MR. FREDERICK BETZ

Mr. Frederick Betz was born in Herborn, a small university town near Frankfort, Germany. He came to America when very young, and attended the public schools of Rochester. He was graduated from the University of Rochester in 1906 with a degree of A.B. and in 1907 he took his Master degree in Arts. He was elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society. In 1906 Mr. Betz began teaching in East High School.

For the four years the class of June, 1912, has been in the high school, nearly every member has had more or less to do with Mr. Betz. Especially have the boys in his study room come under his influence during their high school careers. So it is with much reluctance that the entire class takes its departure from Mr. Betz.

WESTERN UNION YEARBOOK

Preface

After four happy years the time has come for the class of June, '12, to say good-bye. During our high school life we have tried to accomplish much, and in this Senior Annual, the last work of the class, we have tried to set down our achievements, to chronicle our history and to publish a volume of unusual interest to every student in East High. Such a book increases in value as the years roll by, and will be the means of recalling many of the pleasant friendships and happy hours spent in our Alma Mater. If we have succeeded, we shall be happy, but at any event we take our departure with best wishes, for East High School, for those who have taught us, and for the classes who shall follow us.

Class History

UNLIKE most historians this one does not remember whether the day on which the glorious class of June, 1912, entered the East High School and were accordingly enrolled as students, was rainy, sunshiny or snowy. Suffice it to say that like all other classes before us, the summer following our "graduation" from grammar school had wrought many changes in our appearance. Trousers had been lengthened, hair put up on the top of the head, and dresses given several added inches in the vain effort to escape the horrors of being called freshmen. But all in vain, alas, our feelings were not to be spared and like every class that preceded us and no doubt like every class that shall follow us, we were duly received, tagged, labeled, etc., and our labors, sorrows and joys in East High School began.

The first year, what a wonderful year that is! The new experiences, the trials and tribulations of a stranger in a strange land are as nothing compared with those of verdant freshman year in high school. The first class meeting! Who can ever forget it? The excitement which always follows an organization of freshman was not lacking at our first meeting, and the speeches, the golden eloquence of the faculty who received us and after much good advice, wise sayings and dignified gestures, finally announced that henceforth we were to be called the class of June, 1912.

Of course we did not do much the first year; the school seemed to be able to get along without sending to us for counsel so we wisely kept still and got our bearings.

Football, that magic word, was not to remain with us long, for after what seemed to us a single taste, the delightful morsel was taken away, and the chance to show our real metal was at hand.

We accepted the decision and tried our best to be the same loyal East High students in the other sports. We succeeded, and the records for the four years will show many things which the members of the June, '12, class have contributed to athletics.

Our class was the first to take up cross country running and the results from this new sport speak for themselves. What was true of cross-country running is true of everything and many are the faces which will be missed in the various activities after the class is gone.

Dramatics seem to have been the special forte of this class. The Junior Farce and the Senior Play were considered the best ever given in the school and large sums were added to the class treasury by these two events. The Junior and Senior dances were also great successes, and sleighrides, etc., were among the social events which helped to promote friendship among the members.

To enumerate the many events in which the class has played a prominent part would be impossible. The many track victories, the basketball championships and cross-country successes are but a few of the honors which the class has attained while in school. The Glee Club opera was largely possible through the members of this class and in many ways June, '12, has tried to serve its Alma Mater.

Not alone in social and athletic events has the class been prominent, but studies have not been neglected. June, 1912, will be the largest class to leave East High School and the high scholarship attributed to it is very gratifying.

But although we are leaving East High School we are not forgetting the many excellent lessons we have learned there.

We are taking all these with us and we shall strive to maintain our high record and to keep our eyes fixed on the goal to which they have been taught to look while in East High School.

ALBERT D. PERRY,
Historian.

Class Poem

Across this stormy sea of life
Our little ships must sail,
Where they must meet with hurt and strife,
Where tempests blow and winds are rife,
And may they never fail.

From out this harbor, old East High,
Full soon they set their way.
Though ignorant of how to try
Yet boldly all the risks defy,
And trustful, come what may.

