“GOOD-BYE”

It's hard to say goodbye, old pal,
For we've been chums since Freshman days ;
But school can't last forever ; there
Must come a parting of the ways.

So classes come and classes go,
But school goes on forever ;
And friendships in our school days formed
No parting e'er can sever.

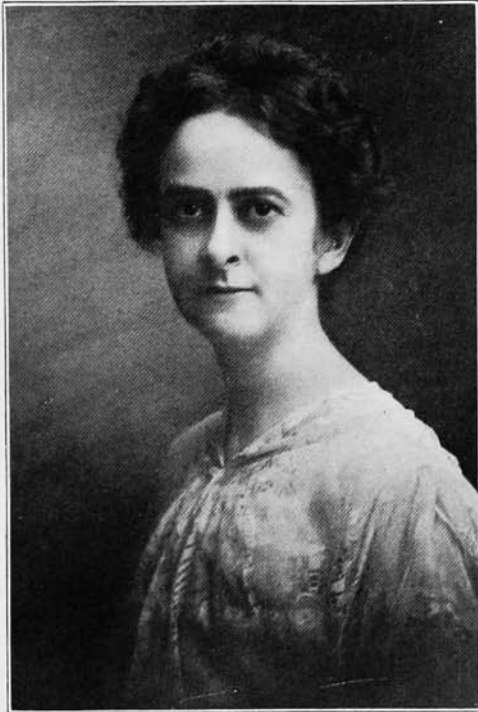

WE THE CLASS OF JANUARY, 1918, TAKE PLEASURE IN DEDICATING THIS BOOK TO OUR ADVISORS,

Maud Kimball Murphy

AND

Harrison Carlisle Taylor

IN RECOGNITION OF THEIR KEEN INTEREST AND HEARTY FRIENDSHIP WHICH HAS BEEN FELT BY ALL OF US DURING OUR ACQUAINTANCE WITH THEM.

MAUD KIMBALL MURPHY

MAUD Kimball Murphy was born in Albion, New York, later moving to Chelsea, Massachusetts, where she attended the public schools. Miss Murphy was graduated from the Chelsea High School, and then entered the Boston School of Oratory, where she was a student for three years.

Miss Murphy was appointed to a position in the English Department in East High School, in 1904. Nearly every pupil in the course has come to know Miss Murphy during the four years' stay in East High School, mainly because of the sincere interest she has taken in them.

Miss Murphy has put her whole heart into the efforts of the class and has worked with unlimited zeal for its success. Her school work has been of the best and her success as a teacher speaks volumes for her ability and experience. She has endeared herself into the heart of every January '18 pupil.

HARRISON CARLISLE TAYLOR

HARRISON Carlisle Taylor was born in Rochester, and received his early education in the grammar schools of this city. He attended East High School, and when West High opened, went there, where he was graduated with the class of 1907. He then entered the University of Rochester and in 1911 he received his degree.

In the fall of 1911, Mr. Taylor entered East High School as an instructor in mathematics, and when January, 1918, came into existence in 1914, he was appointed one of the faculty advisors.

Mr. Taylor has always been ready to encourage the class, always spurring them on to better efforts. All that he could do to help the boys and girls in their school work and pleasure, he has done; their school life has been his school life; their hopes and aspirations, his. In leaving East High School, the class of January, nineteen hundred and eighteen, wishes to thank Mr. Taylor heartily for the work he has done for them.

APPRECIATION

CLASS POEM

BROAD and deep the river sweeps
That flows from Now to Then;
Broader still is the sea that keeps
The hidden fate of men.
Broad, majestic, sweeps the bend
That we have just come round;
Four long years it's been our friend
And just and true, we've found.

Longer would we here find rest,
Protected in its fold;
Longer we'd postpone the quest
That calls us from its hold.
Yet though our choice would be "Remain,"
"On! On! the tide demands;
We needs must sail that endless main,
And answer its commands.

Thus far if our tasks were shirked,
Help from another has come;
But if we should refuse to work
Henceforth 'twill not be done.
Dear old E. H. S. farewell,
You've been our Friend and Guide;
Ever will our bosoms swell
For Thee, with love and pride.

