PAUL J. SMITH

When Eddie Wright left us at the end of our Junior year, Paul Jones Smith came to join our happy family. We haven't had much chance to get acquainted with P. J., but everyone who knows him says he's a good scout. He's enlivened our class parties considerably all in all, it seems a shame we couldn't have known him better.

EDWIN M. WRIGHT

Eddie was the whole works at class parties in our Junior year. He danced with everybody and actually acted as though he enjoyed socials instead of being bored to extinction. "Score one for Eddie."

He never stood on his professorial dignity either. While manifesting an intelligent interest in the class affairs, he didn't act as though they were the weightiest things going or too childish to be considered.

We all felt an awful sinking at the heart when we heard he was going. But we comforted ourselves with the old adage—

"What we have gits, we gots."

THE ORIENT

LOIS TURNER

Miss Turner never made herself conspicuous, but everybody thinks she's a mighty good sport, and she's quite chummy, if you try to get acquainted. When we get in dutch, she usually can be sought for sympathy and appreciation. She doesn't look like this picture.

LILLIAN JANE STONEBERG

Stonie got us when we were Sophs and used to get us all fussed up by her wild and wooley ideas. We used to pass all sorts of laws that would have been bully if they had been kept going. Like not having anyone elected to a class office if they were more than a point behind in studies. We don't seem to have seen so much of her of late. While we were seeing her, all of the girls had crushes on her one after the other and together. We still like her loads.

At various times Mr. Kenyon, Miss Sheehan, Mr. Potter, Mrs. Robinson and Mr. Merrell have acted as our advisors. For this we wish to express our grateful appreciation.

CONCILIATION DISSOLVES FOR- MER CLASS DISSENSION FACULTY ADVISORS INTRODUCED TO JUNE '21

Enthusiasm and co-operation marked the meeting of the one hundred and twenty-eight members of June '21 who more than filled room 25 at their second meeting since the sections combined.

VARIETY OF STUNTS ENTERTAINS JUNE '21

"On the whole, one of the most successful parties I ever attended," was the verdict pronounced by Mr. Eddie Wright, faculty advisor of June '21, as the final strains of "Home, Sweet Home" died out bringing "Cayenne Jumbles" to a close.

JUNE '21 CANDY SALE TODAY

The class of June 1921 will hold a candy sale today in the main corridor of both lunch periods. The money will be used for a class social to be held in the near future.

The candy is guaranteed 100 per cent pure, and will be sold at reasonable prices.

JUNE '21 ELECTION AND ANNUAL REPORTS

The class of June '21 held a meeting Tuesday, October fifth, for the purpose of electing officers. After an exciting contest Mercer Brugler was elected president. Charles Cole was re-elected secretary, and Virginia Bush treasurer. Virginia Patchen was elected chairman of the social committee.

The secretary read a report of the class' activities during the preceding year, and the treasurer, reporting on the finances of the class, stated that the class had $49.25 to its credit.

JUNE '21 TO HOLD REAL OLD- FASHIONED TACKY TROT TONIGHT DON'T FORGET THE COUNTERSIGN

In ye good olde days the young folks from miles around used to gather at some friend's house and have a good wholesome time. There was no stiff style about it and congeniality literally saturated the air. These gatherings were called "Tacky Parties."

Extracts From a Senior's Diary

SEPTEMBER

- 8—School opened today. Glad to get back (!?)
9—Got my program straightened out and am getting down to the same steady routine. Went to the "Vic" this afternoon after school.
10—First assembly today. Mr. Wilcox talked on how to begin the year right.
13—First call for soccer men. Went to drill tonight. A lot of new kids were present and appeared to have about four feet apiece. The lieutenant has shaved off his misplaced eyebrow.

