SAR Here Waives Claim To Churchill

Times-Union AUG 18 1941

If Syracuse Chapter, Sons of the America Revolution, wants to ask Prime Minister Winston Churchill to become a member, Rochester Chapter will not compete for the honor, although Churchill's mother was born in Rochester.

So Stephen K. Pollard, president of Rochester Chapter, indicated today, although he admitted that the local group "would be tickled to death to claim Mr. Churchill."

The idea evidently occurred first to Syracuse Chapter members, who have decided that Churchill is eligible for SAR membership because he is a descendant of the Jerome family, some of whose members lived in Rochester for a time. Several members of the family settled at Pompey, Onondaga County, after the Revolution. Churchill's ancestors who fought for American independence were Sergt. Samuel Jerome, Maj. Lebbeus Hall and Private Reuben Murray. His mother was Jennie Jerome, born in Rochester in 1854.

The Syracuse organization investigated Churchill's genealogy, but apparently has gone no further than to declare him eligible for SAR membership. It is considered doubtful that the prime minister would care to apply for membership because of delicate patriotic considerations.

Walter H. Jeens Services Arranged

Final rites for Walter H. Jeens, 64, alderman from the 19th Ward for two terms prior to City Manager government, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the home, 344 Sawyer St. Burial will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Jeens, who died yesterday (Mar. 16, 1942), was in the printing business for many years. He was the first publisher of the Community News, 19th Ward paper.

He retired because of ill health and in the last few years had been an employee of the Park Department, working out-of-doors in Genesee Valley Park.

'Cuttings' from London

Editor Democrat and Chronicle:

I send you some cuttings from the London Times about Mr. Churchill. They may interest you.

Ten cigars given by Mr. Churchill to the Red Cross have realized 522 pounds, 10 shillings in London.

G. T. BURROWS,

164 Friar Street,
Reading, England.

'THE CUTTINGS'

MR. CHURCHILL'S PISTOL
Mr. Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, told his constituents in Paddington the following story of the Prime Minister:

Mr. Churchill was about to leave by aeroplane for the last sad journey to France. As we walked down the stairs together, with the rain pelting down outside, he looked extremely grave. Suddenly he turned to his butler and said: "Get my heavy pistol for me." I asked him why he wanted it. "Well," replied the Prime Minister, "If we are attacked by the enemy, I may be able to account for at least one German."

MR. CHURCHILL'S DEGREE FROM AMERICA

HOOD AND GOWN PRESENTED
Our Parliamentary Correspondent writes:

In June the Prime Minister received in absence the honorary degree of D.C.L. of the University of Rochester, New York. The degree was conferred by the President of the University in an address by wireless, to which Mr. Churchill replied in the same way from 10, Downing Street. The hood and gown of the degree and the scroll recording the award have recently been handed to the Prime Minister by Professor Noel Hall—who is in charge of economic warfare work with the rank of Minister at the British Embassy in Washington—during a visit to London. Professor Noel Hall was present at the University when the degree was conferred and Mr. Churchill heard from him a personal description of the ceremony. In his broadcast acknowledgment of the degree Mr. Churchill mentioned his special interest in Rochester, which was the birthplace of his mother and the city where his grandfather conducted the newspaper Plain Dealer.

Editor's note: We are grateful for Mr. Burrows' thoughtfulness, but we wish to amend the London Times and, if we are not too impertinent, Mr. Churchill's statement with reference to the newspaper his grandfather, Leonard Jerome, once conducted in Rochester. It was the Rochester Daily American, not the Plain Dealer. No newspaper by the name 'Plain Dealer' ever was issued in Rochester so far as we have been able to discover. The American, after Mr. Jerome and his brother Lawrence had relinquished ownership, was combined with the Democrat as the Democrat and American in the fifties. The name American later was dropped and in 1870 the Chronicle combined with the Democrat to be known ever after as the Democrat and Chronicle. We're proud of even this remote and rather tenuous connection we have with Britain's Prime Minister, and also of the fact that for much of his life he was a newspaper correspondent.

City Boasts Churchill Ties

Britain's fighting Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, who arrived in Washington yesterday to confer with President Roosevelt, has strong ties with Rochester.

In his autobiography, "A Roving Commission," Churchill wrote:

"In the early part of the 19th Century my grandfather, Leonard Jerome, and one of his brothers, Larry, after graduating from Princeton University, moved to Rochester. Here they married two sisters, the Misses Halls. They built two small houses side by side. (These were in Fitzhugh Street between Spring and Troup). My grandfather had four daughters, and his brother had four sons. My mother, the second of Leonard Jerome's daughters, was born in Rochester in the year 1854."

Last June Churchill was given an honorary degree by the University of Rochester which he accepted in a transatlantic broadcast.

Last June Churchill was given an honorary degree by the University of Rochester which he accepted in a transatlantic broadcast.

Col. Lovell Jerome Dies in New York, 85

Col. Lovell Hall Jerome, 85, a native of Rochester, died yesterday, Jan. 17, 1935, in Lenox Hill Hospital, New York.

He was a brother of the late William Travers Jerome, former district attorney of New York who died in 1934.

Lovell Hall and William Travers Jerome were sons of a Rochester newspaper publisher, Leonard H. Jerome. Leonard R. Jerome and his brother, Lawrence, owned the Rochester Daily American which did not prove a success.

Lovell Hall Jerome was born in Rochester in 1849. Almost 60 years ago the veteran soldier was cited for "zeal and skill" in the Indian campaigns on the plains. He volunteered and acted as hostage for a Nez Perces Tribe chief in Montana Territory in 1877, the only case in old army records of an exchange of a hostage with the Indians. He was commissioned from the academy June 15, 1870, as a second lieutenant.

PREMIER STOCK

By W. D. Manning

ROCHESTERIANS who heard the voice of Great Britain's Premier recently, as he addressed the English-speaking world on the course of the war, may not know that Rochester and Palmyra had an important share in making that address possible.

At 88 South Fitzhugh St., in the heart of the Third Ward, a solid old brick house stands out from others on the east side of the street, between Spring and Troup. The house is a good two and a half stories high above the basement and is surmounted by an old style cupola. Wide brick chimneys at the sides show that at one time, fireplaces were the heating plant of the structure. Leading up from the street level to the front door are steps bordered by wrought iron railings. An iron railed balcony extends along the front of the house at the first floor level, and long windows open from the front room on the balcony. Under the wide overhang of the roof are the shallow windows of the top floor.

Obviously, the house belongs to the generous era of the 1840s, when families were large and guests were entertained lavishly, for weeks on end.

According to the Rochester Directory of 1849-50, published by Jerome and Brother, printers, the house, then numbered 63 South Fitzhugh St., was the home of Leonard W. and Lawrence R. Jerome, brothers, proprietors and publishers of the Rochester Daily American. Leonard W. Jerome was the maternal grandfather of Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, who now is Premier of Great Britain. In the renumbering of South Fitzhugh St., the old house became 88.

