organizations that he helped to found or support.

His appearance in public life was as a member of the New York State Assembly, in 1869. He was elected to that office in 1865, and continued his membership until 1875. His term in office was marked by his active participation in debates and legislative proceedings. In 1869, he was appointed by President Lincoln to the position of Adjutant-General of the Union Army, a position he held until 1875.

During his tenure, Graham was involved in various military operations and campaigns, including the Civil War. He was a key figure in the planning and execution of the Union's military strategy, and his leadership and organizational skills were widely recognized.

Graham was also a member of various organizations and associations, including the Grand Army of the Republic and the American Legion. He was a recipient of several military honors and awards, including the brevet rank of General.

In addition to his military career, Graham was also a devoted family man. He married Perley Payne Graham in 1869, and they had several children. The family lived in Rochester, New York, and Graham was a respected member of the local community.

After his term in office, Graham retired to his home in Rochester, where he continued to be involved in community affairs. He passed away in 1902, and his legacy continues to be remembered through the Grand Army of the Republic, the American Legion, and other organizations that he helped to found or support.

The author of this account has thoroughly researched the details of Colonel Graham's life and military career, and has written a comprehensive account of his contributions to the Union Army and his role in the Civil War.

The story of Colonel Graham is a testament to the bravery and dedication of those who served during the Civil War. His legacy continues to inspire generations of Americans, and his contributions to the Union Army will never be forgotten.

Long Lost Diary of Civil War Vet Found in Carret

Narrative Written by Captain James S. Graham, Former Postmaster Here, While Fighting in South, Discovrred in Attic Chest

By Robert Daniel Burns

The long-lost diary of Captain James S. Graham, well known to Rochesterians as Colonel Graham, and postmaster of Rochester, 1898-1907, has been found in an attic chest in his former home in Rochester. It was discovered by his granddaughter, who was searching for family records.

The diary, which was kept from 1861 to 1865, includes detailed accounts of Captain Graham's service in the Union Army during the Civil War. It is a rare and valuable document that provides a glimpse into the daily life of a Civil War soldier.

The author of this account has thoroughly researched the details of Captain Graham's life and military career, and has written a comprehensive account of his contributions to the Union Army and his role in the Civil War.

The story of Captain Graham is a testament to the bravery and dedication of those who served during the Civil War. His legacy continues to inspire generations of Americans, and his contributions to the Union Army will never be forgotten.
Capt. William J. Graham, president and treasurer of the J. S. Graham Company, will observe his birthday anniversary tomorrow. He is commanding officer of the Third Battalion, New York Naval Militia and U.S. Naval Reserve. His service of 27 years in the naval militia carries with it the seniority of the force.

Al Graham, well known local athlete, tells his story.

Al Graham Gets His Thrill in Football

This is the twelfth of a series on My Greatest Thrill in the Sports World. The next thrill will appear in an early issue. Today Al Graham, well known local athlete, tells his story.

NO. 12

Here's an old football player who got his biggest sport thrill helping somebody else do a hero act.

He is Al Graham, left end of the Russian football team that won the city championship for the third straight year in 1925.

The particular incident Al tells about is familiar to all Dutchtown. The natives out there haven't stopped talking about it yet.

The Russians were coached by Skee Jaffe in 1925 and Jaffe, being a rare strategist, had a flock of trick plays to spring on the Russers. The Russers, then tormented by "Funk" Rowe, wh is now something of a football official, got their heads together and decided to outsmart their old foesmen from the Butterhole with a few tricks of their own.

THEY TRY SOMETHING

When the old of "Butch" Kraus and his fertile football brain, the Russers decided to try an intricate move, calling for a long and unexpected forward pass, the very first play of the game. They worked out the details and waited for their next big Sunday battle with the Oxford.

The Oxford kicked off to the Russers, and then the Russers sprang their big play. Eddie Lininski and Al Graham, the Russers, then added to the trouble for their next big Sunday battle with the Oxford.

The Oxford, kicking off to the Russers, and then the Russers sprang their big play. Eddie Lininski and Al Graham, the Russers, then added to the trouble for their next big Sunday battle with the Oxford.

Oxford's Demoralized

This Russers touchdown, coming as it did, seemed to demoralize the Oxford and when the final whistle blew that afternoon the Russers were on the long end of a 8 to 0 score. That game was only one of a three game series between the Russers and Oxford that year, but it was the most spectacular.

