MISS JANE PARSONS HANNA was born in Rochester, New York, and was graduated from No. 3 School and the Rochester Free Academy. The following fall she entered the State Normal College and completed the two years' course there in 1896.

She then became preceptress of the Union High School of Clifton Springs, New York, but was there only two weeks when she was appointed to assist Professor Albert L. Avey of the Rochester Free Academy, in the department of sciences. After serving there for a time Miss Hanna entered East High in the capacity of a teacher of chemistry. When Mr. Bennett, then head of the department, was transferred to West High, Miss Hanna was given charge of the chemical department, and there she has found her place. During her summer vacations she has taken courses at Cornell and Columbia and has also done some work under Dr. Lattimore of the University of Rochester.

She was appointed Faculty Advisor of the Boys of June 1915 when they entered the second term of their Freshman year, and since that time all the members of the class have learned to respect and admire her. Miss Hanna has done everything in her power to be helpful to her boys, and her keen interest in all class activities has been largely responsible for the successes of the class she has piloted so well.

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

MISS MAUD KIMBALL MURPHY was born in Albion, N. Y., and later removed to Chelsea, Mass., where she attended the public schools and was graduated from Chelsea High School. She early took an interest in English literature, and upon completing her high school course, entered the Boston College of Oratory. Here, she studied for three years and then entered the Boston School of English Speech and Expression, where she was first a student and later an instructor. In these two institutions she came under the influence and instruction of some of America's greatest teachers of literature and expression, particularly Dr. William J. Wolfe, the noted Shakespearean scholar, Professor E. Charlton Black, Howard M. Ticknor, and others.

After a term of private teaching, Miss Murphy was in March, 1904, appointed to a position in the department of English in East High School. Her character, her ability, and her devotion to her work and to her pupils have made for her a position of commanding influence in the life of the school.

Nearly all the members of the Class of June 1915 have come under Miss Murphy's instruction at some time in the course, and for the past two years she has been one of the faculty advisors of the Class. During that time she has won the love and enthusiastic admiration of the entire Class.

JUNE 1915 ELECTS FIRST OFFICERS

In a most enthusiastic meeting, March 19th in the Assembly hall, the Class of June, 1915, organized under the direction of their faculty advisors, Miss Jane Hanna and Miss Eleanor Lattimore

FRESHMEN DEFEAT SOPHS

June, 1915, Freshmen Finals, upholding the affirmative, won the third Inter-Class Debate from January, 1915. Soph terms, on Thursday, March 7th, in the Assembly hall.

The question was: "Resolved, That the people should have the power of direct municipal legislation in Rochester."

The debate was very close, for the judges staid out three-quarters of an hour and then returned with a two to one decision in favor of June, 1915.

JUNE '15 DANCE A SUCCESS

The class of June '15 held a dance Wednesday evening of vacation week in the lower corridors of the school. In every way it was a case of history repeating itself. The affairs given by this class have always been noted for their success from a financial and social point of view and this dance was no exception to the rule. The affair was favored with

Class History

At the end of its high school course, and after four long years spent in the pursuit and furtherance of knowledge, it is only fitting and proper that this aspiring Class of June 1915 snatch a moment or two from its high school life, and chronicle some of its triumphs and successes, that it may remember in the future what it has done at East High School.

About 8:45 one bright, sunny morning early in the month of September, 1911, a little band of green, verdant freshmen stoutly strutted up to the doors of East High School, where they were met by the usual courtesy of the Sophomores—that of running the gauntlet. After being tossed about a few moments, they resisted, and fought their way to the third floor. In this event of its first day at East High School, the Class of June 1915 established a precedent which it has since followed by showing the rest of the school that it could, and intended to surmount all obstacles that should stand in the way of its progress.

Unlike those former classes at East High who accomplished practically nothing during their Freshman Year, our illustrious class met for the first time and organized, under the direction of its faculty advisors, Miss Jane Hanna and Miss Eleanor Lattimore, in March, 1912. Soon after, the class ventured forth into social activities, and held the first of its annual sleighrides.

A short time later the annual Inter-class Debates were held for the first time. Of course a Freshman should never even think of pitting himself against his superiors in gray matter, and of being successful. But this Freshman Class did, and after hard work and careful preparation the team successfully defeated all its opponents, the last of whom was the ranking Senior Class, and thus carried off the laurels and the Inter-class Debating Championship.

When we returned in the fall a few of our classmates had for some reason or other dropped out; but there was still a good number of "pluggers." And how we did strut around those corridors! Just think of it—Sophomores! We had outgrown the primeval state, and we now had to show the school what we could accomplish in the social line. The first thing we did that year was to hold a Hallowe'en Party. But this wasn't enough, so a sleighride was arranged which proved very successful. No doubt the success of all our social activities has been due in a great measure to the generous aid and ceaseless efforts of our faculty advisors, Miss Hanna for the boys, and Miss Murphy, following Miss Lattimore's departure, for the girls. The boys entered into athletics with great spirit, not gaining many honors then, but merely getting the training which enabled them to carry off the laurels in the following two years.

As Juniors, the first problem that confronted us was the necessity of giving a Junior Prom. But upon the advice of Mr. Wilcox and the class faculty officers, it was decided to hold two dances at the school in place of a "Prom." The girls gave one, in the form of a Valentine Party, and the boys gave the other as a Junior Dance. One might think that with all these social events, and with the hearty support they received, the students would be compelled to file a petition of bankruptcy of their pocketbooks; but this was not the case. The Class of June 1915 is noted for its many inexpensive social affairs, and for having a better time at a lower cost. Because of the success of this plan, the classes which have since entered East High have followed our lead as to informal affairs. During the course of the winter, another sleighride was enjoyed by the participants, but not by the treasury; for, as the weather was bad, there was not so large a turnout as was anticipated, and therefore the treasury had to supply a small deficit for the first, last, and only time. But social events were not our only accomplishments during this year. The athletic ability of June 1915 was brought out when we won the Inter-class Cross Country Meet, the Inter-class Soccer Championship, and when we made a splendid showing in our other athletic contests. Besides these various activities, there was a strong intellectual spirit in our class. We were represented on the Clarion, in debating, in the Roman State, and all other activities of that kind.

JUNE ~ 1915

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

There was one event in our Junior Year which differed very much from the custom of former classes. As Juniors, it was our duty to observe Arbor Day. On former occasions it had been the practice to plant vines or shrubs, but we had the unique distinction of planting a tree on the school lawn to replace the one which had died. The Class had appropriate ceremonies on Arbor Day and duly installed the June 1915 tree with the hope that it might be a credit to us.

In February, our fourth and last sleighride resulted in a very delightful affair. The Senior Farce, a play written by a student of the school, was given by the combined January and June classes. Toward the end of the year our Class presented the Shakespearean drama, "Love's Labour's Lost," out of doors, and this proved to be one of our most successful enterprises. Then the athletics of our Senior Year must not be forgotten. From start to finish June 1915 has done fully her part in providing men for the school teams.

In addition to the work that the June 1915 Class has accomplished as a whole, it should be said that its members have represented it in many more activities than those of any other class. The spirit of unity and good fellowship that has prevailed among them, has helped to raise the standards, not only of the Class, but of the entire school.

Now, at the close of four years of honest achievement, standing on the threshold of the future, with life beckoning to us from wider fields, we feel a deep regret at leaving our Alma Mater, and the associations that we have learned to love and honor. May future classes only uphold the honor of East High as well as June 1915 has tried to do it, and the future will hold bright things in store for our old E. H. S.

CLASS OF JUNE 15 CELEBRATES

The class of June '15 gave a low-key party last Friday night in the girls "gym" which was a complete success. All were dressed as ghosts so that it was difficult if not impossible to distinguish one from another.

