F O R E

In presenting our Senior Annual we, the classes of January and June have attempted to portray the activities and express the thoughts of John Marshall High School students during the school year 1937-38.

W O R D

We wish to share with you the pleasure we had in making this book, and to provide many hours of enjoyment in recollections. If we can do this then we feel we have accomplished our goal.

MR. HAROLD T. SINGLETON

To Mr. Singleton, whose unfailing kindness, thoughtfulness, and good humor have won the hearts of our class, and whose consistent effort has helped guide us since he entered our school, we, the members of the January and June classes of 1938, coalesce in dedicating this book.

S E N I O R S

Mere words cannot express our feelings toward our principal, guide, and friend, Mr. Snyder. From the time of our entrance into old John Marshall to our present life in this beautiful building his interest and guidance have made our four years a pleasant and worth while experience.

MR. ELMER W. SNYDER

MR. C. WILLARD BURT

MRS. CARO F. SPENCER

MISS DOROTHY B. CHAMPNEY

MR. JAMES S. WISHART

Since the time we first set foot in dear old John Marshall High School until we bade our last fond farewell, our advisers and counselors Mr. Burt, Mrs. Spencer, Miss Champney, and Mr. Wishart have been our sympathetic and understanding friends. They have given us their whole hearted support and assistance in solving our individual problems, and they unselfishly gave up their time that we might enjoy ourselves, by supervising our special and after school activities.

The members of the John Quill Staff wish to express their appreciation for the help so willingly given them in the publication of this book. Mrs. Millman and her art students, who produced illustrations and division sheets; Mr. Conroy, who helped in getting the senior pictures; Mr. Booth, who aided with the advertisement section; Mr. Houseman, the business manager; Miss Dunn, who had charge of the literary section; and Miss Champney, the adviser, have all given their assistance with a smile.

CLASS PROPHECY

As the glad New Year bells rang out the year 1954 and rang in the New Year 1955, with a beautiful caroling note breaking the stillness which reigned high above the streets of New York, below a gay, maddened throng threw confetti, blew horns, shouted "Happy New Year" to this one and that, and, in a word, made whoopee!

Every dance spot, cafe, and hotel had been engaged by some party for that gala evening and the Ritz Plaza was no exception, for here was being held a reunion party by the January class 1938 from John Marshall High School.

The "sum and substance" of the party was recounted as follows in the diary of one of the Alumnae the next day:

December 31, 1954

Dear Diary:

Well last night was the class reunion party and—zowie, what a time! It's amazing how little change there is in some people and how great a change there is in others. Just seventeen years—. The party got under way about 10:30, Freddy and I were the last to arrive, "Same old Mary," some one shouted at me right off, "always late." When I looked around an extremely stoutish fellow with slightly greying blond hair was smiling down at me. "Bob Hunt," I gasped, "why hello," I actually did remember him in spite of the fact that he has put on a lot of weight. "Oh, you're lookin' rather healthy, Bob," I said lamely, "Just what are you doing now anyway?"

"Insurance is my line, Mary, and by the way, I have a neat policy here, that you can't risk—!!

Before he went any further we managed to steal away, but not far. Freddy is very clever at falling over his and other people's feet and before I knew it, we fell on a couple dancing.

"Excuse us, please," said I, and then, "Oh, goodness!" That must have sounded discreet, but I just couldn't help it. It was Janet Culbertson with a handsome dark-haired man. I was told that Janet was the famed Simonia Simmons, European stage star.

At last we found seats at a corner table, and while Freddy proceeded to sleep, I watched the show. It really was a show because every moment was entertaining. We were almost strangers not having seen one another in at least ten or twelve years, in some cases not since our graduation. In spite of the length of time, I recognized nearly every one of the old gang.

Then Tom Hewett came over and sat beside me. Tom is now writing the late Walter Winchell's column "On Broadway," and it has been rumored that he will even climb a flag pole for a choice bit!

I told Tom that I felt a trifle awkward marching up to someone I hadn't seen in twelve years or more and firing a dozen questions at him, so Tom (dear obliging fellow) agreed to tell me a little bit about each one.