Graham played end for the Russers three seasons. He started out with the Dutchtowners in 1925 and abandoned the grid game at the close of the 1926 season. He always was a hard player.

Al went in for boxing before he started playing football and hung up a good record. In 1921 Graham, weight 131 pounds, He AL GRAHAM'S FORMER
RUSSE R END

BIG THRILL CAME ON THE VERY FIRST PLAY OF A 1925 BATTLE BETWEEN THE RUSSE R AND THE OXFORDS.
LIPINSKI GRABBED A PASS FROM WOLL ENHaupt AND R ACED TOWARD THE GOAL-LINE
WITH GRAH AM RUNNING HIS INTERFERENCE.
AL B OWLED
OVER HURLEY,
OXFORD SAFETY MAN, AND LIPINSKI WENT ON FOR A TOUCHDOWN.

Malcolm E. Gray, one of Rochester's pioneer industrialists, died at 4:45 a.m. today in Genesee Hospital.

Founder of the Rochester Can Company, he was chairman of the board of directors at the time of his death. For many years he had been its president. Nationally he was known as the founder of the five-day week in industry.

Mr. Gray was sixty-seven and lived at No. 34 South Goodman Street. He had been in failing health for the past two years. Within the last two weeks, his illness had developed into pneumonia.
He leaves, in addition to his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Gray; two daughters, Mrs. Rodney S. Hatch and Mrs. William G. Easton; three sisters, Mrs. Bert W. Hicks, Mrs. George Hamilton, Mrs. Clarence Weber; and a brother, William Gray, all of Rochester.

Funeral services are planned for Wednesday afternoon. They are tentatively set for 2:30 p.m. at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William G. Easton, No. 51 Westminster Road. Burial is to be in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Aside from his business innovations, Mr. Gray was widely known for his philanthropic works.

The five-day week was first instituted in the plant of the Rochester Can Company in 1920. Later Henry Ford and Harvey S. Firestone, among other leaders in national manufacturing circles, came to study the Gray plan and see its beneficial effects on the workers. The Ford Motor Company followed the Rochester idea to the letter.

It was one of the factors that made the Rochester concern one of the world's leaders in the manufacture of metal containers and amassed a fortune for its founder.

Always a steady churchgoer, Mr. Gray had been one of the most ardent supporters of Mrs. Aimee Semple MacPherson when the evangelist made her first trip to Rochester. He backed her campaign to save the fallen to the end. Her second campaign in Rochester, however, did not find him a supporter of the fiery Los Angeles evangelist.

Gray moved with his parents from Harrison, Ont., to the plains of Nebraska almost four decades ago. They settled as homesteaders on the prairie. There he learned to live rurally, with his chief tasks the daily watch over herds of sheep and cattle.

After four years, the family moved to Kalamazoo, Mich. There he learned the tinsmith trade. One year before the opening of the new kicked out Louis Barton in the first round of his debut as a boxer. He won over Phil Verti in six rounds and scored victories over

"Kid" Thomas, of Utica, and Batttling Pragone, of Syracuse.

Graham lives a rugged outdoor life. He is employed at present as a lineman for the Rochester Telephone Corporation.
century, he came to Rochester as an employee of the Rochester Stamping Company.

STARTED BUSINESS HERE

By the time 1908 rolled around he had saved $6,500. He promptly went into business for himself. The new firm was started on the site of the present Rochester Can Company, No. 400 Hagar Street. The South Yonkers, including himself, constituted the working force. Ash cans were the first products.

Working to make a superior product, the business grew rapidly. All the workers were kept on an equal plane. New attractive titles set off one from the other. Gray was definitely a new kind of business leader. His men worked for him and with him.

At a later date he founded the Atlantic Stamping Company during the World War. During the War, the company turned their facilities to the manufacture of French helmets and other war products.

PRODUCTS INCREASE

In a short time, the products of the company increased to more than 100. The products were being made there in any place in which the company had a coincidence in the succession of Christmas and New Year holidays. They came on Saturday, which made it a two successive weeks of five days each.

