WHEN the class of June 1910 first started on its academic course four years ago, most of its members were brought into contact with Miss Minnie R. Van Zandt as their algebra teacher. Her genial humor and spontaneous wit "took" with the students; and the fact that she was always ready to give help and advice wherever needed, sealed the bond of friendship and loyalty. Beginning with their sophomore year, and from then on until this June, about fifty of the boys have continued under Miss Van Zandt's influence as pupils in her study-room. Ever ready to aid and encourage them, always spurring them on to better efforts. "Aunt Minnie" has endeared herself to "her boys" more and more. All that she could do to help the boys and girls she has done; their life has been her life, their hopes and aspirations hers.

Minnie Ruth Van Zandt

Now that it is time for these boys and girls to shut the doors of East High School behind them, it is most fitting that this Annual, the last memorial of the class of June 1910, be dedicated to her whom the members, through close associations, have respected and loved—Miss Minnie Ruth Van Zandt.

PREFACE

WITH this issue of the Senior Annual the class of June '10 makes its final bow to East High School. We have herein told something of our class history, and believe the record of the four years is one of which we may be justly proud. Whatever comes to us in the future we will always remember East High with joy and pride. In after years we believe this Senior Annual will recall to memory many happy school days and pleasant friendships. It should be treasured as a souvenir which will grow more valuable as time goes on. We send it out with the best of wishes for East High, the faculty, and all the classes which shall follow us.

Class History

Father Time stands at our door ready to turn the hourglass, but let us linger a moment before we turn over the next leaf in our lives and enjoy the pleasant memories of our short stay in dear old East High School.

It seems only yesterday that we took our places ready to be brought up by our Alma Mater. We were green, if ever freshmen were green, but behind that greenness there was a solid determination in the heart of each one of us to make this page of our lives glow with success. The first year was spent in hard study, and the purpose of nearly everyone in the class was to get a firm foundation so that the harder studies in later years would come more easily.

An observer would not have seen that year closely written with the annals of our class, but the first show of spirit came in the winter of the second year. Sophomores, as a rule, have very few class activities, but we were bound not to follow precedent on that score. A subscription list was started for a sleighride party. Everybody seemed to take hold, and one bright winter evening nearly one hundred enthusiastic sophomores had the sleighride of their lives, ending with a hot lunch and informal dance at the Pinnacle Club House. The whole affair was a success, financially as well as socially, and since that time the class has stood together in a way for the best interests of its members and its Alma Mater. We were no longer a lot of scattered sophomores, but a unit, working for one common end, and when we said good-bye to our High School at the end of the second year we felt fully able and prepared to hold the responsibilities that come to upper classmen.

At last the Junior Year dawned with its tasks and pleasures, and here the work of the two preceding years began to show itself. A high standard of scholarship, loyal class spirit, and an enthusiastic interest in all the activities of the school, made our class go through this year with a broader outlook than many other classes; and, although we did not stand out brilliantly in any one line, we were not one sided, and all we accomplished was done well. The Junior Farce and Prom, events that mark the Junior year, were all up to the standard of the class, and our fellows did much toward making that year one of East High's most successful ones in Athletics. That year seemed to pass almost before we knew it, and it was not long before we were saying good-bye to East High for the third time.

Our Senior Year has marked a stage in the history of East High School. More than one Senior, and many another student, in fact, was astonished at finding the CLARION on sale the first day after the summer vacation. This was not all. We found that it was to be a weekly instead of a monthly paper, and the issue throughout the year has stood for a newsy, live high school paper. Great disappointment was felt by many because of the discontinuance of the Roman State this year, but the keen interest which it aroused in the study of Latin in former years will always be looked back upon by the members of our class as a unique feature of our High School course. Thus, through the whole year, everything has seemed to be working out anew, and the climax came a short time ago when, without any warning, football was abolished in the High Schools of the city as it is played by the interscholastic teams.

The time soon comes for us to say a final good-bye, but our memories of East High School will always be pleasant, and we hope that our Alma Mater will take as good care of her coming children as she has of us.

FRANK L. GOSNELL, Class Historian.

Class Prophecy

I was sitting cozily in front of a tea-table. At my feet was my big, grey tabby purring softly, and I was knitting swiftly, my thoughts keeping pace with my nimble fingers. At length I looked up at my friend and companion, Marguerite Ryder, who was pouring out a cup of tea for me.