"Over there is New York's most popular set of bachelors," he declared, "Why, every chorus girl, debutante, and strenog' has tried to ensare one of them!" When I turned I saw four handsome tuxedo-attired gentlemen seated at a table, each with a stove-pipe hat pulled down over his eyes as he snoozed through a blare of Jazz Blues. They were Messrs. Dick (thrill 'em) Raysor, Don (Romeo) Reardon, Howard (love 'em and leave 'em) Lockwood, and Bob (heart-breaker) Thorpe!

About that time a few couples got up to dance and as they glided before us I recognized among them Bob Aldinger with Marge Wootton.

CLASS PROPHECY

"You would never guess that Bob wore a toupee, would you?" Tom said admiringly. "He had an accident the other day though. He got up to speak in the Senate house and a draught blew it into the water pitcher!"

Seeing Bob made me think of his old friend of our high school days, Stan Madsen. I looked around the crowded room and suddenly caught sight of two gentlemen, standing with sleeves rolled up. I recognized them as Stan Madsen and Thomas Bader.

"They work in the same chemical laboratory," stated Tom.

At 11:00 o'clock there was an elaborate floor show featuring the world-famed dancer Dorothea Ensignia and comedienne Barbara Curtis, both former class mates. It was quite a show! Doug Coster was Master of Ceremonies, or rather, I should say, Mr. Douglas Coster, esq. Tom told me that Doug is going to run for Mayor in New York next fall.

Right after the floor show, I noticed a slim, handsome man at a table not far from me. He was rather grey at the temples, and had the most benign countenance one could want to find anywhere. I gasped when I realized that it was Bob (Gump) Guenther!

"Reverend Guenther," corrected my right hand man; "Bob entered the ministry when he sized up our class years ago; he says now at least one of us will be saved."

I was engaged thus in watching the Reverend "Gump" when suddenly a group came over to me. The group included Bob VanDeusen, newly appointed editor of the New York Times; Doris Lochner, who had made a name for herself in Siberia by writing a series of very stirring love stories; Jane Fields and Bryna Louis, who are running an Opera Company in Los Angeles; Helen Kelly, who has her hands full with the International Women's Temperance League, and Genevieve Buethel, the feminine Clarence Darrow, who recently gave an interesting talk on "Is the Mayor's Place in the City Hall or the Home?"

"The gang," after telling me about themselves, explained that Barbara Stevens and Jane FitzGerald were unable to come to the party, because, being archeologists by profession, they were making an intensive study and had dug everything up but King Tut.

When I had thoroughly thanked Tom for his assistance and had laughed and laughed old times with everyone, Freddy and I said good night (or good morning!) to all, and left. I would never have believed such changes could occur if I hadn't seen them with my own eyes, which all goes to prove that "truth is stranger than fiction."

In Memoriam

The members of the class of 1938 in publishing their annual wish to remember two of their friends who passed away during their Senior Year at John Marshall. After the years of happy companionship the loss of Homer Vary and Robert Kier has left a definite gap in their ranks.

A GLIMPSE INTO THE FUTURE

Dec. 31, 1954

Dear Diary:

I can't understand why my beloved husband has to pick out the Cafe Royal for this New Year's Eve! Especially when it's our 15th wedding anniversary. Oh, well, I certainly don't feel thirty-five. I suppose I shouldn't mind. I'll have to make my own good time even if there are only John and me to celebrate.

Jan. 1—I'm so tired. I hardly have enough energy to write in you, dear Diary, but it surely was worth it!—I saw every body with whom I was graduated. Of course, they're all changed. Why, it was even hard to recognize some of them. It took me a long time to wake up to the fact the orchestra leader, who calls himself Bernard Steameruski was none other than our former President Bob Steamer! Even with all his popularity, Bob couldn't neglect old friends and so he had to delay one of his numbers to explain to Mr. George Adkins the meaning of rhythm although he realized that with the champion debater, whether he was right or wrong he would still be wrong. George is a lawyer now. Oh, yes, just for old times sake, Altheda De Lano led "The Big Apple," and that did bring back grand memories!

Jan. 5—Took Junior to the circus today. He got a big kick out of the head clown as did every body else. The happy smile of the clown did look familiar but meant nothing to me until I came closer and then I saw it was Clarence Wright! Junior almost had to carry me home!