Miss Jennie Jerome, daughter of Leonard W. Jerome, in 1874 became the wife of Lord Randolph Churchill, and as Lady Randolph Churchill was one of the outstanding women of the Victorian era in London. Lord Randolph was the son of the seventh Duke of Marlborough. John Churchill, first Duke of Marlborough, was said to have been the greatest general Britain ever produced. Leonard W. Jerome was descended from Timothy Jerome, who with four brothers, was a soldier in the American army under George Washington.

On both sides, therefore, Winston Churchill comes of fighting stock.

Timothy Jerome settled at Pompey Hill, one of the highest points in Central New York. The village lies at the intersection of Route 20 with the road southward from Syracuse and commands an inspiring view over the surrounding country.

One of the grandsons of Timothy Jerome was Isaac, who married Aurelia Murray. They had 11 children, one of whom was Leonard W. The boys learned early to look after themselves. That they were enterprising is evident from the records, which show that Leonard and Lawrence, worked their way through Princeton and went to Albany to study law. Later they joined an uncle, Hiram K. Jerome, who had a law office in Palmyra and was a judge in Wayne County.

In 1842 or 1843, Leonard W. Jerome, his brother, Lawrence, and Uncle Hiram were in Rochester, where they opened a law office in a building which stood at Buffalo, now Main, and Exchange Streets. But the dry details of the law business could not hold the brothers long. In 1845 they took over the management of the Daily Democrat, with Leonard as the publisher and Lawrence in charge of advertising. Alexander Mann was editor.

It seems evident from available records that the Jerome brothers were popular and that they made good use of their opportunities for social and financial advancement. Lawrence had been married to a Miss Catherine Hall of Palmyra, and it seems likely she was mistress of the home in South Fitzhugh Street, where a number of brilliant social affairs are supposed to have taken place. On Apr. 5, 1849, Leonard Jerome and Clarissa Hall, sister of Catherine, were married in Palmyra and came to live in Rochester. The Hall sisters had inherited considerable property and were of engaging personality. They were of material assistance to Leonard and his brother in social and business matters.

Through their political affiliations the brothers made rapid progress. In 1850 Leonard was appointed United States Consul at Trieste and his brother was made deputy United States collector of revenue.

According to information from various sources, the business of the Daily American was profitable, although it is likely that the job printing plant was the source of most of the revenue. In addition to Leonard and Lawrence Jerome, their father and other members of the family appear to have had a share in the business.

However, when the political appointments were announced, the brothers sold out their interest in the newspaper to the staff and their friends.

Leonard and his young wife departed for Italy and did not return to Rochester, except for occasional visits. When they came back to America after the expiration of the consular term, they seem to have resided in Brooklyn for a time, since Lady Randolph Churchill left a record that she was born in Brooklyn in 1854. But for years the family home was in a pretentious house on Madison Square, New York, which then was the swanky residential section of the city.

Through fortunate investments, Leonard Jerome became a millionaire and was known as a leading patron of horse racing. Jerome Park, a former racecourse, was named in his honor. He also was a patron of the arts and was in the forefront of many progressive movements. At one time he was a member of the editorial staff of the New York Times.

Leonard Jerome is described as a magnificent specimen of manhood, with keen eyes, a pleasing voice and friendly manner. He died in 1891.

The Daily American in 1857 was merged with the Monroe Democrat to found the Daily Democrat and American, and in 1870, the Chronicle and Democrat and American were united to become the Democrat and Chronicle.

According to old records, the house at 88 South Fitzhugh St. formerly was united with a dwelling of similar design next door, by a bridge or covered passage. The other house has been removed.

A. H. Johnson Rites Scheduled for Saturday

Last rites for A. Howard Johnson, 274 Brunswick St.,

After bringing his bride back to Rochester, Leonard acquired the red brick house next to Lawrence's, and built a connecting passage so that the two brothers and two sisters and their offspring need not cross the lawn to visit. Clara, delighted at having an independent home of her own, created a framework of red plush, tasseled curtains, and dark mahogany furniture in which to entertain her husband's varied and "oh, so interesting friends." Chief of these was the brilliant young attorney-ethnologist, Lewis H. Morgan, who had been at Union College with Leonard. Morgan had just started writing up the customs of the Iroquois and defending the red man with an outraged sense of justice. He was also an expert on the beaver, and would sit in the Jerome parlor discussing with passion the unbelievable engineering feats of this little animal.

Daily Bible Passage

Matthew 7:21: Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

His Roots Are Here

For a few minutes today the ears of the world will be tuned to Rochester and London. It will glimpse the personal ties that bind the City and its University by the Genesee with the man whose late-accepted leadership gives Britain its best present hope of survival.

The Democrat and Chronicle takes particular pride in the event which will highlight the University of Rochester's ninety-first commencement. For Britain's leader, by vocation and inclination principally a journalist, no doubt derives from his maternal grandfather, Leonard Jerome, some of the spirit of restless inquiry, the keen perspective and the daring initiative which has made him equal to his present vital task.

These are qualities credited by local historians to the Rochester Daily American in which Leonard Jerome and his brother Larry became interested back in the forties. His Rochester newspaper adventure, in fact, was the first enterprise in which Leonard Jerome's brilliance and initiative were displayed; a genius which bore fruit in his later interest in the New York Times and in other metropolitan ventures which gave his supposedly Rochester-born daughter Jennie the chance to go abroad and to meet Lord Randolph Churchill, the Prime Minister's father.

The Daily American was absorbed by the older Democrat soon after Leonard Jerome left for New York, but he made a mark in Rochester journalism which starred its annals and built something into the strength of the newspaper we today are proud to serve.

Churchill's personal ties with Rochester make the conferring of a degree and his broadcast message to the University's exercises peculiarly appropriate; but for the country and for the world at large the event has larger significance.

For the principal speaker here today will be the American Undersecretary of War, Robert Patterson, and his message and Mr. Churchill's will be evidence of the close ties of spirit and courage which in the present crisis bind the two independent peoples closely together.

Something of the finest essence of the American and European democratic spirit will be recognized in the other degrees conferred.

Arthur Jennings Proposed For Judgeship Nomination

Irondequoit Democrats yesterday advanced J. Arthur Jennings, wealthy Rock Beach Road attorney, for special county judge in the wake of Republican opposition to the renomination of Judge Henry D. Shedd.

Jennings was defeated for Irondequoit supervisor two years ago by Supervisor Thomas E. Broderick. He is a Cornell graduate former president of the Cornell Club of Rochester, a member of the board of trustees of the Rochester School for the Deaf and a one-time president of the Rochester Historical Society.

J. ARTHUR
JENNINGS

A World War veteran, Jennings was reserve officer in the adjutant general's office.

Opposition to Judge Shedd's renomination is based entirely on the fact that he reaches the compulsory retirement age of 70 next January and hence could serve only one year of his three-year term if re-elected.

County Chairman Roy F. Bush, to whom Jennings' name was presented by Roger P. Hogan, Irondequoit leader, would not comment on this or other candidacies.

