COLOSSUS

THE class of January, 1920 wishes to express its appreciation of what Miss Crittenden and Mr. Rodney have done to make its four years in East High School a period of lasting benefit and a bright spot of pleasure to look back upon in future years. Both as faculty advisers and teachers, they have come much in contact with the class which has learned to trust their good judgment and foresight.

DEDICATION

To

Miss Crittenden and Mr. Rodney

the class of

January, Nineteen Twenty

dedicate this book

CLASS POEM

An acorn fell in fertile soil one day
And warmest sun and gentlest Summer shower
Attended it until it found its way
Into a tree of power.

The years rolled by and Winter's savage king
Assailed and left unharmed its rugged face
The Summer sunlight and the showers of Spring
Lent to it strength and grace.

Oh may Life's buffets and the smiles of fate
And all the influence of four years past
Help us to build our branches strong and straight
Like to the Oak at last

Just like the sapling growing by the way
Protected, by smiles and tears of plenty
We stand upon the threshold of the day
This Class of Nineteen-twenty.

APPRECIATION

Who taught us our English (and Irish sometimes)?
Who scolded us well and forgave us our crimes?
Who had us for Milton and had us for Burke?
Who shared in our pleasures and shared in our work?

Miss Sheehan!

Oh Sheeney, it's true you're a jolly good scout,
We're sure of a frolic if you are about.
And when, as we're leaving, you're feeling so sad,
Remember our good points, forget all our bad.

Dear Sheehan.

From first to last — from 47 to 23 — the class January 1920 has taken its way with Miss Esson helping.

As an English Teacher and Homeroom Teacher, after the girls lost Miss Crittenden, Miss Esson has made a place for herself in their hearts. The boys, too remember what a good sport they had at their picnics in the person of Miss Esson.

CLASS HISTORY

Listen, my children and you shall hear
Of our January, '20 school career.
We came, a band of freshmen small,
Quite lost in each resounding hall,
We learned our lessons, and new ways,
Attended soccer games and plays,

Then organized we as a class,
Turned out to meetings in a mass.
That part of us of Southern trend
To social stunts with zeal did bend:-
A wild gym "jaunt", a roast right keen,
A spooky spree on Halloween.

As Juniors we united stood,
Both North and South in common good.
For fun we out of doors did breeze,
And later on we planed a freeze,
T'was t'ave been a sleighride jolly
But turned out "Dance" thru weather folly.

Next Junior finals we became
And jazzed away until quite lame,
At our first "Jazz" of well known "rep",
With lots of punch and more of pep.
Then on a day of rainbow hue
The wind us o'er to Cobourg blew.

At last we're Seniors, wise and high,
In our four years we've heard the cry
Of war's destruction and of strife,
Of all that's fine and ill in life.
Oh, may we help to do great good,
Enlisted in "world's brotherhood."

In Memoriam

Alling Waverly de Forest

Died, January 23, 1918

Our dying friends are pioneers to smoothe
Our rugged path through death, break those bars
Of terror and abhorrence nature throws
'Cross our obstructed way, and thus to make
Welcome as safe, our port in every storm.

Left school, December, 1917

Died, December, 1918

Let no man fear to die, we love to sleep,
And death is but a sounder sleep.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

DONG! DONG! DONG!. . . . It must be ten or eleven o'clock. But ten, eleven, or twelve, what matters it to me?

The moon is rising, wan and pallid; it seems to peer ominously thru the seven iron bars that separate me from liberty, and serve to admit enough air into my squalid dungeon to keep me alive.

A cruel day it has been for me! In the morning the guards had dragged me before the heartless jury. Trembling, I had listened to my fate—GUILTY!

But first, the foreman of the jury, taking a wad of gum from his mouth, had said, "We charge you with working. Do you not know that under our rule it is a criminal offense to work?—That our government, the Anti-Labor Federation of the World, which has so recently assumed control of the United States, Europe, Asia, and Mars—which we can now reach by the invention of that famous scientist, Leo East?"

"Yes," I had responded, "I know all this, but one must live. I have not worked nor earned a cent for ten years. Where shall I get my food?"

"Don't be foolish," said the foreman of the jury, Julius Korchein by name, always a great exponent of anti-labor,—"Don't you know that Bolshevism, socialism, the Emancipation of Labor, and the redemption of the working classes are what we are all working for?"

"But whom do you represent?" I had asked.