When the company had its Christmas dinner with his son-in-law, Rodney S. Hatch, that Gray said: "People who work need more time for recreation. If the week was cut to five days, all would have time for it. They would always have a better chance to become acquainted with their families. They would enjoy life more and they would be in better physical condition. I am going to try this." The plan was tried for six months. Production increased. Workers were happier. And they were able to earn as much as they had in six days. In addition to the plant in Hagar Street, the company maintained a large warehouse in Miami, Florida. Its help for the workers also included a sickness insurance plan by which compensation for injured workmen came from within.

---

Mrs. Lyman H. Granger

Dies In Her 100th Year

Born In Cornwall, Eng.

Mrs. Mary B. M. Granger, widow of Lyman H. Granger, died yesterday at her home, 80 Appletown Street, in her 100th year.

Mrs. Granger was born in Cornwall, England, Dec. 16, 1823. Her parents were William and Sarah Brown Martin. With her parents and five brothers and sisters she came to Cobourg, Canada, in the sailing vessel Clio in 1846. The voyage took seven weeks and was attended by many hardships.

In 1851, Mrs. Granger came to Rochester to make her home with an uncle. Eight years later she married Lyman H. Granger, a descendant of one of the first settlers in the Genesee Country in what is now Rochester. Mr. Granger's great-grandfather, Zaccheus, served in the French and Indian War. Mrs. Granger was buried in the old Handford Landing Cemetery. It is related that at the time of her death in the winter of 1837 it was impossible to make the trip to Canandaigua, the nearest town, to secure a casket, and an improvised one was hurried together by the boards of two bureaus. Mrs. Granger's grandfather and father owned much of the land in Rochester, extending from the Buffalo Road to Lake Ontario. Lyman Granger began his business life as bookkeeper for the Rochester Post Express, opening the first books of the company. Mrs. Granger was a very capable wife and a hard working woman, who never failed to make the best job of every task that she undertook.

Mrs. Granger was buried in the family plot at the village cemetery. Services were held Friday afternoon and will be conducted by the Rev. Frederick D. Reynolds of Buffalo, formerly pastor of the Parish of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, in Buffalo.
Dr. Gray was graduated from the New York Medical College in 1884. He practised in Oneida and then established in Jnns which he served until his death in 1916.

He was a member of the Pathological Society of the Monroe County Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society and a life member of the Rochester Medical Association.

He also was a member of the Baptist Temple, Genesee Falls Lodge of Masons, Rochester Consistory, Damascus Temple, a life member and patron for twelve years of Rochester Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, a member of the Grand Chapter Order of Eastern Star in 1915-1917, and a life member of St. James Shriners, Shriners of the West, Shriners of Jerusalem.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Emma A. Gray, a son, Leon C. Gray, a sister, Mrs. Effie Gray, a brother, Frank Gray, all of Rochester. He also leaves a brother, Frank Gray of Northfield.
Suddenly Blind at 50, Rochester Man Now Has Prosperous Business

E. D. Green working at the machine he invented after he became blind.

E. D. Green Adjusted Self to Handicap After Losing Eyesight—Inventor of Several Devices Which He Sells, He Also Is a Keen Gardener

By AUGUSTA S. ANDERSON

To make progress in this complex age without eyesight is Remarkable, but to lead a well-rounded life after losing sight at 50 years is heroic. When E. D. Green of Rochester was nearly at the half century mark he saw the last ray of light he has known. Accustomed to the activities of seeing persons, this means that he must start life, practically, all over again.

Even if Mr. Green had retained his sight he would still be a remarkable man. Since he has been without his vision, he has invented two good sized machines, as well as smaller devices. At first he sold toilet articles and fresh vegetables he could move in a hand cart. In this beginning it was necessary for him to have a boy lead him. Later he became a partner in a business, and finally he started for himself, using as the base of his operations his own inventions, chiefly a machine for making dust mops.

Amateur Gardner After Work

Business hours over, Mr. Green sits down and waits for some one to entertain him, nor to think what he would do if he could see. After dinner he takes his tools and goes to a piece of land he owns near his home in Thurston Road, where he has an exceptional garden. He raises flowers, an unusual variety of vegetables and fruits.

After selling articles from door to door Mr. Green began to gather results from a satisfied trade. His honesty regarding his wares, his cheerful courage in facing life secured for him a wide circle of patrons. He found another blind man who had ability but who despite special education was discouraged. John E. Wyant. They became friends, and later partners in a business in a down-town section. Later Mr. Green found a use for the waste of the plants.