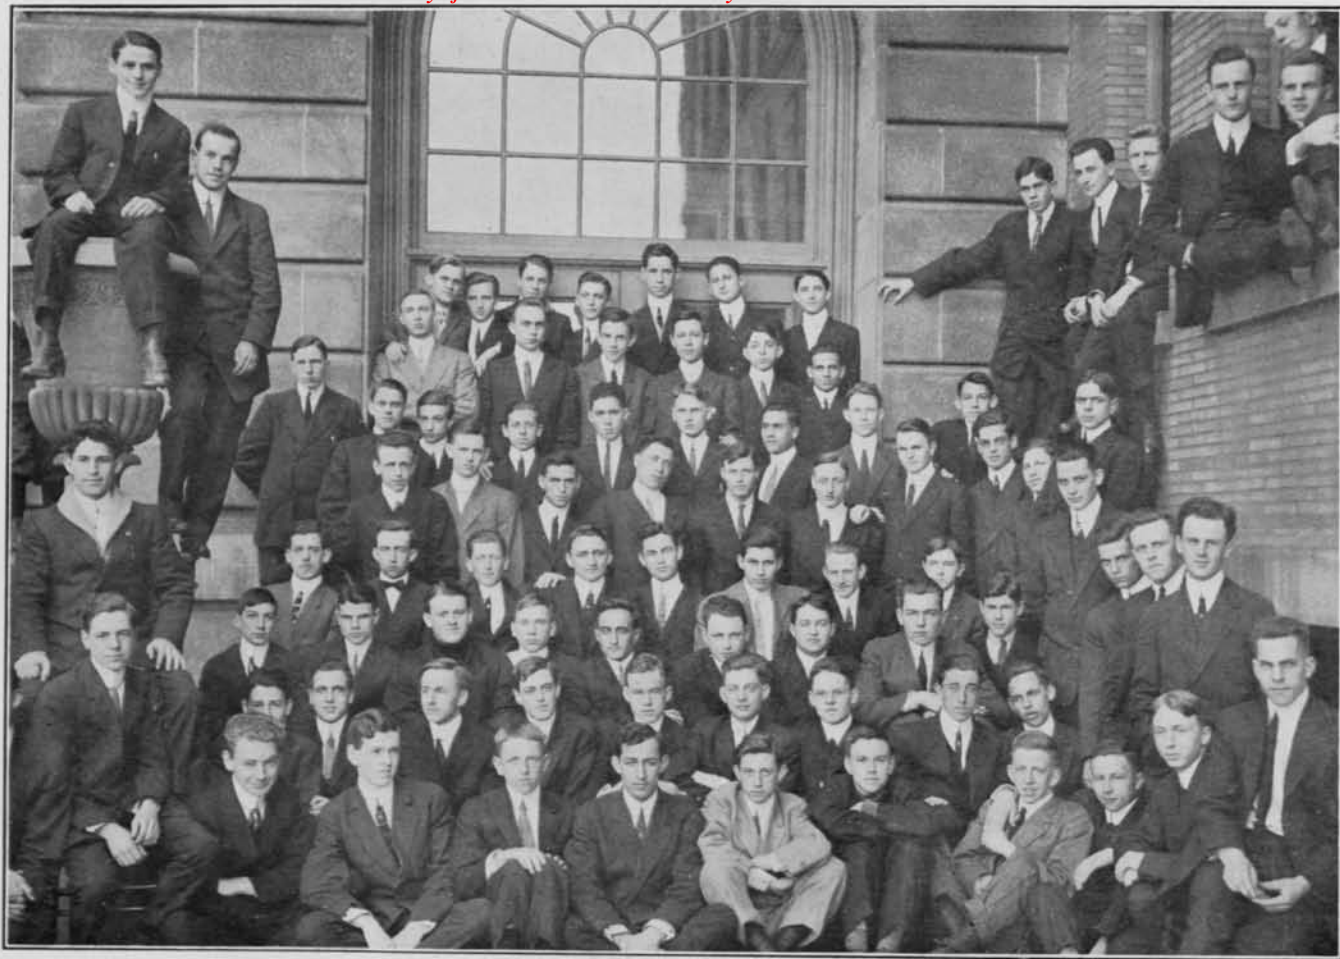

When out upon that stormy sea
May Fortune still be fair;
Though some be lost, still let it be
That most shall triumph gloriously,
And win them praises fair.

And when that other shore is found,
With all the trials o'er,
May all our works with praise resound,
And Nineteen Twelve be held renowned;
The class that we adore.

Class Poet.

Class Prophecy

IT was while my brother and I were in Egypt, in the year 1930. My brother was making an extensive study of the Sphinx and the Great Pyramid. He wished to get photographs from every angle, and to that end we had pitched our tent at the foot of the Sphinx.