"Do you realize, my dear," I said to her, "what day to-morrow is?" She gave a shake to her head which seemed to say she neither knew nor cared.

"It is just fifteen years to-morrow that we graduated from East High School. Don't you remember now?"

By this I had awakened her interest and we both sat and chatted about old times until our forgotten cups of tea were cold. Together we recalled all the good times that those last few years had brought to us at the High School. And we wondered what had become of all our school-mates. While we sat thus reminiscing the door bell rang and who should be shown into the room but a man, a man in our house! We neither of us recognized him until he introduced himself as Prof. Leo Dwyer. Of course we had read much of him and his wonderful airships in the paper, and had often said how proud we were of the man who had been the President of our class. But what could he want of us? He and his wife had been passing over the town when they decided to stop and invite us to go on a short trip with them. When we reminded him of the date he determined that we should start out at once, that we might be in dear old Rochester that evening.

We made hurried preparations and soon there in the yard was the enormous ship waiting for us. It was a glorious ride in the invigorating air, and it was not long before we were established for the night in Rochester.

We were up bright and early the next day and I picked up the morning paper, anxious to read a little about Rochester doings once more. On the front page was a picture. How familiar that face looked to me; and then I noticed that it said Mayor Eric L. Alling who—that was as far as I went. At my exclamation it had to be passed about and discussed by all. Then I turned to glance through the rest of the paper and I discovered Maurice Van Bergh's name at the top of the page. I saw that Maurice was still in the newspaper business. Who was the handsome man whose face was decorating the sporting page? Why sure enough that was Alex. Hess, formerly the beauty of our class, now a professional baseball player.

The class of June '10 was well represented in this paper, for I saw a large advertisement of a dry goods store. Baird and Barry Co. This I found was our John and Robert.

This is as far as I had time to get for the others were anxious to be off. We determined to visit the East High School first and we arrived just in time to enter the assembly.

There in his accustomed place sat Mr. Wilcox. Evidently they were going to sing as they were passing out the books. I wondered if Mr. Clark would be there, as he was in my time, to lead them. No, it was a strange man who stepped to the front and gracefully led them, with his yard stick, through four or five songs. I inquired afterward who this man was, and I was told that he was Mr. Bryant Brooks, the singing instructor.

During the first period we wandered from one room to another looking for old faces and we were not entirely disappointed. In one room we found Hazel Sharkey and Ella Davis instructing a large elocution class. In another, we found Dorothy Osborn teaching a Virgil class. Here also we found Marjorie Calkins and Lillian Rosenbloom, both Physics instructors.

Mr. Wilcox insisted that we visit the new gymnasium building, and here we found Alfreda Moss crop leading a class of girls, while in the boys' gym there was Alexander Beebee sprinting about as in the old days.

We returned to the hotel for luncheon, and while waiting for the rest of our party I began to scan the pages of one of the magazines. I ran by a page but several pictures there had caught my eye and I turned back. "Some of our noted women," it said. Could I believe my eyes? There was a picture of Florence Morse, very severe and very wise looking, another was a picture of Gladys Bullard, both professors in girls' colleges. And there was Mildred Warrant, who had been the vice-president of our class, now president of a girls' college.

Class Prophecy—Continued

There were several well known authors, and among them I found the pictures of Helena Nelligan and Elizabeth Marine. It was time to leave and while my friends waited for me I took time to look at the actresses. How glad I was that I did, for I was well repaid by seeing my two pretty schoolmates, Ariel Shaw and Louise Kenning, now beautiful women and celebrated actresses.

That afternoon we went to a vaudeville show. There was a very clever comedian who kept us in one continual roar of laughter. I looked at my program. Bivingston Lentley. Why did that sound so familiar? I looked back at the figure on the stage and this time I could not mistake my old friend Livingston Bentley. In the audience I saw many familiar faces. I recognized Helen Romig, Mae O'Brien, Lillian McCallum, Olette DeNeve and Maud Dailor. They all looked very contented notwithstanding the fact that they had probably each one left a large family home waiting for her.

There was one little act that especially pleased the audience, and this was when Marguerite Perrin sang some catchy little songs composed by Paul Brennan, who accompanied her at the piano. Again and again they were called back.