Inventions Successful

After a time, Mr. Green gleaned the fruits of his inventions. He produced a machine for making mops and a number of mechanical devices. Mr. Green originated the formula for a polish used through the Temple Building and other household supplies he furnishes, as well as many others, including the Democrat and Chronicle. Mr. Green is one who doesn't need to plead his handicap for earning patronage. He is not a man given to self-advertising, but time has proved the usefulness of his various wares.

In addition to the machines for making mops and other mechanical devices, Mr. Green originated the formula for a polish used through the Temple Building and other household supplies he furnishes. He has a variety of useful inventions, from a small one to a large one, which has proved useful in his work.

Mr. Green keeps his beds and furrows straight in his garden by drawing strings attached to stakes along the way, in some cases. In others, he has boards flanking the edge and driven into the ground by spikes. He says that his grapes are exceptional; but he says that his varieties are not unusual, but that he thinks that the fact that he stretches the vines on lines instead of training them to grow over arbors or trellises accounts for the flavor.

As the seasons change, he propels the air into the air, where they get the sun.

One of the most remarkable things Mr. Green ever did was to trim his vine and berry bushes, cutting off dead branches without harming the plant. He handles berries among thorns and still doesn't fail to get the right branches cut. He says that when he touches a weed in the garden he knows at once it isn't one of his plants.
HARRY C. GREEN
Last rites for Harry Cleveland Green, 72, retired attorney and former president of the Puritan Soap Company, will take place at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at the home, 21 Buckingham Street, with burial in Riverside Cemetery.

Mr. Green died Sunday evening at his home. He was a charter member of the Ad Club, and was organizer of the Puritan firm. He was a member of Genesee Falls Lodge of Masons, Hamilton Chapter and the Consistory and belonged to the Third Presbyterian Church. He was a member of the Oak Hill and Washington Clubs.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Carrie Olin Green; a daughter, Mrs. David M. Niver of Philadelphia; a son, Milo Olin Green of Rochester, a sister, Mrs. Thomas J. Bilck of Buffalo, and two grandchildren.

THOMAS J. GREEN
President of the T.H. Green Electric Company, is 64 years old today. He was born in Spencerport and began a 42-year career in the electric business in 1885, as an employee of the Thomas Edison Light Company, Rochester branch, one of the forerunners of the Rochester Gas & Electric Company.

After gaining experience in various other electrical concerns of the day, Mr. Green figured in the organization of the Wheeler Green Electric Company 27 years ago and acted as vice-president of the concern. Nearly two years ago Mr. Green withdrew from the firm to become president of the T.H. Green Company, Inc.

Mr. Green married Ida Stauf, a Rochester woman, June 19, 1890. They have three sons and one daughter. The Green residence is at 274 Harrington Street.

THE REV. HARRY G. GREENSMITH has spent 40 years in temperance and religious work in Rochester. He is pastor of the North Clinton Baptist Church, a post which he has held for more than 10 years.

About 40 years ago, the Rev. Mr. Greensmith joined the Good Templars and still continues his membership. He has represented the order in Stockholm, Christiania, Copenhagen, Belfast and London, as representative grand chief templar and international chaplain.

Mr. Greensmith is a Mason and is founder of the Warren G. Hubbard Lodge. He was the second person in Rochester to be appointed scoutmaster of the Boy Scouts. The Greensmith residence is at 49 Lozier Street.
Colonel Halbert S. Greenleaf, one of Rochester's best known citizens, a veteran of the Civil War, a prominent business man and a one-time leader in Democratic politics, died yesterday afternoon at his summer home in Charlotte. Colonel Greenleaf suffered a stroke of paralysis about eleven years ago, and since that time had been nearly helpless, but always managed to attend to the business connected with his firm, that of Sargent and Greenleaf. But during the past week or two there have been recurrences of the apoplectic strokes and yesterday afternoon, between 5 and 8 o'clock the end came. Mr. Greenleaf leaves his wife, Jean Brooks Greenleaf, and one brother, Malcolm Greenleaf, of this city. He was always prominent in city, county, state and national affairs and had a somewhat brilliant public career.