THEODORE FITCH

CLASS PROPHECY

YOU don't seem very tired to-night, Bob," said mother, after I had finished a hearty supper. "No.," I replied, whereupon she said, "Won't you clean out the old newspapers in the cellar?" In a corner of the cellar a bundle of comic papers attracted my attention. I carried them to the library, and setting down in the morris chair began to look them over, one by one. I had been looking at my old friend, Happy Hooligan, when gradually my eyelids grew heavy, my head began to nod, and to my astonishment, the figure of Happy turned into my old friend Ellison Jacobstein, whose familiar profile had been taken as an example by the comic artists all over the world. Then, when Shorty of the Grassville Police Force turned into Roy Elliott, the chief electrician at John Pierrepont's movie show, I was dumbfounded.

He slipped me a pass to the show, and William Zaenglein, the usher, glanced at my head, and gave me a front seat, thinking he was doing me a favor. I looked at the picture on the screen, and saw Sarah Sedita, the vampire, and Elmer Ayer, the villain, plotting a scheme by which Henry Ellinwood, the hero, would fall into their clutches; but it was unsuccessful. A brief picture of current events showed that Joseph Adams was head football coach at the University of Michigan, with Donald Maxwell as the assistant. As a vaudeville attraction, Lillias McGlennon, the famed society dancer, appeared, and was greeted with great applause.

A slide inserted between the plays, announcing that the Governor was to speak at Convention Hall, caused me to hurriedly leave the theater. As I passed out, I saw that Anna Nagle, the latest movie star to come into the limelight, was to be featured next week. Herbert Toor was to play opposite her, as her ardent lover, and Adele Dean was to play the soubrette in the cast.

When I reached Convention Hall, I failed to recognize the old landmark, for it had been so remodeled by Arnold Rumsey, the noted New York architect, that it rivaled the Louvre in Paris for its marvelous structure and beauty. The great hall was crowded to the doors. Everybody had turned out to hear Governor Sawyer Lee, whose oratorical powers were known throughout the world, and who opened up with, "Now, fellows—und you too, girls." With great difficulty the chairman of the Patriotic Committee, Raymond Reuter, had secured the services of Theadoreof Fitchesky. I had never expected to see the world-renowned band-leader, and so imagine my surprise, when I recognized my old friend, Theodore Fitch. As I elbowed my way to a seat, I heard a merry explosion in the Key of G from behind, and turning about, for I recognized the old familiar sound, I saw Olga Stuart. Olga seemed to be in the best of spirits, and having the merriest of times. The entertainment was about to commence, and as I sat in the midst of the dazzling light and listened to the full, clear voice pouring out its melody, my heart throbbed, for I recognized my old school-mate, Lucille Davis. She was now known by the familiar name of Madame Minococochy.

Governor Lee had recently saved the state from the worst strike in years. He had successfully handled the friction between labor-head, Henry Elferink, and capital, headed by Halstead Tiffany. In the auditorium I met the Reverend William Hutchinson, who told me that Charles Mason was still the chauffeur for Carrie Newhafer, of journalistic fame, also that Nelson Crowell, sheriff of South Lima, had recently fined Chuck $20 dollars for speeding. After leaving the hall, I passed an establishment upon which was a sign, which read, "Churchill & Donnelly, Tombstones and Monuments."

As I walked along, the face of Nathan Rosenberg confronted me, and he asked me for my alumni dues. He told me that he and Herbert Hatmaker had the collection in charge, and they would like to clean up records for years back. The Salvation Army Band on the corner drowned out his last words. The speaker of the evening was Herbert Baird, the leader in America, who was introduced by the head of the Army in Rochester, Miss Doris Trimby. At the Salvation meeting, a voice called out, "Hello, Warren, how are the crops coming?" Fine!" Roy called back. "Come out and see us some time." Sure it was Roy, still a tiller of the soil. Around the corner two large meetings of a political nature were being held. Olive Flint, the mayor of "the best governed city," was introducing Lillian Bareis and Milton Rapp, who began to entreat the voters, male and female, to support the party tickets upon which each was running. As I walked on, I suddenly remembered that Dot Barrows was to appear at a masked carnival in Geneva, for the benefit of the wounded warriors who had just come home from Europe. It was in charge of my old friend, Madeline Evans, at her thousand acre country home, and I decided to run down and see the performance.