OCTOBER

- 1—Harold Wollenha sang in assembly today. He is a baritone from West High. We cleaned up West High in soccer today. The field was very muddy and the team certainly earned all they could get.
Gilbert Strayer elected cheerleader.
6—Richard Greene resigns as editor of Clarion, Elisabeth Rauschenbusch taking his place.
8—Charlotte High got swamped today in a one-sided soccer game.
15—Somebody's canine was wandering around the halls today, giving an excellent imitation of a lost soul.
17—Started in reading Burke's "Conciliation." (Here the manuscript is indecipherable, owing doubtless to strong feeling on the part of the writer.)
23—Went up to Lima and watched the soccer team play a 2-2 tie with the Seminary gang. Some game! That bunch is certainly on the job all right.
27—Fire drill today. Everybody happy to get out of class.

NOVEMBER

- 11—At the June '21 class meeting on October fifth an exciting election was held. After a close contest Mercer Brugler was elected president of the class, Charles Cole secretary and Virginia Bush treasurer.
12—Census of foreign-born pupils in East High.
13—Soccer game with Catholic High ended in a tie, 0-0. They used some rough stuff and the game ended in a free-for-all. We hear that athletic relations are to be broken.
20—Cast chosen for "The County Chairman."

NOVEMBER

- 6—Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh served up in fine style by the Masquers.
12—Mr. Spouse is working his four-part singing into good shape.
15—Went to drill today for the first time in ages.
19—"The County Chairman," Jan. 21's Senior farce. I should like to see the bunch of professionals who could beat this. It was the best senior farce in a long time.
23—June '21 "Tacky Trot" came off last night. Everybody got together and had a good time, not forgetting to give the password "spinach" and the counter-sign, so ably demonstrated by our president upon entrance. Lots of novelties.
25—Ironed out Canandaigua in an opening basketball game.

THE ORIENT

DECEMBER

3—Art Durbin started the drive for an Athletic field in assembly today. The band gave us a fine concert.

10—Watched the basketball team clean up West High. It looks to me as if we were developing a team of champions.

17—Once more. Newark was the loser this time.

19—Christmas vacation coming. Rah!

20—Record issue of the Clarion out—28 pages, Christmas issue.

23—The two best one act plays on the "Mayflower Compact" were presented in assembly and repeated for the frosh in the afternoon; Dorris Booth took first prize, Carroll Lansing second.

JANUARY

4—Back on the job again. Now for exams.

7—Hutchinson High came here and got beaten.

14—Everybody getting ready for exams.

24—Praises be! They are over. Why did we worry so much about them, anyway?

FEBRUARY

4—East High-Technical game. The scrappiest, fast game yet. And we cleaned them up. Great stuff!

14—Candy sale in the corridors today.

11—June '21 "Three-in-one social. A novel idea in class socials was this. Three items were on the program—a supper served by the girls, dancing in the corridors and the East High-Niagara basketball game in Alumni gymnasium. Over one hundred members of the class were there.

18—"Hobson's Choice" was presented by the Masquers. Poor Hobson! He certainly had a rather uncomfortable time of it. The whole thing was very realistically acted and well done.

MARCH

First report cards of the term. Everybody resolves to lead a new life.

4—The tale is told! In the final big battle of the season West High was beaten. Seventeen straight games!

18—June '21 Senior Farce, "The Private Secretary" Bill Hartman was the Secretary. Not a dull moment in the play.

24—Some more dramatics! The Masquers again this time, in three one-act plays which will be remembered—"Riders to the Sea," "The Neighbors" and "Lonesome Like." East High leads in dramatics, as in everything else.

APRIL

6—The baseball team was chosen today. Track is coming along.

8—Another play given by the Masquers—"Mary goes First." They seem to produce plays with the speed of a stock company.

9—The Senior Ball, June '21's crowning social event took place in the corridors. Our school life is fast passing now, but an event like this will remain fixed in our memories.

The Class Prophecy

The sun cast its hot rays over the sparkling blue waters of the St. Lawrence and on the gardens along its banks. It was one sultry day in mid-summer in the year 1936. I leaned back in my garden chair, feeling rather tired, both because of the heat, and because of the fact that I had only just returned from a three-weeks' camping trip along a chain of lakes farther north.