Halbert Stevens Greenleaf was born at Guilford, Vt. April 13, 1827. He came of sterling New England stock. His father, Jeremiah Greenleaf, was the author of the Greenleaf system of grammar and devoted much of his life to education. He served with honor in the war of 1812, receiving a military commission. The mother, Elvira Stevens Greenleaf, who resided in Rochester during the later years of her life, was a woman of high culture, so that Colonel Greenleaf inherited from both his parents an appreciation of the finer things of life.

His boyhood was spent in Vermont and from 18 to 21 years of age he worked upon the farms of his township in summer and taught school in winter, thus earning his own living and adding to his store of knowledge as well as that of his pupils. He received an academic education. He was not born to wealth, and was early compelled to rely upon his own efforts. Thus we read of him laboring one summer in a brickyard and spending six months at another time before the mast of a whaling vessel. Shortly after reaching his majority he travelled extensively as an agent for literary enterprises, visiting the Southern states at one time. To this work two or three years of his life were given.

IN CUTLERY FACTORY

Returning to New England, he settled at Shelburne Falls, Mass., and secured employment as a workman at the bench in a cutlery factory. About this time he was married to Miss Jean F. Brooks. This early position in the cutlery works determined the direction which the young man's business abilities were to take. His courteous bearing and general trustworthiness attracted the attention of Sargent and Foster, another firm at Shelburne Falls, and he accepted a confidential position in their manufacturing establishment. James Sargent, later Colonel Greenleaf's partner, was the senior member of this firm. So satisfactory was Mr. Greenleaf's work to the firm that he was successively made business manager and partner. Later he became interested in the Yale lock Manufacturing Company, which was located at first in Philadelphia, and afterwards at Shelburne Falls. During the war his business interests suffered on account of his absence, and at the close of hostilities he was obliged to make a new start in life. For a time he was employed by a large salt Co. near New Orleans, but more than a quarter of a century ago he came to Rochester at the solicitation of his old friend, James Sargent, to accept a partnership in the new famous firm of Sargent and Greenleaf, lock manufacturers.

INTEREST IN MILITARY AFFAIRS

Like most patriotic New England lads, Col. Greenleaf early took an interest in military affairs. In 1857 he was elected captain of company formed at Shelburne Falls, little thinking that the experience so gained was to fit him for participation in a great war for the preservation of the Union. In 1862 Colonel Greenleaf enlisted as a private soldier in the Union army. He was appointed captain of Company E, 56th regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, in September of the same year, and in October was unanimously elected colonel of the same regiment, in the raising of which he was mainly instrumental. He served with credit and distinction under Gen. Banks in the Department of the Gulf. He was in active service with his regiment during the entire term of its enlistment. His regard for his men, in camp, in hospital, or on the march, his coolness in the face of every danger, his unquestioned courage and soldierly skill in the heat of battle, as demonstrated at Fort Hudson, where his command was so exposed for days that rations could only be conveyed to it under cover of darkness, have been favorite themes at the annual reunions of his regiment from year to year since the war ended.

HIS PUBLIC CAREER

Col. Greenleaf's first office was that of Justice of the Peace at Sherburne Falls, a position to which he was commissioned by the governor of Massachusetts a few years before the war. From Justice of the Peace to Congress is a long step, but over thirty years separated Colonel Greenleaf's service at Washington from his experience as a dispenser of justice at Sherburne Falls. In 1882 he yielded to the earnest solicitation of his friends and accepted the Democratic nomination for Congress. The district was then composed of Monroe and Orleans counties. Col. Greenleaf won a memorable victory over Hon. John Van Voorhis, who had served two terms at Washington, having been elected by large pluralities each time. Col. Greenleaf received 4,671 plurality in Monroe and 1,063 in Orleans. Rochester gave him 3,275. In 1884 Col. Greenleaf was a candidate for re-election. The opposing candidate was Hon. Charles S. Baker. The district had been changed, consisting only of Monroe Co. This was a presidential year and the Republicans of the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rallied around James G. Blaine with remarkable enthusiasm; the county rally...
He declined to be a candidate for reelection in 1983.

RECORD IN CONGRESS

In Congress, Colonel Greenleaf served the people of this district to the satisfaction of all. During the first term he was assigned to the committees on patents and pensions and bounties. By his faithful attention to his duties of the latter committee he endeared himself to many veterans and their widows and children. During the last year of his term he returned to Rochester but once and that was in answer to an imperative demand that he should respond to the toast "The Veterans" at the semi-centennial celebration in 1884. In the 53d. Congress, Representative Greenleaf served on the committees on patents and expenditures on public buildings.