The girls' locker-room was fixed up to represent the catacombs and each ghost was forced to wander through the labyrinth alone. Many obstacles greeted their path and skeletons glided thru the darkness. Skulls and cross bones, glowing with phosphorus, sent shivers

Class Poem

Commencement

Wilt see as brave a sight as eye hath seen?
Just come with me atop this sloping hill,
For on the other side in ceaseless gait,
The youth of all the town are passing by.
Take note of each, as well thou can'st from here,
For in their souls thou may'st, in very truth,
Find echoes of the varied dreams of men.
See thou, yon earnest faces fresh with health,
Those few who talk and laugh half-seriously,
Now gay, now thoughtful and a trifle sad.
Among them are the thinkers of the age.
Yet, do not think their path is wholly dull.
Their games are carefree, though their thoughts be deep.
See now, what sport they find in simple things—
A flower, a leaf, makes purest merriment.
Another group that dances far ahead,
With lightly tripping feet, glad-hearted song,
Far fleetier than the flitting butterfly,
Scarce treading earth in their swift pilgrimage,
No trace of care this gay spring morning weighs,
Nor ever will, as far as they foresee.
And so they glitter on in heedless haste,
Vain pleasure luring them with laughing eyes.
Aha! you smile at this approaching.
I wonder not, yet sad it seems to me
That those should plod on patiently, their eyes
So fastened on the earth, that softest clouds,
Deep heaven's bluest dome, or spring's gay robes,
Or even, what seems sadest, their own friends
Be unobserved and oft times treated ill
For following time-worn trails, obscure and vague.
Could they but see the joy they're missing thus;
Friendship's true heart, reward of being kind,
Nature's pure charms, and noble purposes,
Think you, content would lie for them
In egotistic aims? Enough for them!
Note those lithe creatures that weave in and out,
Their bearing graceful, quick their motions as
A golden dart from heaven in a storm.
No awkward, clumsy gesture can you mark
In all their course, as, leaping over bush,
And wall, and mound with step like thistle down,
Or flinging back a ball that seems to soar
On winged path from one, down to another,

Or speeding past us, Mercury their guide,
 They nimbly pass all barriers to their goal.
 A worthy goal it is, and only won
 By patience and endurance, like the rest;
 Yet sickness and the course of years will soon
 Obscure it. Other aims will come and pass,
 All earthly and belonging to the time.
 Now look! The last bright remnant of the train,
 But by their very scarcity thou can'st
 Perceive their value to the little town.
 Here comes a tall, fair-haired, broad-shouldered youth,
 And with him walks a maid, well-poised, free-limbed—
 Say! hast thou ever seen as comely grace
 As plays about their upright, youthful forms?
 Clear eyes, two blue, two brown, and hair that vies
 With the sheen of a new horse chestnut in the sun.
 Both have most slender fingers which can write,
 Wield racquet, dive, or sew with equal ease.
 In fact, these two have been so graced in life
 That health and beauty, intellect and soul
 They own, and little realize their worth.
 But hast thou marked a few who do not shine
 In brightness worldly, or in fame far-spread?
 These are the ones who make this life worth while
 By casting far and wide a ray of light
 Which touches all with whom they tread this path.
 Ah! few are these whose hours are spent to give
 To some one else a cheerful; helping hand.
 Too few, indeed, but from their tiny lamps
 The great, broad, world illumination finds,
 And finds itself in their sweet presence blessed.
 Now draw thine eyes to where the western sun
 Is wrapping round him his gay-colored cloak
 Preparing to depart to distant lands.
 There near the world's fast-dimming, hazy, edge
 Perceive the parting of this pleasant road.
 One course will lead to power and to wealth.
 How gloriously those far-off turrets shine!
 The other, plain, and barren to the view
 Possesses still such wonders fine and rare
 That mortal may but seldom catch their forms.
 To this point then these youths and maidens go.
 And when they reach its gates and choose their path,—
 Say Pilgrim, can'st thou tell which course they'll take?

CATHARINE WEAVER.

The Class Prophecy

The year 1930 had arrived. Scarcely had the chimes from the various church towers ceased their melodious welcoming of the glad new year, when I was rudely awakened from my reverie by the jangling of the telephone bell. Somewhat impatiently I grasped the receiver.

"Hello!"

"Happy New Year, Old man!"

"Thanks, same to you!"

I leaned back in my old arm-chair and smiled reminiscently. The voice which had just come over the wire stirred up pleasant memories. The speaker was no other than my old school chum, now the Right Honorable H. W. Roscoe; plain Welday Roscoe back in the old days at East High. I laughed softly to myself as I contrasted this luxury-loving, red-faced clubman to the almost painfully devout Welday of my high school days. As I ruminated on the wonderful change in the man, the first words ever flashed over telegraph wires, "What hath God wrought?" came back to me.

Indeed fifteen years had wrought a wonderful change in all the members of the Class of June 1915. I, myself, had sprung from a poor starving scribe to a wealthy man, but not through my own efforts, but through the unfortunate death of a distant relative who had left me his fortune. If it had not been for the aforesaid antecedent's decease I should probably have left this vale of tears in a short time, and the corner would have rendered the verdict: "Died, this day of our Lord, one Howard Winants, from exposure to the elements and lack of proper nourishment."

It has always been my hobby to keep a scrap-book, and to catalogue therein accounts of the achievements of my acquaintances. As my thoughts wandered back to the old circle of school-day friends, I rose and extracted my scrap-book from the book-case. In a moment I sat immersed in newspaper clippings, autographed pictures, and marginal notes, all telling of the doings of my old classmates.

Almost the first one I came across was a photograph of Alvin Van Bergh. "Bugs" as we used to call him, had risen in the world. Although he held no official position he was recognized as the "Boss" of political affairs in New York and had thereby realized the ambition expressed in his credentials in our High School Senior Annual. "Boss" Van Bergh had great influence with the women voters and was always a welcome guest at their various receptions. It was largely through his efforts that the modern dances such as "The Wiener Wriggle" and "The Angle Worm" had been abolished, and that the old classic dances such as "The Grecian Gazump" and the "Roman Rattle" had been adopted.

I next found an autographed likeness of Lady Cosmetics which I had purchased from a newspaper reporter to enter in my scrap-book. She had just divorced her noble husband, I read, and was on her way to America to begin a tour of all the principal cities with her famous Opera Company. I resolved that I would hear the lady sing when she arrived and wondered whether she would resume her maiden name of Olivia Ribstein, now that she had rejected her royal husband. It was reported that she was engaged to the celebrated tenor in her Company, whom I knew as Burton Stevens, but this may have been mere gossip.

A little pamphlet advertising the coming great photoplay caught my eye. It was called "Lizzie's Love," or "What Is Home Without a Mother?" I learned that the two principals who performed hair-raising feats were Helen Kerrigan and Wilfred Kearns.

As I turned the next page a photograph which I had neglected to fasten securely, fell out and lay face downwards on the rug. I stooped down and turned it about. My gaze met the smiling face of a well built young man attired in a very becoming barbing suit, with the words "Life Guard" across the front. It was my old friend, Leslie Albright, who had evidently followed up his favorite pastime of swimming and turned it into his vocation, for he was now the hero of Sea Breeze and received the stupendous wage of five dollars per week for pulling shrieking females out of the briny deep.