Rather listlessly, I picked up a newspaper which had been sent from home, and which I had dropped at my feet. Although I had not been able to hold any communication with home for many days, I did not feel particularly interested in the news. Indifferently I gazed at the headlines, but my glance wandered no further, for the words that I had read carried an astounding message. At the Republican National Convention, which was then in session, Elisabeth Rauschenbusch had been nominated for president of the United States, and Charles Cole for vice-president. The surprise at the political rise of my friends quite overwhelmed me. My thoughts turned back to the days in old East High, when these same two had met with me day by day in the classroom. Where had my other classmates scattered? What had Destiny held for them? An intense longing came over me to see them once more, or at least to know where they were and what their fate had been. Impulsively I sprang to my feet, and going over to the garden crystal which stood near by, I peered intently into its silver depths. But only my own image, and the trees and flowers of the garden were reflected on its mirror-like surface. Disappointed, I was about to turn away, when suddenly a white mist seemed to cloud its shining surface for a moment; and then as it faded away, within its depths, a picture stood forth, clear and bright. Every detail stood out before my eyes, so plain was the scene.

Within the crystal I saw the crowded thoroughfares of New York. Slowly down one of the avenues rolled a great red limousine. On the rear seat, dressed in the height of fashion, with a complacent smile on his face, sat Emmett Gleason. He was seated between two ladies, with whom he was chattering away at a great rate of speed, and whom I recognized as Wilma Shannon and Alma Shulman. The goggled, green-uniformed chauffeur was Sadie Sadowsky.

A few moments later, a strange-looking vehicle passed. It seemed to be an old-fashioned model, and yet it was strangely familiar. Finally I made out the name "Buick" written across the front. "The romantic Buick," I exclaimed to myself. Sure enough, and on the front seat were perched John Kennedy and Virginia Bush, deeply engrossed in each other as of yore. Just then who should come tripping lightly along the fashionable mall but Frances Light and Karges Lauterbach!

The street vanished, and I saw the interior of a Victor Victrola Shop. Busily at work under the direction of Leonard Frankel was Eleanor Dutton. Glancing at a catalogue lying on a table, I found that Eleanor was listed as the "Original Jazz Queen", and held the record for making the most records in the shortest time. Frances Edgar was listed as a famous operatic singer, and Edward Van Neil as a well-known violinist.

Once more, one of the broad avenues appeared before me. I saw that a beautiful public library had recently been erected. According to the inscription over the door, it had been donated by Ramold MacAdam, successor to Henry Ford, and had been planned by the famous architect George Schaft. Within the building I found Franklin Lauer at the librarian's desk. Some of the books catalogued had been written by some of my former classmates. There was a trigonometry by Christine Filkins and Anna Zito; a book on psychology by Kenneth Thomas, put out by the great publishing firm of which George Stoeber was the head. There was also a volume on "Spiritualism in Our Day", by Edward Brush.

The library vanished, and a theater on Broadway, managed by Arthur Thornton, took its place. The play being given, I saw by the billboard, was "The Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra", in which Lawrence Day and Marjorie Moyer were taking the leading parts. Another poster promised that the following week Percy Barrell would appear with his famous troupe of dancing girls. Arline Ames was booked for an Egyptian dance, Helen Frankenfeld for a Russian ballet, and Dorothy Dailey, Evelyn Emblow, Eva Gaston, and Tracy Levy for Greek interpretive dances. Future attractions announced were Irving Alhart, the great magician, and Marcus Mains, who, following in the footsteps of Eugene O'Brien, was now the "perfect lover". Ruth Cheesebro, I noticed, was to play opposite the star.

Just then down the street whirled an orange jitney, driven by Malcolm MacBride, and on the back seat, bouncing about, were Dorothea Hutcheson and Bernice Marks, evidently on a shopping tour. On the East Side I found Eleanor Foulkes and Vivian Derriek doing social settlement work and distributing tracts.