Returning from the theater that afternoon we noticed a great crowd of people gathered around an automobile. When we inquired, we were told that this was Muriel Brown, the great suffragette, delivering one of her speeches. She was accompanied by Isabel Johnson, another leader in the movement, and also her secretary who appeared to be a dapper little man whom they called Mr. Curran.

In the crowd I became separated from the rest of the party, and while I was wandering about I ran into a rather stout gentleman, who tipped his hat and started to pass on, when I clutched his arm and asked him to aid me. When I looked up I started, for here was Mr. Horace Swan, a well known architect of the city. While he was escorting me back to the hotel he told me of the different members of the class of June '10 of whom he knew the whereabouts. Elmer Perl and Potter Remington were both lawyers, Howard Shepard and Roger Cross owned a large farm nearby and they were becoming very successful farmers;

Grace Foote, Elizabeth Campbell and Ethel Howard were all teaching school, and Dorothy McCauley was personally conducting a party through Europe. Some of the members were old friends of ours, Ethel Ford, Helen Crouch and Gladys Dutton.

By this time we had reached the hotel and we parted.

We retired early that evening as we wished to start early next morning. It was a glorious day and the sun had not been up many hours when we started on our trip.

We reached Washington by noon and decided to visit the House of Representatives.

They were evidently discussing a rather dry question, and when one of the men arose to speak several of the members left the room. As this man continued to talk faster and faster for a half an hour many more men left the room until only a few remained scattered about. But there, patiently at his desk, sat the speaker. He was a rather small man and he sat with a patient look on his face while the other gentleman rambled on. We knew the speaker immediately. It was Philip Ogden; but who could this talking machine be? When we were told by some one near us that that was Mr. Willard Emerson, we understood and we too quietly left the room.

That evening we went to the theater and greatly admired the passionate hero, none other than our Fred McKown, making love to the fair-haired heroine Helen Hartung. In one of the boxes sat Helen Westcott and Ruth Sargent, neither of them greatly changed in looks.

That evening we called upon Mrs. Burwell Abbott whose husband was a congressman.

The next morning we went to one of the handsome churches. Here we found the Rev. Frank Gosnell, D. D., and we not only heard him deliver an inspiring sermon but were delighted to hear his wonderful voice joining in the hymns.

It had been a glorious trip and we were to return home filled with the beautiful thoughts that Frank had delivered to us; and to live over again in memories our school days, now that we had seen again a great number of our former schoolmates.

CAROL C. SMITH, Class Prophet.

Class Poem

I went for a dream one sable night,
    To the Land of Heart's Desire,
Where toiling throngs of shadowy things
    Forged over a leaping fire.
About me eager dream seekers stood,
    Each with his box or bag,
A poet, a maiden, a mother sad,
    A beggar in tattered rags.

"A dream! a dream!" the poet cried,
    "Of a sunkissed land by the sea,
Where the warm winds blow over fields aglow,
    Where my cares shall leave me free!"
"A dream," the maiden shyly asked,
    "Of a sailor lad on the deep;"
And the mother tenderly took a dream
    Of a little child asleep.

The stealing fingers of rosy dawn,
    Made off with my dream next day;
Slowly the phantom of triumph
    Faded forever away.
Yet I ask as we go, "Alma Mater,
    Into the world of men,
Bring my dream with its noblest fulfillment
    To our class of June Nineteen Ten."

A vision of hearts in gilded halls,
    Passed into the beggar's hand,
Then alone in the glow of the forge I stood,
    Except for the elfin band.
"I have come so far for a dream," I said;
    "Of our class, June Nineteen Ten.
We are journeying into the world to-night,
    What will become of us then?"

The Keeper smiled and gave me a dream,
    And I dreamed it all night long,
Of a world that was better because we had lived,
    And because we had strength to be strong.
Past me with crowns of laurel green,
    Filed those of us Fame had wooed,
And with faces as bright in the radiant light,
    Came those who had just been good.

—MURIAL W. BROWN, Class Poet.

Class Song, June, 1910

Tune: "Fair Harvard."

Alma Mater, to-day we are leaving thy halls,
And thy class-rooms shall know us no more;
We are wandering forth on the highway of life
That lies fair and untrodden before.
And now as we bid thee a last fond farewell,
To thy altar our offering we bring;
Our hearts full of gratitude honor and love,
As thy praises we joyfully sing.