A bit of writing in one corner of the sheet brought to mind a call I had paid to the morgue a few months before. I had been astonished to find that Grant Goebel was the attendant there. The little, self-assertive, arrogant "Midge" of my boyhood days had developed into a tall, slim, most melancholy individual. He was dressed in a tight fitting, black broad-cloth suit and looked for all the world like a stick of licence. He had a sort of dried up appearance which I suppose, came from his association with so many corpses. A sort of a glad light sprung up in his watery eyes when he recognized me and he seemed glad to see me. I remember it was a bitter cold day and he admonished me for coming out without a muffler and predicted that I would, at least, contract pneumonia on my way home. He even offered to lend me his, saying that he was not long for this world anyway. I felt quite downcast when I left him.

An advertisement pasted in the lower corner called my attention to a downtown restaurant which I frequently patronized. The owners, who did their own cooking were two of the old bunch, Glenna

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

Hauck and Dorothy Jackson, and nowhere have I seen two young ladies who so excelled in the culinary art. I understood they had had numerous proposals of marriage but had rejected all of them, saying that the suitors were in love with their virtuous and not with them.

On the next page was a picture of a young man in baseball uniform, his arms raised above his head just ready to pitch a ball. Below was the inscription: "Rauschenbusch at the beginning of the third inning at the opening game yesterday." I had clipped it from a newspaper at the opening of the baseball season the year before and this had been the first I knew that Paul was playing professional baseball. I heard afterwards that he had been relegated to the bushleague, but whether there is any truth in the story I cannot say.

Three pages over I came upon a photo of the champion tennis player of the world. My thoughts wandered back to a night fifteen years before when I had danced with a diminutive young lady and had said: "Dancing is my favorite recreation. Is it yours?" She had replied: "I am very fond of it, but I enjoy a game of tennis above all things." So this was Olga Clark. She had certainly perfected the game.

On the same page was a bit of writing which brought back a little incident of the winter before. Just across from my rooms are three establishments. The first is a doctor's office, the second a pharmacy, and the last an undertaking parlor. One day the ambulance drove up before the doctor's office and a badly crippled gentleman was helped up the steps. They came out in a few moments and entered the neighboring drugstore's. After a lapse of perhaps fifteen minutes I was startled to see two men emerge carrying the prostrate form of the injured man on a shutter. They walked slowly with heads bowed and entered the undertaking-establishment. I thought it quite a novel coincidence that my three old school friends, Bernard Myers, Frank Lord, and Seymour Askin should be the respective proprietors of these places all situated in the same neighborhood.

Nearby was pasted a calling card on which were the names: Ruth Stevenson and Leona Moore. They were deaconesses of I don't know how many churches and when they had paid me a visit a few weeks before had cajoled me into paying pew rent for three different places of worship.

Opposite was an account of a raid on a pool parlor and bowling alley. The charges were gambling and rough-housing. The proprietor, however, owing to his ability to twist the law had escaped scot free. Andy Peer always was a lucky little shrimp, anyway.

Alongside the picture was a written note which called to mind a visit paid me by one of the old East High group. A gayly attired young woman rushed breathlessly in one morning, pushing past my manservant who raised his eyebrows haughtily to show his disapproval, sank into a chair and dabbing her nose with a powder puff gushed out: "O, Mr. Winants, won't you subscribe to our fund for a home for aged chorus girls?" We discussed the matter through the haze of two perfumed cigarettes which she kindly offered and really seemed to relish and I learned that the sedate Catharine Weaver of fifteen years ago now cavorted in the first row of the Follies of 1930. I subscribed to the fund.

My attention was then drawn to an announcement of a large typewriter manufacturing firm that the contest on their new machine which printed words instead of letters had been won by another member of my class. Carolyn Porter had secured the first prize of five thousand dollars, having written one thousand seven hundred and twenty nine words per minute. Arthur Quackenbusch had run her a close second but had lost out by nine words. He secured the second prize of two thousand and they were now both employed by the same firm as agents.

On the next page was a group of photos taken from the theater page of one of the big daily's which showed the most famous exponent of Shakesperian plays. I noted with some satisfaction that Arnold Donovan had made a name for himself in the world and incidentally pitted those students of English who would have to stand in front of the class and try to imitate his wonderful delivery.

My next discovery was a picture of three vaudeville stage favorites who went by the catchy title of the A. B. C. Girls. I have seen them act and they certainly are a wonderful trio. In East High they were known as Ina Acheson, Alice Bender, and Mary Clements. It is a queer coincidence that these three girls whose names begin with the first three letters of the alphabet should all have talent along the same line.

The next page revealed a newspaper picture of a corpulent gentleman, whose face was disfigured by a large pair of goggles and a tight fitting helmet with ear-laps appending. At first sight he appeared like some monster from the Arabian Nights but a glance at the printed matter below showed that he was Lieutenant George Benton of the United States Aerial Corps, and the first man to make the trans-Atlantic flight in a heavier-than-air machine. He made quite a dashing young officer, to use a delightfully colloquial metaphor, when attired in his resplendent uniform and although he has not yet smelled powder (except at social affairs) I have no doubt he will show his worth when the time comes and will perhaps some day wear a Van Bergh Medal.

An advertisement for a hair-dressing establishment next met my gaze and informed me that absolutely the latest styles could be obtained there. The ladies who were engaged in this business were also of the old class. They were now called Madame Lazette and Madame Alvia, but, I believe, their real names are still Belle Kessen and Ina Stell.

The next cut showed a young man stripped to the waist with his hands held before him in an attitude of defence. It was a flashlight photograph of the world's heavyweight champion, Edgar Meyer, better known in the sporting world as "Spike" or "Mulekick" Meyer. One could hardly recognize in the battle-scarred, two hundred and eighty-six pounds pugilist the dapper, diminutive Edgar of High School fame.

As I turned the page my gaze met a profile view of the famous Countess D'Annunzietta, the European and American social butterfly. She had three marriages and an equal number of divorces to her credit and it was rumored that she was about to take a fourth plunge in the sea of matrimonial venture. I never dreamed back in the old days that the future held such a fate in store for Ruby Pittinger. Her's has not been a monotonous career and I wished her luck with her fourth better half.

My attention was then caught by an article from The Scientific Review by the greatest of modern scientists who was endeavoring to disprove the time honored theory that the sun was not the center of the universe and to show that the planet Mars was. I scratched my head perplexedly as I glanced through the acid criticisms of his fellow scientists. I did not envy Edward Wuensch his job.

On the margin of the same page was pasted a neatly engraved card bearing the name of one of my old classmates. I remembered on the morning I received my inheritance my newly acquired valet had shown a small, lively, mannishly dressed young lady in and she had breezed up to me with the somewhat startling salutation of "Hello, Sleepy, I hear you came into some money. Congratulations, tell me all about it." In a moment she had whipped out a note book and stood with a pencil poised waiting for me to speak. Although somewhat taken aback I complied with her request and before she left she presented me with the aforementioned card and I learned she was no other than Dorothy Matthews, star woman-reporter for the Times.

Beneath was a cut of the agricultural expert at Washington who had written many articles on how to save dollars on the farm. Efficiency was his by-word, and this dapper gentleman in his silk hat did not look at all like a hayseed. I smiled to myself. Who would have thought Walter Simonds would ever hold such a position?

I next came upon a photograph of a smiling lady, with some sort of a decorative collar about her neck. Upon closer examination I perceived to my horror that it was a snake. "Celestine Foley, a snake charmer!" I gasped and passed on to the next.

In between the next two pages was a bit of tin foil. A queer aroma assailed my nostrils as I examined it. I passed quickly on but not until I had noticed the advertisement written thereon which was: "Creswick's Creepy Cheese." Edward Creswick owned the largest limburger plant in the world.

