City's Lone GAR Veteran To Mark 100th Birthday

James A. Hard, Rochester's only Civil War veteran, will be feted Tuesday evening on his 100th birthday.

Festivities honoring Mr. Hard and his century-long life will begin at 7:30 in the Hotel Seneca ballroom under the auspices of the Abraham Lincoln Association of Rochester.

Before an audience made up of representatives of virtually every veteran organization in this area, city officials, and department heads of the Grand Army of the Republic, Mr. Hard, department inspector of the GAR, will receive a floral piece of 100 roses from the Abraham Lincoln Association, a flagstaff from the Monroe County Sons of Union Veterans, and a cigar shower from city and county veteran groups.

JAMES A. HARD

Among the guests will be Edwin Morric, Elmira, department commander of the GAR, and Robert M. Round of Ripley, assistant adjutant general and chairman of administration of state department. Robert McMahon, Lincoln society president, is chairman of the celebration. Members of Company B, Sons of Union Veterans, Syracuse, and Company C, Batavia, will be present.

Resides with Daughter

Mr. Hard, who lives with his daughter, Mrs. Albert Wilson, 31 Rosalind St., was born in Windsor and lived as a boy in Windsor. At the age of 20 he moved to Dryden, where on Apr. 18, 1861, he enlisted in the Union Army, Company E, 32nd New York State Volunteer Infantry.

He served with that unit until the close of the Civil War, fighting at the first battle of Bull Run, Yorktown, South Mountain, Fredericksburg and Antietam. After the war he returned to Windsor, and in 1884 came to Rochester where he has lived ever since. As a contractor and builder he had offices in the old Reynolds Arcade until his retirement in 1937 at the age of 96.

A walking refutation of the "no smoking" theory, Mr. Hard began to smoke at the age of 13—cigars, at that. He's smoked ever since, and today is an inveterate cigar chain smoker. Since his eyesight began to fail him he has relied on the radio for most of his news of current events. He likes to talk over the telephone, is fond of ice cream, and takes short walks nearly every day.

Grandson in Army

Although four generations of the Hard family will be present at the birthday party, Mr. Hard's grandson, James Ekston, who has been his escort in public appearances, will be among the missing. Ekston is a private in Company B, Medical Battalion, at Camp Claiborne, La.

Only four Boys in Blue besides Hard, remain in Monroe County. They are Henry Lilly, Chill Avenue, Gates, who was 100 years old last February; John A. Roe of Greece, Frank Bissell of Scottsville and Frank Van Alstyne of Webster.

Final Rites Set Today For Daniel Hysner

Final rites for Daniel C. Hysner, 35, a National Guardsman for 40 years, will be conducted at 2 p. m. today at Ingmire and Nagle Funeral Parlor, 137 Chestnut St.

Mr. Hysner, who died of a heart attack on a fishing trip at Cape Vincent Tuesday (Aug. 24, 1943) enlisted with the 108th Separate Company in 1898 and served subsequently as color sergeant with the 8th Separate, Company I, 3rd Infantry; 2nd New York Company, National Guard, and Company A of the 104th Collection and 104th Sanitary Companies of the 102nd Medical Regiment. He saw service on the Mexican border in 1916. A year ago he terminated 24 years as an employe of the Main East Armory and became a guard for the Rochester Ordnance District.

He leaves his wife, Imogene H.; three sons, Daniel, Howard and Leonard; two brothers, George and John, and eight grandchildren.

City's One Civil War Veteran Elected GAR State Head

One-hundred-year-old James A. Hard, the city's only Civil War veteran, yesterday was named state commander of the Grand Army of the Republic.

He was elected by the seven veterans attending the Utica encampment, the 76th of the GAR. Hard, who will be 101 July 15, was the oldest man attending the convention which nowadays is given over more to the doings of the Sons and Daughters of Union Veterans and allied groups.

JAMES A. HARD

Hard is the third Rochester and Monroe County man to hold the post of state commander in the last five years. In 1937, the late Joseph Bauer was named commander and in 1940 Henry Lilly of Chili became state head of the dwindling body of men who fought in the blue of the Union Army.

The centenarian, who was department inspector, succeeds Edwin Morris, Elmira. Other officers named along with Hard were: Senior vicecommander, John W. Hays, Brookview, and junior vicecommander, Frank E. Cooley, Rensselaer. Mrs. Henrietta Bodge, Lackawanna, was named president of the Ladies of the GAR. The 1943 convention will be held in Syracuse.

Hard is one of four Monroe County veterans, the others residing outside the city limits. He lives at 31 Rosalind St. and served at Bull Run, Yorktown, West Point, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, South Mountain, and the bloodiest of them all, Antietam. He was born at Victor and enlisted at 20 with Company E, 37th New York Volunteer Infantry. At one time he was national commander of the Union Veterans' Union, an organization similar to the GAR.

Hard Elected State Leader Of GAR

JAMES A. HARD, Rochester's only living Civil War Veteran, was the oldest delegate at the 76th annual State Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Utica today.

HARD Oldest

Hard, who will be 101 July 15, was one of only seven who gathered to talk over the War of the States in the shadow of a war to free half the world from slavery.

This afternoon he was elected state commander.

Monroe County boasts two other living GAR members: Frank Bissell, Scottsville, 96; and Henry Lilly, Coldwater, who was 101 Feb. 23. John A. Roe, GAR veteran formerly of Greece, has moved to Le Roy. He is 98.

Bank's Officers Mark Employe's Golden Jubilee

Fifty years of service at the Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Company brought its reward from officers of that bank yesterday to Charles Allen Hyland, 95 Lap- ham St.

When Hyland, now 73, reported to his post as vault attendant, he was greeted by Robert C. Watson, chairman of the board of directors, who himself marked his 50 years connection with the bank in 1939, and George H. Hawks, president. Watson presented Hyland an illumined resolution of the board of directors, bound in blue leather and lettered in gold, expressing gratitude of the officers for his "unselfish labors in our behalf" and congratulating him on his record. He also was presented a purse.

CHARLES A. HYLAND

Hyland entered the employ of the bank Apr. 17, 1892, as an assistant engineer. The bank at that time was located at 25 Exchange Street, and was the first trust company in the city. It also was the first safe deposit organization in the city, and 31 years ago Hyland was selected to become the bank's vault attendant.

In this role he has opened and closed the massive gates to the big deposit vaults more than a million and a quarter times and has admitted to the treasure chest many of the city's outstanding citizens.

Just in Passing

If you are bewailing your hard lot and mounting years, take a tip from James A. Hard, age 102, who says he has enjoyed the last two years more than the preceding hundred. Mr. Hard, Rochester's only remaining Civil War veteran, enjoyed himself thoroughly at his birthday party Thursday night, sponsored by the Monroe County Council, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War. He took part in the battles of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, South Mountain and Antietam, and right now he says: "Anything we can do to finish Hitler is 100 per cent with me." Bravo and more happy birthdays, Mr. Hard.

Venerable Veteran of '61 Winning Battle of Years

TWENTY

FORTY-TWO

SEVENTY

TODAY

James A. Hard, the city's only living Civil War veteran, reaches the century mark tomorrow. Hale and hearty as he rounds out 100 years of life, he still remembers vividly his many war experiences. In the first picture at the left he is shown as he was at 20 when, he said, "I didn't know any more about war than a baby." He was a teamster in Dryden, N. Y., then, the same year he enlisted with the Union Army and marched away. At 42, he came to Rochester and settled down as a building contractor, with offices in the Reynolds Arcade, wore the full mustache, popular with men of his time, still sported it at 70, as shown in the third picture from left above. The year before that, he had been elected national commander-in-chief of the Union Veterans' Union, composed only of men who saw battlefield service in the Civil War. Today, full of years and memories, he still wears a mustache, now trimmed in accordance with current style. He contentedly smokes a corn-cob pipe, says he'd "just as soon" live another 100 years.

Retired Coal Dealer Dies in Honeoye Falls

Otis L. Humphrey, 79, retired coal, lumber and produce dealer, died at his home in Honeoye Falls at 3 a. m. today (Apr. 21, 1942).

A native of Victor, Mr. Humphrey came to this village in 1884 and had been a resident here ever since. He retired as president of the E. M. Upton Company here in 1936.