Forlorn little lambs we strayed into thy fold,
Thou didst gather us tenderly in;
Four bright happy years have sped by as a day,
Now the world's sterner lessons begin.
Thou hast given us the keys that shall open the doors
Of vast treasure-houses of wealth,
Not merely of gold, but of courage, and truth
And knowledge, and goodness and health.

Oh believe, Alma Mater, though weary the way,
Though the storm clouds are dark overhead,
The thought of thy love and thy cherishing care
Shall faithfully stand us in stead.
And the love that we feel as we leave thee to-day,
Is the love that shall be with us then;
And the truest of all thy true children shall be
These children of June Nineteen Ten.

German Club

The German Club started the season last fall with well-attended meetings and interesting programs. At some meetings Mr. Wm. Betz gave entertaining lectures on his trip abroad and at others programs by the members were presented. In February, ten scenes from "Der Bibliothekar" were given by the III-2 class. The attendance at the play was large and the production was a success. Later in the year, however, the attendance fell away and the club represented only a few of the advanced classes and not the German students at large, as it must do to be a thorough success.

Recently the school purchased in Germany some books that are both interesting and instructive. These with other German books have been placed in the library as a nucleus of a German Library. Prospects for next year are very bright and it is for the students to turn out to the meetings and make the German Club of the future such a one as East High School has never yet seen.

Chess Club

The season of 1909-10 was without doubt the most successful season for the Chess Club since its organization, several years ago. At meeting held last June, the following officers were elected:

President—Eric Alling.

Vice-President—Harold Curren.

Secretary—Robert Barry.

Treasurer—Philip Ogden.

A better president than Eric Alling could hardly have been elected, and under his leadership, several successful tournaments were held. Early in the year West High defeated our team, but in a league tournament, later in the year, we almost exactly reversed the score. Due credit must be given to Mr. M. D. Gray, of the faculty, and to the Rochester Chess Club for the efficient manner in which the Junior Chess League was handled. The league was composed of the J. Y. M. A., W. H. S., East High, U. of R. and the Rochester School for the Deaf, finishing in the order named.

A few words must be given in recognition of the good work of the team in finishing in third, defeating many of the older players in the league. Let us hope for more interest and a still more successful team next year.

Debating Society

The meetings of the Debating Society for the past year, while not exceptionally well attended, have exhibited much enthusiasm. Many impromptu debates have been held and the arguments brought forth have been logical and to the point. The Debating Society, as the foundation for the interscholastic teams, has succeeded remarkably well, and the teams have been a credit to East High. May the under-classmen realize the responsibility which rests upon them, and may they make the Debating Society even more successful next year than it has been this year.

Saying Good-bye

It is not an easy thing to say good-bye to East High School. The Class of June, Nineteen Hundred and Ten, begins to realize this fact now that the graduating exercises are at hand. It is true there have been times when the members of the class have wished they were almost anywhere else than within the school walls. When lessons have been hard we have heartily wished that the idea of compulsory education might be abandoned, and the teachers transported to some higher—or lower— realm, where they might no longer bother poor struggling students with their everlasting prods and questions. But now that we are going away it is different. The trials and tribulations of the past have almost vanished from our minds, while we realize that the tasks which seemed hardest at the time have brought their reward in proportion to the effort which we put forth to master them. We are coming to understand, as we leave, that we have had four years of opportunity.

Now that we are going away the walls of old East High seem very dear to us. They have looked down upon us while we have been trying to store our minds with knowledge, forming friendships, and learning loyalty under the inspiration of the school spirit.

At this time of parting we come to better understand what our principal and our teachers have meant to us. We know that they have been interested in our success, and we appreciate something of the trial we have been to them. We leave them with a feeling of genuine affection and regard.

Looking Ahead

The Class of June, Nineteen Hundred and Ten, looks out into the future with courage and hope. Some of our number will go to the colleges and universities and others will take up business occupations at once. All will be well equipped because of a High School education. A High School diploma is a badge of honor. It means that its possessor is equipped with an excellent education and four years of school discipline and training. The boys and girls who have stood the test will undoubtedly be strong to conquer future difficulties. The victory of graduation is ours. Have we not a right to believe it is the inspiring omen of the victory which shall crown our struggles in the broad field of life's future endeavors?