After I boarded the train, the conductor opened the door and called out, "This train don't go any further." I reluctantly got up and started out. Just as I was getting out, I heard two of the directors of the road, Herbert Kallusch, and Luella Tietenberg, say to the conductor, "See here, Miss Bay, we shan't stand for this any longer." I wandered past some cars until I saw an overalled form under one ahead of me, so I hastened to the spot. "What's the matter?" I asked. "That's what I'm trying to find out," was the answer. "Can I be of any help?" was my next question. "Don't know, till I find out what the trouble is," was the reply. Since I couldn't be of any help I walked on and after I had gone some distance, it suddenly came to me the engineer was Margaret Findlay.

On board the next train my attention was attracted to a comely miss, who was reading a Latin book. It was Jean Laidlaw. The same old Jean she was, but now the gentle head of the Latin Department of East High School. She secretly informed me that she rigidly adhered to everything taught her in dreaded room 14, and the pupils were still made sorrowfully to chant, "When translating from English into Latin, read the sentence through slowly, grouping on the basis of idea, and recasting." Miss Laidlaw said that this was out of compliment to the Honorable Mason D. Gray, now retired to his country home in Kalamazoo. Jean informed me that Robert Brink, the modern Charlie Chaplin, was the best comedian of the day. It was rumored that he still took his lunch at East High School, for he was heard to groan.

"I've eaten a doughnut so sugary and round,
And I'm sure it must weigh most over a pound,
For I feel it just sinking and sinking and sinking,
Till it reaches the tips of my toes, I'm a thinking."

When I first saw Miss Laidlaw, I thought she was reading Caesar, but to my surprise she handed the book to me saying, "What marvelous detective stories Ruth Horn is writing lately, and aren't Allan Gibson's illustrations simply blood-curdling?" I failed to answer, for the car stopped, and a loud stentorian voice called, "Geneva!" As I swung off the step, I followed the crowd, and finally arrived at the carnival.

Alden Hoyt's familiar voice greeted me with, "They're all hot and well done, gents! Get 'em while they're hot! They're five!" Rebecca Diller had charge of some trained elephants and she put them through their paces. Over on one side, Ruth Harvie was doing a trapeze act, while on the other Marjorie Knight was walking a tight-rope. On one side of the lawn, Edith Kaufman with her lions, and Millard Kominz, the Japanese juggler, were going through their tricks. In the middle of the wide space, I saw Elsie Foote, the wonderful bare-back rider. Alfred Yole and Roy Bartholemew were making everyone laugh with their clown stunts. Near the portico, I heard Gertrude Webb, a squaw, and

James McGregor, an Indian, discussing the easy job Isadore Sherman had as chief dishwasher at Geiss' restaurant in Fairport. Just then someone grabbed me and told me that Olyn MacNaughton, the living skeleton, had failed to appear, and I would have to dress up and take his place.

I met Julia Trott, the fat lady, who told me that Roy McCarthy, who was there as the wild man from Borneo, had threatened to kill Viola Reynolds, the sword swallower, and that Angus Turner, representing a cannibal from the South Sea Islands, was crazy about Lois Goeddertz, the human rail, but that John Palermo, the two-headed boy, wouldn't stand for such affairs. Just then we were told to get ready to move.

As I emerged from the carnival grounds, I purchased "The Rochester Inquirer," edited by Bruce Mann. A one page add announcing the opening of new hat store attracted my attention. The familiar names were those of Miriam Shencup and Dorothy Wronker. On the opposite page I saw that Arthur Loeser had just won the world's diving contest, and that Margaret Andrews, the leading feminine doctor of the day, had just discovered a cure for that deadly disease, "Gray-prose-itis."

The front page showed me that Helen Baker, our Congresswoman, had made a speech appropriating more money for the "Widower's Fund." Isabella Watson's aviation school was progressing rapidly, and Vivian Block had made an improvement on her machine, "The Skid and Fly." "The Skid and Fly" was a machine, that would fly through the air when the operator pressed a button, and when he applied a brake would run along the ground like an automobile.

In a corner of the paper I saw that my old friend, Katherine Fillingham, had been presented with a Carnegie medal for a daring rescue she had accomplished, when the Turkish Bath Parlours of Burns and Grauel, burned to the ground. Lois Valentine and Francis Guggenheim, the two assistant superintendents of the city schools, were attending the School Teachers' Association Convention at Albany.