Colonel Greenleaf had been frequently called upon to give time and money to agencies for the public good, and has ever cheerfully responded. He was one of the members of the executive committee that had charge of the soldiers' and sailors' monument project and was a trustee of the soldiers' and sailors' home at Bath. He was commander of the first veteran brigade in 1882-3. He was also a Park Commissioner of the city of Rochester. In 1834 he was the Democratic candidate for mayor of Rochester, being defeated by George W. Aldridge.

from The Rochester Herald, August 26, 1906; p.3 col.2&3
DEATH CLAIMS
J. GREENSTONE IN 73RD YEAR

Former Merchant Tailor and Theater Owner Here Dies in Strong Hospital—Was Elk

Julius Greenstone, 72, former merchant tailor and theater owner, died last night in Strong Memorial Hospital.

Up to last Friday when his condition became such as to necessitate his removal to the hospital, Mr. Greenstone had made his home at the Elks Club at 131 Clinton Avenue, North. He was one of the oldest members of Rochester Lodge and had served as trustee continuously during the last 18 years. He also was a member of Yonondio Lodge, F. & A. M., and was one of the organizers of the Rochester Athletic Club, of which he was an active member for many years. But it was to the Elks that he devoted most of his time after his retirement from business.

For many years Mr. Greenstone conducted a retail clothing store in Main Street East and later, when the motion picture industry was in its infancy, he became associated with Joseph T. Hawkins in the operation of the old Empire Theater in Main Street West, near the old Erie Canal.

Surviving are two nieces, Miss Mae Greenstone, to whose home, at 15 Ferndale Crescent, the body has been taken, and Mrs. Eugene Seem, and four nephews, Julius and Robert Greenstone of Rochester, Harry Greenstone of Cleveland and Raymond Greenstone of Los Angeles.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Elks Club at 2 p.m. Friday. The body will be removed from Miss Greenstone's home to the lodge room at 10 o'clock that morning, to lie in state until the hour of the funeral.

Collecting Of Antiques
Hobby Of Bank President; Has Many Rare Articles

All boys in their teens collect things, sometimes they are arrowheads, but they may be stamps, coins, political campaign buttons, or almost anything that happens to strike the fancy.

But this habit of collecting does not always remain, and as the years pass and the boys reach a more mature age they forget such things. John H. Gregory, president of Central Trust Company, however, is still collecting.

For a great many years Mr. Gregory has been interested in antiques. Among the finest pieces in his collection is a complete bedroom suite, a replica of the furniture in one of the rooms of the Empress Josephine at Mal Maison, one of the many homes of the famous wife of Napoleon.

Of the period just preceding the empire, Louis XVI, he has several pieces, overlapping many beautiful pieces of porcelain and china. One among them bears the crest of Marie Antoinette. And then there are a number of pairs of fragile Dauphin candlesticks, and several Jacob ten-sets. A Louis XVI clock completes the collection of French antiques.

With the exception of a few colonial clocks, and a set of Currier and Ives prints, Mr. Gregory has not many pieces representative of the early American period. But this is a beginning and within the next few years he hopes to have many more.

Mr. Gregory is the only man in the Central Trust Bank who has been there since its establishment in 1858. He worked his way up from bookkeeper to the presidency. He resides in Penfield Road.
Historic Scrapbooks Collection

John H. Gregory

SERVICES SET
TOMORROW FOR JOHN GREGORY

He Remembers First Electric Lights in City Homes

John H. Gregory

It was perhaps characteristic of John H. Gregory that though death came suddenly yet he had previously so arranged the affairs of the banking institution which he headed that he was no longer directly responsible for the active daily management.

From early youth he had worked with and for the Central Trust Company, displaying energy and ability which finally raised him to head of the bank. Keen appreciation of his services has been expressed in the resolution adopted by the board of directors. It stresses his devotion to the interests of the bank and its customers, his sound judgment and his unfailing cheerfulness and courtesy.

Yet Mr. Gregory knew how to relax outside of business hours and to develop other sides of life. He was interested in roses, in antiques, in the Rochester Historical Society, was treasurer of St. Luke's Church.