"There will be no candidates' names given out from Democratic headquarters," he said, "until the night of Aug. 7, when the executive committee meets."

Bush will speak today at the annual outing of his own 14th Ward organization at Dailey's Grove in Chili Avenue. Paul Krag is general chairman and Anna May Rush director of women's activities. Most of the Democratic town and ward leaders will attend.

Seventeenth Ward Democrats also will hold their annual picnic today at Schuetzen Park. Chairman Nelson Zulauf is assisted by a committee which includes Ray Lill, Agnes Fleming, Supervisor Harry Lill, George Fichtner, William Robinson, Elsie Schmitt and Louis Goldstein. Bush, Councilman Joseph E. Silverstein and others will be guests.

DEATH CLAIMS LE ROY ACTOR

Le Roy—Edward Gardner Jenkins, whose career covered telegraphy advertising, music and dramatics, died yesterday in Batavia Hospital where he had been a patient for a few days. He had resided in the home of Miss Mary J. Macauley at 42 Lake St., Le Roy, and became ill several weeks ago. Death was due to complications following grip.

He was born in New York City Jan. 6, 1861, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther T. Jenkins. His father was the first agent for the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railroad when the station was on the North Street site now occupied by the Jell-O plant. During that period Gardner learned telegraphy and for several years was a local operator for the railroad. When his father resigned the family moved to New York where he was engaged in the advertising business. He possessed ability as a pianist and spent 1½ years studying under masters in Germany.

Later he turned toward dramatics and was a member of casts in several of Charles Frohman's stage productions, in one of which he was in the same cast with Ethel Barrymore. During recent years he had passed considerable time in Caledonia, Florida and other sections but spent part of each year in Le Roy. He had no immediate survivors.

The body was brought to a mortuary here and will be taken tomorrow to the chapel in Machpelah Cemetery where funeral services will be held at 2 p. m., the Rev. Evan M. Jones, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial will be in the Jenkins family plot.

By Arthur P. Farren

"YOUR rifles, men! Ready to fire!"

Second Lieutenant Jenkinson had a queer, sinking, helpless feeling as he watched the airplane dive toward his little band of soldiers there in the Argonne. Fear seized him as he noted the mounted machine gun above the cockpit. An open field—no place to run. Down, down it roared, closer and closer. He raised his rifle—but the machine gun spat no fire of death.

"Hold it, men!" he yelled. The plane roared past, landing a few rods down the field. It was an American pursuit ship returning from a battle over the German lines.

"Yeah, that was about the most exciting moment of my life," Jenkinson admits. "That and dodging shrapnel from bursting shells."

They say the army builds men. George H. (Jenks) Jenkinson, hale and hearty at 65, is as fair proof of the statement as you'll find in these parts.

He loves the "military game." He's been in three campaigns in the past 40 years—the Philippine insurrection, the Mexican border campaign and the World War. For the past 32 years he has been armorer and superintendent of the New York State Armory in Main St. East. He doesn't expect to retire for five or six years.

"Don't see why I should," he remarks in deep basso. "This game is my hobby as well as my job—and I'm still plenty active. Besides, the young fellows around here are a tonic for advancing years—they keep me young."

Ever since the day when, as a lad of 10 in School 17, he donned cassock and surplice to sing soprano in an Episcopal Church choir, he has been identified with uniforms. Perhaps an inherited trait—his father, William H. Jenkinson, was a mail carrier for 40 years.

After four years as a telegraph messenger following grammar school, he became an elevator operator in the old Powers Block. Meanwhile, at 17, he joined the Rochester Light Infantry and at 21 enlisted in the National Guard, then stationed in the old Armory, now Convention Hall.

When the Spanish-American War broke out, Jenkinson was one of the first volunteers, but the war in Cuba ended while his regiment was awaiting orders in a southern training camp. He came back to Rochester a sergeant, resumed his elevator job.

Vivid are his recollections of the Philippines one year later. Half of the soldiers suffered malaria fever and dysentery some part of the two years there—and Jenkinson's four months in a hospital were no exception. His diary recounts his reactions to a typhoon on the way over; heat of more than 100 degrees; glimpses of the Spanish fleet sunk by Admiral Dewey in Manila Bay; 20 days' rainy season which delayed anchoring of a beef supply ship, when the men had nothing but canned salmon and native fruit every meal; wading rivers and Indian style skirmishing in the thickets.

Back from the island, Jenkinson was depot agent for the Wells-Fargo Express before topping a Civil Service exam in 1905 to be appointed chauffeur of the new Police Department patrol car, the city's first "Black Maria." Two years later he qualified as assistant armorer at the Armory and in 1911 succeeded Frank Parmelee as superintendent of the building.

Next came five "fairly uneventful" months on the Rio Grande during the Mexican campaign. Two years later he followed the colors to France, arriving shortly before armistice to fill shell holes with the pick and shovel division back of the lines and remaining with the army of occupation in Germany long enough to get to know and like the German people and learn some of their language.

Jenkinson entered the service a trim, 130-pound figure with a big black mustache. Today, heavy-set, clean-shaven and with hair that is more white than dark receding from a high forehead, he "takes a lot of kidding" about his expansive 232 pounds. Two months ago, he confesses, it was up to 264, but a dietary measure has been taking effect.

Two heavy rings adorn his fingers, a gold watch his wrist and a diamond his tie. He looks for all the world like a big business mogul. He smokes two packs of cigarettes daily, likes a pipe even better. His friends and acquaintances are legion, but he declares he has arrived at a point in life beyond lodge meetings and social gatherings which he so often patronized in the past, to a longing for his pipe, slippers and fireplace at 816 Garson Ave., where he "lives alone and likes it."

His interest in dramatics has waned since he used to take Irish parts in the old Criterion Dramatic Club. Fishing leads baseball and pinochle for his entertainment. "One of the most restful sports there is," he says. He is a member of several military and fraternal organizations.

His one pet subject? "I'd like to see more of our young fellows 'do a hitch' with the National Guard," he declares. "You can't imagine the difference it makes in the life of a young man."

POLITICAL TALK ON 'DON'T' LIST OF JACOBSTEIN

Ex - Congressman
Back from Capital

By EMMET N. O'BRIEN

Dr. Meyer Jacobstein, the Democrat whose political career still is the sensation in Monroe County annals, came home yesterday to talk about labor, the nation, business, and the Brookings Institution—but not politics.

DR. MEYER

harness."

The economist-banker-publisher seemed to be smiling when he said it and the questions he later asked about Rochester and environs demonstrated that the virus born when he upset all tradition by defeating the Republican organization twice in winning a seat in Congress was not completely dead.

But talk about it?

"No," he said, lounging in the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Thaler, 1551 Monroe Ave., Brighton. "I'm out of politics."

Perhaps he could talk about the labor situation.

Cites Lack of Evidence

"I attended most of the hearings of the Smith Committee investigating the labor board," he offered. "All of the 17 amendments the committee recommended to the House of Representatives are not supported by evidence thus far produced. The 17 changes proposed might be good or bad."