"The working class, of course."

"And how many people belong to the working class now?" I inquired.

"Nobody. Of course no one supports us, so we are forced to rule with an iron hand. But we shall win, we shall abolish labor from the face of the earth. No one shall lift a finger from one year's end to another."

"But the people must eat. Food must be raised or manufactured."

"Nonsense! Let them starve. All we demand is that labor cease."

Just then the rest of the jury woke up. "I'm hungry," piped one homely little man, a perfect specimen of a hen-pecked husband.

COLOSSUS

"Adrian O'Kane, be quiet," said the foreman to him.

"I want something to eat. I want some exercise. I haven't walked for so long that the cob-webs between my legs have fossilized,—turned to stone."

"Naphthali Freeman, be rational," said the foreman, "and you, Messrs. Groff, Salter, Prenner, Yauch, and Lohrman, and you, Misses Rohr, Daley, Somers, and Appel, let's hear nothing from you. Now, do your duty."

"Not guilty," they chorused,—for they were old friends of mine.

"Naughty, naughty. According to Burke, illogical illation, and Delerium Tremons, he is guilty. Say so," said the foreman.

"GUILTY!" they thundered.

"Then," said the judge, no other than Thomas Killip, looking up from a novel he had been reading,—"I sentence you to translate 80 lines of Vergil."

"O—O—OH! Th-th-is is too much!!! Kill me first!" I cried out.

"Just as you please, old chawp; you'll find Hades rathaw warmah than this chilly co't-room, I fawncy," he replied, as he returned to his novel, 'The Mystery of the Kitchen, or Who Put the Coffee Grounds in the Sink'—written by Elmer Gunner. He had drawn his characters from real life, 'twas said, a certain Lemoyne Kelly being the one after whom he had copied the villain, while Earl Spillberg had become the hero and Helen Wescott the social butterfly of the story. Two other prominent characters of the story were Grandison Hoyt and Norvin Greene, who had perfected a way of opening gum machines with tin slugs.

But to return. So I was to die at sunrise. To make death as hard as possible, I was to take poison, or its equivalent,—some fudge mixed up by a notorious confectioner, Katharine Barber.

SEVEN HOURS LATER.

The bloody sun is rising over yonder peak. "Eat this," I am commanded. A great gooey gob of gloom grips my soul! I swallow! A sharp pain! Agony!

All's over. The spectators go out to the tune of Jazz Baby. I start for Hades.

COLOSSUS

THE PLUTONIAN CITY

I soon reached the river Styx. By the shore I saw a ferry, piloted by Elihu Hedges, for he had continued in his father's business. I clambered in, along with Woodrow Wilson, Senator Borah, William Jennings Bryan, Richard Barrows, Belle Fenig, Lola Bartholomew, and Ameleta Galli-Curci.

Halfway across the pilot struck for shorter hours and a seven cent fare. (Ye gods, are there strikes in Hades, I thought?)

We tried our best to conciliate the striking pilot, but Elihu was obstinate, so we all had to take our baggage and swim ashore as best we could.

I had a flunkie on the dock carry my possessions to a taxi and had the taxi carry me to the biggest and best hotel in the city. I was much delighted with the service shown me by the three mentioned, so I inquired as to the identity of the flunkie. It was Hobart Haskins. The chauffeur was Harold Madigan and the hotel was managed by Saul Cohen.

To kill time, on my first night in Hades I went to the opera. It was the premiere of a new piece by Dorothy Marsh, who filled the chair of chief conductor to the Grand Opera House. The cast included Flora VonBerge, the 'star'; William Parker, the 'ruff and ready' hero; Wentworth Crouch, quite an actor now, and—horrors—Herbert Benz.

Between the acts I sent a note to my friends, inviting them to a little supper party at the hotel. They all accepted, and we had a jolly little party, augmented by Napoleon Bonapart, Mark Anthony, and Ruth Present. It seems that Ruth had regarded death as a divorce and so, was able to become a near, and dear relative of the Roman in question.

Napoleon invited us all to a fox hunt on the morrow. We accepted to a man. On our arrival at the appointed hour I was immensely surprised to find among the guests Mary Draper, whose horsemanship had improved wonderfully since leaving the mundane sphere.