He was a member of the village board for 12 years, a trustee and member of the board of the Methodist Church for nearly 40 years, and a trustee of the Honeoye Falls Cemetery Association and member of the Republican-County Committee for 25 years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Martha A. Humphrey, and two sisters, Mrs. Charlotte Wells and Mrs. Harriet Cornford, both of Victor.

Funeral services will be held from the home at 3 p. m. Friday. Burial will be in Honeoye Falls Cemetery.

Hardest Years Finished; Veteran Marks First 100

James A. Hard, Rochester's only living Civil War veteran, whose age will run into three figures tomorrow, thinks Americans "ought to stay at home and protect our own country."

But, on the eve of his 100th birthday, he confessed today with a chuckle: "I'd like to go over there and shoot Hitler."

Mr. Hard knows what shooting is like. He didn't when he joined Co. E, 37th New York Volunteers Infantry as a 20-year-old Dryden teamster in '61. "I didn't know any more about war than a baby," he recalls. "They told us we were going to Washington and have a lot of fun, and be back in about three months."

Rev. G. B. Huntington Dies in Connecticut

The Rev. Dr. George B. Huntington, native of Rochester and for nearly 40 years treasurer of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, died Wednesday (Mar. 3, 1943) at Torrington, Conn., after a long illness. He was 69.

Dr. Huntington was graduated from the University of Rochester and the Rochester Theological Seminary, now Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. He leaves his wife. The funeral will be held at Torrington tomorrow.

What actually happened was "pretty tough fun," the soldier learned at the battles of First Bull Run, Yorktown, West Point, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, South Mountain and the bloodiest of them all—Antietam. He shuddered even today as he told of seeing comrades falling and of always expecting the next bullet would find him. "It was awful," he declared.

Charles B. Hudson Dies in Pinehurst, N. C.

Word has been received here of the death in Pinehurst, N. C., Saturday (Apr. 11, 1942) of Charles B. Hudson, 83, member of the old Rochester shoe firm of Byrnes, Dugan & Hudson, one of the foremost manufacturers of women's and children's shoes in the '80's. Mr. Hudson had lived in Pinehurst since his retirement in 1902.

The veteran has never succumbed to the temptation to glorify his war experiences. "I've often heard Memorial Day speakers tell the crowd how we veterans fought and weren't afraid," he said today. "We fought all right—but I never went into battle but what I was scared stiff from start to finish."

Proud that he was one of the volunteers of '61 and not a paid soldier of the later years of the war between the states, Hard has made friends with former enemies at Blue and Gray reunions at Antietam and Gettysburg anniversaries. "I'd walk up and ask 'em if they were the ones that shot at me," he laughed. "They're good men and we got along fine."

Hard was born at Victor, the son of a Western New York pioneer, Alanson Pratt Hard and a Rochester native, Martha Frost Hard. His father drove stage from Rochester to Mt. Morris and Canandaigua before 1835.

Hard spent his boyhood at Windsor, near Binghamton, and his youth at Dryden where he enlisted at the start of the Civil War. He shook hands with Lincoln at a White House reception in '61, saw the president twice more, once when Lincoln reviewed troops in Virginia. "He was a comical-looking fellow on horseback," says the man who cast his first vote for Lincoln.

Party at Hotel

One-time national commander-in-chief of the Union Veterans' Union and now State Department Inspector of the G. A. R., Hard will be feted at a 100th birthday party at Hotel Seneca ballroom tomorrow night. It will be a public reception sponsored by the Abraham Lincoln Association, composed of groups allied with the G. A. R. Local veterans' organizations will give a "cigar shower" to the man who has smoked them since he was 15.

Advice on how to live to be a hundred? The answer came quickly from Mr. Hard. "Just live sober," he suggests. "People today are just the same as they always were except they're in too much of a rush. They ought to take it easier."

Sleeping like a baby at night and eating three big meals like a hired man every day, Hard lives with a daughter, Mrs. Alberta Wilson, 31 Rosalind. His eyes won't stand reading any more but he listens a lot to the radio. As for living another 100 years, he says "I'd just as soon."

apartment house in East Avenue at Goodman Street, were held in Miami this afternoon. Burial arrangements will be made later.

Mr. Headley, who died Wednesday night (Feb. 25, 1942) in Coral Gables, Fla., his home for the last six years, was the designer and builder of two of the first apartment houses on Rochester's East Side, the Oxford and the Vassar.

He was one of the founders of the Rochester Tennis Club and also was an enthusiastic golfer, being a member of several clubs around Rochester, including Oak Hill.

His battle to build an eight or nine-story East Avenue apartment started in 1918 after his purchase of the Goodman Street site. He paid some $50,000 in carrying charges on the property during his legal struggle against restrictions.

In 1935 he prophesied the eventual doom of East Avenue as a beauty site, and claimed that if restrictions were removed several million dollars worth of apartment houses would be built, providing the city a valuable tax asset.

He leaves his wife and two sons, Jack Headley, Miami, and Robert T. Headley, Rochester.

John Hedges, Funeral Director, Dies

John M. Hedges, 54, of 141 Scio St., widely known funeral director, and club man, died Thursday (Mar. 26, 1942) in Arizona after a long illness, it was learned here today.

He was first associated in business in 1912 with Frank M. Hoffman, taking over the concern entirely when Mr. Hoffman died in 1923.

He was a member of the Alhambra and Elks, Rochester Oak Hill, Ad. Moose and 11 O'clock clubs as well as the National Funeral Directors Association.

Report Places Car At Fatality Scene

Voluntarily reporting to the county jail today, Harlow V. Root, 46, of Henrietta, advised that his car had hit an object he thought to be a dog at about the time and place Christopher Herman, 32, was fatally injured in Scottsville Road, Tuesday evening.

After telling his story to Chief Deputy Ray O'Loughlin, Root was taken to the district attorney's office for questioning. No charge was placed against him. The sheriff's office will continue its investigation.

Felt Something Hit

Root, a Rochester Telephone Corporation repairman, said that he felt something hit against his car shortly after 6 p. m. Tuesday night, at about the same spot where Herman was found dying about two hours later. Thinking he had hit a dog, Root said, he stopped his car and went back to investigate, but could find nothing.

Yesterday morning when he parked his car in St. Paul Street, he noted a big dent in his fender and saw a spot of blood on the car. When he got home last night, he read an account of Herman's death in The Times-Union, and decided he had better tell authorities his story, he said. He took his car to the jail this morning.

Auto Blamed

An autopsy showed that Herman's injuries were inflicted by an auto, Dr. Floyd S. Winslow, coroner's physician, reported yesterday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held for Herman tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at his home in Scottsville Road, Chili. Burial will be in Elm Grove Cemetery.

S. Rae Hickok Hurt in Crash

DTC June 2, 1944

S. Rae Hickok, president of the Hickok Manufacturing Company, and his veteran pilot, Joseph C. Mirguet Jr., 22 Dake Ave., were injured at 6 p. m. yesterday when Hickok's brand-new twin-motored amphibian plane crashed in a forced landing near Fort Pierce, Fla.

At Fort Pierce Hospital it was reported that Hickok suffered a fractured right leg, crushed chest, broken hand, lacerations and shock. His pilot suffered a fractured right leg and arm, a possibly fractured skull and a severely lacerated neck. Mirguet's condition was reported serious.

JOSEPH C.
MIRGUET JR.

The crackup occurred at Indrio, four miles north of Fort Pierce, as the plane nose-dived from an altitude of 50 feet into Indian River. Fishermen rescued the pilot and passenger, rushing them to the hospital.

Hickok, an enthusiastic air traveler, hunter and angler, was en route to Cat Cay, in the Bahamas. He took off from the Municipal Airport at 6 a. m. yesterday in the $27,000 Ranger-Grumann. Mirguet took delivery on the ship only Wednesday and flew it to Rochester after turning in the manufacturer's former plane, a land type Spartan.

A race by plane to his father's bedside was begun by 21-year-old Allen Hickok shortly after news of the accident reached here. In a chartered plane piloted by Ray Hylan he flew to New York in two hours and 35 minutes. At LaGuardia Field Eastern Air Lines held departure of a plane 24 minutes. Young Hickok arrived at 10:31 p. m., departed eight minutes later on the plane which was to make an unscheduled landing for him at Vero Beach, the nearest airport to Fort Pierce. Mrs. Mirguet left for the south by train last night.