On the lower margin of the same sheet a bit of written memoranda brought to mind a chance meeting with a young lady of June 15, six months previous. I had been strolling through Central Park and becoming fatigued took a seat on a sequestered bench whose only other occupant was a neatly tailored young lady. She eyed me curiously for a few moments and finally addressed me by name and asked whether she had it right. I told her she had and she introduced herself as Miss Beatrice Kaiser. I complimented her on her memory for faces and she told me it was this accomplishment which had secured her her present position in the Secret Service of our government. We had quite a long chat and she related some hair-raising adventures which she had experienced in various European cities.

The next I ran across was an article on the patents of the great modern inventor, Robert Spencer. Among his minor inventions I noticed one which was called "The Attention Attractor or Girl Getter." If my memory serves me well, he first conceived the idea in the year 1915. He at least had a similar apparatus then, but which I believe he called by a slightly different name.

A bit of writing on one side of the page revived an almost forgotten incident of a few months before. It was at election time and one could find a campaign speaker at nearly every corner. At the corner of forty-second street I came upon a stump speaker. Although I could not get near the stand on account of the crowd I could hear the booming masculine tones of the speaker quite plainly. Upon inquiry I found it was Minerva Thistlethwaite, the celebrated elocutionist.

Opposite was an article on the strictness of the State Pure Food Commissioners, illustrated by cuts of various large canning factories and bakeries which were employing official food examiners. This article informed me that Arthur Woggon was now expert pie-taster for one of the largest bakeries in the world. I smiled reminiscently. Here was a man who had not missed his calling.

On the following page was a list of men and women who had just received their degrees of Master of Arts; among them was the name of Marion Harmon now an instructress in Latin in the University of Pennsylvania, and it came back to me then how fond she had been of that subject when in East High.

In late years the National Aerial Service owned and operated by the government has quite done away with the railroads. In fact only one was left and I believe they ran a train only once a week.

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

Recently this single carrier had been wrecked on a closed switch. A little clipping in my scrap-book told me that the engineer of this train was Harold Rosenberg who was often called "Erie Rosenberg" after the road for which he worked.

The next was a lengthy account of how the work was progressing on the sub-aquatic tube from New York to Liverpool. The narrative gave great praise to the two engineers who were at the head of the job. Carl Siebold had full charge of the actual construction work and was rapidly pushing it through to a successful end. Paul Krag had charge of the finances and seemed to satisfy the powers that the accounts were all straight. There were various rumors of second-class materials and graft, but I dismissed them immediately. I knew those two lads better than that and I shall always be proud to receive them as friends.

Next to it was pasted a little pamphlet advertising a summer camp in Algonquin Park for girls. The opposite sex was absolutely barred, it said. I found that this resort was being conducted by Esther Black and Almeda Butts.

In the past few years several outlaw leagues had sprung up in the baseball world and in order to avoid much trouble and law suits the four big leagues had agreed not to play with any teams outside their sphere. A council was called and a president elected to look after the affairs of the four leagues. Since then William Stallman has often been spoken of as the highest salaried man in America. I remember Stallman always used to live up to his name. "Stalling" was his greatest art.

Next I discovered a picture of New York's first woman chief of female police. She was a husky Amazon and looked to be capable of holding her own with any thug. There was an account of her heroic deeds below and her uniform was nearly concealed by medals for bravery. I shook my head sadly. Formerly an anti-suffrage worker, she was now holding public office. Who would have thought that the dainty Angelina Cobb could ever come to this?

My next discovery was a clipping telling of a series of lectures to be given by a touring professor of Zoology on the intelligence displayed by angle-worms, caterpillars and other centipedes in their contortions. This learned man, Professor James Angle, upheld the theory that each and every wriggle of these spineless animals represented some distinct thought in the brain of the creature. He had looked deeply into this subject as he had always done with his studies as a youth.

Further on was an engraved invitation to attend the last dance at the Pavilion L'Dance. Another of my old classmates was literally making money hand over fist. Here all manner of dancing was taught young society buds, from the old classics to the modern. Mildred Treman, the owner, was sometimes referred to as "grace personified."

I next came across a picture of the great financier who was reported to be backing the great sub-aquatic tube proposition. He was the wealthiest man in America at this time and I noted that Mr. Davy's business course in East High was some good at that for the millionaire was the erstwhile president of the Commercial Club, namely, Richard McAllister.

I turned the page and beheld the face of a beautiful actress smiling out at me. A newspaper clipping pasted below gave her the name of Dore Zubelda and announced that she was playing the leading role in "When Cosette Smiles," the Season's most popular musical comedy. But while brilliant electric lights blazed the name "Dore Zubelda" across the Great White Way, I prided myself that I had known her when she bore the less splendid but equally lovable appellation of Dorothy Clark.

The next picture I found was that of a young man dressed in a heavy automobile costume standing alongside of a huge racing car which bore the white figure three on the front. The write-up below told how Leslie Kuhnert had just broken the world's record, making an average rate of two and an eighth miles per hour for a hundred miles. The car was from the Flivver Motor Car factory of which Benjamin Elconin was the head.

Alongside was an advertisement for the famous Fifth Avenue manicuring parlors. I remember I dropped in one day and spent a most enjoyable half hour listening to the chatter of a good looking young lady who held my hand and snipped and polished industriously, the while. I found out later that she was Belle Neivert, and was in partnership with another school friend Bertha Morris. They seemed to have a very nice business and I shan't be surprised when I hear they have taken husbands unto themselves.

Directly opposite was a newspaper cut of the world renowned evangelist and reformer—The Reverend Paul Ludekins. He had been an active factor in the great crusade to abolish the practice of drinking grape-juice, and his work reminded me of the Billy Sunday crusade fifteen years before when more stimulating intoxicants could still be purchased.

The next few pages were littered with cuts illustrating the great disaster at sea a few months before when the largest liner in the world went down in mid-ocean. Among these I found photographs of three more of the old East High clique all of whom had escaped safely, I noted with no little degree of satisfaction. The captain who had showed unusual valor in the rescue work which followed the collision was the last to leave the ship and in him I recognized Frank Macy. The stewardess of the ship was Clara McGreal and if the accounts were true she had saved nine children from a burning stateroom and in this crisis showed herself to be true blue. Last but not least I found that the wireless operator who had sent out the S. O. S. call for help and had aided materially in carrying on the rescue work was my old friend Franklyn Young.

My next discovery was a picture of the famous fencing master who had recently been forced to flee the country on account of severely wounding a prominent man in a duel, which had been fought, it was rumored, over some member of the fair sex. I understood he had gone to France and as I read the name I wondered how Louis Applebaum was enjoying Parisian life.

I next encountered an advertisement for a certain painless dentist whom I knew in East High. I had been encouraged by his absolute guarantee that he could extract teeth without pain. I had one molar which gave me no end of trouble and I resolved to have it removed. Anthony Drago gripped the refractory tooth with a wicked looking pair of tweezers, gave a yank, and I jumped right through a window and never felt the pain. Fortunately his office was on the ground floor.

Above was an advertisement for an antique shop which I had cut from a theater program upon recognizing the name of the proprietress. She, I had been told, knew more about old armour, weapons, and furniture than any connoisseur in the business. I never knew in the old days that Lucia Bishop had any interest along this line but perhaps it is an art which she mastered since that time.

On the next leaf I encountered a picture of "America's Hardware King" who owned a string of stores across the continent and was now on trial in Supreme Court charged with organizing a corporation with monopolistic tendencies. He had developed a wonderful business ability and I hoped that Irying Larzelere would come out on top.

Opposite was an account of the most daring reception and entertainment of the season. It had shocked New York and it takes something to do that. I found the hostess was no other than the petite Hazel Lannen, the once popular dance fiend of East High. I suspect her old friend the aforementioned Countess D'Annunzietta had something to do with that reception.