The scene changed, and the interior of a great concert hall appeared. The first attraction of the evening was the world-famous prima donna, Madame Caruseretta, whom I recognized as none other than my old friend Minnie Tarquinio. She was accompanied at the piano by Grace Conolly, said to be the only accompanist who had ever satisfied the capricious tastes of the great singer. The next number on the program was a selection by a famous orchestra under the leadership of Estelle Spies. I saw among the players Cyril Eber as accompanist, eyes soulfully raised and flowing hair shaken back from his brow; Genevieve Dye playing the 'cello, Lillian Gillette the violin, Walton Thiem the trombone, and Mortimer

Levy the drum, all showing great spirit and originality. The scores had been arranged for the orchestra by Fred Meyers.

When the streets appeared once more, my attention was attracted by a brilliantly lighted quick lunch restaurant, with this sign above:

QUICK LUNCH

Open Day and Night

If you eat here once, you'll never eat anywhere else.

Proprietor, ROBERT GREGG

In the window stood Peter Paul, nonchalantly flapping griddle cakes, and sporting a white apron and chef's cap with a chic air.

The scene changed quickly this time, and on a baseball diamond I saw the All-American baseball nine. Donald MacAlpine acted as manager—he was held much in demand as a manager by athletic associations all over the country—and Seward Weiss as coach. Burnett Wright was the pitcher. William Reinholz and Eddie Willems were then acting as basemen.

Suddenly the figures faded from the globe and its surface was covered with mist. I peered into it anxiously. Slowly the mist cleared, and the gay streets of Paris were before me. In a famous art school DeVere Fellows and Eleanor Lothian were instructors. Anne MacTaggart was a costume designer, and Florence Schminke and Helen Norden posed as artists' models. Some of the work of Amber Page, an artist showing distinct promise, appeared in the halls.

Within the office of one of the great Paris newspapers, of which David Fulton was the editor, I found Iris Almy writing the society news, and Elizabeth Allyn and Olive Olmstead reporters.

On one of the boulevards my eye was caught by a smart millinery shop, on whose window was lettered "Mlle. Case". Pinkie! Marion Swanton and Evelyn Sutfin were busily trying on some of the elegant creations.

Next door was a select beauty parlor under the proprietorship of Norman Schlottman. Here was one member of the class who had found his sphere. Althea Arend, who had invented a really permanent hair-wave, had charge of the hair-dressing, and Leah Poyzer was a manicurist.

In a great school of science, Thomas Whalen had charge of the electrical and Wakefield Hartshorn of the mechanical department. Maurice Nelson was attempting to establish connection with the moon by means of wireless. Nearby, Violet Spilberg and Norma Pallat had established a school of aviation. Dorothy Wild had become a fortune-teller, and was unfolding the future to Victor Bask, gazing earnestly at his palm. Raymond Drysdale was running a penny arcade. I saw him standing in the doorway smoking a large black cigar; and inside were Grace Doehler, Harriet Newman, and Cora Heffer.

Once more the scene faded entirely, and this time the walls of Smith College rose from its green lawns before my eyes. The class's most dignified, namely, Anna Jane Mutschler, had become president, and was addressing the college clad in funeral cap and gown. Ruth Bay had succeeded in reviving the teaching of Sanscrit, and was now head of the ancient languages department. Slowly other colleges rose before me—Cornell, where Grace DeWolf and Vara Dadd were teaching advanced mathematics; Oberlin, whose Latin department was headed by Dorothy Kenyon; Columbia, and Bryn Mawr, whose English and history departments were under the direction of Leonora Granata and Katherine Hayes, respectively.

In a quiet part of the country I came upon Bernice Whitham conducting a chicken farm. Lucile Soule and Theresa Quigley were her assistants, poultry specialists both. Frederica Hagaman had established herself on a farm; and as I watched, who should drive along in a dilapidated old Ford—yes, the same one!—but Gareth Clark. He knocked at the door, and on the appearance of Frederica at an upper window, he tried in vain to sell her some Ivory Soap. Finally a pail of water descended upon his unsuspecting head from the hands of the exasperated lady. A few moments later Sarah Wichman appeared, bicycling down the road peddling gas bills.

In a quiet, secluded corner of the country, Helen Winans had charge of a spinster's home, far from the annoyances of the madding crowd. Catharine Lewis was keeping an old ladies' home, and as I gazed within I saw Doris LaDue entertaining the inmates with some clever recitals.