Jan. 7—Aunt Susie's doing very well here in the Hospital in New York. Claims the food is luscious. The reason seems to be that Ruth Donaldson is the head dietician. Doesn't that sound like Ruth?

Jan. 8—I received a letter from Peg, my sister, today. She tells about a man near my age whom she met in Pennsylvania. He was graduated from the Alfred School of Ceramics and now is busy making pottery for the natives. His name? Mr. Ray Hall!

Jan. 9—Nothing much to tell you today, dear Diary, only that a young scientist and engineer has just perfected communication with Mars. Of course it could be no one but Dr. Hoover Shaw!

Jan. 10—Oh, Diary, that dreadful Mrs. Casey, next door came in exactly seven times to use the telephone today. It seems she's having a little trouble with her lawyer, Mr. Ellison Jack. He's supposed to be the best in the city.

Jan. 11—Nothing much to do on Wednesday, so I just sat around and read. Came across a very delightful article, "My Experience with the Natives." It was an account written on her return from a missionary trip to Ethiopia, by Miss Gertrude Freitag.

Jan. 12—The former Miss Carol Sentiff had an article on the "Raising of Children" published in the Daily Lab.

Jan. 13—Went to get my permanent this afternoon and I guess I caused some hard feelings when I insisted on having Alma Knell as my operator, but no one can blame me for she has been named the leading beautician in the State of New York. I heard a sportscast in there and I almost ruined my hair because I jumped so when the announcer said, "This is Don Vanas signing off." Alma said that he had mentioned Don Bensen as being picked for the All American Basket Ball Team.

Jan. 14—It was officially announced today that one of my old school friends, Gerald MacKenzie, has been awarded the Knobel Prize for Art. Also, Angelo Casti of our June Class was scheduled to take the leading tenor role at the Metropolitan in the "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Jan. 15—I see by the paper that George Dixon has just been appointed to act as Scout Master of the World Jamboree Troup, which is leaving for Europe this June. George always was a good scout anyway.

Jan. 16—I heard a recording of the world famed baritone, John Manchester, today. He seems just like the same old good sport he was when he went to school with me.

Jan. 17—The Senate was in an uproar today, so the women say, because of a certain John Vollertsen and a group of fiery young statesmen who are putting up a big fight for the right of the people.

Jan. 18—There was a new program on the air tonight featuring Allen Hauptenthal and his accordion. On the same program were Gertrude Scott and Glen Panyity in Romeo and Juliet. I remember they were in several plays back in high school days.

The honor and responsibility of being an officer of the Student Association is bestowed upon some of the foremost students at election every term. These officers represent John Marshall High School in our assemblies, in other schools, and on other occasions. Often the president or vice-president is called upon to speak, be present, or give greetings at many functions at which the Rochester high schools are represented.

MISS ISABEL MAYO
Adviser

One of the high points of a student's high school career is his election to the National Honor Society. Candidates are voted upon by members of the Society and the faculty. Although a student must be in the upper quarter of his class in scholarship, his character, leadership ability, and service to the school are also considered.

MARSHALL'S BRAIN TRUST

ON PARLE ICI FRANCAIS

Les Babillards is a French Honor Society consisting of honor students chosen from the second year class. French is spoken at all gatherings of the group. Such an organization helps to make the language real to the student—not just another subject to be endured.

MARSHALL'S STATESMEN

The Cabinet is chosen from among the Forum and the school at large. This body, meeting with Mr. Snyder, is the executive board that controls all student functions. The Forum consists of one member from each homeroom and is the school's representative body. In order that these organizations may effectively represent the students, any pupil who has an idea concerning the Student Association submits it to his representative.

DISCIPLES OF HERMES

Members of the Office Messenger Force are stationed in the office during their free period. Whenever a pupil is wanted they carry notices to the proper classroom in which that pupil can be found.

THE STUDENT OFFICE FORCE

There are many departments and individual teachers who are benefiting by the Student Secretaries. Only a capable student, who has received instruction in the Business Education Department under Mr. Brady may apply for this position. Although they receive credit toward an activity award for their service, the most important benefit derived from this activity is the valuable practical experience in all fields of office work which these people receive.