Mrs. Hickok, friends here said, is in Quebec. Their other son S. Rae Jr. is in the Army, at Fort Dix.

At Fort Pierce fishermen who pulled the two men from their wrecked craft said they could give no cause for the crash as weather was favorable.

One fisherman reported the injured men were able to talk and remarked, "What went wrong?"

The plane, on its back in four feet of water half a mile from shore, was said to be a complete loss.

Inspectors W. A. Garrison and James N. Peyton immediately began an investigation into the cause of the accident.

Hoeing Lectures on Zamzam Sinking

Frederick W. Hoeing, son of the late Dr. Charles W. Hoeing, dean of the University of Rochester, will tell of the Zamzam sinking in a public lecture in Strong Auditorium, River Campus, at 8:15 p. m. today.

An instructor of history at William and Mary College, Hoeing was one of 24 members of the British-American Ambulance Corps headed for service in Africa aboard the Zamzam when it was sunk by a German raider. Taken to France with the entire crew and contingent of passengers, Hoeing was among the 140 Americans subsequently released by the German government.

Times-Union OCT 3 1941

Both men were removed by ambulance to the airport from Fort Pierce Hospital, where they were taken after Hickok's new $27,900 amphibian plane nosedived from an altitude of 50 feet into Indian River, four miles north of Fort Pierce, last Friday.

Hickok, who suffered shock and abrasions, was said to be "convalescing." Physicians termed "satisfactory" the condition of Mirguet, who received a compound fracture of the left leg, an elbow dislocation, severe shock and abrasions.

Cause of the crash has not been determined. The pair was en route to Cat Cay in the Bahamas from Rochester when the plane crashed. The Rochesterians were rescued from four feet of water by fishermen.

Zamzam Survivor Wins Rest

The quiet of his mother's summer home on Lake Ontario, near Union Hill, offered Frederick W. Hoeing peaceful contrast today to trying experiences at Nazi hands this year.

Hoeing motored home yesterday from New York City with his mother, Mrs. Charles E. Hoeing of 6 Portsmouth Ter. after he had arrived Friday from Lisbon aboard the U.S.S. West Point with other survivors of the raider-sunk Zamzam.

Hoeing was leader of a group of volunteers en route for South African service with the British-American Ambulance Corps when the Egyptian ship, Zamzam, was shelled in the South Atlantic Apr. 17.

The Rochesterian recounts without trace of bitterness the unpleasant wartime experience of being held prisoner by the Nazis. He and the other ambulance drivers, who had not already escaped, were unexpectedly freed July 21. Hoeing indicated he will return to New York soon.

Salesmen to Hear Zamzam Survivor

"The Zamzam Story," with description of the shelling of that ship in the South Atlantic, will be told by one of the survivors, Frederick W. Hoeing, a Rochesterian, at a meeting of the Salesmen's Club Friday noon at the Chamber of Commerce. Hoeing is the son of the late Charles Hoeing, dean of the Men's College, University of Rochester, and Mrs. Hoeing. Following his graduation from East High School he received his A.B. degree at Amherst College, where he was a member of Alpha Delta Phi and received a Phi Beta Kappa key. A teacher of history at William and Mary College, Hoeing obtained a leave of absence last spring to join the British-American Ambulance Corps. He became personnel director of the corps, organizing the group for the Zamzam trip.

Hoeing Waits in Biarritz For Passage Home, Kin Says

FREDERICK W. HOEING, son of Mrs. Charles Hoeing of 6 Portsmouth Ter., is staying at a hotel in Biarritz on the French coast, waiting for the U. S. State Department to arrange passage home, Mrs. Hoeing said today. She said she had a cable from him recently in which he said he was "uninjured and well" and that he and 21 other members of the British-American ambulance corps, taken off the ill-fated Zamzam by a Nazi surface raider, were staying in Biarritz. Twenty-nine women and children of missionary families who survived the sinking two months ago sailed from Lisbon for New York yesterday. There are 56 Zamzam survivors left in Lisbon, some having sailed for the U. S. previously.

2 Rochesterians To Enter Service In Middle East

His quest for adventure still strong, Frederick W. Hoeing, 33, of 6 Portsmouth Ter., yesterday disclosed he had enlisted in the American Field Service, and with another Rochester man, M. Truman Murphy, 42, of 1020 Lake Ave., will report in New York City Oct. 31 for service in the Middle East with the British Army.

Hoeing was a passenger aboard the Zamzam, carrying a unit of 20 ambulance drivers bound for Africa when it was sunk in the South Atlantic last Apr. 17 by a German sea raider. Taken aboard the raider, the crew and passengers, which included a group of missionaries also, were transferred to a supply ship which took them to France. He returned to the United States aboard the SS. West Point, sent to Portugal in July to bring back consular agents and stranded Americans.

Both Hoeing and Murphy, a freelance commercial artist, expect to sail for Cairo, Egypt, early in November for service with the British in the winter's campaign now opening in Africa. Murphy, son of Dr. and Mrs. Parker Murphy, served for a short time in the motor transport service in the first World War.

PRINTER DIES AS VICTIM OF HIT-RUN CAR

Compositor Meets Death Aiding Motorist

William B. Hunnewell, 53, compositor for a decade of The Democrat and Chronicle, lost his life yesterday because he tried to give a stranded motorist a helping hand. Death rode a hit-run driver's speeding sedan that struck down the printer as he aided Theodore Cipura, 22, of 1074 Maple St., change a tire near Hunnewell's home at 55 Chili Ave.

The mishap occurred, according to police, at 3:45 a. m., about an hour after Hunnewell had set a last war bulletin for yesterday's editions in this newspaper's composing room at Times Square.

Hunnewell had reached his home and prepared to retire, but sat around the radio to pick up late news broadcasts of the war when he heard a crash as two cars, one of them driven by Cipura, came together in the street. It was only a minor mishap and one driver moved away.

Carried 153 Feet

Cipura's car was thrown over the curb and a tire was flat. After the owner had worked on the car for some time and appeared to be having difficulty, Hunnewell called from the window of his home and asked if he could help. The offer was readily accepted and Hunnewell, clad in pajamas, had just crouched down in the rear of the disabled car when he was struck.

According to Cipura, who also was struck and injured by the fugitive driver's machine, he was bent over operating the jack when the collision occurred.

Hunnewell, standing at the left of Cipura's car in the westbound traffic lane was carried 153 feet on the front of the hit-run car before he was flung aside. He died of fractures of the skull and both legs in St. Mary's Hospital at 4:35 a. m.

Cipura, who escaped with hip and back injuries, last night was reported in satisfactory condition at the same hospital.

The only clue it was believed might lead police to identification of the hit-run car or its driver was supplied by Gil Stanley, 100 Chili, who said he was driving east in the avenue toward his home when he

Teacher Describes Plight in Nazi Camp

Much as he admires President Roosevelt, Frederick W. Hoeing trembled inwardly every time the President spoke last summer.

For Hoeing at the time, he informed the Salesmen's Club at the Chamber of Commerce, was a "guest" of the German government in occupied France, one of the surviving members of the British-American Ambulance Corps which was captured after the sinking of the Egyptian ship, the Zamzam, in the South Atlantic last spring.

"Every time the President spoke, we began to worry," Hoeing, tall and energetic, related.

The Americans received fair treatment from the Germans during their experience on land, he said, adding "the President had not made his Thursday night speech."

Hoeing kept the 100 club members and guests at close attention during his address, an informal recital that became highly dramatic despite obvious attempts to play down the incidents. He spoke of Hollywoodesque scenes and incidents but the horror of the experiences of the several hundred British and American Zamzam survivors, and the tense days under protective custody in France were realized by his audience.

Hoeing traveled some 5,000 miles in an overcrowded prison ship on which the passengers were badly fed and ill, and then spent long weeks in Spain and France before the State Department obtained the release of the ambulance drivers. The return was made on the Army Transport West Point, which also brought back American diplomats.

Hoeing, son of Mrs. Charles Hoeing, 6 Portsmouth Ter., joined the ambulance corps after obtaining a leave of absence from William and Mary College where he was a history instructor. He was introduced yesterday by Nicholas P. Kornet, club chairman.