On this particular night, Henry had taken a moonlight photograph of the Sphinx, and had promptly gone to sleep in the tent. But I lay awake, looking at the great riddle of the ages looming up in the moonlight; and there in the quiet of the desert a feeling of loneliness swept over me, for I had been abroad five years. I began to think of home and of the class of June, 1912. And looking into the impenetrable face of the Sphinx, I sighed, "How I wish I could see all the class now!"

Then something happened. Perhaps it was the flicker of a moonbeam, but I could have sworn that one of those stone eyes winked. Looking down, I noticed, for the first time, a tiny door in the front of the Sphinx. At first, I was frightened, and thought to waken Henry. Then I decided to be worthy of June, '12, and to explore for myself, for the moonlight was almost as bright as day. To my surprise the door yielded to my touch. A musty odor greeted me. Within was a small room. Along one side were ancient Egyptian chests, while on the other, were heaps of age-old oriental fabrics.

Overcome by the heavy, penetrating odor, I sank down, still thinking of our class of June, 1912.

"A wish, a wish, for a dream of friends
Granteth the Lord of the Nile,
For the mystic maze to thy wond'ring gaze,
Opes at the Sphinx's smile."

A thousand soft voices seemed to be chanting, and I closed my eyes.

I awoke with a start, and found myself sitting in a drug store, looking across the street at a shop which bore the sign, Kammon, Cohn & Greenberg, Clothiers.

"What shall it be?" said a voice. "The Wisner store carries every dessert." As I looked up, Edwin Claudius and I recognized each other.

"Welcome to Rochester!" he cried.

Suddenly there was the clatter of hoofs and a shout. I ran out and almost knocked down a stout gentleman who was rushing by.

"My daughter!" cried Stuart Colvin, for it was he. Elmer Pammenter, the hero of the hour, stood holding the runaway horse, while a small girl stood unhurt by the carriage.

"I just stopped at Crump's to get a cigar," Colvin was saying to the crowd which had quickly collected.

"Here's the doctor!" shouted the mob and parted to let Harry Burrell through.

"The nurse is coming!" was the next cry, and Catherine Combs appeared.

"She isn't hurt at all," said Stuart, and drove quickly away.

As soon as the crowd had dispersed, I wandered into Hawkins & Adams', Rochester's largest department store. The floor walker, I found to be Sidney Lightstone. He had just told me that Earl Hodges and Warner Martin were successful architects, when a familiar voice hailed me. There stood Mabel Hewlett. In my short chat, I learned that she and Flora Hockenberger were happily married and living on adjoining farms. She had come in to have a suit fitted by Kurtz, the noted tailor, and to have Dr. Ross, the dentist, attend to her teeth.

My surprise at seeing so many friends had not died down as I went out into the autumn air.

A man, gazing intently at a note book, and nibbling a roll, passed me. Two men who stood near, smiled. "That's McKown," nodded one, "America's greatest mathematician. Why, man, he can trisect an angle,—but he never takes time to eat." "Much I care," retorted the other, whom I recognized as Walter Schiebel. "You undertakers, Edmund Taylor, will have me in a week. What can a man who's running for governor do against a fellow like Al Perry! No woman voter can resist that smile. And this is suffrage!"

"Are you a Jenningsite?" queried a voice in my ear. I turned to face Olive Carman, armed with a package of pink tickets. "Come to the meeting tonight, my friend, and be converted," she said handing me a ticket.

Resolving to visit East High School, I took a car. There I found Eunice Perry, who told me that she was principal of Number Twenty-Three school, where children of several of our schoolmates attended. To further inquiries, she replied that Irma Gibb's son was just starting in Miss Silverstein's grade, and that the little daughters of those whom I had known as Ollie Killip and Joanna Zielke were in Miss Newert's kindergarten.

On entering dear East High once more, I found John Ballard at home in the character of janitor, Letah Blizard and Caroline Foster presiding in the girls' gymnasium, and Frank Stewart in the boys'. Dorothy Dockstader was piloting an English class through Burke, and Edna Killip was teaching chemistry.

I attended assembly and heard Mary Kellogg, a noted member of the Tuesday Musicale, sing. I listened patiently to the speech by Edward Clement, the American ambassador to Japan, till he began "and that reminds me of a little joke about an Irishman," and then I slipped away.

"On the left, you see East High School," roared a voice, and the sight-seeing auto under the guidance of Harold Mills rolled past.