In general does Washington feel that way?

that it is strange the committee should make such sweeping recommendations before its investigation is concluded. The recommendations judging from Washington conversation, seem to give color there to the charge the committee is biased.

Jacobstein observed the Smith committee either would not be in existence or its report would not be so drastic if both camps of labor were united.

Perhaps they will get together soon?

"There is very little talk of that. The absence of talk is being taken as a sign of the hopelessness of the situation."

Can't Answer This One

Not as a former officeholder or staff member of a nonpolitical organization but as an experienced Washington observer, does he think President Roosevelt will run again?

"He has everyone guessing. Me too. Frankly, I don't know."

The former representative was not so doubtful in discussing the broad survey of welfare Brookings is making in co-operation with 10 universities and the Rochester Municipal Research Bureau. The field work has just been finished and within a year the report should be ready. Dr. Jacobstein organized the field program and Prof. Lewis Merian will handle the analytical details.

"It is designed to find out the whys and wherefores of welfare. What it is, what is needed. Should there be WPA? Should there be federal or local control, a combination of those, or state and local control with federal financial help?

Ready by Spring of '41

"The government is making a similar survey of its own agencies but is not doing field work. Both reports should be ready by spring of next year."

Any suggestions now?

"Not on that. The biggest problem before the nation is unemployment. Production is increasing and in some lines is back to 1929 levels but employment has not followed. That's the problem to solve."

JAMESON BACK TO WAIT AUDIT

RVE Rochester, Bingham - 3

Deputy County Treasurer Arthur H. Jameson was back home but incommunicado last night.

Suspended indefinitely by County Manager Smith on May 21, Jameson was reported on a camping trip when the news of his suspension leaked out on May 25. His wife reported his return last night but said he was "out for a walk." A succession of later calls failed of response at the Jameson home in Churchville.

Courthouse gossip has it that Jameson will retire as deputy county treasurer, regardless of the outcome of an audit of county Treasury Department books ordered by Smith as Jameson's absence. Jameson became eligible for retirement two years ago.

Mrs. Jameson would not reveal where her husband was on his camping trip. State Comptroller's examiners have been invited to study the books in Jameson's department as well as a private firm of auditors acting under Smith's directions. D. & C. JUN 7 1937

Rich Newsie, Native, Dies

RVE Bingham - 3

Mose Jacobs, the world's richest newsboy, a native of Rochester, is dead.

Mose was stricken with a heart attack yesterday afternoon at a downtown intersection in Los Angeles, Calif. He died almost instantly. Seventy-seven years old, he had retired from the business that netted him a fortune.

From rags to riches, his life story read like an Alger novel. Born in 1860, he went to work when he was 4. Going to Des Moines, Iowa, he acquired fame and fortune as a newsboy. It is reported he made $100,000 selling newspapers. He went to Los Angeles in 1922. D. & C. AUG 25 1937

Mose Jacobs' memory was legendary. It is said that he would meet a person and 40 years later call him by name and tell him the name of his home town newspaper. Jacobs is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Jacobs; a son, Leo Jacobs of Los Angeles; two brothers, Louis Jacobs of Tulsa, Okla., and Isaac Jacobs of Joplin, Mo., and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Press of Des Moines and Mrs. Hannah Turbin of Chicago.

Ex-Rochesterian Urges Group To Map Post-War Labor Policy

Feyer Jacobstein, former Rochesterian now associated with the Brookings Institution, was one of the speakers before a House labor subcommittee yesterday when it was urged to approve legislation creating a special commission to develop a post-war employment program and forestall economic dislocations when the present national emergency ends.

Jacobstein suggested, according to The Associated Press, that the proposed commission should not confine its study to "things that might have to be done after the emergency" but should "be on the alert right now making an appraisal of the policies currently being put into operation."

Representative Voorhis (D., Calif.), sponsor of a resolution to create a 12-man group, told the subcommittee the commission's purpose would be "to work out a long-range basic program which will reasonably assure the continuous full operation of our industries, a decent and fair income to agriculture, and above all, the full employment of our people not only now, but in the years to come."

Voorhis said the commission would be composed of three senators, three House members and six persons appointed by President Roosevelt.

TREASURY AIDE
DUE BACK FOR WORK MONDAY

RVF Biography, 3.
Expected to Take Advantage of His Rights

Retirement of Arthur H. Jameson deputy county treasurer, within a few weeks after he returns to work Monday was forecast freely in Courthouse and political circles last night.

High Republicans acknowledged it was their "understanding" the veteran county employe would take advantage of his retirement rights as soon as possible after his return following a two-months suspension.

County Manager Clarence A. Smith, who suspended Jameson pending an audit of accounts dealing with sale of tax liens, ordered him reinstated this week when the county's audit by Wilson, Shults & Co. gave the deputy a clean bill of health.

Jameson could not be reached last night at his Churchville home. It was reported there he would not be back until this afternoon.

The deputy has been eligible for retirement for several years. During the term of the late County Treasurer James I. Morrall, Democrat, he sought to retire but was persuaded by Morrall to remain on the job because of his intimate knowledge of county financial affairs and procedure.

Lifting of the suspension and report of the auditors failed to stir Democratic supervisors.

"Nothing to say," said Jacob Komenski, Eighth Ward supervisor and board minority leader. "I'll wait until the state auditors complete their investigation."

County books still were being coned yesterday by a staff of experts from the office of State Comptroller Morris Tremaine, under direction of Harry Williams. They are expected to be on the job for several months.

ARTHUR H. JAMESON

RVF Biography, 3.
A. H. Jameson,
Treasury Aide,
Retires at 62

Arthur H. Jameson, deputy county treasurer, was retired today on a pension.

Jameson voluntarily submitted his resignation to County Manager Clarence A. Smith who said he has not considered anyone for the position which pays $5,000 a year.

Jameson, who is 62 and a resident of Churchville, has been an employe of the county treasurer's office 43 years. A Republican, he was retained as deputy when the late James I. Morrall, Democrat, assumed charge of the office in October, 1934.

He continued in the position after the new county manager form of government was installed here Jan. 1, 1936, although he had been eligible to retire on a pension in May, 1935.

Following his temporary suspension by County Manager Smith last spring while an inquiry was initiated by Smith into the system of selling county tax certificates, Jameson was exonerated of any responsibility in connection with sales of the certificates and has continued as deputy county treasurer since.

He had previously made several requests to be permitted to retire on a pension.

Jameson said today he has no plans for the future other than to "enjoy a rest."

Bookkeeping System in Sale of Tax Certificates Scored by Auditors —Changes Put into Effect

Deputy County Treasurer Arthur H. Jameson got a clean bill of health yesterday.

Under suspension since May 21 pending an audit of his accounts, he was reinstated with all previous prerogatives by County Manager Smith yesterday following the auditors' report.