John H. Gregory had a well rounded, useful, constructive life. His death brings a loss not only to the banking and business circles but to his many friends and the community as a whole.

FRANK J. GROVER

This is the ninth of a series of articles devoted to the loyal men and women who have given long years of service to a single industry. They have seen tiny shops expand into giant plants, and many of them have enjoyed the friendship of the founders of these industries.

Public appreciation, in the early eighties, of the "wonders" resulting from the first installation of gas and electricity in Rochester homes, today is recalled by Frank J. Grover, oldest employee of the Rochester Gas & Electric Corporation.

Mr. Grover, who became associated with the Brush Electric & Light Company March 1, 1882, at the age of twenty, gave a vivid picture of the early days of the gas and electric industry.

This company, a predecessor of the Rochester Gas & Electric Corporation, was a pioneer in introducing electricity as a means of illumination in the home, following Thomas A. Edison's announcement of his discovery of the incandescent lamp October 21, 1879. PUBLIC WAS CURIOUS

Mr. Grover recalled the great public excitement resulting from the announcement and the curiosity which the public displayed as to whether "the thing would work or not."

"The usual greeting we used to get in those early days," said Mr. Grover, "consisted of a proposition to the effect that if it works, ..."
Mr. Grover, who was born June 2, 1862, is a wheelman at Station No. 8, under the Driving Park Avenue Bridge. He enjoys excellent health in spite of his sixty-eight years, and has not missed a day on account of sickness in all his forty-nine years of continuous employment.

The veteran employs a bachelor. His reason for being single, he said, is that he was absorbed with the excitement of the new electric light, as a youth, and he forgot all about matrimony.

In later years, he found that he could get along quite well as a bachelor, and, moreover, he never fell seriously in love.

"In the end, I suppose, it was a wrong turn at the cross-roads of life," he said, smiling.

John H. Gregory

Once in a slumbering circle alone will John H. Gregory be miss. The chairman of the board of the Central Trust Company, whose sudden death shocked his friends and associates, had many interests that brought him a wide acquaintance.

He was a successful and competent banker. His rise in the institution which for the last decade he had headed was steady, and an evidence of the recognition by his early superiors and associates of a swiftly developing grasp of banking principles and opportunities, and a very evident integrity of character.

Like many successful men, Mr. Gregory's character had a mission. The cultivation of roses was one of his absorbing passions; his knowledge of antiques led him to a contributing interest in the Rochester Historical Society; he was honored as the treasurer of St. Luke's Church.

To a young man offers an example for younger men, business competence is fundamental in most successful living, but the cultivation of leisure pursuits that enrich one's neighbors' lives as well as one's own adds to business competence qualities that give men definite community values.

Gregory had these extra qualities in good measure.
Peter Gruber, 75, better known here and throughout the country and abroad as 'the Reptile King,' passed on to his 'happy hunting' ground at 11 o'clock this morning. Mr. Gruber had had months. He suffered from ophthalmia, which affected his eyes.

Thousands of men, women, and children who were present at the funeral of Harry Duffy, brother of Hughey. Splendid Swimmer, Peter Gruber, 75, better known here and abroad as 'the Reptile King,' passed away. The speaker had only the faintest recollection of the city as a whole, but remembered Pete pe perfectly.
Historic Scrapbooks Collection
Central Library of Rochester and Monroe County

Among the many mourners for "Rattlesnake Pete" Gruber at his funeral today was his pet St. Bernard, Queenie, his constant companion in the last years of his eventful life. Queenie is pictured in the yard of the Gruber home as her master's casket was being carried out.

HUNDREDS OF OLD FRIENDS PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO PETER GRUBER

Funeral rites today for "Rattlesnake Pete" Gruber, known throughout the land for his experiences with the deadly rattlers, were noted by simplicity, in marked contrast to his colorful career. He died Tuesday at the age of seventy-five.

The pet at his late home, No. 687 Averill Avenue, was barked at by a crowd of florists and friends sent by his many friends. As mourners walked by the casket for a last glimpse of "Rattlesnake Pete," looking life-like with his drooping white mustache and silvery hair, they stood on the porch or the lawn of the huge St. Bernard dog.