Just outside, I met Frieda Epstein who was running the East High lunch room, assisted by Mattie Gunther, in co-operation with Florence Hartman and Esther Cohen at West High. To my surprise, Frieda told me that Alan Brown was conducting a dancing school and Mary Conley was his pianist. "And do you know that Ruth Thommsen is a gown model in New York's greatest fashion house?" she asked. "Georgia Plummer is head designer there."

"Have you heard anything of my old friend, Ruth Lush?" I questioned. "Ruth Lush," she replied, "has just married an eccentric rich man. She is noted for her interest in Free Soup for the poor."

Here, I descried a familiar form approaching. "Why Katherine Beebee!" I cried. "Not Beebee any more," she reminded me, as we greeted each other.

"Come with me to our Political Club luncheon at Veale's, won't you?" she asked. "No, not Teal's—Veale's. I have a paper on 'The Franchise.' We are all crazy about politics."

At Veale's I found a very select crowd, including Rochester's social leaders, Helen Burrell and Mona Quine, and I heard instructive papers by Helen Owen and Vera Van Arsdale. At the end of the political discussion, I discovered that all were happily married. Mrs. Becker had news from Clara Hopkins, who, with her husband, was seeing France, personally conducted by Charles Hawks. Besides, Mr. and Mrs. Gleichauf, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent, Virginia Rice and her husband, and Marjorie David and her husband, were members of the party. Raymond Gleichauf was running Rochester's largest grocery, in his brother Ralph's absence.

Sara Rosenfeld, President of the club, showed us a picture she had just received, of the wealthy Marjorie Cohn, who was in New York. The photograph was marked, "The Cottrell Studio."

When the meeting was over, I decided to visit Adelia Venor, who, I heard, lived near. On my way I saw the young contractor, Charles Aufderhar, entering Wronker's Barber Shop, and I stopped in at DeVita & Bondi's fine fruit store. Isabelle Levy, the cashier, told me that Charles Mondo, Charles Maggio, and Christopher Celano were getting rich from the joint ownership of a Virginia Reel at Charlotte, where Maurice Wiesner owned the hotel.

As I proceeded, I perceived the familiar figure of George Augustus Haskins swinging quickly into a building. Over the entrance I read, "Matrimonial Agency."

"Has Gus come to this?" I sighed.

As I passed by, Anna Newman at the door gave me a card. My hands were limp with astonishment, as I saw thereon the face of my old friend Ethel West, and read,

"I GUARANTEE TO FIND YOUR AFFINITY,

Chaperonage, Encouragement,

Poems to Order."

When I reached Adelia's I was shown in, and told that she was out in the new auto her husband had bought from the Garson Co.

While awaiting her, I picked up the World's Work, and found Abe Ginsburg's picture among the rich men of Wall Street, and also the life of Sadie H. Rose, the great worker among the poor, by Cornelia Evans, the noted novelist.

Adelia had returned, and we had just greeted each other, when Lela Brown and Winifred Rauschenbusch, who were electioneering, were shown in.

They had no sooner gone, than the bell rang again. This time it was Harold MacCallum as an agent of Goo-ine, a new breakfast food. On the sample package we found that Ward Gerber was inventor and manufacturer.

At last we began to talk, and Adelia told me that Valma Clark was the founder of a girls' seminary, on the Hudson. Grace Worthington was principal there, and Myrtle Bittner was teacher of mathematics, though she wore a diamond. Isabel Wallace, happily married, lived nearby.

When I enquired after Hazel Wunder, I learned that she was dean of Mt. Holyoke, where Eleanor Lerner was a foreign language teacher.

Our conversation passed to Gerritt Weston, the artist of the day, whose portrait of Augusta Miller, New York's social leader, had won him fame.

I left Adelia's and took a car. There whom should I meet but Russell West who, he told me, was doing solo work in a large church. When I enquired about Ralph Armstrong, Russell laughed. "Armstrong works," he said, "in a hammock factory. His job is to lie in the hammocks to test them."

As I looked out of the window I saw Robert Barnes bossing a gang of laborers in fine style. Russell informed me that Charles Heath and Walter Attridge were enjoying country life as scientific farmers. We passed Linda Schneider's bird store, and Paul Brown & Co., Florists, quickly.

I had time only to glance at one ad. in the car, which ran, "Mint-O Gum, Hughes & Smith Co.," before I got off.

Outside the court house among an unusual crowd, I recognized Louis Foulkes, the rich coffee man, and member of the Chamber of Commerce.

"It's a great day for Ezra!" he cried, and explained, "Hale is the lawyer on the defense."

"Defense? Of whom?" I asked.