The John Quill Staff edits the senior annual with the direction and assistance of the faculty advisers. An important part in the publication of the annual is the soliciting of advertising which is essential for financial success. Other members of the staff have the task of arranging the individual portraits of the graduates with a four year history of the honors, studies, clubs, and other activities in which each senior has participated during his stay at Marshall.

Other sections of the annual are the athletic and activity group pictures and the literary work. The works of artistic or literary nature are contributed by students of the school.

MARSHALL'S JOURNALISTS

The Docker, published approximately once a month for members of the Student Association, brings us the news of our activities, our alumni, and of other schools. As the school newspaper, it represents John Marshall in the city high schools as well as in the city newspapers. Under the direction of Mr. Miller it has received many honors, the most important of which is the First Class Honor Rating from the National Scholastic Press Association.

MR. SINGLETON
Choir Director

We all have witnessed the fine performances given by the Choir in our assemblies. This body is made up of students who enjoy singing and are willing to give up some of their time for rehearsals and public appearances under the direction of Mr. Singleton. A requirement recently innovated is that one must first belong to the Junior Choir, a new organization under Mr. Stark, before becoming a member of the senior group.

MAESTROS ALL

The Orchestra is constantly rehearsing new numbers for presentation in order that our assemblies may be more enjoyable. Under the direction of Mr. Geschwind the orchestra has given us countless excellent performances in the past. This activity offers its members invaluable cultural, professional and recreational training.

THE SCENE SETTERS

THE EYES AND EARS OF THE SCHOOL

Teachers desiring supplementary films for their classes submit applications to the Visual Service secretaries. At the appointed time, an operator is in the proper room ready to project the desired film. Operators must be able to operate the three projectors and the slide machine, to repair damaged film, and to perform other such duties.

Similarly, the members of the Radio Corps must be able to operate the radio control board and tune in on radio broadcasts which are sent directly to the rooms of those teachers who request them.

In an effort to give the pupils of this school an opportunity to study the problems they face in their country compared with the problems of another country, namely Canada, Mr. Gell of our social studies department struck upon the brilliant idea of having a group of pupils from each country study those problems and then meet personally to discuss the results of their work with each other.

Plans were made and a group of four pupils and three advisers went to Canada, presented the plan to the pupils of Northern Vocational High School, and discussed it with them. In return, the pupils of the Toronto school sent delegates here on the same mission.

A group of special students are now at work studying definite problems which they will discuss in the spring when they are to meet with the Canadian group working on the same problems.

A HALLOWE'EN CALLER

Prize Story

I glanced up from the copy of Poe's Tales that I had been reading. Outside, the wind blew fiercely around the corner of the house; trumpets blared; whistles screeched, and sirens wailed mournfully. A tick-tack rapped sharply on the window near my elbow, reminding me of the beat of the Tell-Tale Heart. I shall have to admit that the atmosphere for such gruesome reading was excellent. A lighted pumpkin face, sighted in the mirror, brought me to my feet with a start. I grinned remorsefully because I had been so easily taken in by a Halloween prank.

Suddenly the door opened and a stranger walked in. Of course at a time like this it didn't seem so queer that he was dressed in accordance with the customs of the early 1700's. It was the expected thing on this night. If anyone wished to dress crazily, Halloween was his opportunity. He was a medium-sized fellow with a large, stovepipe hat, a muffler surrounding his neck and excellent quality leather gloves, although aged, around his wrists. A gold-headed cane swung nonchalantly on his forefinger. Yet his entire appearance was incongruous, because although his clothes fit him perfectly, they had an empty look as though there was nothing for them to be suspended upon except a gust of air.

They almost appeared to be buttoned around space. I suppose I should have laughed at such silly perceptions, but at the time it sent a queer feeling playing up and down my spine. This whole Halloween business was getting on my nerves anyway.

The old fellow apparently had mighty poor manners, for he failed to remove his hat as he stepped into the dimly-lighted parlor. But I suppose it is permissible to wear a hat in the house if one is in costume, and it would not be tactful to request a person to remove his disguise. Not a word was spoken. No greeting was offered except by the dog who yelped at him and slithered under the stove, quaking with fear. And he proffered no greeting to us.