On the next page was a photograph of the millionaire horse owner and race track man, who had placed the winning entry in the last steeplechase. He was a stout man with a thick black cigar clenched between his teeth and his front was adorned with a glaring red vest. I was somewhat startled when I contrasted the quiet Rodney Southgate of my school days with this flashy sporting gentleman but the more I thought of it the more convinced I became that there always had been a wild streak in him somewhere.

An article concerning the furtherance of physical culture in the college attracted my attention. It told of the wonderful work being done in a western co-educational institution and mentioned the physical instructress's good work. I was somewhat surprised to learn that Frances Edwards, once of the Class of June 1915, was in charge of this department.

My next discovery was some examples of cubist art. To tell the truth I couldn't see anything artistic about the conglomeration of squares and triangles. One of them was called "A Lady Descending a Stair." It looked to me like the plan for a geometric landscape but far be it from me to question the great futurist, Vincent Wallace.

On the next page I found an article taken from the Sunday supplement on the latest fashions from The Berlin Smart Styles Shop on Fifth Avenue. I was glad to see that my old friends, Minnie Bemish and Agnes Artwater were doing well.

On the next page was an account of how the heiress who had recently disappeared had been rescued from her abductors by a famous New York detective, the successor of William Burns. In the heiress I recognized another old classmate, namely, Emma Dintruff, and in the renowned sleuth no other than Donald Kelley. Here, I thought, was a chance for another romance.

A few pages further on I found a menu from the Waldorf. I had kept it from a banquet as a souvenir from a banquet which I had eaten there. The food was so well cooked that I had enquired who the chef was and was somewhat startled when I found that it was another old friend, namely, Neil Brown. He had affected a cute little French moustache and looked quite different from the boy I knew in East High.

On the next page was a picture of the day's most popular songwriter which I had clipped from the front of his latest success, "You're Different From Any Girl I Ever Met Before." A little tear trickled down my cheek. And Herbert Lansdale had come to this!

The next picture was that of a portly gentleman, surrounded by a group of boys. It was George Brown with some of his brood. He had carried out his youthful ideals and was now president of the New York Y. M. C. A.

Nearby was a picture of how the new public library building was to appear when finished and an insert in one corner showed the smiling features of the celebrated architect who had designed the edifice, in whom I recognized my old friend Lester Rapp of German Scholarship fame.

JUNE ~ 1915

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

On the next page was a picture of the ambassador to Germany who was very popular in diplomatic circles. He was now carrying on negotiations with that country and it was largely through his efforts that free trade had been averted. This steely-eyed gentleman was known as Harold Braun in the golden, olden days.

In one corner was a cut of the world's renowned band master, the greatest since Sousa's time. He was attired in a modest blue uniform but his breast bore more medals than I have ever seen in one collection before. Harold Schaffer was another who had carried out his youthful ideals.

My attention was next attracted to a newspaper article on the great work being done by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. A glance at the list of officers showed me that Katherine Luther was president, Caroline Martin, vice-president, and Lillian Wronker the secretary. I remember I paid a visit to their society once in search of a lost pedigreed bull terrier and before I left, the young ladies had forced me to adopt two nondescript mongrels and a flea bitten cat. This is certainly great work.

Over a page was a picture of the retired circus owner who had taken over Barnum and Bailey's Circus some years before. He was no other than Chester Miller the once famous track man of East High. A further perusal of the list of those in his great show brought to light the fact that the strong woman, who used to be known as Sylvia Handler in the old days, was now traveling in vaudeville on her own hook.

Above was a note which called to mind an incident which had happened the previous summer in the Grand Central Station. I had been going on my vacation and was wandering about the depot waiting for my train when I was nearly startled out of my shoes by a deep bass voice calling: "Trains going East on track No. 31!! West Bound trains on track No. 6!!" Surely there was something familiar about those stentorian notes? I looked about and spied the owner of the below. It looked like—it was James Bryant of the old days!!! Here was another who had chosen the right vocation.

The four or five pages following were covered with pictures of statues and groups of marble figures which were to decorate the coming exposition grounds at Chicago. Two of the most renowned artists and sculptresses were old East High students, namely, Ruth Tower and Helen Pearce.

Lying in between the next two pages was a blotter with the insignia of The First National Bank thereon. I picked it up and glanced over the list of officers. I nearly died of fright when I noticed that John Menjerink was president of the institution. I resolved to draw my money out the following day.

A little further on was a cut of the Yale foot-ball team, a sport which is still quite prevalent and I noticed that the coach who had led the team through a victorious season was the old High School athletic idol, Max Schwartz.

One habit which was still in vogue after our advance in civilization since the Great European War was the consumption of tobacco. I learned from an article in my old book that Howard Kallusch was the greatest manufacturer of cigars in the country, and I remembered that he made some beautiful ones in the year 1915.

Just below was a magazine article concerning the famous authoress, whose name was always associated with the six best sellers. Her most recent popular novel was "Lovely Woman," and I noted with pleasure that Doris Wynkoop had achieved more success in the literary field than I had been able to attain.

On the next page was a photograph of Leyland Randall which I had secured from him personally. He was now the proprietor of a tansorial establishment on the adjacent corner from my apartments and I noticed that he had lost none of his elocutional powers for every time I had my hair cut he gave a lengthy harangue on all the vital questions of the day and I often marvelled at his long wind. He told me he still played his clarinet, a practice, he confessed, which often necessitated a change of boarding house.

A little farther on was an illustration showing the very latest creation in women's headgear. It was called The Kissmequick Bonnet, designed by the famous successor to Paquin who was called Mark Tillson when I knew him but had somewhere picked up the title of Monsieur. A little lump came up in my throat. Poor Mark, what a terrible fate!

On the next page was a picture of three young ladies on horseback. I had taken it from a newspaper a few weeks before and there accompanied it an article on the novel cat ranch in Arizona. It was not an infrequent sight, it said, to see droves of cats wandering about the ranch grazing on catnip. The object was to carry on a trade in cat furs which was absolutely the latest style in women's furs, and for which there was a great demand. The owners were Frieda Davidson and Rose Gugino. Their manager was Hilda Levy and it was said she was very proficient in swooping down upon a drove of felines with blood curdling yells. She would swing her lariat above her head, cast it and continue on her way dragging a fine husky Angora in her wake.

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

I next came across a cut of the contractor who had landed the job of repairing the state highways. He was charged with corruptness and graft. The city boss's name was also linked with his and people were beginning to mutter the names of Maurice Brindisi, the contractor, and of "Boss Van Bergh" in ominous tones.

I also chanced upon the picture of a villainous looking individual under which was a notice that $5000 reward would be paid to anyone who could secure the capture and conviction of Vernon Clements, the highwayman. I noted with sorrow that Vern's "badness and boldness" had turned from the conquest of fair maidens to the conquest of pocketbooks.

Pasted on the same page was a card advertising a florist's shop. I patronized it frequently. Excellent roses could be bought there. The proprietress, who was Tobie Rose in East High, had married a man bearing the same name and when I went in for flowers I often used to spend a pleasant five minutes playing with some half dozen little rosebuds on the floor of the shop.

On the next few pages were several articles from "The Physical Culture Magazine." They were written by Florence Wright, a reporter on this magazine and a strong advocate of the fresh-air cure. Gladys Roworth was the editor of it and people say that in spite of the strenuous brain work, she keeps in perfect physical condition by her fine system of training.

A little further on I found a photograph of the first woman ambassador to France. In East High she was known as Della Martin and I wondered whether she had secured that position through the knowledge of French she had acquired in her old Alma Mater.

My next discovery was an article telling of the Jitney Bus Association which had recently been formed in South America by three enterprising young women. I wondered how Elwena Weible, Anna Tenson and Edith Nason liked existing on hot tamales.