"Why Silvernail, America's great author and humorist! On trial for breach of promise. A fine case! Rexford Morris is judge, and Edwin Costich clerk. The court is packed."

When Louis told me that Louise McCarthy was his secretary, I asked him if he had any more news of the class of June, '12.

Only that Arthur Gosnell makes another flight in his aero' tonight," he answered. "If Frank is convicted Art will take him straight to Australia."

By this time I was so used to surprises that I took it as a matter of course when Marian Phelps hailed me from her waiting auto, and bade me enter. Marian had come from calling on Margaret Cox, an old friend of hers, and was going to the Walden School to bring her young son home.

We passed Hammele's moving picture show, and DeNeve's shoe store, where Mary Poliakoff was book-keeper, and sped into the suburbs. Through the window of a fine home I caught a glimpse of Victor Roberts, applying the proverbial slipper to a small culprit while wails floated forth on the air. Next door, Anna Parker, a dressmaker, was working in her garden.

We soon reached the Walden School, which was conducted on strictly new principles. Each pupil's seat was a well-padded chair, or lounge, and there were intermissions for yawning.

On the way back we saw Ralph Dublin, the railroad magnate, playing golf.

Then I met Frederica Summerhays—no longer Summerhays—and she promptly announced, "You are going to Burbank Young's wedding with me this minute," and there I was in the great flower-decorated church, listening to the organ pealing under the touch of Gladys Wilkins.

Then the bride, whom I recognized, and Burbank Young appeared, and Fred Remington, the newspaper man, and Walter Hamilton as ushers and Esther Payne as maid of honor followed. I heard Herbert Soule performing the ceremony and Edwin Appel, the best man, sobbing loudly.

Then all was over, and I was on my way with Frederica to the performance of the great play that night.

On the way, she told me about Florence Drumm, Clara Kaiser, Marie Seifert, and Allie Williams, who were running a co-operative cottage in the country for fresh air children.

But now we had reached the theater, and taken our places next to Ruth Levy and her husband. The balcony tickets were three dollars, and no wonder, Martha Jane Judson starred, Louise Waters played a comic part, and Margaret Schaft was a pronounced success. The dashing hero was Willard Clark, Kenneth Henderson the dark-haired villain, and Louis Arentz proved irresistibly funny in a humorous role. But amid the lights and music, I grew drowsier, and drowsier. Dimly now I saw Mr. Frederick Betz and his wife witnessing the play from the nearest box. Now all was darkness. * * * * *

Then I awoke. The morning sun was flooding the face of the Sphinx, which had given me the glorious dream. I was no longer lonely, but happy in thinking of the fortunate class of June, '12.

"And just as the Sphinx," I thought, "has stood out a glorious figure through all the ages, so may the name and fame of our class of June, '12, forever remain in the world."

And one of the stone eyes winked.

The Alma Mater

Sweet be thy memory,
High School of ours;
Fair be thy destiny,
Fadeless thy flowers;
Hearts that have loved thee
Have won in life's fight
Names that we honor
Thy standard holds bright.

Our Alma Mater dear,
To thee we sing;
May all thy future years,
New honors bring;
May friends thy banner raise
Thy foes grow less,
All love and praise
To our old E. H. S.

The Scalp Dance

With big chief Sully and his band
Of fearless Orient Braves,
We've jumped the reservation
We're on the warpath looking for
Some pale face scalps to raise,
Have heap big celebration
We've hit the trail, yi, yi, yi,
Blood in our eye, yi, yi, yi,
Our curdling yells are ringing,
When the game is done and we have won
Their tops knots we will wave,
Back to our wigwam bringing.

CHORUS

Yes, we'll scalp 'em, scalp 'em, scalp 'em,
Make 'em bite the dust;
We'll smear up their backs you bet,
Beat them worse than they've been yet,
We're up to the minute, always in it
And we'll rub it in;
So while we yell, they'll play like—well,
Old Orient will win.

The Orient Bow Wow

With flags and banners waving
We're on the job once more;
Down the field we'll go sweeping
As we roll up a score;
We've loosed our Orient bull-dogs,
And soon you will hear us roar—
Bow, wow, wow, wow, wow, wow,
Bow, wow, wow, wow, wow, wow,
Oh, we'll more than make that bunch feel sore.

CHORUS

Plunging to the goal
They sink their teeth right in with vim;
Each man's a wonder,
They never will give in;
Bow, wow, wow, wow, wow, wow,
Ne'er falter, crash right on,
Oh we'll triumph once again;
Two thousand strong we yell—
Bow, wow, wow, for old Orient's men.