His costume certainly was effective, for from the moment of his arrival in the room everything began to take on an aged aspect. As he glided past me, I felt a cold draft of air running up my legs and back. He had a mildewed smell which I had never sensed before in my life except when I entered Thomson's old barn, which was practically ready to collapse with age. It was similar to the smell of decaying hay, I thought. He had plenty of nerve, I decided, for he immediately chose the best chair in the room and slumped into it with nary a word or a sign of apology for breaking in on us as he did. For the first time in my life I wished there was someone in the house besides the dog and me. The dog wasn't much help either, for he was still crouched under the stove with his eyes nearly bulging out of his head.

Why didn't this neighbor, this friend, this whoever or whatever he was, let me see his face? It seemed to be in the shadow although the light was shining full on it. He wore no mask, I could tell that, but his face seemed almost not to be there. I chuckled at how completely he had puzzled me and begged him to reveal himself. But he merely sat there, and if I could have seen his face I would have sworn that he was staring at me.

Light-heartedly I began a conversation with him, or shall I say a monologue, for he simply sat and gazed. I rambled on about politics, the weather, Roosevelt and the Supreme Court, occasionally seeming to get a nod out of him, and once I thought he murmured something about how queer the world was today, how different from the past or something of that nature. My attempt at different tactics, such as offering him a glass of good old English punch and some friedcakes, which he refused, finally moved him to speech. He said that moisure in his stomach settled the dust and that he couldn't bear to eat friedcakes because there was no juice in him to digest them!

Having penetrated his shell of silence, I inquired of him whence he came. "Thou canst not know, it is not my lot to say." His speech had a quaint Puritan flavor, I thought.

"But can't you even give me a hint?"

"A hint? What is that which thou callest a hint?"

"Listen, old man, I agree that you've played your part well, but now let's snap out of it! This mystery is getting monotonous."

His reply was slightly whimsical. "Ah, yes," he nodded slowly, "perhaps to you I do seem a mystery." He traced a pattern on the rug with his cane, the head of which seemed now to take on the form of a skull. Involuntarily I jerked my arm aside, catapulting to the floor Poe's Tales which had reclined on the stand at my elbow. The book opened to a picture of a dead man reclining in a chair. It startled me because of its similarity to my guest; but, recovering, I laughed and again attempted some light conversation.

We got along better after that, and it was nearly midnight before my unmannerly guest thanked me for a pleasant evening and rose lightly from his chair. He said that he had sworn by the word of God that he would come back some day and see what the world was like. He agreed that the good old days were best when he had seen Benjamin Franklin as an old man return from England. He certainly acted his part well. If I could only have caught a glimpse of his face!

I stepped up to him and grasped his hand heartily. Never before in the forty years of my life have I been so shocked as when his hand—I am completely in my right senses, mind you—when his hand, glove and all, merely crumpled in my fist and fell in a heap on the floor. For a Halloween prank this had gone too far. In violent anger I doubled up my fist and drove it into his teeth, or where his teeth ought to have been. But I encountered nothing but air, and my arm slid between his hat and the top of his scarf, touching nothing. That nothing was too much. I dropped to the floor and begged to be spared. He merely opened the door, bowed to me, and faded into the darkness. Where he had stood there was nothing now but the flicker of the street light and a crisp wind which picked up the pile of dust and whipped it into my face.

LET US HAVE PEACE

Come, let us be friends again,
We who have fought;
Let us seek to attain
The peace, we are taught,
Is so holy this day.
May we keep all those who might
Have to go forth to die.
When the banner of War is in sight,
Think of those who will lie
In "No Man's Land." . . . Let us have Peace!

SHIRLEY SCORSE 9-B

AMBITION

Have you ever been out in a sail boat

Across a tumbling sea,

And heard a bell buoy's ringing note?

Oh, that's the life for me!

Where the wind blows up merry gale,

That's where I long to be,

And the sea goes churning past the rail.

Oh, that's the life for me!

The bow dips into a deep sea of green

The spray comes o'er the lee,

The stern doth rise, to leave them clean.

Oh, that's the life for me!