Further on I found an engraved card with the name Harold O. Toor. He had paid me a visit the summer before and when I inquired how he was getting along he informed me nonchalantly that he was worth about fifty thousand. I didn't ask him how he got it but I later learned that he was a plumber.

I turned the page and examined the portrait of a neatly tailored lady surrounded by a group of ragged children. The printed matter below claimed her to be the well-known slum worker, Miss Dorothy Manson. She was called "Darling Dorothy" by those poor souls whom she befriended.

At the top of the page was a card on which was printed as follows: "BUREAU OF MATRIMONY." "We guarantee to marry you to anyone whom you may admire regardless of your station in life. Money refunded if not satisfied." I shook my head sadly. Marriage for love was a thing of the past. And to think that my old school friends, Harry Levin and Harry Rapp were the proprietors of this wretched institution.

Directly opposite was a cut of the Klassy Kabaret Kids and among their number in an extreme dress suit was Lloyd Fishbaugh who had developed a tenor voice of the first water and was known by cafe frequenters as the best entertainer in the business. I remembered Lloyd was always conspicuous in the "agony quartettes" which grouped themselves in the corridors and at the class meetings in old East High.

A few pages forward was pasted an invitation for the wedding of Miss Sadie Mostkov to Allen Rosenberg. These were the only two of my classmates who had married schoolday sweethearts. Allen is now the head buyer of the largest New York dry goods house and I understand that the couple are very happy. I happen to know where their romance was started but keeping secrets is one of the best little things I do.

Beneath was a picture of the modern Daniel Webster, who had just made a stirring speech on the aeroplane tax. He had been regarded as the most eloquent orator of the day and his speeches were read in the schools. His style is a good deal like Burke's and his sayings are interspersed with classic allusions. I remembered in East High how we used to lapse occasionally into the vernacular and call Goodman Sarachen the king of "Bull Shooters."

I came to myself with a guilty start. The clock had just struck three. It was long since time that I was in bed. The flames in the fireplace had died down and only a few glowing embers remained. As I rose and stretched my benumbed limbs, I glanced at the class picture which hung above the mantel. It was probably due to the flickering light but I could have sworn that they were all frowning at me.

I felt sorry that I had been forced to say some apparently unkind things about my old classmates but I had only chronicled the facts with malice toward none and not charity, but good-will toward all and as I switched out the light and climbed into bed, my last conscious thoughts were only of the kindest nature for the old Class of June '15.

The East High Faculty

As our high school days come to an end, it is but natural that we should wish to pay a tribute to those who have guided us and kept us on the straight and narrow path, striving to help us, to make our work easier and more pleasant, to find our faults and correct them, and to prepare us for the buffets and knocks which we are sure to encounter after leaving our Alma Mater.

We do not realize yet how much the East High faculty has done for us, and it will take years for us to fully appreciate the self-sacrifice of our instructors and their devotion to their work. We do realize, however, that they have done their best to start every member of the Senior Class with a good equipment and a solid foundation on which to build his life; and the members of June, 1915, therefore, take this opportunity to say that they are duly grateful.

As we leave high school we feel that East High teachers are second to none in devotion to their work, loyal co-operation with their head, and generous interest in all student activities.

The Students' Association

The Students' Association, whose object is to promote the interests of all activities representing East High School, has characterized its work this year by extremely radical changes in the Constitution, with a constant striving for cleaner athletics and a higher standard of insignia. In the first term of the school year a committee of five from the East High Council met a similar one from West High at the latter school, for the purpose of discussing how much equipment should be given each athletic team. The joint committee decided unanimously to discontinue giving equipment free to the members of teams as their personal property, and decided that the awarding of any gifts or free equipment was professional in spirit. At the same time adequate provision was made for the necessary temporary equipment of each team so that the entire equipment question was definitely and satisfactorily settled.

One of the most radical changes made by the Association was that of raising the standard for athletic insignia. Formerly insignia for most of the teams were awarded after participation in but five games, but in this year it was decided to require an athlete to take part in one half of two-thirds of the scheduled games. Hereafter there will be fewer athletes winning the purple "R" each year.

The way the students carried on the campaign to help raise money for books for the school library, since the appropriation from the city authorities had been greatly cut, was significant of the spirit and strength of the organization. Aiming to secure $300, the school passed that mark and raised more than $450 for the book fund. That so much could be collected this year shows how great East High loyalty and how strong East High spirit is.

The discussions in the assembly meetings were marked by the willingness of the students to express their opinions for and against the proposed amendments to the constitution. Especially in the dispute as to whether alternates of debating teams should be awarded pins, was the argument evenly divided. The amendment was finally accepted. The Association added a faculty member to the Executive Council, and also gave the post Graduates and Holdovers the right to organize a class and participate in class and interclass activities. The student body has supported all the activities unusually well, and certainly no one who has heard the school cheering and shouting for its teams could ever say that East High spirit is not what it used to be.

THE PUBLICUM CONSILIUM

The Roman State

The year of A. U. C. XII stands out prominently among those of the Roman State of East High School on account of the many and varied lines of activities illustrating the ancient Roman Republic which the Consilium has carried on during it. The object of the State, namely, to make the students realize that Latin is not a dead language, and that it was once spoken in Rome, has been carried out with amazing success by this year's officials.

Beginning with but four prominent members of last year's state, a capable Consilium was organized by the newly elected officials. The chief lines of activity were the baptism and education of the freshman, the Olympic Games, and the "Alcestis" of Euripides. The officials had planned to publish a book which would incorporate in it the history of the activities of the State and a description of its organization, but owing to the strain entailed in the production of the "Alcestis" this book will not be published until the fall. The present regime has also made arrangements to have motion pictures illustrating the life of ancient Rome brought to East High the first part of the coming term.

This year the State bent all its energy on the production of the "Alcestis." East High School has never before presented a Greek tragedy, and this was, therefore, a very enterprising undertaking. After three months of hard labor under the coaching of Edgar G. Frazier, of the University of Rochester, the State was able to present a finished production, the success of which is witnessed by the fact that it will be presented again in two performances next Thanksgiving.

The Chess Season

Chess teams may come and chess teams may go, but the present team will be long remembered by East High students. Setting a precedent for playing out-of-town games and having the distinction of engaging in more matches than any other Oriental chess team that has gone before it, the present team will go down in history as one of the best chess teams East High has ever had.

The season at East High was inaugurated by the East-West High Tournament, in which 100 men participated. The match lasted three weeks and was only decided by the last game of the tournament— $25\frac{1}{2}$  to  $24\frac{1}{2}$  in favor of the West High players.

Following this tournament, the East High team was picked from the best talent in the school. Sol Posner, Captain, Maurice Kominski, Manager, Benjamin Elconin, George Pardee, David Steidlitz, Gilbert Nusbaum and Jacob Cominsky were finally chosen as the school team, and their showing during the past season demonstrated the wisdom of the choice. Only the first four of these men will be lost by graduation this June.

The team's first match was with Lafayette High School, and was played at Buffalo on March 12. Lafayette defeated the East High team of five men by the score of eight to seven. But in the return match played here at school, the team, cheered on by a large crowd of enthusiasts, "came back" to the tune of nine to six. The next contest was against the Monroe Chess Society of this city, and this match was won by a twelve to three score.