Again the surface clouded, and when the globe became clear, the streets of Rochester were before me. Within the Y. W. C. A. building I saw Mercer Brugler president of the Y. M. C. A., in conference with Harriet Feary, who was president of the women's organization. I discovered that Beatrice Green was a swimming instructor, Charlotte Cooper was a physical director, and Mary Channell was leader of one of the clubs.

Entering a men's clothing store I found that Herbert Elliot had become a tailor, Arnold Coleman was at the necktie counter, and Harold Stoll, as a model, was displaying the latest creations from Paris. Henry Rubenfeld owned a toy shop on Main Street, and on the corner of Water Street, Seward Bliss was occupying a soap box and exercising his lungs.

Looking within an undertaking establishment which bore the name of "Hedges", I found that Rufus had indeed followed in the footsteps of his sire. Few would have recognized the frock-coated gentleman with a mournful air as being the harmless child with whom they had gone to school. The driver of the hearse before the door I recognized as Gerard Hall.

Samuel Caccamise, I discovered, was keeping a barber shop. In the office of the Democrat and Chronicle I found that Elmer Lohmaier had become editor, and William Petrillo manager. Glancing through a copy of the paper which had just come from press, I read that Meyer Shapernow, the world-famous orator, was in the midst of a debate with George Witte. Abe Rudner was Meyer's business manager, and Howard Franke was George's. David Rosbash had become a great checker champion. Jean DuBois had challenged the world's chess champion, and was expected to win his place. Walter Marks was representing us at the Olympian games. Ward Hamilton had just been elected president of the National Yacht Club. In the society notes it was announced that Curtis Gerling would entertain at tea that afternoon. Richard Chase, now a scientist of international reputation, had just added a rare butterfly to his collection,—one valued at many thousands of dollars. Edward Stalker, the great inventor, had been offered three million for the patent of his process for making noiseless chewing gum, but had refused it. George Guthill was the leader of a movement for a two-hour working day, and among his ardent supporters were Dudley Marks and David Bacon.

On East Avenue Lewis Whitmarsh had set up a typewriting school, and his secretary was Doris Tierney. I saw Hilmar Ross plodding along the street trying to sell hair tonic.

Then the city hall arose before my eyes, where I beheld the mayor, Grace Willink, holding an interview with Chief of Police, Lois Verwey. At the marriage license bureau Mary Ashe was in charge. The dog license bureau was furnishing occupation for Carl Lauterbach and Virginia Patchen, and they were taking in dollar bills by the handful.

As this scene vanished, the interior of the New York Central Station appeared before me. Two porters, struggling frantically to get possession of a lady's baggage, proved to be Wesley Lamb and Alfred Lovesky. The object of their attention was Frances Lumbert. At the gate, crying out in a loud, resonant, stentorian voice, which no one could understand, was Gulick Knight. Marian Allen was rushing about selling milk chocolate, chewing gum, dime novels and so forth. I recognized the conductor and motorman on one of the cars as Ruth Kolko and Laura Luedcke.

In a great hospital donated by Eugenia Heislein, a divorcee, Charlotte Button was the white-clad, efficient head nurse. She had among her assistants Myrtle Ross, Lydia Pestke, and Helen Scott. Eugenia's history had been one of great interest to reporters a short time before. When Herbert Boyce, the cattle king, had died without leaving a will, it was discovered that she was the only living relative of the deceased, and therefore his millions passed to her.

Mildred and Gladys Watts were keeping a charming little tea shop on East Avenue which they called "The Shoppe of Good Things". I recognized two of the waitresses as Grace Frasch and Yetta Grossman.

Then, once more, the walls of dear East High rose before me. I found that Margaret Conklin was head of the English department, Florence Stein had succeeded Dr. Gray, Estelle Warren was the girls' advisor, Morris Wichman and Clyde Erwin were math teachers, and Dorothea Seegler had charge of the lunch room.