Over the seas, in nature's own hands

To trust in God above,

And set my course for foreign lands

That's the life I love!

JOHN MANCHESTER IV-1

WAR

Prize Poem

A rocket is flashing out yonder,
The screams of the dying are plain,
With war once more in its fury,
The grim reaper rises again.
He strides o'er the ruin and wreckage
And marks in his book of the dead,
The fate of the brave ones, now dying,
Who fought for the white, blue and red.
For what, all this sorrow and suffering?
For what all this misery and pain?
Why came they back to us helpless,
The blind, the sick, and the lame?

They knew not what they were fighting
They knew not why all the pain;
They knew only the soul-wrecking horror,
Of war that is always in vain.
He taught us to love all our neighbors,
Gave us laws for our every ill;
Upon tablets of stone there was written
The commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."
But when will we hark to His message
And when live in brotherly peace?
Oh, then there would be no more suffering,
And War and its horror would cease.

REACHING FOR THE MOON

Many hands are reaching for the moon,
But few achieve.
The goal eludes one as a tune
That tantalizes the memory
With its remembrance, then fades,
What're your fond desires be,
Whether low or lofty,
In this silver majesty all see
Fulfillment of their every aim,
In fullest measure and great glory.

LIFE

Life is what we make of it,
Whether fair or foul.
Life is what we make of it,
If we smile or scowl.
Life is what we make of it,
No matter where we are.
Life is what we make of it,
In lands both near and far.

ROBERT ALDINGER IV-2

THE ENTRANCE TO YELLOWSTONE

Suddenly,
Leaving the burning
Desert,
Breaking into the wooded
Mountains
You come upon it.
Before, not even a scrubby
Cottonwood.
Now, a virgin forest with Trees,
Which defy counting.
Before, an enveloping
Dry-heat,
Relentlessly claiming all.
Now, a cool stillness
Broken
Only by the swift-moving
Stream.
Before, a scorching, overpowering
Sun—
Now, a dusk,
With only patches
Of sunlight
Which do not burn.
Before, a stifling air,
Robbed of all moisture.
Now, a sweet, clean air
Purified by snow—
A souvenir of December's
For June.
One—the desert.
One—the forest.
Neighbors,
But not friends.

MARY L. FRANCIS IV-1

DREAMS

To do is not enough, to dream—
To dare and make come true
Those fairy wishes that are ours
The countless hours through.
But visions brighten up the sky
And change all nature's hue
Just to your doing add a dream
Then watch your dream come true.

DOROTHY SNIDER IV-1

A SAGA OF THE SEA

I was out upon the sea.
(Let me tell you it was rough.)
And all day—just up and down.
(Let me tell you it was tough!)
Now the boat that I was on
Was too small for such big seas,
And my meals went up and down,
(Just like the ship—you see.)

DOUGLAS COSTER IV-2

CONSERVATION

Prize Essay

Between the majestic pine-capped slopes, the stream bubbles, carelessly picking its way among the boulders to the valley below. On every side tall swaying pines lord over the landscape and awe the silent observer. Through a rift in the trees, a snow-clad mountain, seemingly painted on an azure canvas completes the picture—truly a beautiful scene—a picture of Nature at her height.

But hark, what infidel curse pervades this holy atmosphere? What heavy step crushes the living carpet under foot? It is Man, Man with his cruel axe to strip the hillsides of the defenceless towering giants, to bring them crashing to earth where they will lie stunned and prone, no more to stretch forth their green-clad arms in rustling prayer to the Creator.

It is spring. The tall trees are gone now, and gone with them is the power to hold back the waters of the melting snow. Down the once fair slopes the exuberant streamlets eddy, tearing from the hillside the cushioned rug, and exposing the soil in long ugly scars. In the place of the gentle bounding and playful stream, a rushing torrent now seethes. Down into the valley it roars where it plays havoc with the lives and homes of men.

This is a picture of nature seeking revenge.

Everywhere are cries of, "Flood! Flood!" and men despondently watching their homes being carried away pray that they may be spared from further ragings of nature such as this. But no, it is not from the beserk ways of nature that they should ask for deliverance, but from the gluttony of their fellow men who for some monetary gain desecrate these temples, shatter the delicate balance of nature, and make these ragings possible.