Speaking before some 350 fellow club members and their guests at the Genesee Valley Club last night, Hoeing drew a vivid picture of life aboard the German prison ship for 62 days. He spoke for two hours in the crowded club, according to club officials, who announced

Nickname Traced To Bank Holiday

"Scrippy" Huetter will celebrate his 10th birthday Wednesday and hear once more of the bank holiday of 1933 that gave him his nickname.

"Scrippy's" real name is Henry William Huetter, but few people call him that. The day he was born, Mar. 10, 1933, was the day the famous scrip was issued, following the spectacular bank holiday announced Mar. 7. The nurses at Highland Hospital, where he was born, began calling the baby son of Henry T. Huetter, 189 Thorn-dyke Rd., "Scrippy" and the name has stuck ever since.

that it was on their request that he came from New York.

Kenneth E. Keating, special activities committee chairman, declared Hoeing's appearance was the "biggest club event of the year."

Hoeing will return to New York tomorrow to resume his work with the Ambulance Corps.

Part of his organization for peace will consist of an advertising program geared to his sales drive.

Traveled Far to Ease at Home

Frederick W. Hoeing, survivor of torpedoed ZamZam, was glad to rest in ease at summer home in Union Hill last night.

D & C AUG 4 1947
Rochester Zamzam Victim To Resume Ambulance Job

Home after a nerve-straining three-and-a-half months as "guest" of the Nazi government, tall, spare Charles W. Hoeing last night rejected as little more than a respite the luxuries of a summer on Lake Ontario.

The Rochester member of the British-American Ambulance Corps, whose journey to join the De Gaulle Free French Forces in Africa was interrupted Apr. 17 by a German raider, will return to New York in a few days to assist in carrying on the work he started.

Behind him were the terrifying experiences of shellfire aboard the Egyptian ship Zamzam that the raider sent to the bottom of the South Atlantic, long days and nights aboard a supply (he called it a "prison") ship, and the insecure, uncertain weeks in occupied France.

Plans To Go Back

But Hoeing, the son of Mrs. Charles E. Hoeing of 6 Portsmouth Ter., is going back to it immediately, at least as far as New York.

"There are some papers to be filled out," he explained as he lounged on the wicker furniture at the Hoeing summer home on the beach near Union Hill.

In the same vein, restricted only by the cautions of the State Department and his service, Hoeing related the entire experience, a story that came out concisely, logically, without trace of emotion or prejudice.

If within the framework of his tale, Hoeing felt any bitterness toward his captors, he carefully concealed it.

"They treated us well," he said. "Of course, there were privation. It was war."

The argosy of the William and Mary College instructor who joined the ambulance corps last winter began with the departure of the ancient Zamzam from New York Mar. 20. It closed with the return of the Army Transport West Point Friday.

Between were incidents that tested courage, stamina, patience.

"I was asleep on the deck with one of the other ambulance drivers when I heard the first shot," Hoeing related. "At first I thought it was more rain. Then I saw the dawn was bright and I heard, for the first time, the whistle of the shell.

"The first shot was short and the second was over the mark. The third hit the funnel and took out the radio, the blinker system and the whistle. I was on the starboard side, away from the raider, and did not see the firing."

The 100 or more women and children among the more than 300 passengers, mostly missionaries or their wives and children, entered the lifeboats first. The others followed. The firing stopped after 20 shells had been sent spinning toward the old ship, nine of which hit, two below the water line.

Hoeing, heavily clothed and totting a knapsack, went into his lifeboat, which promptly began to ship water through holes made by shrapnel. After 20 minutes it was awash but did not sink, permitting the passengers to hang onto the side. Soon the survivors were picked up by motorboats from the raider, a former merchant ship.

The next day, all were transferred to the supply or prison ship, where until June they lived in close quarters and shared meager and poor food.

terrified by Blockade
After running the British blockade, a terrifying period, the passengers were landed in occupied France and taken to Biarritz. Hopes for immediate release faded when the Nazis said the 21 ambulance drivers must remain behind. "We could discover no reason for this. For days we lived in hotels under surveillance. We tried to find out why we were held and when we would be released. We could learn nothing. The insecurity was the worst thing we faced." The food simply was "inadequate for an American."

Hopes of release, buoyed by reports they were to be moved, crashed into bitterness when the transfer orders took them through Paris to Lure, a little known French village. Three escaped en route, two reaching unoccupied France and the other surrendering, only to escape again from Lure.

Lure was a repetition of poor food, more guards, lack of communication with friends, frustration in attempts to learn how long they would be kept there or why they were detained. Three more escaped.

The period gave the Americans full opportunity to study the Nazi system at close range. They noted depression and confusion among their guards when news of the Russian invasion broke.

The release was dramatic. Officers marched into their Lure quarters, dismissed the guards and announced: "You are free." Then all hands celebrated.

Hoeing peered through cottage windows at the waters last night, then shook his head when asked if he would relax there for the next few months.

"I have to go to New York. There are papers to be filled out."

Hoeing, Zamzam Survivor, Due Home Tomorrow

Times-Union AUG 2 1941

FREDERICK W. HOEING

Safe on American soil again is Hoeing of Rochester, one of the survivors of the sinking of the Zamzam. He arrived in New York yesterday aboard the United States transport West Point.

Rest at Lake Summer Home Slated for Ambulance Corps Leader Rescued from Sunken Ship

A good rest at his mother's summer home on Lake Ontario, in which lurk no sea raiders or subsurface menaces, is anticipated by Frederick W. Hoeing, British-American Ambulance Corps leader rescued from the Egyptian steamer Zamzam when it was sunk in the Southern Atlantic on Apr. 17.

Hoeing will drive back from New York City tomorrow with his mother, Mrs. Charles Hoeing, of 6 Portsmouth, and will go directly to their summer home on the lakeshore near Union Hill, he said today in a telephone conversation with The Times-Union.

Willing to Try Again

For the present, he is making no plans on rejoining the ambulance corps for service in East Africa, although he would be willing to go again, he said.

Hoeing arrived in New York yesterday from Lisbon aboard the U. S. transport West Point with 18 other members of the corps. He was met by his mother and his friend, Dr. Richard L. Greene, professor of English at the University of Rochester.

When the Zamzam was sunk by a German raider, Hoeing was on his way to serve under Gen. Charles deGaulle in Africa. Transferred to the German ship Dresden, they were taken to Biarritz, where they were held for six weeks before being removed to Lure, near the German-Franco border.

Held Incommunicado

The group was held incommunicado by the Nazis and had no idea that arrangements had been made to send them home until a German officer walked into the dining room of their fourth class hotel on the night of July 21 and announced "You are free," Hoeing recounted.

Shortly after, they left for Paris, still unaware of their destination. There, he said, they sat all day in a railway station and left for the frontier that night.

"When we arrived at the Spanish border, we were delighted to see the diplomatic groups (American foreign service officers also brought back on the West Point) and it was only then that we learned we were to return on the West Point. We waited one day at the border and then proceeded to Lisbon.

'Trip Home Wonderful'

"The trip home was wonderful. After the Zamzam and the Dresden, the West Point was certainly a joy."

Hoeing became leader of the ambulance corps group after Francis Vicovari was wounded in the shelling of the Zamzam and William A. Wydenbruck-Loe became ill in Biarritz.

Vicovari's present whereabouts is unknown. When last heard from he still was in the hospital aboard the German surface raider Tamesis which sank the Zamzam.

Hoeing said the food served them while they were held by the Nazis was adequate but badly cooked. Buell reported that, after living in Germany, "the menus on board ship during the trip home were almost too good to be true."

Buell Called to Capital

Another to return on the West Point, Robert Buell of Rochester, United States consul at Leipzig, who had been in Germany since last January, planned to remain in New York a day or two and then go with the rest of the consular group to Washington, where they will report to the State Department before receiving their new assignments.

He was met by his two brothers, George and Edward Buell, of New York.

Frederick W. Hoeing Due to Sail for Home from Lisbon on July 25; Mother Hears of Good News

Frederick W. Hoeing of 6 Portsmouth Ter. and 20 other American drivers of the British-American Ambulance Corps who survived the sinking of the steamer ZamZam have been released by the Germans and will be allowed to return to this country, the State Department announced this afternoon.

The drivers are to return to the United States on the army transport West Point which will leave New York Tuesday with German and Italian consular officials ordered to leave this country. The West Point is expected to leave Lisbon on the return trip July 25 and to arrive in New York Aug. 1.