Suddenly a scene of great commotion and excitement appeared. Barnum and Bailey's was in town! William Hartman, talking at the rate of about five hundred words a minute, was endeavoring to sell tickets. Eli Markin was selling pink lemonade and popcorn. In the side show I found Frank and Donald Morris posing as the Siamese twins. Emmett Doyle was strutting about, labelled "The Tallest Man in the World". Dean Given was feeding peanuts to the monkeys. James Edmunds was attempting to imitate the Human Fly, and almost breaking his neck in the process. The bareback riders, Carol Sherman, Dora Sklofsky, and Dorothy Bissell were galloping about on their horses. Aldine Peters was a snake charmer. She sat in a cage with snakes asleep all around her and powdered her nose to show how unconcerned she was. Florine Dibble was ring-mistress, and Florence Bogart came along leading a bear.

The circus in its turn gave place to another scene. I saw in the luxurious offices of the world-famous hairpin factory, Lynn Roberts, the president, who had made millions in this industry, reclining gracefully in his chair in consultation with his lawyer, Carl Meyer. Marjorie Bickford, who was his secretary, was pounding away laboriously on the typewriter. Lynn was being sued by Carroll Lansing, through his lawyer, Kenneth Boland, who declared that Carroll's invention of a non-breakable hair pin had been stolen by fraudulent means.

As I peered within one of the large city churches, I discovered that Carl Schacht had become a minister, and at that moment was trying to settle a dispute between Herman Male, his chief elder, and Martha Zimmerman, the president of the Ladies' Aid. It was just before church time on Sunday, and I could hear the pealing of the bells.

The church vanished slowly, and left the surface of the globe crystal clear. I gazed once more into its depths, but it had finished its tale. Still the church bells continued to ring. I looked about. The sun was disappearing on the western side of the bay, and the church bells were ringing in a little church near by. It was growing dusk, and I was left to meditate on the fate of the members of June 1921.

Miscellaneous Organizations

HOCKEY

The hockey team, which gave the most promising signs when it was selected, was so handicapped by the unfavorable weather that any real practice was impossible. It played one game with Manlius, losing with a score of 5-1. Manlius had the advantage of having played five games before it clashed with the East High team.

TENNIS

Tennis during the past few years has developed into an activity worthy of more recognition than it has received. Although its season is not a long one, it is an interscholastic activity. The tennis team of the past term has acquitted itself worthily thus far.

GIRLS' INTERSCHOLASTIC ATHLETICS

The old meets between East and West High were revived this term. Besides the basketball team, the girls organized a swimming team which met with much interest and enthusiastic co-operation.

ATHLETIC FIELD COMMITTEE

The Athletic Field Committee, with Arthur Durbin as chairman, organized very thoroughly and worked hard all year. Members were selected from every class, and the whole school was urged to write letters to public officials and men of influence in the city, presenting the case. Letters from alumni came from all over the country pledging support. Pressure so strong and constant could have only one result. We obtained permission to use the Armory field.

Printing is more than Type, Paper and Ink

¶ One of the most distinguished privileges of printing is its power of communicating the thoughts from one to another.

¶ Printing renders wisdom easy of attainment. It removes the veil which obscured the reason of man; it broke the chain that bound man to superstition.

¶ Rob us of the power of printing and reason would become stagnant—yes solitary.

¶ Printing is a splendid—a wonderfully delightful art. It secures advance knowledge. It renders life comfortable. It's an ideally beneficial instrument to mankind because it is the means of transmitting thoughts, ideas, knowledge and feeling.

¶ The Case-Hoyt Corporation gives complete service on any printing assignment, whether it be the simplest job or one most pretentious—completeness that admits no comparison.

Things We Hope Won't Happen

If some of the members of June '21 were on the faculty—think what a state would be brought about! For instance, if "Ducky" Roberts were principal, the following might take place:

"Ducky" is seated in the office in conference with Karges Lauterback, "Beau Brummel" and teacher of English.

He opens the door to leave the office, and we hear the parting words:

"All right, see you at the 'Vic' about five. S'long!"

The principal goes back to his work (?) Hears a knock on the door. Sees a timid young frosh enter.