I heard a most terrific noise, and looking down the street, I saw several pennants upon which were engraved, "We want a four hour working day." In the center with sleeves rolled up, and gesturing wildly, I recognized Ruth Blaesie, and Helen Blumensteil, who were the leaders of this cause, supported by Francis Wait. In the rear were Margaret Browne and Carolyn Burns assisted by Ruth Henry and Margery Walters who earnestly opposed this agitation.

Just at this exciting point, I was rudely startled by a sharp touch upon the shoulder and I heard a voice that sounded remarkably familiar say "For goodness-sake, Bob, hurry up and finish cleaning those papers. You've been exactly two hours and twenty minutes." It was with reluctance that I roused myself sufficiently to accomplish the ordinary commonplace task assigned to me, and for the time, forget the great achievements of the Class of January, Nineteen Hundred and Eighteen.

THE MEDIANNUS BOARD
Class Prophets

The class prophecy is a combination of three prophecies written by Katherine Fillingham, Madeline Evans and Nelson Crowell. Parts of all three have been revised and combined by two members of The Mediannus Board, Jean Laidlaw and Joseph Adams, to whom is due much of the credit for its success.

CLASS HISTORY

THE four short and joyous years of the high school life of the class of January , 1918, have nearly passed away. But there remains something more than a mere memory; the results of these years of effort and of pleasure are like a large and beautiful web, intricately woven with silver thread. Sometimes the thread wavers and the pattern is not perfect; but there are signs of master hands here, those which have guided the class in work and in play.

The first strong foundation of that web was laid when, as freshmen, the boys' and girls' sections each organized and adopted a constitution. Miss Southworth and Mr. Taylor were appointed the advisors of the class; committees were chosen from both sections which met and selected a pin.

In the second year, all joyfully celebrated their departure from the hated class of "Freshmen." The girls held a picnic at South Park and later a Hal-lowe'en party with all the spooky accompaniments. The boys had two "Jolly Times." "Jolly Time I" was a hike into the country and a sausage roast; and at "Jolly Time II," Mr. Taylor conducted a dancing class in the girls' gymnasium.

And then becoming Juniors, the two sections of January, '18 united and began to bestir themselves in earnest. One cold, frosty night all packed into sleighs and departed for a sleighride. After numerous adventures, they returned to the school to thaw out and enjoy the refreshments and dancing.

The following spring a brave crowd started out to walk from the end of the St. Paul Street car line to Summerville. Some arrived by one way and others by another, but, at last, everyone finally reached the lake. Then came a baseball game between the boys and girls and plenty of food for the "hungry hikers."

Miss Southworth was unable to continue as class advisor since she had been granted a leave of absence, so Miss Murphy was appointed to take her place. Another good time the class enjoyed was the sausage roast at the foot of Cobb's Hill. In December the "Junior Cotillion" was held in the girls' gymnasium. Everyone present declared it to be "the best ever."

The class of January, '18, marked its arrival as Seniors by the "1918 Dance." This dance was held in combination with the June class. "Ngga Hingt," otherwise "Gang Night," was an affair which set the pace for Hallowe'en parties. Many a person's blood curdled when he was made to roam around in the large, dark attic of the school. But most of them returned safely to enjoy the rest of the fun.

Besides having all the class functions, January, '18 has done her part to unhold all the school activities. She early took an interest in debating, chess, basketball, and baseball. Several men on the soccer and basketball teams have been members of the class. She has also been prominent in track and tennis.

The Senior Dance and Senior Farce, "Commencement Days," have been a most successful and fitting climax for the four years. Looking over the records of the class, we see that several of the boys have enlisted to serve their country. January, '18, is proud of them and wishes them every success wherever they may be. It is they who have put into the web of silver threads the red, white and blue. We hope that in future years the members of January, '18, wherever they may be, will remember its colors and be true to them.