The captive drivers had been held at Biarritz, France, up to June 28 when they were taken to an undisclosed inland point. Two of their companions were released in May and returned home last month. Another, Francis J. Vicovari of New York, was wounded in the shelling of the ZamZam by a Nazi raider Apr. 17, and presumably is hospitalized.

Informed of her son's release, Mrs. Charles Hoeing, who is staying at her summer home on the lake shore near Union Hill, said, "Is it really true at last?" She will try to persuade Frederick to come to Rochester to spend the rest of the summer resting up at the lake shore, she said.

She has had only one letter, on June 3, from her son since he was landed at Biarritz from a merchantman to which the raider transferred the drivers, missionaries and travelers aboard the ZamZam. Since June 17, she said, the drivers have not been allowed to communicate with their friends and relatives by mail, as they had been permitted to do until then.

The German government, according to the State Department, has announced the ambulance drivers were being sent to Lisbon where the West Point will dock. Already released were 119 other American passengers on the ZamZam. British subjects were detained.

HOME FROM BURMA

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hobbs, back home after five years of missionary work in Burma, are shown with elephant statue they picked up in that land, now in the path of the war.

Burma Prefers British Rule To Japs, Says Missionary

Burma, the country where men wear skirts and women manage the finances, knows "on which side its bread is buttered" in the present Far Eastern struggle, according to a Rochester missionary who lived near Rangoon for five years.

The common man in this British colony invaded by the Japanese recognizes the benefits from English rule and prefers his present masters to the Nipponese, declared Cecil Hobbs, who with his wife, returned from Burma last year and is at present taking graduate work at the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School.

...though they don't approve of working with the Japanese as their premier, U Saw, has been accused of doing, they do back his desire for dominion status, the missionary said. And after the war (in the event of an Allied victory) the British will have to face the problem of Burma's independence, he believes.

Burma, Hobbs said, has no strong movement for independence such as India possesses, but even so, the people feel strongly about the issue and will call for a settlement from the English.

U Saw, the much-traveled premier who is in British custody for the duration, is no "unselfish patriot" but looks for his own gain, the missionary added.

Hobbs also conceded that U Saw's recent actions receive the approval of a number of Burmese political leaders and that Japanese pressure on them may have helped to close the Burma Road two years ago.

Going back to the country and its customs, Hobbs told of the economic and social independence of the women, so unusual in the Orient. Burmese women, for whom he has "a great respect," manage most of the business concerns and other affairs, outside of politics, he said.

This time of year is ideal for an invasion of the country, Hobbs declared, because the burning heat for which Burma is noted will not begin until March or April. If the Japanese are held off until June, the rainy season will assist the Allies by making the country impassable.

Burmese rain, said Hobbs, is similar in its effect to Russian snow.

DEATH CLAIMS A. S. HUGHES, 71, EX-LEGISLATOR

Seneca Falls Man Long Leader of Business Group

Seneca Falls—President of the Seneca Falls Business Men's Association since its organization and former assemblyman, Augustus S. Hughes, 71, died unexpectedly following a heart attack shortly before 8 a. m. yesterday (July 23, 1942) in his home, 15 Mumford St.

Close to 100 of his business associates and friends had been planning a dinner party in his honor for last night in the Armitage.

Mr. Hughes had been in falling health for some time and had planned to announce the dissolution of the Business Men's Association at the dinner party. He also planned to give a start off to the formation of a Chamber of Commerce here, plans for which have been underway for some time.

Born in Seneca Falls in 1872, Mr. Hughes attended St. Patrick's Parochial School. At an early age he entered the employ of Westcott Bros. here and for 19 years worked in the hardware store of the late George W. Waller.

Headed Trade Board

In 1905, he opened the Fair Store in the Columbus Building. Later on he bought the McCartin Building at 114 Fall St., and moved his business there. When the Board of Trade was organized in Seneca Falls, he became its first president.

In 1910, 1911 and 1912 he was elected village president on an independent ticket, promising to take Seneca Falls "out of the mud," which he did by starting the first street paving in the village. He also was the prime mover in the organization of a Chamber of Commerce years ago and became its first president.

In 1912, he was elected a member of Assembly from Seneca County on the Democratic ticket. While in the Assembly he introduced a bill appropriating a sum of money to drain Black Brook. Under the Wilson Administration in 1915, Mr. Hughes was appointed postmaster of Seneca Falls and served for two successive terms. On his retirement from the postoffice, through his efforts the Business Men's Association was formed on Nov. 1, 1923 and since that time he had been its president.

Funeral Held For John Horn

Final services were to be held this afternoon for John Horn, 80, of 484 Hawley, who died Wednesday night (Mar. 11, 1942) at Highland Hospital after a fall at his home. Burial was to be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Horn suffered fractured ribs and a lung puncture when he fell from steps to the sidewalk. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Horn; two sons, Alfred E. and John W. Horn; a daughter, Mrs. Charles Ades, all of Rochester; six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Fostered Projects

During the Business Men's Association's existence, Mr. Hughes put forth many worthwhile projects, among them at the height of the depression the organization of a committee to solicit money for the workmen's relief. One of the relief projects was the laying of a water pipe to the Seneca Falls Hospital.

During the bank holiday, Hughes worked tirelessly for a solution so business in the village could continue in a normal manner. The answer was the "script money" which enabled local affairs to go along smoothly.

He was instrumental in getting new businesses to come to Seneca Falls and through his efforts, several new stores located here.

On Tuesday of this week, Mr. Hughes who had served 17 years as secretary of the Rotary Club was made an honorary member of the club. He recently had resigned the secretary's post.

For several years, Mr. Hughes was a director of the Finger Lakes Association and was one of the prime figures in promoting the establishment of Cayuga Lake State Park. He was a member of the Board of Directors of the Seneca Falls Hospital for many years and was a member of St. Patrick's Church and of Seneca Falls Council, Knights of Columbus.

In 1899, Mr. Hughes married Miss Mary Coleman, also a native of Seneca Falls, who died several years ago. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. John Kennedy of Rochester and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be conducted at 9 a. m. Monday in the home, and at 9:30 a. m. in St. Patrick's Church. The Rev. E. L. Quirk, pastor, will officiate at a solemn High Mass of requiem, with the Rev. James D. Cuffney, assistant pastor, as deacon and the Rev. William Deveraux, of Nunda, former assistant pastor here, as subdeacon. Burial will be in St. Columbkil Cemetery. Stores and business places will be closed during the funeral rites.

Houghton; three sons, Ernest Brooks Houghton of Penn Yan; Donald G. and Rodney Hayes Houghton, both of Rochester, and two grandchildren, Lorinda B. and Judith W. Houghton, daughters of Ernest B. Houghton.

Funeral services for Mr. Houghton, who was a trustee of Third Presbyterian Church, will be held in the home tomorrow at 3 p. m., with the Rev. Andrew Gillies, pastor emeritus of the church, officiating. Burial will be in Rochester.

In the insurance field, by writing 690 applications for life insurance in October, 1925, Mr. Houghton set a world's record. In sports he was a star basketball player with his alma mater, Union College, Schenectady, having been chosen for All-American honors the year he captained the Union team, 1915. He also won his letters in football and baseball while attending Union.

He was a member of the team that also had the famous Beaver twins. It was a team that cut a wide swath in Eastern collegiate circles for several seasons. On the same team were "Teedie" Woods of Albion, and Charles "Chick" Hequembourg of Schenectady, known to many golfers here.

JOHN HAMILL

Geneseo—John Hamill died yesterday (Jan. 22, 1943).

He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Jay Rogers of Carlisle, Pa., and Mrs. Lee Weber of Rochester; two sons, Harry of Port Washington and John of Erie, Pa. Funeral will be in a funeral chapel here at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Coached by Kuolt

In his freshman year he was coached by Oscar W. Kuolt, now executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies here. Kuolt recalled that in the game between Union and Williams, Houghton scored on fouls all 11 points Union made to win by one point. The team he captained was coached by Fred Dawson, one time Princeton coach and later at Nebraska.

After his graduation, he taught a year at Peddie Institute, in New Jersey, and then returned to his home city of Schenectady to enter the insurance business, acting at the same time as a volunteer coaching assistant to Kuolt in the season of 1917-18. It was on a trip here with the Union team that he decided to come to Rochester to become general agent for the Guardian Life.