Two provisions of the report moved Smith immediately to call Jameson at his home in Churchville and instruct him to return to work Monday without prejudice. They were:

1. "Our examination did not reveal any discrepancies other than what might be termed clerical errors, and Monroe County received in full all monies to which it is entitled under provisions authorizing the sale of tax certificates."

2. A statement that Bonded Municipal Corporation, which purchases tax certificates from the county, has paid to the county about $29,000 more than it has yet received back from delinquent taxpayers.

Of this second point, Smith said:

"It would seem reasonable to believe that Bonded Municipal would have purchased tax certificates only on properties on which taxes and penalties had been paid, had there been collusion between the company and anyone in the county treasurer's office."

System Criticized

The audit covers the sale of county-owned tax certificates to the Bonded Municipal Corporation from Oct. 2, 1936, to June 28, 1937. Such sales were authorized by the Board by unanimous vote on Sept. 1, 1936.

While the auditing company, Wilson, Shultz & Co., failed to discover any discrepancies in accounts, it was nevertheless highly critical of the system of keeping the books on the sale of tax certificates.

"The records show," said their report, "that before certificates were issued to the Bonded Municipal Corporation, the county

"a large number of taxpayers had paid their taxes and penalties and that taxes and penalties (accruing after Aug. 20, 1936), were subsequently remitted to the Bonded Municipal Corporation."

In such cases, the county merely acted as a collecting agent for Bonded Municipal and turned over, not only the amount of back taxes paid to it by the delinquent taxpayer, but also penalties for delayed payment. These delinquencies run to high rates and reach as high as 25 per cent.

Recommendations Made

The auditors recommended:

1. If the county continues the sale of tax certificates, that it install records that will show readily the transaction of each sale from beginning to end.

2. That the list in duplicate of tax delinquencies should be prepared in advance so that purchasers of certificates may have opportunity to signify their intention to purchase and pay for such certificates prior to communicating with the taxpayer.

3. The list of tax sale certificates should be so compiled as to provide for the recording date and amount of taxes and penalties paid. Says the report in this connection:

"Any properties for which the taxes are paid prior to the date of sale of the certificate, should be eliminated from the schedule, so that the penalties paid by the taxpayer prior to the time the tax sale certificates are delivered to the purchaser, accrue to the county."

Smith said the recommendations were of merit and the changes suggested had been put into effect. He said the report would be submitted to the Board of Supervisors at its August meeting.

State examiners are making a separate audit at the request of the Board, but this is unfinished. The state accountants also will delve into the records of all other county departments, in accordance with the Board's request.

Expert Guide Lost in City

Gaetan Jannone, head of a European railroad tourist service, has shepherded thousands of tourists from one end of Europe to the other.

But in Rochester, the city of his birth, he is lost if he strays more than a few blocks from the home of his relatives.

Jannone, who holds a doctor of economics degree from the University of Naples, moved to Italy in 1910 when he was but six years old.

So his memories of Rochester were a bit vague when he returned for the first time a few days ago to visit his aunt, Mrs. Pauline Jannone of 301 Smith Street.

His title now fills half a calling card:

"Chef du Bureau des Congres Foires Expositions, Service du Tourisme Compagnie Internationale des Wagon Lits."

Jannone came to this country in an attempt to induce the government to enter an exhibition in the Paris Fair which will be held from May to October.

"The war scare has put a damper on the tourist trade," he said. "The people themselves don't want war but they have no control over the big fellows."

Jannone is a cousin of Dr. Richard A. Leonardo, coroner, and Jerry Leonardo of the County attorney's office. For several years after his graduation he was a guide for a tourist bureau.

Sagamore Manager Ends Service After 3-Year Term

Manager of the Sagamore Hotel since March, 1938, Lee W. Johnson yesterday left its employ.

Confirmation of the vacancy in the management was made last night by Robert T. Dwyer, attorney and president of the Sagamore Hotel Corporation. Dwyer said that no successor to Johnson has yet been selected. Until a new manager is obtained, Dwyer will supervise the hotel's operation. Johnson could not be reached last night for comment on his plans.

Although he came here from the Buffalo Athletic Club in 1933, he previously had seen service in Rochester at Powers Hotel for about a year and a half. In Buffalo he also was manager of the Fairfax Hotel for some time. He is a native of Syracuse.

During his stay here he was popular with patrons of the hotel and made many friends in the city. He was active in affairs of the Rochester Stewards' Club.

DINNER HONORS HEAD OF HOTEL

Business, professional and civic leaders of the city to the number of 50 gathered at the Rochester Club yesterday noon for a testimonial dinner to Lee W. Johnson, for nearly two years manager of the Sagamore Hotel.

Their reason, the Rev. George Gettell, pastor of St. Mary's Church and one of the speakers, explained, was to demonstrate to Johnson that the city appreciated his work at the hotel and in behalf of civic ventures.

Mayor Samuel B. Dicker, in extending the city's official felicitations, referred to past difficulties between the city and the Sagamore over taxes, pointing to concessions made by the city in unpaid tax charges.

"In making our concession to the Sagamore," Mayor Dicker said, "we were swayed primarily by the feeling that under the management of Lee Johnson, the benefits to be derived by the hotel would benefit the City of Rochester. I am glad to say that we have not changed that view."

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in the home, with burial in Evergreen Cemetery, Bristol.

Rail Engineer Retires at 63

Walter Johnson, 65 Wednesday, of 73 Silver St., has retired as an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Johnson has a 36-year record of no serious railroad accidents. For 12 years he has been a switch engineer here.

He's seen some bad train wrecks, but all of them in the 20 years he was "pusher" engineer, aiding trains over the steep Keating hill grade near Emporium, Pa.

He began at the bottom starting as a section hand and fireman. "I'm going to rest up and then perhaps travel," he said today. Incidentally he's not a relative of Walter Johnson, former big league pitcher.

THOMAS S.
JOHNSTON

JOHNSTON, LAND BROKER, DIES

Grafton Johnson, nationally known millionaire real estate operator, was dead today at his home in Greenwood, Ind., at seventy.

Word of his death was received here last night by William C. Daley, former Rochester representative of Johnson during his development of tracts in Irondequoit, Brighton and Pittsford. Daley and Mrs. Daley will leave tonight to attend funeral services at Greenwood tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Johnson operated in real estate in more than a hundred cities, his activities here centering in suburban developments from 1919 through 1929.

He was one of the largest manufacturers of canned goods in the country following the World War, selling his plants in 1927 and in the same year he disposed of hardwood veneer plants, said to have been the largest in the world.

He was also at one time owner of the Fame Laundry System, operating in twenty-two western cities. He was for thirty-five years chairman of the board of trustees of Franklin University at Franklin, Ind.; president of the First National Bank of Greenwood, Ind., and actively identified with the Baptist Church.

Mr. Johnson's last visit to Rochester was in 1932. During the high point of his real estate developments from 1921 through 1927, which was followed by the Irondequoit fraud trials, resulting in indictments of contractors and town officials, settled by a $600,000 payment by Oliver Costich. Mr. Johnson visited the city once a month.