When the game is over, victorious we'll be We'll return rejoicing to our home by the Genesee;

And through the dusky twilight,
Our fires of victory will gleam;
Bow, wow, wow, wow, wow, wow,
Bow, wow, wow, wow, wow, wow,
As we proudly cheer that Orient Team.

SENIOR ANNUAL BOARD

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

Pro Facultates

The teachers should show in this space;
Their picture was meant for the place.
But what can one do
When the teachers—a few—
Can't be taken? For such is the case.

When some would be ready, the rest
Perhaps felt they weren't fitly dressed
For all could not come
And it makes the Board glum
Tho' it feels that it's worked for the best.

Or some might be busy, perhaps
And thus make the picture collapse
Or else a bad rain storm
Would bring on a brain storm
And make in their lineup bad gaps.

A picture was taken last year
But that one was hopeless, we fear;
For some are new faces,
And some have new places
And the faces and names don't cohere.

Farewell Song

Oh! the teachers,—blessed teachers,
How they make the Board despair!
For we cannot run their features,
Be those features e'er so fair.

Debating, 1912

THE 1912 debating season, although unsuccessful in the number of victories, will stand out prominently in various forms. The Boys' and Girls' Debating Societies enjoyed the most successful seasons of their existence. The average attendance of both of these organizations was well over fifty.

The Boys' Debating Society was confronted with a grave problem at the beginning of the season. But two veterans were left as a nucleus for the inter-scholastic team. How well the call for candidates was responded to, is best judged by the fact that about seventy-five turned out for the team. As a result three well-balanced teams represented the East High School boys. The Ithaca and Syracuse debates served to prepare the material for West High. East High won but one debate, that with Ithaca, but nevertheless, every contest was featured by the consistent and determined efforts of the teams. Prospects are brighter for next year with four or possibly five members of this year's team in school. The officers of the Boys' Debating Society were as follows: President, Victor Roberts; vice-president, Hilmar Rauschenbusch; secretary, Abe R. Ginsburg.

The Girls' Debating Society was just as busy as the boys'. The girls were drilled in parliamentary law and the science of debating. Many prominent Rochesterians addressed this organization on various occasions. As a result of its work an unusual interest in debating was manifested by the girls this year. The team lost its only debate to West High but its showing was commendable. The team was managed by Edna Vincent. The officers of the society were: President, Winifred Rauschenbusch; vice-president, Lela Brown; secretary, Sadie Rose.

Manager Sunderlin deserves credit for the excellent manner in which he financed the team as a result of his efforts debating realized a neat sum for the East High School treasury.

East High Musical Season

MANAGER SCHIEBEL

THE Musical Clubs of the 1911-1912 season have taken a long step in the march of progress of East High school's musical history. The past year has been highly successful in every respect. The number in the organizations was considerably increased, the work was more difficult and extensive than before.

The members of the clubs were chosen a few weeks after school opened in the fall. Mr. George A. Bryan, who had been in charge of the Glee Clubs since the fall of 1908 when he came to Rochester to act as Assistant-Superintendent of Music in the public schools, again drilled the singers. Mr. Ludwig Schenck, director of the Rochester Symphony Orchestra, who had instructed the East High orchestras for several years was retained by the Board of Education in that capacity. Both instructors felt the loss of those who were barred from participation in the organizations on account of affiliation with secret societies. However, the new recruits early proved their ability and work was taken up with enthusiasm.

After a few rehearsals the Boys' Glee Club elected Herbert Anthony, June 1914, as their leader, and the Girls' Glee Club chose Josephine Booth, January 1913, to fill that office in their society. The orchestra elected Herbert Soule, June 1912, manager of this organization. The Executive Council approved Walter Schiebel, June 1912, as Manager of the Musical Clubs.

The Male Quartette made their first appearance in public at the banquet of the Y. M. C. A. Boys of Western New York. Two weeks later, on December 9th the Boys' Glee Club and the Male and Double Mixed Quartettes gave a very pleasing program at the Duffy-Powers Restaurant. The Male Quartette consisted of Randolph Fox, Stuart Colvin, Frank Michel and G. Augustus Haskins. The Mixed Quartette included Misses Carrie Dalrymple, Martha Jane Judson, Mildred Davis and Elizabeth J. Davy, Herbert Ernisse, Walter Schiebel, Roland Bacon and Herbert Anthony.