For several years after he came to Rochester he played with Kodak Park and Knights of Columbus basketball teams, maintaining his reputation as a dead shot on the court.

Headed Gyro Club

He was a member and past president of the Gyro Club, a member of the Ad Club, Chamber of Commerce, Rochester General Agents Association, Rochester Life Underwriters, Community Players and Monroe Golf Club. He belonged to Warren C. Hubbard Lodge, F. & A. M., and was a member of Delta Upsilon, college fraternity.

When he came to Rochester, he was the youngest general agent of the company in the country and on his thirty-second birthday he wrote 32 policies. He was about to celebrate the 25th anniversary of his connection with the insurance company.

In the so-called boom times of the 20's, Mr. Houghton averaged one sale in every three interviews. This ration dropped to one in eight during the depression, and he met that by doubling his calls. He summed it by declaring in an interview in 1935:

"Insurance is the best paid hard work in the world."

His friendships were many, associates said, and strong loyalty was a characteristic.

A Loss to Rochester

Life insurance men knew Ernest B. Houghton as one of the most remarkable salesmen who ever smilingly opened his brief case in the presence of a prospect.

With sportsmen, it was his record at Union College in basketball, football and baseball which stood out.

To all Rochesterians he was known as a civic-minded citizen, one always ready to give of his time and his money to good causes.

That the general agent of the Guardian Life Insurance Company should be cut down while a comparatively young man is little less than a tragic loss to this city.

Not a native of Rochester, no person could have shown greater love and admiration for his community than did Mr. Houghton, who chose it for his place of residence while visiting here with his college basketball team during the season of 1917-1918.

Mr. Houghton's family, his business associates, and his many friends have the deep sympathy of the community in his untimely death.

Ex-Rochesterian Guards Morals of U. S.

Clinton Howard On Watch in Capital

By GEORGE COLLEN
Washington (AP)—In an office on Capitol Hill, Clinton N. Howard, a little man with flowing gray hair, stands guard over the morals of the nation.

A leader in the reform movement nearly half a century, Howard left his Rochester home four years ago to become general superintendent of the International Reform Federation, an organization of religious groups known as "The Watchdog of the Church."

As executive head of this organization, he keeps an eye on legislation in Congress and the state legislatures, ever on guard to oppose enactment of laws which he considers bad or repeal or weakening of those he considers good.

Howard has numerous politically powerful friends in Congress who consult with him and keep him informed on legislation involving moral issues. The late Senator Sheppard (D., Tex.), the "Father" of Prohibition, was one of his closest friends. Another close friend is Senator Capper (R., Kan.).

Right now, the 73-year-old reformer is concerned with securing congressional approval of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor and beer in army camps. Pointing to the collapse of "bibulous" France before the onslaught of Hitler's armies, he says "General John Barleycorn in the camps will prove no help in preparing American youth to meet the enemy which has laid all Europe in servitude and waste."

He is confident prohibition will return to this country and believes its return may be expedited should the nation become involved in war. "That's what speeded the advent of prohibition last time," he said.

Reformer's Zeal
Despite his age, Howard still burns with the zeal of the reformer and the man who has a mission to perform in the world. Standing only 5 feet 3 inches in height and weighing less than 130 pounds, with his flowing gray hair, he looks like a small edition of the late William Jennings Bryan.

He and the "Great Commoner" were close friends in the years when both toured the Chautauqua circuits and spellbound crowds with their moral messages. Howard at that time effected the garb of the traditional reformer—long black frock coat, winged collar, flowing tie and broad-brimmed black hat.

"That garb helped me in my career," he said. "When I went to a town to lecture, the reception committee would be instructed to look for a little man with a big black hat." A few years ago, he modernized his attire. He now wears a pinch back seersucker suit—a concession to Washington's heat—a soft brimmed panama hat, soft truned down collar shirt and bow tie.

Howard was a successful traveling salesman for 14 years, but said he always was a reformer at heart. Born of strict Quaker parents in Reading, Pa., he settled in Rochester after he was married and became interested in church work.

He credits a Rochester newspaperman with saving his first attempt at reform from disaster. Howard noticed a neighborhood saloon was consistently violating the Sunday closing law and organized a protest meeting which he planned to address.

When he arrived at the meeting the reporter was the only one present. Howard gave his speech. The reporter was so impressed with his sincerity he decided to write it as though it actually had been delivered to a large audience.

Subsequently ministers in the city, impressed by the account of Howard's speech began calling on him to address their church meetings. A fluent talker, he was soon well on the road to a successful career as a lecturer. He estimates he has made 3,000 speeches in Upstate New York, most of them in and around Rochester.

Many Imitations

As his fame spread, bids to speak came from all parts of the country. He soon found himself appearing on the same platform with William Jennings Bryan and other noted orators. The rise of the prohibition movement found Howard in the forefront and because of his small size and vigorous speeches on the subject he soon became known as "The Little Giant—a sobriquet that has struck to him through the years.

When prohibition was enacted, Howard was selected to deliver the "funeral sermon of John Barleycorn" at the celebration held in the Billy Sunday Tabernacle in Washington on the night of Jan. 18, 1920.

Now from a three-story brick building a block from the nation's imposing capitol, he is continuing his fight for moral issues.

He takes partial credit at least for squelching legislative attempts to open the mails to liquor, to permit the transportation in interstate commerce of prize fight films and to authorize horse racing in the District of Columbia.

He is probably one of the nation's most prolific pamphleteers. He edits a monthly publication of the reform federation and in addition gets out frequent news releases as the occasion requires. He uses these to build what he describes as a "backfire" against offensive legislation. He sees they reach all members of Congress, ministers, priests and church leaders throughout the country.

He has made frequent attacks on what he describes as "immoral" conditions in Washington. He recently donned some old clothes, an open necked shirt and a cap and went to a wrestling match where he heard women were being featured. He subsequently appeared before the union of ministers with an appeal for a united protest describing the match as "the vilest, most brutal, degrading and shocking exhibition of vulgarity."

Police Head On Railroad Will Retire

D. & C. JUN 24 1943

Frank E. Hurlburt, who has served 49 years in the Rochester area guarding the rights of way, rolling stock and passengers of the New York Central Lines, will retire as area captain of the railroad's police July 1.

The veteran railroad policeman, who is 70 and resides at 237 Long Acree Rd., will be succeeded as captain by Douglas C. Stoffel, 431 Peart Ave. Irondequoit, now sergeant of the force. Stoffel has served about 25 years.

Hurlburt, who joined the railroad's force at Buffalo in November, 1894, came to Rochester when organized car thieves were looting freight trains as they climbed up a stiff grade through rock cut east of the city. He figured in many of the battles that ended when leaders of the "Rock Cut gangs," as they were known, were sentenced to long prison terms.

Increases in the speed of trains and police has been credited by the veteran with the reduction in car thefts in more recent years. In the last serious clash between police and thieves here, Sergeant Stoffel was shot in the arm.

Hurlburt recalls, among other experiences, that he has guarded every President of the United States since Grover Cleveland.

Soldier Sees Son First Time At Ten Months

POLICEMAN James E. Hughes' current beat has been virtually on the outskirts of the world, at least his world.

That's why his son, James Jr., was 10 months old before Hughes got a look at him. Hughes, a private in Uncle Sam's Army, arrived home yesterday on furlough from Newfoundland, for which he set sail the day his son was born. He enlisted in February, 1941. His last visit home was in April, 1942.

His wife is the former Miss Mary Laragy of Rochester and their home is at 1553 Mt. Hope Ave. His furlough ends Apr. 12.

From Law Books to Log Books

FREDERIC A. HUGHES

Sixteen years in the law business, Hughes has forsaken legal tomes for a professional radio career, training for which he has just completed in a course under Vocational Education for National Defense. Hughes wants a job in the Merchant Marine, where he believes the most crying need for radio men is today. He is shown here adjusting a signal generator at his right with the receiving apparatus at his left. He expects to be summoned to marine service soon.

Lawyer Trades Practice For Ship Radio Post

Sixteen years a lawyer—and Frederick A. Hughes, 38, is exchanging poring over legal tomes for tending a sputtering, often life-saving ship's radio in the Merchant Marine.

Hughes, who received his legal training in the old offices of Wile, Oviatt & Gilman, has just finished the Vocational Education for National Defense radio course at Junior Vocational High School, and passed the tests for second class telegraph and radiophone licenses in Buffalo.