It took nature centuries to build up that beautiful spot, man, six months to tear it down. Every day, with wind and rain, the scars in the hillsides increase in depth and width. Nature fights to build them up again but is powerless. Each succeeding year the flood descends on the village below. It all ends in needless waste of time and money to rebuild these slopes, to insure man's safety.

Let us then in dealing with nature be conservative, and end this constant rearing down and building up, keeping in mind that nature has a set of laws and "nature, affronted, seeks vengeance."

MAURICE DEVENDORF IV-2

FREEDOM

For me a breath of sunshine air upon a hilltop high,
Where the winds toss the tree tops against a bright blue sky,

And the birds call with a free call as they fly on over,

Where my weary head can rest well in the sweet soft clover.

For me a place to lie and think and dream my cares away,

Where the world's whirl is out of mind and worries
hold no sway,

And my thoughts are in tune with the babbling brook as it bubbles by,

And instead of in a gully of worries deep my mind's on a throne on high.

THOMAS HEWETT IV-2

HOW TO KEEP AWAKE IN CLASS

When the teacher's voice drones monotonously, when all the stable objects in the room become hazy and float off into the distance with no regard for the laws of gravity, a definite need is felt for a formula which will insure wakefulness. I do not believe the answer to this serious problem which is confronting the youth of school age in the nation should be regarded lightly. If parents were asked to give a solution, their answer would undoubtedly be that if a proper amount of sleep were obtained at the proper time, there would be no problem. This solution, however, is promptly rejected by youth. In this case youth prefers the evil to the reform. But at the insistence of teachers, who feel that they must have the attention of their pupils, youth is endeavoring to placate their elders by at least a semblance of reform.

The solution found by students after much experiment is a sort of semi-conscious state in which they appear awake to the outsider's eye. This solution entails no unwanted sacrifice of time for sleeping outside of class. For success try the following rules: if possible try not to stumble sleepily into class, as this causes the teacher to be unusually watchful. When you take your usual place, assume an upright position. Although you may not be accustomed to rest in this manner, you must be prepared to experience some inconveniences. The next point, and here you have the secret of the whole affair, is to find an object somewhere in the room that is large enough to evoke little interest. If you are in Latin class, a bust of Caesar will serve your purpose. A globe of the world will lend itself to your project, if you should be in history class. Gaze steadily at the chosen object. Clear your head of all thoughts and have your mind a complete blank. For some of you, dear students, this will not be too difficult.

Gradually you will find yourself in a semi-conscious state, a mild state of hypnotism; you will be enjoying the benefits of relaxation of mind and at the same time appear alert and awake. If you follow these directions carefully, the result will be a perfect "E" on your report card.

JANE FITZGERALD IV-2

ESCAPE

It was a dark night—a windy night. Ominous clouds swung low over the great metropolis, draping it with obscurity and mystery. Crisp flakes of snow patted spitefully against the sidewalk, converting buildings and lamp posts into grotesque figures. The wind moaned mournfully and flung the snow around in blinding sheets, its wail ending in a shriek against the side of a building where a solitary figure was huddled. He seemed to be wandering aimlessly, without a destination.

Although it was a night when scarcely a person dared venture outside, a few hardy souls were abroad upon the streets, and as each one passed, barely noticing the unknown one, he drew himself closer into his wraps.

Often as he trudged along, he peered furtively about him as if expecting to see someone following him through the swirling particles. Had he committed some wicked crime from which he was running away? Did he fear detection by the police? Perhaps he thought to lose himself or rather his pursuers, in the furious mass of ice, flung hither and yon by an angry wind. Whatever his intention, he had chosen a frigid night, and it would serve his purpose well, although his personal discomfort must be great.

As he continued tramping through the banks of snow, the mysterious pedestrian seemed to be making his way into the residential district of the city. Street lights cast ghoully shadows in all directions, but they did not appear to concern him. In fact, a burden seemed to have been lifted from his shoulders and he walked with a springy step. At last he turned into a yard surrounded by an immense, now snow-capped hedge. The door of the house was thrown open. Evidently someone had been awaiting him. The invisible one sighed, "At last you are here!"