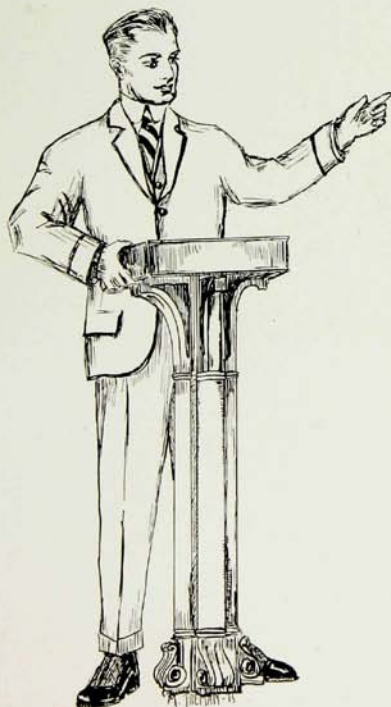

There are still two matches to play. The first, when East High contends against West High for the Interscholastic Championship, and the second when the team defends the title of "Junior Chess League Champions" against the Jewish Young Men's Association.

The Debating Season

The year 1915 is one which will never be forgotten in the annals of debating in East High School. Never before in the history of the school has East High won all of her debates, and it is a noteworthy fact that these victories were won by four distinct teams. This proves that East High places as a prior condition to victory the developing of the largest possible group of students in the oral use of the English language. The Students' Association has tried to accomplish this in two different ways, the interscholastic debating season, and the interclass season. The interclass debating season is purely a student undertaking, the purpose of which is to give more people a chance and to develop material for the school teams. That interclass debating has fulfilled its purpose is witnessed by the fact that the entire West High team and the majority of the Lafayette team received their training in the interclass debates of former years.

The Students' Association has Mr. Harry N. Kenyon and Miss Gertrude A. Sheehan to thank for the training of East High's teams. Mr. Kenyon has organized a class in public speaking which meets twice a week. From this number the boys' teams are chosen. The best feature of this system is that it insures justice, for Mr. Kenyon has an opportunity of fairly judging each candidate's ability. Besides debating, the class studies public speaking and parliamentary law.

The debating season consisted of three debates. The first debate was March 5, with Syracuse High School. Because of an unfortunate mistake due to a change of coaches at Syracuse, both teams prepared the negative of the question, Resolved: "That the Federal Government should own and operate all the telephone and telegraph lines in the United States." When the articles of agreement had been consulted, it was found that Syracuse had made the mistake and the Syracuse lads were plucky enough to speak extemporaneously. Although the debate was closely contested, East High was awarded the decision.

The Amherst Cup Debate with West High was held on the twenty-sixth of March. The question, Resolved: "That the Milk Supply of Rochester Should be Distributed Through Plants Owned by the Municipality," excited a great deal of interest, and a large crowd turned out. The debate was closely contested and the decision remained in doubt until the last East High speaker had been heard, when East High was awarded a two to one decision.

In the Lafayette debate, which was held in Buffalo on April 30, the East High debaters readily won a majority vote of the judges. The question was, Resolved: "That the United States should grant the Philippines their independence in five years."

As a fitting climax to East High's debating season, the girls debating team was unanimously awarded the decision before a crowd which completely filled the assembly hall. To Miss Gertrude A. Sheehan great credit should be given for the masterly way in which she trained the team. The debate was held on May 14 upon the subject, Resolved: "That a systematic study of Domestic Science, with an elementary course in the Grammar Schools, and an advance course in the High Schools should be required of every girl in the Rochester Public School System."

The Musical Season

MISS EUNICE ENSOR
Musical Director

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the musical clubs started rather late this year, they experienced one of the most successful seasons in their history. The Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs have been especially active owing to the untiring and competent direction of Miss Eunice Ensor; and have given ten concerts. The Boys' Glee Club, while not surpassing former years in numbers, has worked hard and faithfully throughout the year; but the membership of the Girls' Club, as in the case of last year, was so greatly enlarged that a division was necessary early in the fall. The concerts in the grammar schools were given under the auspices of the Extension Committee of the Tuesday Musical, as follows: numbers 9, 8, 27, 25, 18 and 15. Other programs given were: Washington Birth-day Exercises in Convention Hall; Monroe

Avenue M. E. Church; Belgian French Church; and Home Concert in the Assembly Hall. The mixed octette assisted by the soloists, gave entertainments at Dewey Reformed Church, and at the banquet of the Sons of Veterans in the Municipal Building.

The school this year has been exceptionally fortunate in its soloists and auxiliary organizations. The mixed octette, which was almost intact from last year, was a harmonious and well-balanced body of singers, and the Haydn Trio, a new venture for East High pupils, contributed largely to the entertainments.

Both Glee Clubs are particularly indebted to Miss Ensor and the accompanist Miss Alice Wysard, whose interest and enthusiasm have been greatly responsible for the creditable showing of the Clubs.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Ludwig Schenck, has never had a better balanced or more numerous set of musicians than the one this year. Contrary to former seasons it has appeared on many programs, and given a good account of itself each time. The selections have been excellent, and, in addition to the light pieces, the numbers included parts from operas and classics.

The musical clubs have been of great practical assistance to the school in the raising of money for the library this year, and a great number of people have consequently become interested in these organizations on account of the desire to hear good music.

While the musical clubs are losing many very prominent musicians by graduation, nevertheless a large number of this season's membership will remain in school. With such a start, and with the loyal spirit of East High's students the Glee Clubs and Orchestra should continue to uphold the good reputation which they have always sustained.

The Athletic Season of 1914-15

THE past season in athletics has been one which will certainly be long remembered in the annals of the school. Even though the East High teams have measured up to the high standard of former years, the true significance of the year's success cannot be gauged from a stand-point of games won and lost. Without doubt the remarkable growth of spirit shown by the student body, the loyal support which practically every pupil in the school has given the athletic teams during the past year, are far more note-worthy. If the student body at East High will only imitate hereafter the excellent example set this year, and will but show the same school spirit, will continue to boost their teams, even greater things are in store, and the Class of June 1915 can justly feel proud of having seen, during its senior year, the beginning of this epoch in the history of East High School athletics.

Soccer

The soccer team this year enjoyed the most successful season in the history of the game at East High, under the captaincy of Vincent Wallace and the management of Welday Roscoe. The number of students who interested themselves in the game this year has never been equaled in any sport; while the enthusiastic support the student body gave the team reminded one of the old football days. Furthermore, it was the first year that soccer was put on a paying basis, and this in spite of the fact that no admission was charged to the last game, which decided the championship of the city. The soccer team won two games, lost three, and tied one, scoring five goals to their opponents' seven. West High was met in four games of which West High won two, East High one, and the other game was a draw. Two games were played with the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary team of which each team won one. Very few men will be lost by graduation, a fact which insures a fine team next year. Donald B. Mason has been chosen captain of next year's squad and Louis Reynolds will be the manager.

Basketball

This winter's basketball season was a very satisfactory one in many ways. First of all, East High gained the undisputed right to the City Interscholastic Championship by whipping West High in two very one-sided games and by trouncing Cathedral High in two closely contested frays. With but two regulars as a nucleus, a light, fast team was developed which started the season by winning the first four games. Then the team struck a slump from which it did not recover until near the end of the season, winning but four out of the last nine games. However, we must consider that every one of the teams that defeated it would have done credit to an ordinary small-sized college. With eight men of experience left, next year's team ought to have a very successful season, under the leadership of Engle Marks. Karl Kreag, who managed the second team so well this year, will be next year's first team manager.

JUNE ~ 1915

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

The Hockey Team

This year East High has had the best hockey team that has ever represented the school. Nor was it a one man team. Each and every member showed excellent individual ability and, working in unison, they formed an almost invincible machine. They played games with some of the strongest teams in the state and came off victorious in a large percentage of them. Indeed, they suffered only two defeats during the season. They carried off the city championship, trimming Cathedral High and West High; they would have won the Championship of Western New York had they not been beaten by Lafayette High in the final game of the season. This defeat, however, should not discredit the team as they were outweighed by many pounds. For the first time in the history of the sport hockey paid for itself financially. John Sullivan will be next year's captain, and Milton French will act as manager.