Musical Clubs

Under the direction of G. C. Bryan the Boys' and Girls' glee clubs have passed a season which rivals, in its success, any of the previous ones.

The splendid spirit and enthusiasm with which the members of the Clubs have taken up their work this year has been amply rewarded, not only by the hearty applause and appreciation with which they have been received upon all their appearances, but also in the benefit and pleasure they have derived from their association with the Clubs.

They have been fortunate enough this year to retain, as the conductor of their orchestra, Mr. Ludwig Schenck, who has guided and directed this Club until it has aspired to that top notch in the musical which has been characteristic of all our former orchestras under his supervision.

Both Orchestra and Glee Clubs have made several appearances, in and about the city, and have met with the greatest success everywhere, which has been due, to a certain degree at least, to the realization by the members of the Clubs, that their actions must necessarily reflect back upon the reputation of the school, so they have always carried themselves in a manner which could only reflect favorably upon old E. H. S.

The Annual Concert given by the Clubs on May 20th closed this successful season.

A new era in the Musical line of this School came in when, with the East and West High School Glee Clubs combined, they delivered with great success, the classical piece of music, "Gallia." This is the first time in the history of the school, that an attempt at the classical has been tried.

This shows the splendid evolution and advancement music has taken here. Let us sincerely hope it will continue to advance until it reaches that highest point, Perfection.

F. P. SURGENOR, Manager.

In the Tail of The Comet

A great and unusual astronomical event took place on or about May 18, 1910, when Mother Earth was engulfed in the tail of Halley's comet. Astronomers had foretold this tremendous event, and the newspapers were full of vivid descriptions of what might or might not happen when it actually took place. Naturally the discussion of such a stupendous and historic contact excited the deepest interest all over the world. It even pervaded the classic walls of East High School. Thus it happened that Frederick McKown, interrupted for a moment in the serious contemplation of a geometrical problem, gazed out into the vast realms of ethereal space and exclaimed with a startled air to Alcott Neary who was calmly strolling by, "There may be no graduating exercises of the Class of June, 1910. This may be our last day on earth!"

"Gracious me," responded Neary, moved by the earnestness of McKown's words. "What's the matter with you? Are you going daft, or has too much studying made thee mad?"

"I am not mad," replied McKown; "this very night this earth is to be switched by the tail of Halley's comet, and an astronomer has said that gaseous substances will engulf us so that no life will remain."

"Perish the thought," exclaimed Neary, as he sauntered away, trying to assume his natural jaunty air. But the idea would not down, and he communicated McKown's dire foreboding to other members of the Class, whose graduation might thus be stopped.

"This thing can never be," quoth Bryant Brooks, as the rumor reached his ears.

"It is too awful to think of," sighed Dorothy McCauley, "Freddie is a monster to have thought of such a thing."

But the rumors spread and the foreboding grew, and the dismalness of the situation seemed more appalling, until desperation sat upon the countenances of all the class.

Then it was that Harold Curren, prolific of ideas, set up the slogan: "If we cannot graduate together we can die together." And it was decided that the class should go, in a body, to the top of the Pinnacle hills, and there await the tail of the comet and the crack of doom.

The assembling of the class on the hilltop was solemn and impressive. Carol Smith in soft and wooing tones read the eloquent words of her prophecy, but her face blanched as she thought of the few remaining moments before the collision with the comet, and those nearest her caught the opening words of the supplication, "Now I lay me down to sleep," as she finished her reading.

Over at one end of the group William Challice arose and quoted Oliver Wendall Holmes, to this effect:

"I saw a tutor take his tube
The comet's course to spy;
I heard a scream—the gathered rays
Had stewed the tutor's eye."

But the occasion was too serious to indulge in hilarity of the kind Challice offered. The hour of 11:30, fixed by the astronomers as the time when the tail of the comet should engulf the earth, was fast approaching. Some tried to appear indifferent, some assumed a reckless air and some defiant were. It is an awful thing to be within a few moments of a comet's tail. Mostly the Class was struck with awe.

"I've always tried to be good," whispered Paul Brennan to Platt Moody, "even if I have made some mistakes."