Hymen Benjamin and John Albiston were the 'whips.' We started out and rode along the banks of the Styx, then struck inland beside the Vitriol Reservoir. I noticed a queer-looking being, sitting with his tail between his legs, in a most dejected attitude upon a pile of sulphur kegs. I asked one of the huntsmen who this creature was, and was told that he was a hermit, who was said to have been a great politician in the world, and his name was George Whitley. He had turned hermit, they said, because the nation went dry, leaving nothing but Styx water or the Vitriol to drink. He was suspected of having a still of his own, but no one really knew.

Ruth Hulst won the hunt and gave a dance to celebrate. At the dance I saw the same group as at the hunt, augmented by Lester Berlove, Francis Green, Christopher Columbus, and David Kass and Frances Howard, the last two of whom danced entirely by themselves. The orchestra was under the direction of Gordon Zeeveld, and included Milo Tomanovich.

From then on there were several dances and parties, life was gay and care-free for me, when—Horrors—my wife arrived. I was first informed of this sad fact by Helen Berman, whom I chanced to meet, walking one day in Purgatory Lane. I immediately planned to move to a warmer climate, but before going I sought the advice of the hermit, who sent me to a witch, Blanche Cohen, in fact, whose duty in the world of shades was to toast refractory ones on a pitch-fork. She had become an able assistant to His Satanic Majesty.

At the moment of my arrival she was browning Adelbert Carl Hartung, because he had written bad poems and preached worse sermons. Blanche greeted me kindly, and gave me the advice I desired: but when I asked her about poor Adelbert she became morose. "Get over and toast more on the other side, preacher," she said, proding him mercilessly with her hat pin.

Going away on the train I met Hyman Liberman and Cardinal Rohen. Hyman had become quite a philosopher. We discussed the high cost of living in other words, far above Hades. You see, down there one has simply to conjure up, in one's imagination the image of whatsoever one desires, and he possesses it. In that way, you see, several men can smoke the same cigar at the same time and not inconvenience anyone, besides it is a great saving of tobacco.

After several hours of riding the train puffed into a large metropolis and the conductor bellowed, "All off. Change here for London, Paris, Fairport, or Elba."

There was a large aviation field near the station. Planes were ready to take one to any corner of the earth. I climbed into one labeled "Elba," and was soon deposited at that famous island where Napoleon had spent the later years of his life.

A majestic arch towered above the spacious entrance to an elmanopied boulevard. It was the arch which adorned the "Island of the League," the island in whose bosom the heart of the whole world throbbed, the island where the eyes of all the nations gazed eagerly in trust and loyalty, the island into whose treasure house the hands of all the nations had poured forth their gold, the island whose voice rang forth the proclamation that "men were brothers!"

I beheld in wonder the marvelous arch. The ingenious mind and hand of the famous sculptor, Edna Von Berge, had chiseled this one cold slab of marble into a glorious symbol of the League of Nations.

It portrayed Democracy plucking the flowers of Liberty and tossing them to her children, the various nations of the globe. I remembered that Edna had chosen for her model of Democracy Miss Janice Greer, and among Democracy's children I recognized Dorothy Applebaum, Great Britain; Lucille Aufderhar, France; Leona Rommel, Ireland; Florence Richardson, China; and Ruth Wagner, Turkey.

Upon the beach just below a figure stood beside the glistening wings of an aeroplane excitedly shaking her fist at the pilot, Alice Bark. The fist, I observed, belonged to Ethel West.

"What, $100 for a trip 30 minutes long, only half way across the Atlantic? Never!"

"But Madam! the pilot calmly replied, "do you not understand that the President of the World Aerial Transit Company, Miss Frances Van Der Mead, has with the consent of her Board of Directors, Miss Enid Fee, Miss Ruth Colwell, Miss Sara Grau, and Miss Elizabeth Brooks, increased the fare to one dollar per pound?"

I heard a familiar giggle and looked to see Elsie Rich. Both Ethel and Elsie had been elected to the Council of the League. They had come to attend the Annual Convention of the League, which was then in session.

Suddenly a streak of gold turned my gaze to the boulevard above. Yes—there was the wonder of the automobile world—a magnificent limosene with a body of gold valued at a million dollars. It was the latest model from Harriet Wilson's famous factory.

But behold—leisurely lounging among the richly tapestried cushions of the Wilson marvel was Sadie Sloan, President of the United States. She was leaning forward now, commanding her chauffeur, Dena Scholten, most skillful driver in the world. Now like an arrow, it paused in its flight and the powerful engine ceased its purring before the grandeur of the temple of the League.