General Realty Service, Inc., of which Daley was president, acted as Mr. Johnson's agent in his developments here from 1921, when the Summerville Boulevard tract was opened. His last big development was Council Rocks Estates in Brighton five years ago. Sales value of property he owned in Rochester was estimated at more than $6,000,000.

Three years ago, Mr. Johnson was sued by the Town of Irondequoit to recover $250,000 in unpaid taxes, the town securing a writ of attachment on his properties in the county. This attachment was vacated by the Appellate Division and in May, 1931, the town board accepted a settlement of $45,000, less $12,000 in costs of the litigation.

D. & C. JUL 4 1938 Rochesterian Speaks At Gettysburg Rites

With a Rochesterian as one of the principal speakers, memorial services were conducted yesterday on the battlefield of Gettysburg, where she was killed, for Miss Mary Virginia Wade, R.F. Eng. 3.

Miss Wade, 20 when she fell under Civil War bullets, was the only woman killed during the three-day action. John White Johnston of the Rochester Historical Society, gave an address in her honor after the religious memorial service.

Bandman Regains Treasured Bagpipe

D. & C. JAN 12 1938
John White Johnston, owner and founder of the Johnston Memorial Pipe Band, got back his treasured bagpipe yesterday.

Through an order by County Judge William F. Lynn, the leader of the kilted bagpipers received his instrument from Charles E. Ewart, former band member, who claimed Johnson had given him the bagpipe as security for a carpenter bill.

When he took the matter before Judge Lynn last Dec. 23, Johnston claimed he had only lent the bagpipe to Ewart and that Ewart had failed to return it. Ewart contended the band leader owed him $24 for alterations made on the band headquarters at 75 Plymouth Ave. N. Judge Lynn disallowed the counterclaim brought by Ewart for payment of the bill.

C. T. Johnstone, Advertising Executive Dies

Charles W. Johnstone, 69, former Rochesterian and widely-known New York advertising executive, died unexpectedly yesterday at his home in Jamaica, Long Island.

He obtained most of his business experience in Rochester, where he was made a life member of the Rochester Lodge of Elks.

He was the founder and president of the Johnstone Advertising and Sales Service. He was born in Thompsonville, Conn., July 10, 1871.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ida M. Johnstone, and a son, Edmund F. Johnstone. Last rites will be held at his home at 146-02 88th Ave., Jamaica, at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Fumigating Gas Kills Storeman

Services were being arranged today for Robert K. Johnston, 38, of 857 Clinton St., who was found dead yesterday (July 4, 1944) in the living quarters in the rear of a cigar and magazine store he conducted.

His body was found by a fumigating company representative in a gas-filled room. Police said he apparently went into the building despite warnings of the fumigating company. They said he had spent the evening in two neighborhood grills.

His body bore several injuries, including a cut over one eye, two brush burns, a lip cut and a broken nose. Dr. David H. Atwater, coroner, said the cuts and bruises were suffered before Johnston died. Police Capt. Edward Fisher speculated they may have been caused by a fall downstairs. Dr. Atwater issued a certificate of accidental death due to the gas.

Besides his wife, Cora Duste Johnston, the victim leaves his mother, Mrs. Fannie Johnston, Geneva; one sister, Mrs. Madeleine Sawdey, and four brothers, Ernest, Harry and William Johnston of Geneva and James Johnston of the U. S. Army.

HE CHASED MAP AROUND HERE

COMPARATIVELY few Rochesterians knew intimately—or had even seen—Grafton Johnson, millionaire real estate operator who is dead in Greenwood, Indiana, at seventy, although he often came here.

But his name was familiar to most of us.

First, as a rather spectacular and daring developer of real estate sub-division in the suburbs of Rochester; in more recent years because of conspicuous repetition on back tax rolls.

It is said that no less than twenty-five tracts were opened by him here and that millions of dollars were poured into building loans by him over a period of years.

The thing which many persons are inclined to forget is that most of these tracts were successful and that street after street in many of them are now built up with splendid homes.

What they are disposed to remember are the ones which were not built upon when the crash came to Wall Street that was heard around the world—the ones now tangled with weeds.

Undoubtedly, "developing" was overdone.

Although no one seemed to realize it then.

But Rochester has grown because men have had faith in its future and were willing to take chances, even though some of them did not turn out so well as had been anticipated.

Mr. Johnson was certainly one of these.

Give credit, then, to what he achieved in building here, instead of thinking only of mistakes which were accentuated by a change in the tide of fortune for millions of men everywhere.

JOHNSON RITES SET TOMORROW IN GREENWOOD

Wealthy Real Estate Operator Who Developed Property Here and Was Sued by Towns Dies, 70

Funeral services for Grafton Johnson, 70, wealthy real estate operator, responsible for the sensational development of sub-divisions in Irondequoit and Brighton, who died Aug. 16 in his home in Greenwood, Ind., will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home.

News of his death was received last night by William C. Daley, former representative of Mr. Johnson in Rochester, of 64 Thackery Road, Brighton. It was said Mr. Johnson had been ill for some time and in a coma for the past four days. Mr. and Mrs. Daley said they would attend the funeral services. The Real Estate Board of Rochester met today to draft a resolution of sympathy today.

Mr. Johnson was a bachelor. He is survived by a brother and several sisters.

Had Extensive Holdings

Mr. Daley in 1919, then in charge of subdivisions for General Realty Service Inc., and since 1921 its president, interested Mr. Johnson in Rochester suburban developments. With the General Realty Company acting as sales operator the first Grafton Johnson tract, the Summerville Boulevard Tract, extending from Ridge Road to Titus Avenue, was opened in 1919. Five years ago he developed the Council Rock Estates in Brighton. He owned about 8,000 lots in Rochester, Irondequoit and Brighton. The sales value was estimated at $6,000,000.

The towns in which he carried on his developments on a major scale, especially Irondequoit and eventually found themselves in financial difficulties, largely through an increasing assessment of unpaid taxes levied against the Johnson properties. It was said Johnson paid assessments only on property which his company had sold, leaving the unsold property open to tax liens.

Town Brought Suit

Three years ago Supervisor Thomas E. Broderick representing the Town of Irondequoit brought suit against Mr. Johnson for $250,000 for alleged unpaid taxes. A writ of attachment on the Johnson properties in Monroe County was secured but later ordered vacated. In May, 1931, at a special election of taxpayers of Irondequoit, a settlement was ratified whereby the town accepted $45,000 on certain properties and left the full tax debt in force. The town agreed to pay attorneys' fees and court costs estimated at $12,000.

It was reported before the market crash, Mr. Johnson provided nearly $2,000,000 in building loans to Rochester builders.

For 35 years Mr. Johnson was chairman of the board of trustees of Franklin University, Franklin, Ind., and was president of the First National Bank of Greenwood, Ind. He was an active member of the Baptist Church.