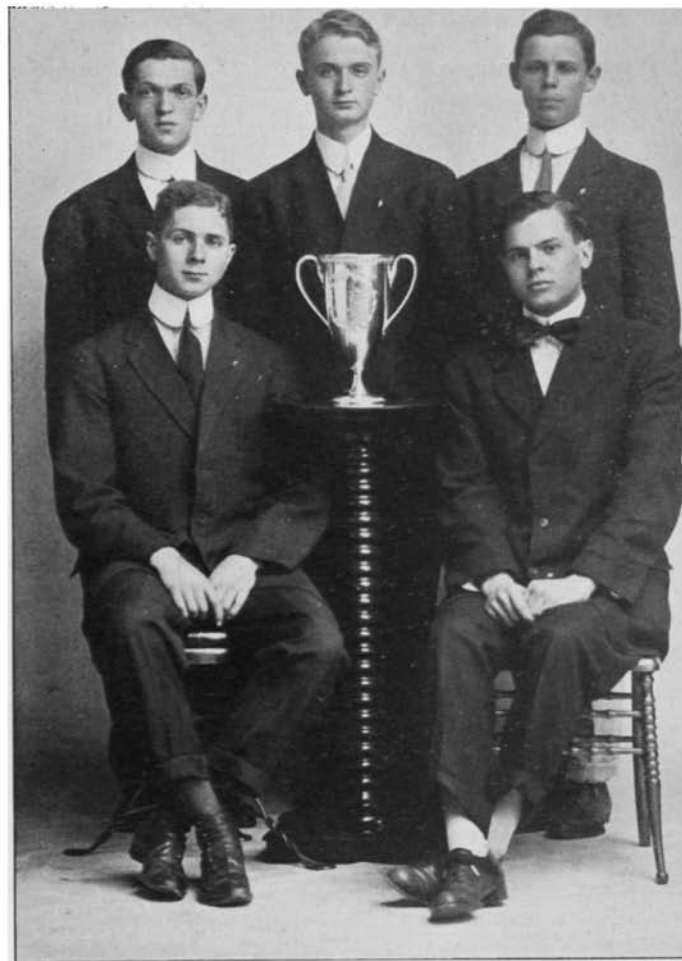

"I know you have, Brennan," answered Moody in a sepulchral tone, "and we forgive you for all your vain attempts at poetry. We all ought to have been better."

"That's so," chimed in Potter Remington, "I, too, want to be forgiven for all I have ever done to my classmates and my teachers." The others seemed to penitently acquiesce in this statement.

Near the front of the group, solemnly gazing into the heavens, were George Ludolph, Alexander Hess, Livingston Bentley, Leo Dwyer and Eric Alling. One rather imaginative historian alleges they were on bended knees, but this possibility goes beyond common credulity. Near them, however, were Mildred Warrant, Marguerite Perrin, Helen Hartung, Alfreda Moss crop and Margaret Trot, guardian angels, and bearing with maidenly reserve, the terrors of the hour.

At last the fateful moment, 11:30, arrived just as Murial Brown was chanting the last stanza of her Class poem. Not an eye was dry until Karl Mengerink broke the spell by brazenly demanding how much longer the class would have to wait before the comet got in its deadly work.

Then it began to dawn upon the whole aggregation of educated high school humanity that another day was to dawn, that graduation day would come, and that the Class of June, 1910, would live in history as the finest product of Old East High.

156 STUDENTS came to the Rochester Business Institute direct from High Schools between August 1st, 1909 and May 1st, 1910. 79 of this number entered from the Rochester High Schools. The total enrollment between the above dates was 780, and it represented ninety-four cities and towns in New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, West Virginia, South Dakota, Colorado, Porto Rico, China and Germany.

High School graduates who have received some instruction in the commercial texts prior to registering in the Rochester Business Institute are allowed full credit for the ground already covered. This, of course, shortens the time necessary for the completion of their courses in the R. B. I.

This school has no difficulty in assisting all students who complete either the commercial or the shorthand and typewriting courses to secure suitable positions. For those who complete the commercial, shorthand and typewriting courses the demand is far beyond the number of available candidates. This is true also of the high school, normal school and college graduates who prepare in the R. B. I. for commercial teaching.

The total number of calls for students from the several departments between August 1st, 1905 and May 17th, 1910 was 4838.

The R. B. I. is open all year. Students can enter to advantage any month. The special summer courses for commercial teachers open this year July 5th and close August 12th.