Class Historian.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

Roman State

DURING the past year, the Roman State has undergone and survived a serious crisis within its domains. It was doubted whether the state could continue, since it was not arousing its usual interest, and was not fulfilling its purpose. However, after a long deliberation, it was decided to continue it. The last election was one of the most unique in the state's history. Two parties combined to further the interests and another new party sprang up. Despite this fact the old, unchanged party managed to win practically every office. The newly elected officers have begun this year well and they look forward to a most successful and beneficial year.

Chess

After three years of ceaseless activity, the chess club came to a standstill due to an inability to secure tournaments with outside organizations. One attempt was made to revive the club during the past season, but as far as is known the attempt met with failure, but one meeting being held. Chess is undoubtedly an enterprise worth encouraging, and we are sorry to see it losing ground in East High.

Swimming

The swimming team has started practicing this year, but as yet no meets have been held. Manager Floyd Eastwood has arranged an attractive schedule, which will take in Hutchinson High, the champions of Buffalo, Manlius, Rochester Athletic Club, and Central High of Syracuse. East High has four men left from last year, the Loeser brothers, Woods, and Eastwood. With these fellows to form the nucleus, East High again expects to repeat, and capture the championship of Western New York. Schuyler High School, of New York City, may also be met for the championship of New York. Taken all together, East High's swimming team has got the brightest outlook before them than an Oriental team has ever had.

Cross-Country

THE cross-country team ran into a lot of difficulty this year; first they couldn't get the Executive Council to appropriate money enough to carry more than three men to Cornell; second, the Y. M. C. A. Thanksgiving run was called off at the eleventh hour, just when East High was preparing to step in and "cop" the meet. At Cornell, Marzulo finished twelfth; Goodno, twenty-sixth, and Solomon fortieth. The success of this year's team is due largely to Sam Marzulo, who coached, managed, and trained the team, the entire season. It is safe to say that if it wasn't for Marzulo, cross-country would have been a "has-been" long before this. Marzy will be back next year, and with him at the helm, East High plans to clean-up everything in this part of the state.

Tennis

Under the management of Ed Gates, one of the largest tennis tournaments ever attempted in the school, started this last fall. A large number of entries were received, but owing to the unsettled weather, only the first round was run off. The medals, which were purchased for the fall tournament, will be used in the spring; and to the school champion will go the loving cup now held by Rowland Perry, who has been champion for three years.