In 1919 he was one of the largest manufacturers of staple canned goods in the United States. He sold his canning plants in 1927 and in the same year disposed of hardwood veneer mills. At one time he owned the Fame Laundry System with laundries in 22 Western cities, which he sold in 1929. Mr. Johnson last visited Rochester in 1932. He lived in a palatial home and had a zoo on his estate which boasted several bears and lions.

Among the tracts developed by Johnson in association with Mr. Daley as sales representatives, besides six Summerville Boulevard tracts and Council Rocks Estates, were: Laurelton Subdivision in Irondequoit, 2,000 lots; East Avenue Estates, developed from five farms in East Avenue, Pittsford, where 1,000 lots were opened, the balance of the property being sold by Johnson to Oak Hill Country Club after it disposed of its original site to the University of Rochester for its River Campus; Seneca Ridge Tract at St. Paul Street and Ridge Road, 500 lots, and Lake Shore Tract, the latter being one of the earlier developments, 600 lots.

D. & C. APR 24 1943

In City and Nation

Rochester long has had a reputation of having more eminently skilled physicians and surgeons than the average city of its size. Many of these not only have been well recognized in their profession but in the civic life of the community as well. Death of Dr. Thomas Jameson removes one of these. For years his name has been high among the surgeons whom the community held in high honor. His modest personality matched his recognized skill. He long will be remembered as setting standards for his fellow practitioners and in community service.

Six volunteers of the Brighton Department and Chief Glenn H. Ewell will attend the services in uniform as an honor guard, two men coming from each of the Brighton companies. Other members of the department will attend in a body, along with Brighton town officers and townspeople. Brighton policemen will direct traffic at the service.

Brighton firehouses have been draped and the department has canceled all social activities planned for the next 30 days, it was announced last night following a special meeting at the Landing Road Firehouse. The department authorized Town Clerk George E. Gordon to draw up a memorial resolution to be spread in its minutes and presented to Johnston's parents.

Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause of the blaze in the garage at 145 Eastland Ave. by Brighton Battalion Chief Robert Nuehler, who was nearly trapped in the collapsing structure with Johnston.

Nuehler said a quantity of paint was stored in the blind attic of the garage when the fire started. It was the flareup of the paint when the ceiling fell in that threw up a curtain of flame, making it impossible for fellow firemen to rescue Johnston. His body was found two feet inside the doorway.

He and the battalion chief were playing a booster line on the fire in the garage of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Epstein when the roof suddenly collapsed.

Johnston is survived by his parents, his twin brother, Allan F., and a sister, Miss Mary M. Johnston.

DEATH CLAIMS PIONEER AT 85

Funeral services for Frederick Joyes, 85, of 18 Portsmouth Ter., one of Rochester's first horse car drivers, will be held Wednesday at 8:30 a. m. in his home and in Blessed Sacrament Church at 9.

FREDERICK JOYES

Mr. Joyes, who died Saturday (March 30, 1940), was born in Melgs Street, which then was mostly farm land and pasture. He had his first experience with horse-drawn vehicles in working for his father, who owned 12 of the animals which he used in delivering feed, coal, wood and moving furniture.

In young manhood, he went to work for the Rochester Street Railway Company, driving on the Lake Avenue and Mt. Hope Avenue line. Rochester then was known as the Flour City. The Four Corners, where a hand-operated turntable occupied the center of the intersection, was the hub of the town. Besides his duties of driving, Joyes also broke in horses sent to the company from the Midwest and acted as instructor to new drivers. His weekly wage for seven 14-hour tricks was $12. His car bore the first fare recording indicator to be used in the city.

For some time he drove a car on the East Main-University Avenue line and had the distinction of driving the company directors on the trial run when the tracks were extended to Portsmouth Terrace. He drove Car 119, the first car in which a coal stove was installed.

Leaving the transit company after six years, he went to work at Chase Brothers Nursery, where he was employed when the first electric trolley cars were introduced and wires were strung along streets over which he had driven horse cars. In 1938, he suffered injuries to his legs and retired from the nursery.

Surviving him are three sons, Earl T., Raymond F. and Wilbur A.; seven daughters, Mrs. Frank Lagler, Mrs. Frank Geer, Mrs. Morton Brule, Mrs. Francis Bower, Mrs. Martin Levis, Mrs. Ethel Yaw and Mildred Joyes; 16 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Burial will be in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery.

FRANKLIN W. JUDSON

JUDSON NAMED BANK OFFICER IN NEW SETUP

Election of Franklin W. Judson, for the last 13 years executive vicepresident of First Industrial Bank and its forerunners, as assistant vicepresident of Rochester Trust & Safe Deposit Company, was announced yesterday by George H. Hawks, president of the company.

Rochester Trust on May 26 announced that through purchase of the capital stock of First Industrial it had acquired that institution. Tuesday First Industrial will become a branch of Rochester Trust and in his new position as an officer of Rochester Trust Judson will continue as manager of the branch at the same office he has occupied for 13 years.

Educated in the public and high schools of Rochester, Judson moved to a farm in Gates at the age of 16, where he still resides.

He early entered political life as a Republican, serving as town assessor for nine years. He went to the New York State Assembly on Jan. 1, 1915 and served for eight terms through 1922. He was chairman of the committee on taxation and introduced the bill which became the New York State Income Tax Law. During this period, he was assistant secretary of the Rochester Exposition and Horse Show for four years.

In 1922, he was elected and served a term as sheriff of Monroe County. In 1928, he was one of the incorporators of the Morris Plan Company of Rochester, becoming a director and the executive vicepresident of the Morris Plan Bank with the opening of its doors on Oct. 18, 1928. He has held that office since that time, although the company's name was changed to Morris Plan Industrial Bank in 1934 and to First Industrial Bank in 1938.

Clubman-Poloist Asks for Receiver

Robert F. Jones, well known poloist and clubman, yesterday asked Federal Court to appoint a receiver for his Clover Heights Farm, Pittsford.

Listing claims of $49,993 and assets of $22,629, he asked permission for creditors to elect a committee and to offer the farm's dairy business for sale. The farm was damaged by fire last year.

In his petition, Jones, the son of the late Lewis B. Jones who was advertising manager of the Eastman Kodak Company, stated that the present value of the real estate "was unknown."

Why Give Up Islands?

In a letter to the editor of The Democrat and Chronicle, W. Martin Jones Jr. of Rochester directs attention to the fact that his father, W. Martin Jones Sr., who died in 1906 after a long and useful career, was the first to propose the purchase of the Philippines from Spain, following the defeat of the Spanish fleets in Manila Bay and at Santiago.

In an editorial which appeared in The Democrat and Chronicle May 4, 1906, the day following Mr. Jones' death, it was pointed out that Mr. Jones "prepared an elaborate and original article in favor of paying a sum of money to Spain in consideration of our retention of the Philippines." The editorial asserts that Mr. Jones' paper was the first extended plea made for such action and that in the negotiations which followed, the idea set forth in the argument was adopted and the payment of $20,000,000 for the islands was made.