The Track Team

The track team for the season 1914-15 will long be remembered as one of the best-balanced and all around teams that has ever borne the Purple and White on the cinder path. In every meet they have entered every man on the squad has placed in his special event. This team, however, had to be developed from practically raw material as but three veterans remained in school. That did not phase Captain Schwartz a bit and when the team won the Eleventh Annual Inter-scholastic Meet at the Armory the school at large knew that a truly wonderful team had been brought together. The outdoor team also won sixth place at the Colgate Meet. The Cross-country team took part in but one meet—Colgate Interscholastic—and came off fifth best in that.

Girls' Basketball Team

Although the girls' basketball team was rather late in getting under way, it more than made amends for its slowness by winning all of the six games played. At the first of the season, there were four regulars in school and it was around these four that an exceptionally strong team was built. A remarkable fact is that in not one of these six victories did the Oriental lassies fail to gather 30 points. Gladys Roworth was the captain of the team, while Leola Meyer dated up the opposing teams. Miss Lillian Wangman was the coach.

The Baseball Team

The baseball team was handicapped by the loss of quite a few veterans and so was compelled to develop almost a new team, something that seems to be common to all sports this year. The new men did not pull together well and, as a result, the team lost the first four games it played. Then, however, it took a brace, and won the next two. Since then it has ably maintained East High's fair fame on the baseball diamond. One of the prime factors in the success of the team was Physical Director James Fowle who spent many days drilling the candidates until he at last had a winning ball team. Harry Freeman was manager, and under his guidance the sport paid for itself, an accomplishment hitherto unprecedented. Maurice Brindisi was elected captain in the midst of the season to succeed Francis Gilbert who resigned because of outside duties.

Songs and Dells

Down the Field

MARCH, march on down the field,
Fighting for old East High;
Break through old West High's line
Their strength to defy;
We'll give a long cheer for East High's team
They're here to win again,
West High's team may fight to the end
But we will win.

Rah! Rah! Rah!

The Dells

E-A-S-T! Rah! Rah! Rah!
E-A-S-T! Rah! Rah! Rah!
E-A-S-T! Rah! Rah!
E. H. Rochester E. H. Rochester.

Baby in the high chair!
Who put him in there?
Ma! Pa! Sis! Boom! Bah!
East High Rochester, Rah! Rah! Rah!

Ho-Hi-Zip-Zi!
Yell, Yell, East High
Ho-Hi-Zip-Zi!
Yell, Yell, East High.

Scalp Dance

WITH big chief and his band
Of fearless Orient Braves
We've jump't the reservation
We're on the war path lookin' for
Some pale face scalps to raise,
Have heap big celebration.
We've struck the trail, yi, yi, yi,
Blood in our eye, yi, yi, yi,
Our curdling yells are ringing,
When the game is done and we have won
Their top knots we will wave,
Back to our wigwam bringing.

CHORUS

Yes, we'll scalp 'em, scalp 'em, scalp 'em,
Make 'em bite the dust;
We'll smear up their backs you bet
Beat them worse than they've been yet,
We're up to the minute, always in it,
And we'll rub it in;
And while we yell they'll play like—well
Old Orient will win.

Boom! get a rat trap
Bigger than a cat trap.
Boom! get a cat trap
Bigger than a rat trap.
Cannibal, Cannibal, Sis! Boom! Bah!

There has been a great bustle of wonderful activity in the high and mighty postover-holdgraduate class this year. After trying in vain to pass their pet amendment for several years, these poor, abused individuals have actually secured the right to participate in class and interclass activities, if nothing else. What is more, they have used their new privilege and have held a class affair!!! All who attended enjoyed the dance, and declared it the best ever. Congratulations, h.o.—p.-g.'s.

The Club

THE High School Life Club is an organization of fellows from the East and West High Schools, meeting at the Y. M. C. A. every Tuesday during the school year, for the purpose of studying the Bible and the human body. Life problems and questions of vital importance to high school boys are freely discussed. The Club was organized in the fall of 1908 by six high school students. The membership has increased since then from six to one hundred and ninety, and is about equally divided between East and West High Schools.

Mr. James A. Moore led the course in Bible study this year, and Mr. Charles C. Hartman conducted the class in the study of the human body and led the discussion when any questions were brought up. Special speakers of note were brought in whenever they were available.

Supper was served each Tuesday at six o'clock by a number of girls from the High Schools who volunteer their services to the Club. They are known as the "High School Girls' Auxiliary" or the "Girls' Serving Club." Their presence goes a long way toward making the "bean suppers" more enjoyable.

A number of social features are arranged for each year. During the past season, among other things, the Club enjoyed a Hallowe'en party and later in the year a sleigh-ride. Both of these events surpassed anything the Club ever held before. Their success was due largely to the excellent work of the social committee.

Many pronounced this last season of the Club the most successful it has ever had. The members are looking forward to great advances next season, since the new Y. M. C. A. building will be opened some time next year, and then it is the ambition of the members to make this the largest club of its kind in New York State. With the modern equipment this should be an easy task if the High School fellows will back the proposition.

The spring cleaning should embrace the

Farewell to East High

Fare thee well, thou noble spirit,
Guiding Angel of our youth!
To thee we dedicate this tribute,—
Sincere words of honest truth.

Thou hast been our guiding spirit,
Helped the righteous path to keep;
Watched o'er us in youthful frolic,
As the shepherd o'er his sheep.

Patient were thy ceaseless efforts,
To rear us to the present stage;
Thy noble deeds will ever be
Writ in lasting Memory's page.

Thou hast opened to our eye,
Wisdom, Truth and Right,—
Virtues, which no wealth can buy,
Gifts that make life bright.

Armed with Virtue's mighty weapons,
Confidence and Hope,—
Bravely do we venture forth,
With Life's hard strife to cope.

If part we must, dear Alma Mater,
We part—only from sight;
For in our hearts, dear old East High,
Your memory will be bright.

Fare thee well then, Alma Mater,
May success thy efforts crown;
May thy name in glory settle,
And thy fame from far resound.

And may thy name—as in the past,—
That noble thoughts did breed,
Be our future inspiration,
For great and noble deeds.

MISS MURPHY

BEWARE

of the man with the cheap dentistry. You cannot afford to risk your life through carelessness of others. Germs are more deadly than a revolver, an improved dental office should be sanitary in every respect. It is necessary that instruments be sterilized after each patient. A visit to our offices will assure you that we are most particular and conscientious in regard to this matter.

Midnight oil, my midnight oil,
When the hours are small,
Brains that know no other toil
Grinding one and all.
Dreaded, dreaded close of school,
Exams now are near.
No one now who does not grind

JUNE 1915 CLASS SONG

Ho! for a Senior
With stately demeanor
Waiting with pleasure the end of the year,
Laughing with jollity, fun and frivolity,
Praising vacation so soon to be here.
Ho! for our Senior day, all sorrow cast away,
As we come singing with voices so gay,
Ho! for our E. H. S., ne'er shall we love her less
Her mem'ry ever in our hearts shall stay.

Ho! for class spirit,
We've come mighty near it,
There's nothing forgotten and no task undone,
Long life and happiness, joy and the best success,
For 1915 has surely been won.
Hail! opportunity, future activity,
Gayly we offer our homage to thee.
Ho! for commencement day, then will the people say
June 1915 can never decay.

CHORUS

Ho! for a jolly day, gala day, holiday.
Time will go fleeting the end to bring nigh
Now echo through the hall, cheers for both great and small
Laugh and be merry, it's no time to sigh
Ho! for a jolly day, gala day, holiday,
Our Alma Mater, our good old East High.

CATHARINE WEAVER '15.