Men regarded this structure as the marvel of the modern world. It was the realization of the dream of Marion Frank, whose genius as an architect had amazed the whole palpitating world. The doors of mother-of-pearl glistened in the sunlight.

Just inside the doors, in the vaulted ante-room, a voice excitedly shrieked "Why Henry dear, you have forgotten to comb your hair."

Henry proved to be the King of Spain, whom his wife, Jennie Wolfe, was admonishing severely.

In the majestic auditorium just beyond, the delegates had bestowed the honor of presidency upon Adelaide Kaiser. She was presenting medals to the illustrious Janice Harrington, who had the power to make men laugh and cry, mostly cry, with her mastery of music. Ella Manhold was also receiving the reward, as she had invented a hairless hairbrush.

In the front row sat Joseph Bwacqua, premier of France, with the first lady of the land, who once upon a time was Miss Alice Fabry. Alice was blushing in the filmy creation of Mademoiselle Ruth Warren, the best modiste of Paris.

I noticed a banner with the inscription "Senators of the U. S." The senators had attended in a body. Among them I saw Ruth Wishman, Mabel White, both from Utah; Judith Goldenson, from Massachusetts; Ruth Gaston and Virginia Claflin from New Mexico; William Gallancy and Elmar Hafner from Alaska; and Frank Gianforti from Reno, Nevada. He had two of his divorced wives with him.

On the row directly behind these senators Ruth Hosking smiled radiantly beside the King of England. Ah—so Ruth had bade Cupid aid his arrow at the Ruler of Great Britain. Well, well, and I laughed low in pride of my classmate.

Laura Goldman and Morris Labovitz I saw talking with the representative from Russia—Loius Gordon. From their conversation I gleaned that Miriam Heitsman had married Trotsky.

Soon there was a stir, and a gang of Bolshevik agitators were brought in for trial—composed entirely of Jan-twenty-ites:—Helen Hulst, Elsie Kinney, Zabelle Kuimjian, Hazel Morse, Fletcher Smith, Alma Twardokus, and Donald Warren. This was too much, I waited to see no more.

As I rushed out I was shadowed by the king of detectives, Isadore Wilinsky. He and two of his aides, Nathan Strom and Fred Snyder, dragged me before the judge on a charge of vagrancy. The Anti-Labor Federation of the World had been subdued, they said, and I must get a job. He gave me five days to find one.

Desperate, I tried the huge sausage factory owned by Florence Schneider. There was no opening, so I called at the Neivert-Pear Auto Factory. Here I was offered a job melting up tin cans for bodies. I did not care for this, and offered my services at the Florence Minchin Finishing School for Young Ladies. The official bouncer, Emily Shepard, threw me out.

Ruth Taksen loaned me two bits for lunch, and I ate at Jennie Levine's Spotless Food Counter. Marie LeMay was the waitress, and so I ran out as soon as I was through, to avoid the necessity of tipping her. James Lays and Irving Lazerson pursued me, but I got away. I tried selling drugs for awhile at one of the stores run by the Joel Drug Corporation. David Kahn walked in and asked for some remedy for stomach-ache. By mistake I gave him carbohic acid. As soon as I found this out, I left the job on the run. No harm was done, for he only wanted it for his mother-in-law, whose death notice I read in the next morning's paper.

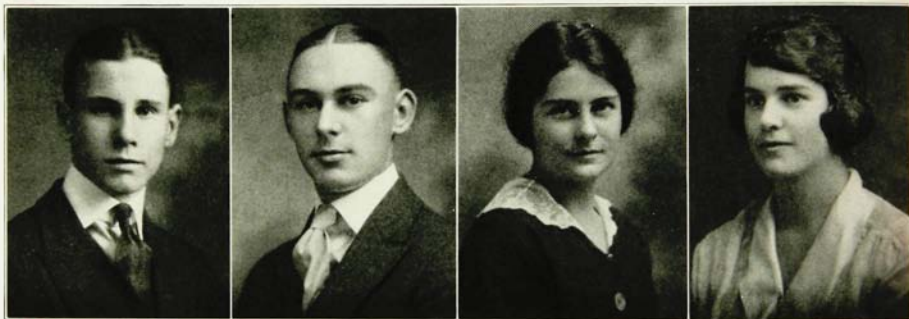

Finally, in desperation, I tried at John Miller's Eraser and Ink Shoppe. Here my duties were to help take care of his thousands of high school customers, who brought their report cards to him to have altered to better suit their parents. I soon became skillful, from previous experience, at changing B's, b's, and C's to A's. We found that the number of low marks varied from month to month. Some months we would have little business while towards the end of the school term there in Elba the teachers seemed to try to scare the pupils by marking them much lower, and then we did a great deal of business. My report will have to close here, as tomorrow is report card day for the students, and I shall have to get to bed early, to be ready for business tomorrow.