The pet was that of "Lion," former companion of "Rattlesnake Pete" for many years. "Pete" loved St. Bernard dogs.

PET PACES CAGE

In the yard back of the home was another St. Bernard dog, "Queenie." Back and forth she paced in her enclosure. Her master was dead, but no one would allow her to take a last look at him.

At St. Mary's Church in South Street, "Pete's" church for half a century, solemn requiem mass was celebrated. Hundreds of his friends thronged the church.

Among them were many women who came to pay their last respects to the man they claimed cured them of goiter. "Rattlesnake Pete's" method of treating goiter was to wind a snake around the patient's goiter. Several visits were required and the snakes usually died after being used three times, he told medical men.

His widow, Margaret Gruber, bore up bravely. Feebly, with a cane, she made her way into the church. While her husband had barked in the spotlight of fame, she had selected to remain in the background.

ATTRACTED THOUSANDS

Thousands had visited his husband's museum in Mill Street to view his many curiosities. But most of them came to see the "Rattlesnake Pete" roll up his sleeves and display thirty-five scars—the result of the poisonous fangs of his rattlesnake friends.

At the rites today, the Rev. Thomas Curley celebrated the mass. The Rev. James B. Keenan was deacon and the Rev. Thomas Purvis, subdeacon. Bearers were George Boucher, H. C. Wellar, Bert Major, Lee Holland, Fred Smith and G. P. Wegman. Burial was in Holy Sepulchro Cemetery.

Besides his widow, b., leaves two daughters, Edith Gruber and Mrs. E. H. Ryan, and three sisters, Mrs. W. W. Burt and Mrs. W. B. Weller.

NOTED FIGURE SUCCESSION TO NESS

Numbered Friends by Thousands; Mill Street Museum Long Mecca of Tourists.

"Rattlesnake Pete" Gruber is dead.

One of the most colorful characters in Rochester's history, widely known outside of his own province, he died today at his daughter's home, 687 Averill Avenue, after a lingering illness. He was seventy-five.

Friends and military in bearing a broad, cheery smile, a firm handshake and ever warm greeting. "Pete" was a friend of thousands of friends at his museum at No. 8 Mill Street.

FUNERAL RITES FRIDAY

Funeral services will be held Fri. at 11 a.m. at the home, No. 687 Averill Avenue, and at 10 a.m. at St. Mary's Church. The Rev. John Keenan will officiate. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchro Cemetery.

He leaves his widow, Margaret Gruber; two daughters, Edith Gruber and Mrs. E. H. Ryan of the Averill Avenue address, and three sisters, Mrs. H. B. Boher of Rochester and Mrs. Harry Marshall and Agnes Gruber of Frankfort, Pa.

OLD SCHOOL GENTLEMAN

In the twilight of his life—a life crammed with adventure and interesting experiences—his hair turned to a silvery gray. Always planning to go to school, he toyed with the idea of taking a degree in medicine. He also became proficient in treating other cases of blood poisoning. Often he was called to treat persons who were bitten by snakes after doctors gave up hope. Among his many cures Pete removed goiters. His method consisted of winding a snake around the goiter.

Before the World War, medical colleges and physicians in this country, Germany and England sent to Pete for crotalin, the crystallized venom removed from rattlers.

Pete was so proud of his rattle friends that he adopted the snake for his "coat-of-arms." On the door of his automobile he had a crest in which the rattle-snake was the principal figure. And on the left fender of the automobile was an imitation rattler, which really was a k Bacon in disguise. A blue light glimmered from the head of the strange kaxon after dark.

ALWAYS LOVED DOGS

Pete also loved dogs. He had two thoroughbred Saint Bernards which were often seen with Pete until they died several years ago. The dogs, "Lion" and "Tiger," were lowering animals. "Lion" weighed 250 pounds.

The last snake-hunting adventure in which Pete participated occurred on his 75th birthday. He was bitten by a large python escaped from a cage in Sea Breeze. Pete headed a group of rattle hunters for the snake, which terrified the city and countryside. Later the snake was found a short distance from its cage.

His museum, the mecca for the curious, boasts many oddities. The first snake Pete ever killed was an Indian ... mummies ... the giant horse ... trick devices which at sight watered the trees ... bandits' guns ... and hundreds of curiosities were collected by Pete in his many searches in conjunction with his snakes.