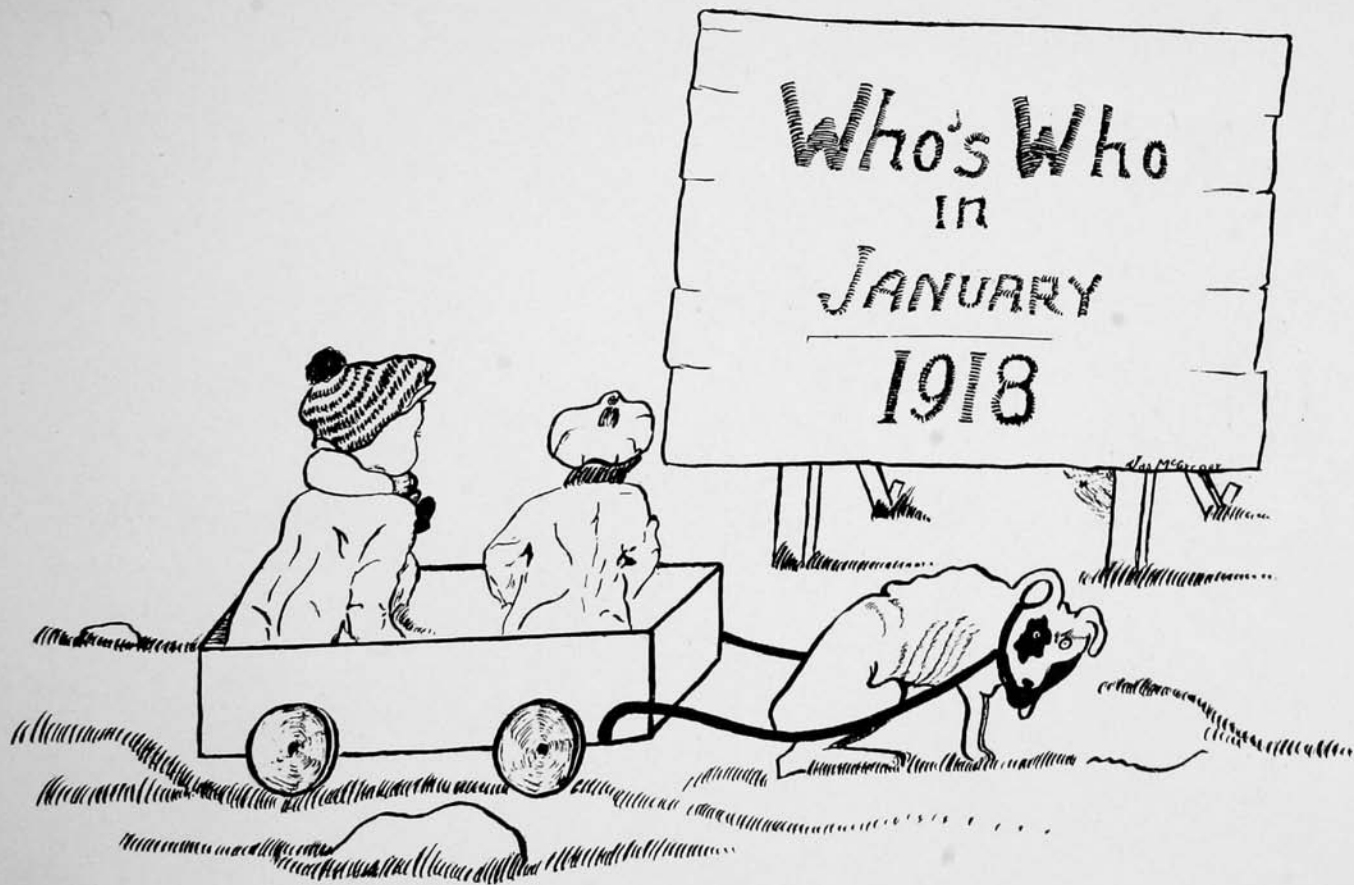

Music

Music has been the life of the assemblies the past year, due largely to Miss Kilbourn and the Glee Clubs. Miss Kilbourn has created a lot of interest in the clubs, and the result has been an increased membership in both the Boys' and Girls' sections. The Boys' Glee Club is preparing a musical play entitled, "Trial by Jury," which will be presented in the spring. If this play proves to be as big a success as "The Feast of the Little Lanterns" was last year, East High will have a right to be proud of her songsters. Theodore Fitch, the manager of the clubs, is also preparing a number of concert tours to the various schools of the city, and the surrounding towns.

THE ALMA MATER

SWEET be thy memory,
High school of ours;
Fair be thy destiny,
Fadeless thy flowers;
Hearts that have loved thee
Have won in life's fight;
Names that we honor
Thy standard holds bright.

Our Alma Mater, dear,
To thee we sing;
May all thy future years
New honors bring;
May friends thy banners raise,
Thy foes grow less,
All love and praise
To our old E. H. S.

THE FACULTY—WHO'S WHO

A is for Abbott,
A midget is she,
Who tries to teach English
To big boys like me.

B is for Baird,
Who thinks he's some wit;
He teases the girlies
And thus makes a hit.

C is for Clark,
An American is he;
Who drives his old Ford
To gain Liberty.

D is for Decker,
A jolly old soul;
Whose motto in life is
To never grow old.

E is for Eddie,
(Just guess the last name);
"Wright" well you know it,
So great is his fame.

F is for Friday,
A day of the week?
No. A teacher who persecutes
Frosh who are meek.

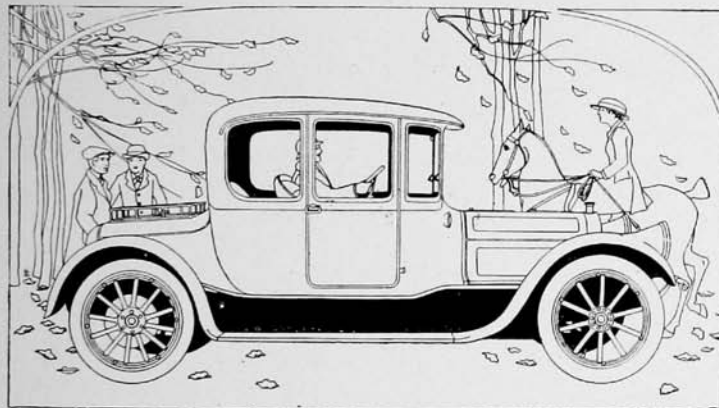

G is for Gray,
A true Latin shark;
With whom double D,
Is the favorite mark.