The track team has had but two meets this season, the interclass cross-country meet in which the class of June, 1920 won the laurels, and a cross-country meet with the U. of R. freshmen.

An extensive program is being prepared by the manager and he hopes to enter the team in the Colgate Interscholastic Meet, the Cornell Interscholastic Meet, the Syracuse Interscholastic Meet, and a triangular meet with the U. of R. freshmen and West High School.

Track has been neglected during the past few years owing to the lack of a proper place to practice, but with the prospects of obtaining an athletic field, it is hoped the Track may come back to the place it deserves.

SUMMARY OF ACTIVITIES

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

During the past year, the Executive Council has brought some laudable things to pass. It has successfully maintained the "college suppers," but the outstanding feature, was however, the voting of fifteen hundred dollars to the Memorial Fund. This sum is to be paid in three annual installments of five hundred dollars each.

CLARION

The Clarion went way over the top this year despite the advance in the price of materials and the finished product. The members of the Board spared neither time nor energy to set a new and higher standard for the Clarion. Much credit is due them.

SENIOR FARCE

The Senior Farce "Just Out of College" was the most successful one rendered in East High. The spirit and humor of the farce fascinated the audience immediately.

ORCHESTRA

The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Fay, has displayed unusual excellence. The concerts given in the assemblies were very much appreciated and enjoyed by all.

BAND

East High is deeply indebted to the public spirit and munificence of Mr. George Eastman for the new band, which was organized in the course of this year.

GLEE CLUBS

Our Glee Clubs have given several exhibitions of their skill in song. Let us hope that we hear some from them.

THRIFT STAMP CAMPAIGN

Although the demobilization of "Uncle Sam's" troops is almost complete, the seniors of war must not be relaxed, and thrift is still urgent. East High is still doing her bit in the sale of stamps, and the committees are working as hard as ever.

BOOK EXCHANGE

One of the most valuable organizations of the school is the Book Exchange. The members, by hard and constant work, saved much money for many pupils.

MEMORIAL FUND

"That these dead shall not have died in vain" is the slogan of the Memorial Fund dedicated to the memory of the East High fellows, who sacrificed their lives on the battle-fields of France. This fund is to be used to assist deserving pupils to obtain a high school education.

PRESS CLUB

The Press Club has had a very successful year. The club is a study class of practical journalism.

SENIOR ANNUAL

The name of this Annual is a paradox like all ideals.

CLASS WILL

WE, THE CLASS OF JANUARY, 1920, BEING OF SOUND MIND AND BODY DO HEREBY MAKE, PUBLISH, AND DECLARE THIS OUR LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT TO BE EXECUTED IN THE MANNER FOLLOWING:

First: We devise and bequeath that all our just debts and graduation expenses be paid.

Second: We leave all we cannot carry away, and bequeath it in the manner following:

To the coming Senior classes we leave the front seats in the Assembly, hoping they will not abuse them as some of the former classes have.

To the ensuing adventurers in that "sea of troubles" we leave the corridors or "lovers' lane."

To Mr. W. B. Rodney we leave the sole use of the detention room, as we are convinced that he will have a full house at every session.

To a new club known as The Students' Welfare Society (S. W. S.) we leave the use of the attic where unfortunate victims of the lunch room may recover from the effect of doughnuts, baked peas, etc.

To those refusing to study we leave the gym offices to spend their vacant periods (?) in.

To those who have the good fortune to secure them we leave our class advisors, Clara B. Crittenden and Warren B. Rodney.

We take with us, however, thoughts of inspiring and amusing assemblies; happy times, never to be forgotten, of socials and outings; friendships long to be cherished; and above all the memory of teachers who helped to make our Alma Mater all it is to us.

Third: We leave to the school as a slight token of our esteemed love for our Alma Mater a painting of David Hochstein.