That fact is worth remembering when Nazi-inspired Spanish newspapers proclaim the time has come to have the Philippines returned to Spain. The agitation in the islands for complete independence is evidence enough that the Philippines want no Spanish masters. The recent counter movement among intelligent Filipinos for a continuance of American control and protection seems to indicate that American benevolent guardianship is preferred to Japanese military rule.

In any event, Mr. Jones' letter, recalling that America purchased the right to clean up the Philippines and set them in the way of progress, at the suggestion of a Rochesterian, his father, is most timely. Why even consider giving up the Philippines, especially under threats by international bullies?

He Mixes Football and Classics

U. R. Soph Only One to Take Both Latin and Greek

Arthur Jones throws Virgil for a loss . . .

Pursuit of the classics may be waning in an era of specialization, but there is husky evidence that it has not yet faded entirely from the university panorama.

Husky evidence at the University of Rochester is Arthur E. Jones, 174-pound sophomore football player, star swimmer, and the only classical student taking both Greek and Latin on the River Campus.

The only student in the men's advanced Virgil class, Jones is more or less unique. "It makes it a little difficult to cut the class," he says, "for if I'm not there, it's sure to be noticed."

Jones not only pursues Virgil, Catullus and Horace, but he has encyclopedic tendencies, believing that the more one knows about more things the better off he is. He figures that the more he knows, the easier it will be for him to find a job, which is, he says, "why I came to college."

Jones rises to the defense of the so-called "dead languages." "Do you call them dead?" he asks. "Only those languages can be called dead in which nothing living has been written. Will anyone question the enduring power of those works which have already passed their 2000th anniversary?"

Jones declares his courses are interesting despite the fact that most college students seem to avoid them studiously. He is pointing toward teaching as a career and meanwhile mixes lengthy swims in the college tank with his Greek and Latin and football and English. Last year he won the Speegel swimming marathon by covering 46 miles in a month.

Making Friends Chief Recreation Of Second District Assemblyman

Times-Union MAR 10 1937

(Sixth of a series from the Albany Bureau of The Times-Union telling what Monroe County legislators are doing.)

Young Stephen S. Joy, Monroe County's Second District Assemblyman, has known what it is to work since his earliest school days.

In the best American tradition is the manner in which he made his way through high school and college, plugging away at odd jobs through his preparatory days and driving dump trucks in his college vacations.

Born on a farm in Fredonia, one of a family of two boys and four girls, Joy is now 31. He graduated from high school there and took a post-graduate course while earning money for college.

Entered Canisius

In the fall of 1926, he entered Canisius College at Buffalo and left there to enroll in Buffalo Law School in 1928. After graduating in 1931, he had a choice of serving his clerkship in Fredonia or of coming to Rochester to live with a married sister. He chose the latter and was admitted to the Bar in 1933.

Born with a natural love of music, Joy did not neglect this talent. He studied the violin in high school. He played two seasons with a Dunkirk Symphony Orchestra and took a summer course at the Eastman School of Music in 1926, before entering college.

Now that he has reached the eminence of New York State's Assembly, playing the violin is his second choice of recreation. Making friends, he declares, is his first choice.

Picket Bill Offered

Because he is young and because this is his first term at Albany, his record is still to be made. He cast his first vote as recently as 1928, when he was in Law School. Since he first came here in January, he has been attentive, industrious and friendly.

Elected on the Democratic ticket with strong labor backing, he has been most interested in labor legislation. The only bill he has presented so far is designed to ease restrictions over picketing in strikes.

Joy is and will continue to be entirely "regular" in all controversial measures. He voted for social security. There is no reason to think he will oppose the 4-cent gasoline tax, or any other bill sponsored by Governor Lehman. Minimum wage legislation for women and minors has his support.

No orator, Joy is unlikely to win his way by speech-making. A faithful party man, such future success as he attains politically is likely to arise from party loyalty, friendliness and industry.

By Edmund W. Peters

TALK about thrills! Every plane pilot gets his share, they say. Why listen to what happened to Franklin A. (Skyrocket) Jones and an employe one day:

Taking off from Buffalo, Jones noted everyone waving at him as he soared skyward. "They must be sorry to see me go," he reasoned, and waved back.

Upon landing here he discovered that his tailskid had ensnared 200 feet of wire on the take-off, which had miraculously eluded high tension lines near the field as he lowered his ship.

An hour later a doctor phoned from Buffalo.

"Say, Jones, you'll have to buy your friend Tierney a new suit! A wire caught on your plane and dragged him 100 feet along the runway before he got loose. Yeah, he's all right—but he'll have to rest up for a few days."

In his eight years of flying—he's put in more than 500 hours in the air—Jones has had only one other near-mishap. Minor motor trouble forced him to land on a farm near Brockport.

Crowds swarmed the field to gawk. "There goes my whole summer's work!" wailed the farmer as he surveyed his trampled crops.

From the day when, at 16, he went into the used car business, to the present time, this handsome, 33-year-old Pittsford resident has been on the lookout for "good trades." This trait has resulted in his owning at one time or another more than 50 different cars—and 18 airplanes.

Jones concluded back in 1930 that trains and autos were a little too tedious in a busy world. After a bit of dickering (the owner wanted $1,500 and Jones offered $500) he purchased his first plane for $800—and gave the money to the seller all in one dollar bills.

"I had it a year and then sold it," he smiles. "But as I watched it wing away I knew then and there I'd get another."

Every fortnight he hops off to corral some used car bargains. "It's two-and-a-half hours and 16 gallons to Detroit."

Jones has been selling all his life. First newspapers, back in his home town of Penn Yan; then insurance, next used cars—and now, airplanes. He owes his success in the latter two fields, he says, to classified ads.

His log book reveals sales of planes to the army, a film company, a millionaire sportsman and a Mexican transport company, among others. His ads in an aviation magazine bring replies from Alaska, the Canal Zone and South America. Incidentally, he flew a ship identical to the "Corrigan Clipper" for nearly a year before disposing of it for $850.

R+C Sep 4, 1938

Holder of a private pilot license, Jones is a familiar figure at the Municipal Airport. Many of his friends, employes and customers owe their first flight to his generosity. His 11-year-old daughter and 80-year-old aunt are already veterans of many trips.

Of medium height, with dark, curly hair above a high forehead and twinkling blue eyes, the 185-pound Jones shuns formalities, dresses nattily, favors the vernacular in conversation. Married when he was 18, he lives with his wife and child at 70 Kilbourn Road.

For years he wore glasses; threw them away when, after a physical examination for a state police job, he was told his eyes were normal. He passed, received an appointment but rejected it—the used car business was then becoming too fascinating and lucrative.

Jones flies to Florida every year with his family, often takes cruises to the Thousand Islands and soars down to Pennsylvania each fall for deer hunting. He was without a parachute until last month. His only worry is his waist line.

Although he is always ready to take off at a moment's impulse, he admits he flies "only when the birds fly." So it's off to the Cleveland air races tomorrow for Skyrocket Jones!