As the Frey Street man explains it, "I saw this whole thing coming, and I knew my shortness and my bad eyes would keep me out of the thick of things military. So I gave up all but a sliver of my practice, and have spent eight hours a day here, and more home, for seven months."

And according to his proud instructor, Joseph N. Simpson, the slight attorney has learned exceptionally quickly and well "from scratch." George Norton, 20, who finished with Hughes last week, is already somewhere on the high seas, and Hughes expects a call to the Radio Marine Corps any day.

He could have a commercial job at home; there's a crying need for operators in radio stations, airlines, etc. But not Fred Hughes; he's put in 1,300 hours in intensive work learning to do what he believes in—serving his country best. And he believes a ship carrying supplies to the United Nations at war is that spot today.

Ed Hill is dead. To most Democrat and Chronicle readers that statement has no meaning. But to the Democrat and Chronicle family, which produces every day what the readers receive, it means much. Ed ran the elevator and took his trick as night watchman; but he knew everyone of his fellow workers, their joys and their tribulations. Was any one ill? Ed was the first and oftenest to ask about them. "What do you hear from the boy?" (To the fathers with sons in the service.) He knew the big news as quickly as anyone. He knew the sad news, the joyful news. And his family was first. The world may have many Ed Hills. The Democrat and Chronicle had at least one. He'll be missed, but his cheerful, whimsical, healing spirit will linger long in office memory. He wouldn't expect editorial recognition; that's why he so well deserves it.

Mr. Hill was interested in night news developments, particularly fires, and followed incoming reports as closely as the reporter on watch.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Lena Hill; a daughter, Miss Vivian Hill; a son, Raymond Hill, and several nieces and nephews.

MOOSE MOURN W. S. HUTCHINGS

Rochester members of the Loyal Order of Moose today are mourning William Searle Hutchings, past governor of the local lodge, who was killed yesterday morning in an automobile accident near Cortland.

W. SEARLE HUTCHINGS

Hutchings' death, which came when his car left the Cortland-Binghamton highway, 10 miles south of Cortland and plunged down an embankment, cast a pall over the 27th annual convention of the New York State Moose Association which closes today in Binghamton. The Rochester man was attending the convention and was en route to Syracuse to meet Malcolm Giles, supreme secretary of Mooseheart.

Hutchings, who was superintendent of the finishing department of Stromberg-Carlson Telephone Manufacturing Company, was 59 and lived in 331 Alexander St.

He was driving alone when the accident occurred, and was believed by Police Chief Harold Wood, Marathon, Cortland County, to have fallen asleep at the wheel. According to Coroner Hugh Frail, Marathon, Hutchings' machine swerved along the highway, bowled over several guard posts before it rolled down a 10-foot embankment, crossed a creek, smashed into a barn and then rolled back into the creek bed.

With the past governor at the convention were his wife, Adam Scheuerlein, governor of Rochester Lodge; Roy R. Rumpff, secretary, and other Moose officials and delegates.

Holder of the degree of Pilgrim, highest in the Moose organization, Hutchings was trustee of Rochester Lodge at the time of his death.

Hutchings was traveling alone and is believed to have fallen asleep behind the wheel of his sedan, according to Coroner Hugh Frail of Marathon, Cortland County.

Knocks Down Posts

His car swerved 300 to 400 feet along the highway, knocked down several guard posts, plunged down the embankment and across a creek, crashed into a barn and fell back in the creek bed, Coroner Frail said. The accident occurred about 7:30 a. m.

Friends of Hutchings at Binghamton said he left there about 6 a. m. to meet Malcolm Giles, supreme secretary of the Moose, arriving in Syracuse by train. He was to take Giles back to the convention city.

JOHN ALBERT HALE.

Death of a Former Rochester Newspaper Man in Salt Lake City.

The Denver Republican of December 17th, contains the announcement of the death of John Albert Hale, a former newspaper man of this city, who has many friends in Rochester. The announcement follows:

"John Albert Hale died of paralysis at the home of his son, Fred A. Hale, in Salt Lake City, Thursday.

"Mr. Hale was born in Boston, Mass., March 12, 1829. He came to Colorado in 1860, crossing the plains with an ox-team, and settling in Central City, which was then a new mining camp. He brought with him the first stamp mill erected in Gilpin county. Old residents of Central City well remember it as the Hale & Patterson mill in Chase gulch.

"Mr. Hale was interested in claims in the Bobtail, Fiske and other Gilpin county mines. In 1865, after amassing a fortune, he disposed of his property and went East, traveling through this country and Europe for several years. On his return to the United States, he embarked in journalism, connecting himself with the Rochester Tribune.

"He was a cultured gentleman of the old school, and an accomplished violinist. He numbered among his warm personal friends Lady Henry Somerset, with whom he corresponded for years, the late George M. Pullman and Henry M. Stanley, the explorer. Of late years he has lived in Denver, where he was a familiar figure on the streets.

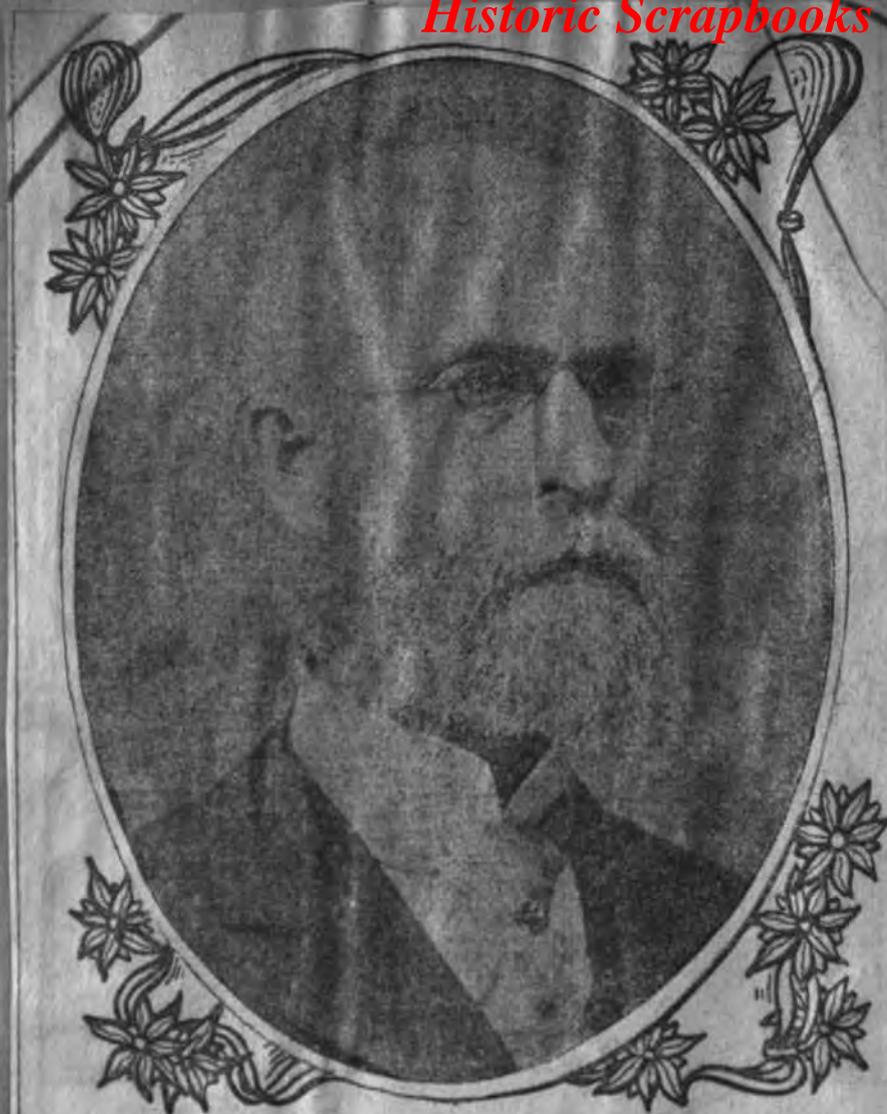

"About one year ago, Mr. Hale had a slight stroke of paralysis at City park, since which time he has been in feeble health. While in attendance at Woolhurst fete, he had a second attack, but was not prostrated, and he kept the knowledge of these shocks from his friends.