The combined clubs gave their first concert December 15th at the Central Presbyterian Church and their numbers were well applauded. Readings were given by Albert Hubbard and Victor Roberts. The Mixed Quartette assisted in an entertainment at Number 26 school on the night of December 19th.

During the next two months the whole time of the Glee Clubs was given over to the preparation of the comic operetta, "The Captain of Plymouth," which proved to be the biggest musical and dramatic success of local schools and, it has been stated, one of the five or less that has been attempted by high schools of the country. Shortly after the cast and chorus had been chosen Mr. Bryan was forced to leave the city on account of ill health. At the request of the clubs Miss Jane Templeton, who had been assisting Mr. Bryan, consented to take charge of the musical work of the opera and Miss Katherine Burns, teacher of elocution, offered to direct the staging of the production. The number included in the play was about 100 and despite heavy expenses, the costumes alone amounting to well over a hundred dollars, a well filled house gave a profit of about seventy-five dollars. As usual the clubs took part in the graduation exercises of January 1912, on January 26th.

Immediately after the opera the regular work of the clubs was resumed. The withdrawal of Miss Judson from the mixed quartette caused a vacancy which was filled by Miss Katherine Hayward. The resignation of Randolph

Fox and Frank Mitchel brought two new members into the quartette in mid season, Joseph Young and Eric Hoard.

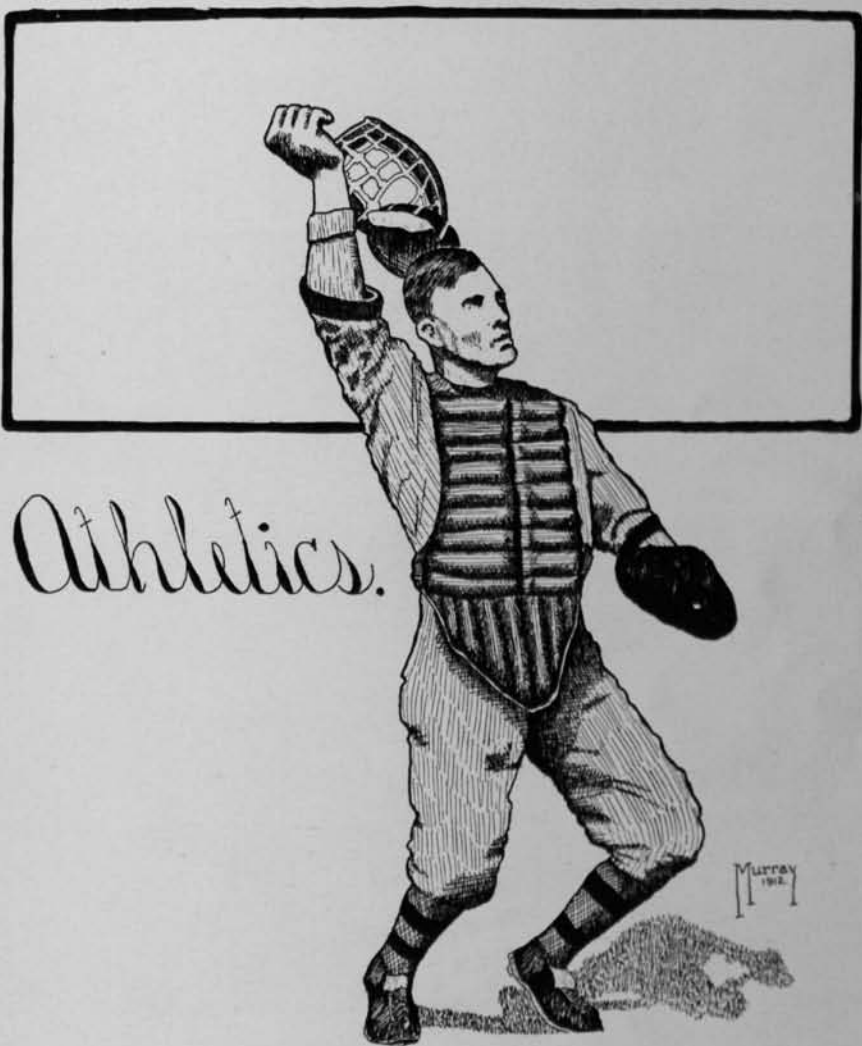

On March 23rd the sixteen boys chosen for the out of town trips and the mixed quartette assisted in a program at No. 9 school.