H is for Herr Helmcamp,
He speaks with accents mild;
He doesn't mean to peeve us,
He simply drives us wild.

I is for Ikey,
"Who's that?" you'll say;
Why that's just old Potter,
Who has his own way.

J stands for James Fowle,
Brave soldier and true;
Who left old East High School,
His duty to do.

The Faculty—Who's Who (Continued from page 86)

K is for Kenyon
And Henry H. Keefe;
They both are good scouts,
Is that your belief?

L is for Lush,
And poetic is she,
As well as quite handsome,
As you will agree.

M is for Murphy,
And lucky are we;
To have an advisor
As splendid as she.

N stands for Nobody,
—Modest young man—
He knows all his lessons,
Since high school began.

O stands for O'Ray,
Whose in the "commeresh."
She teaches us short hand.
What else could be worse?

P is for Partridge,
A good sport is he;
Who knows all the Latin,
That's Greek to poor me.

Q is for Questions,
We can't even guess;
Our teachers propound them,
To make us confess

R is for Remington,
Beloved is she;
Because of her kindness,
To you and to me.

S stands for Stoneberg,
A diamond has she;
And it's quite a mystery
Just who he can be.

T is for Taylor,
And you'll all agree;
He's one splendid teacher
Of Trigonometry.

Don't Get Excited

The Remains of the Faculty (Continued from page 88)

U is for Us,
The class of eighteen ;
And we've been together
Since Frosh days I ween.

V stands for Van Alstine,
Who is quite sedate,
This thing has to rhyme,
So she'll have to be late.

W is for Wilcox,
We wish that all might be ;
As kind and true a helper
In every way as he.

X is for 'Xtra,
The Clarion puts out ;
Whose huge glaring headlines
Seem fairly to shout.

Y is for You,
The rest of the school ;
May you always find joy in
Obeying the rule.

Z for it we have no rhyme,
With rhyming we are done ;
We beg of thee, O, Faculty !
Regard this just as fun.

YOU are to be graduated from EAST HIGH SCHOOL in January. What are you going to do? We suggest that you call on us at the ROCHESTER BUSINESS INSTITUTE and get information respecting the splendid opportunities in business for both young men and young women.

We can give you the necessary training for these positions and have more calls than we can fill. If you are compelled to leave High School before you complete your course we will give you credit for any commercial work which you have completed in the High School upon presentation of proper certificate from the principal.

Cultivate Friends that are Worth While

Young women and young men starting out in life cannot be too particular in the choosing of their friends. This is equally true in their social and business relations.

Make it your practice to deal with those who stand for honesty and truth—whose word is as good as their bond.

For nearly fifty years this store has built upon these principles and it now extends to you its invitation to come here whenever it is within its power to serve you.

It asks your friendship and patronage. It offers you its service.

THE GLOOM PAGE

Doc Gray Breaks Into Print Again

O, have you heard of Doctor Gray,
Who lurks in room fourteen?
(My question's just rhetorical
As you of course have seen.)
For every one has seen him, and
His face one can't forget;
His fame is nearly nation wide,
'Twill be proverbial yet.

The reason for his fame is, that
He holds the school in awe,
By his superhuman logic
And his square protruding jaw.
His lessons are unending,
His reasoning most abstruse,
If someone doesn't toe the mark
He gives them—well the deuce.

The Scripture=Report Cards

There's going to be, the Bible says,
A day of reckoning;
But one comes every month, at school,
On swiftly fleeting wing.

It's card day, as no doubt you've guessed,
And oh! what gloom it brings!
Oh, day of wrath, that awful day!
The pupil truly sings.

We put Carrie on the same page with Doc
They are so much alike

THE WISE OLD OWL SAYS:

“East High publications would in many cases be impossible if it were not for the advertisers. Let them know that you saw their ad in our book and help the annuals of the future. It is advertising that has helped make The Mediannus the success that it is, and the same will hold true to your book. Get into the game for it will be to your advantage in the end.”