"Six weeks ago he went to Salt Lake on a visit to his son and while walking on the streets of that city, he suffered a third stroke, from which he never rallied.

"Mr. Hale married Miss Lucretia Wiggins, of North Bloomfield, N. Y., by whom he had one son, now a prominent architect of Salt Lake, and she survives him. He was the first death in a family of four brothers and one sister. He was a brother of Dr. Horace M. Hale and uncle of General Irving Hale and Mrs. William O. McFarlane, all of this city."

Mr. Hale was city editor of the Sunday Tribune of this city early in the '70's, and while in Rochester made many friends, who will be shocked to learn of his death. He leaves two brothers now living in Rochester, Benjamin F. Hale and Charles G. Hale. He also leaves two nieces in this city, Mrs. Avery G. Poler and Mrs. Edward F. Wellington. His son, Fred Hale, of Salt Lake City, mentioned in the above article, married Miss Minnie O'Grady, sister of Congressman-elect James M. E. O'Grady.

Hamilton, president of the New York State Railways, was elected to that office, being promoted from the position of vice-president and general manager. Each succeeded Horace E. Andrews, who had died a short time before.

After his graduation from Amherst, Mr. Hutchings' first job was with the Thompson-Houston Electric Company, for which he worked for six months on the installation of an electric plant in Amherst. In November, 1889, Mr. Hutchings went to the Germantown Electric Company as assistant superintendent, and resigned in April, 1891, to take similar work with the West End Electric Company of Philadelphia. War Veteran, 102, Confides

The first hundred years might be the hardest—but the last two have been the most fun.

You can take it from James A. Hard, Rochester's only Civil War veteran, who was feted last night on his 102nd birthday.

"Why, I've had more fun this last two years than ever before," he said. "I've always been crazy about parties and there've been lots of them. And people never paid so much attention to me before. My good looks must have something to do with it," he added, slyly.

Proof that he loves parties was the good time he had at his own, sponsored in the Hotel Seneca ballroom by the Monroe County Council, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War. Beaming through an evening of handshaking and congratulations at the public reception, he was tireless. He was escorted to the place of honor by Frank Bissell, 96, of Scottsville, the only other living Civil War veteran in Monroe County.

Always a great cigar smoker, he was pleased with the dozens of boxes brought to him by patriotic organizations. The high spot of the evening came for him when a cable-gram was read from his great-grandson, Sergt. James Eksten, 25, who is serving with the U. S. Army Medical Corps in Tunisia, Africa. "Congratulations," it read. "Wish we could celebrate this occasion together. Best wishes for a reunion—soon."

An ardent isolationist before Pearl Harbor, Hard was asked how he felt now that we are in it.

"I'm pretty old," said the centenarian, "but not too old to change my mind. Anything we can do to finish Hitler is 100 per cent with me. And the best thing we can do," he added, "is to quit quibbling over domestic policies and get seriously behind the war effort."

He has a grandson, Sergt. Earl Osborne, 45, stationed at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., who was here last night for the birthday celebration. Another great-grandson is Aviation Cadet Donald Nelan, 20, of Sheperd Field, Tex.

So far as rationing goes, Hard is all for it. "Anything we go without and the boys get is all right with me," he said. "Back in the old days, when I was in the Army, we used to have to steal a farmer's chickens and cook them, feathers and all, or else go hungry. It's wonderful the way the boys are looked out for now."

Hard knows what fighting is. He found out about it when he joined Company E, 37th New York Volunteer Infantry, as a 20-year-old Dryden teamster in '61. He participated in the battles of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, South Mountain and the bloodiest of all—Antietam.

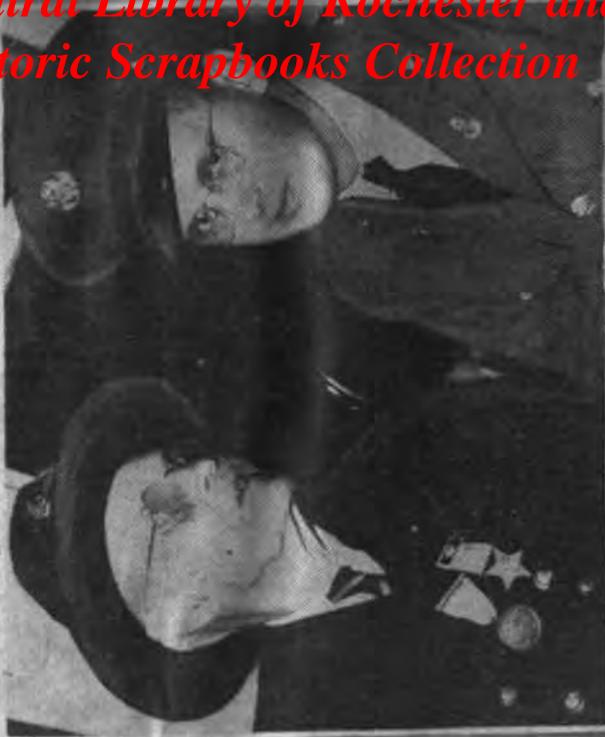

Hard was born at Victory and spent his boyhood at Windsor near Binghamton. His youth was spent at Dryden, where he enlisted at the start of the Civil War. He has been a staunch Republican since he cast his first vote for President Lincoln. He later shook hands with Lincoln at a White House reception and saw him twice more, once when Lincoln reviewed troops in Virginia.

GEORGE P. HUMPHREY TAKES ALL KINDS OF PEOPLE

By Paul W. Bachman

"ONE LIFETIME is not enough," observed 74-year-old George P. Humphrey in one of his characteristic long views.

"If man could live 200 years, he might accomplish something . . . but then," he added, dryly, "at the 200 mark man would be disappointed because he couldn't live 400 years."

Such, briefly, is the philosophy of a man who has spent 53 years of his life launching and routing the course of many of Rochester's book lovers in literature. He is not connected with a public foundation or an educational institution, but he is well up among that small, select brotherhood of people in Western New York who know a rare volume when they see one.

Humphrey's quaint, ill-heated emporium of old books at 67 Spring Street has become during the last 35 years a veritable feasting place for those who would gladly go without an occasional lunch rather than sacrifice their weekly grist of choice reading matter.

With scholarly ease Humphrey is able, perhaps better than anyone else in the vicinity, to place the right rare old volume into a deserving reader's hands. His clients go away with a kind of reverence for this thin, wiry man who has the way and mien of a philosopher.

It's easy for George Humphrey to stroke his gray beard and finger his horned-rimmed glasses in the serious contemplation of books and things pertaining to the fruitful life.

At other times it's just as easy for him to remark in crisp, academic English about some current traffic problem or about golf or wildflowers.

Up to a few years ago he played golf regularly and shot in the low nineties. Now he contents himself with his acknowledged hobby, which is the study of wildflowers. In the warm weather he sometimes makes a sally into the woods near his Stonewood Avenue home for the purpose of collecting specimens.

As a boy Humphrey grew up in the Third Ward. He attended No. 3 School and later the Rochester Free Academy on Fitzhugh Street. One day he drifted into a bookstore, which he had frequented many times before, and obtained a job as a clerk. In 1885 he established his own book business. In a few years he began mailing his catalogues listing rare editions to all parts of the country.

Through the years he has traded in everything from voluminous researches in sectional American history to little-known treatises on muscle building.

He specializes in first American editions of classics of English literature. His best seller list remains, for the most part, unchanged: Shakespeare, Dickens, Kipling, Stevenson and Mark Twain.

After a lifetime of superbly rounded reading, Humphrey has two preferences, history and biography. Beveridge's Life of Lincoln and Boswell's Life of Johnson are his favorites. This year Humphrey is re-reading Dickens with a fervor that was conditioned half a century ago.

Reposing among the inner stacks of the Spring Street sanctum is a prized volume of Beroaldi, a Latin text printed 423 years ago. This, the oldest of Humphrey's present volumes, is in a remarkable state of repair and exhibits a wealth of small perforations known as bookworm holes.

With his treasure house of old books, his pipe and the advent of a mellow conversation with friend or stranger, Humphrey's daily routine is much the same as it was three decades ago.

One of his greatest joys is to retrieve some hidden work he didn't think he could find, blow the dust off the cover and offer it to a client with recommendations born of long years of thoughtful reading.