The Spring series of concerts of the combined clubs opened with the one given at the Third Presbyterian Church, March 30th. Practically the same program was given at the Church of Reformation, April 26th. Carrie Dalrymple and Mr. George Beach sang well applauded duets. The boys who went to Williamson, April 19th, gave one of the best programs of the year. They were assisted by the sextette from the school orchestra.

Preparation for the annual home concert continued during the spring and a large and enthusiastic audience applauded the clubs on the night of May 17th. The last appearance of the clubs outside of school was at the East Side Presbyterian Church, May the 24th. The clubs finished the work of the year at the graduation exercises of June, 1912.

The steady but rapid progress of the musical clubs is attracting more and more attention each year, both in the school and about the city. The financial profit this season was netted largely from the opera. The outside concerts added to the receipts from the opera total to about $125, more than any of the athletic teams have turned in.

For real value there is no student activity which can be compared to the musical clubs. That this progress may continue is the sincere hope of the Class of June 1912.

The Year in Athletics

THE season 1911-1912 while not as brilliant as some other years has been featured by steady consistent victories with here and there a defeat to keep the balance more even. In all the sports there were many vacant places to be filled and in the case of basketball almost an entire team had to be formed. In baseball only three or four of the experienced players returned to school so that many new faces are seen on the nine this year. In track the team was more fortunate at the beginning of the year, but when the time came for outdoor work three of the best men including the captain were unable to take part in several of the out-of-town meets because of school work. The soccer and cross-country teams were better supported this year and more interest was shown in these two sports.

The basketball team, captained by Davis Doron, came through the season with but six defeats and ten victories. The total number of points scored by East High was 493 to the opponents' 262.

The baseball team, with George Aylsworth as leader, has started the season in fine shape and while the nine is composed of much new material, great things are expected of it.

Captain Stewart of the track team led his team to victory in the University of Rochester Interscholastic Meet, obtaining the first place. In outdoor track the team was less fortunate as related before. But the Batavia meet was won easily by our team.

The hockey team of the past year was one of the best which has ever represented the school. The team went through the season without losing a regular game and have a good claim to the championship of Western New York.

Up to the present date the tennis team has not lost a match, although severely handicapped by the loss of several of the best players.

The first year of soccer football in East High School has proved a big success. Over twenty fellows have taken an active part in this new activity and East High has been represented in the City League by a first-class team.

The cross country team of this year has won all the runs in which it has been entered. The Y. M. C. A. Meet on Thanksgiving day was captured and West High was beaten by a big margin.

nderhill's Business Institute now in charge of Miss Clara Weil, is an ideal business school which thoroughly trains young people to properly and successfully perform the work required in business life. The system of Bookkeeping and Shorthand, Underhill's Rapid Phonography, Typewriting, Penmanship and various English branches are taught. The business practice is an exact counterpart of the every day work of a modern business school. Hundreds of our students are now in good positions and there is an increasing demand for others competent to do the work. Day sessions 8 to 1 A.M. Evening sessions 7 to 9 P.M.

Frank Stewart was telling a story in the locker room the other day:

"Gee, fellows, that was the funniest story I ever heard. I thought I'd die! No, I don't think I'll tell you. You guys wouldn't appreciate it. Oh, but it was an awfully funny story! Haw! Haw! Haw! It went like this: Er-er- well, it was an awfully funny story. Let's see now. I think there was a guy who was in High School, and er-er- I forget what comes next, but Haw! Haw! It was an awfully funny story! Oh, you guys make me sick, laughing at me. I won't tell you now!"

Fall Term Begins Thursday, September 12th

The air was oppressive with impending horror. The spectators of the awful scene were overcome with emotion. Their blood chilled in their veins—their hair rose, and remained in that condition. Nearer and nearer the man drew to the cowering figure of the lad, trembling with an uncontrollable agitation. Suddenly a sound broke the silence, splintering it into a thousand fragments. It was the voice of Frederick Betz, demanding in blood curdling tones—

“Well, Adams, don't you think it's about time for you to stop talking to Brown, and get a little work done?”

When our last pencils are sharpened
And the inkwells are poured and dried
And the Book is published and printed
That's caused the whole Board to have sighed
And the School will have passed on our efforts
And said what they think of the thing
Why, let 'em go on and holler
For we do not care, by jing.

My mortal mind too long forsook
Its studies in this scholars' nook,
And all the demons that are found
In fire, air, flood, or underground,
Are pricking me for my neglect
And I must now my fault correct;
And so my lamp is often seen
Consuming quarts of kerosene
Preparing for exams ahead,
And now, alas, I'm almost dead.