Roberts (aside): "O what an awful oyster he turned out to be!" To frosh: "All right, kid, c'mon in. What d'ya want? Drop Latin? Whassa matter? Don't like your teacher? Who is he?"

"Mr. Peter Paul. He don't know nothin' about Latin, and he's always eatin' somethin' in class. He ain't no good teacher."

Roberts: "Yer darn hootin'-er-ah-that is to say-you and Mr. Paul don't agree? Well, Latin's a great study. It's helped me immensely. Now, f'r instance, take the word "bones," a very commonly used word usually associated with "seven" and "eleven." Now if I hadn't taken Latin I wouldn't know that "bones" came from "bonus" meaning dice or craps. It's very helpful. I think you'd better try it again. I'll speak to Pete-the old hayseed-er-I mean I'll see Mr. Paul about you. I have an important engagement now. Good bye."

Mr. Roberts goes into the outer office, whispers to his pretty stenographer, and presently they are seen strolling off together (probably bound for the Temple.)

Then, in geometry class, William Hartman might go on in this wise:

"Hey, you sap, I've told you for the last time that a triangle has four sides. Ah-h, Miss Wursenuseless, you may explain the proposition "When is a circle parallel to a point."

Miss Wursenuseless explains.

Bill: "Quite so, quite so! That reminds me of a stroke I used to use in swimming in my younger days. It was called the side underhand. It went something like this—(gesticulates wildly.) It was one of the things I was most noted for. And—

Voice (in stage whisper): "Same old line!"

Bill: "And so you see, we find geometry applied everywhere. In all the various strokes used in swimming, one describes arcs, graceful chords, angles, squares, and so forth.

Some sap: "Ain't nature gra-a-nd?"

William goes on in this vein until the bell rings. Poor chap! As a geometry teacher he makes a good Mack Sennett Bathing Beauty.

Let us now look in upon the learned professor of history, Jean DuBois. Let us listen to the pearls of knowledge that drop from his lips. Ah-h! He is speaking!

"—and thus from this god of the underworld we get the far famed name—Pluto. That is one of the reasons why this god is so important. For had it not

A PERSONAL MESSAGE to HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

NO MATTER WHAT YOUR PLANS FOR FUTURE WORK MAY BE, you will always find it a tremendous advantage to have a knowledge of Shorthand, Type-writing and Bookkeeping.

"Buddie" Desks

FOR EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY

The "Buddie" Desk is a combination desk and chair that is adjustable.

For Your Study

A seat that gives the greatest comfort—tilting and adjustable top, protects visions, and being easily moved can be placed in most favorable lighting conditions. Large drawer under seat for books, pencils, games, toys, etc. "A place for everything and everything in its place," for father, mother and adult members. The adjustability and compactness of the large size outstrips all comparison with roll or flat top desk and chair, as a desk for reading, studying, writing, drawing, telephone desk or home study.

Albany Law School

Established 1851

WILLIAM P. RUDD
PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The ALBANY LAW SCHOOL has adopted a course of study leading to the degree of LL.B. extending over a period of three years. The instruction is of a practical character intended to fit the student for the bar examinations and for practice at the bar. The extension of the course, however, gives larger opportunity for attention to the history and theory of the law than was possible in two years.

Students who are qualified to enter advanced classes may do so upon passing a satisfactory entrance examination. In such case they will, on compliance with the requirements as to attendance and examination, receive certificates of attendance, as required by the rules with reference to admission to the bar.

The annual circular, giving full information, may be had on application to the Registrar.

A Word To Young Men

Men who have made the acquaintance of our Men's Furnishings department have found it an acquaintance worth cultivating.

It frequently happens here that because of our large resources we are able to present the greatest possible variety and the best values obtainable.

And there is no reason why you should not benefit from it just as thousands of other men already have.

We shall count it a pleasure to meet you and to serve you and feel sure that the acquaintance thus established will prove mutually beneficial.

Important Questions

To the high school student who expects to continue his studies after graduation, the question of a vocation or profession is of first importance. Next comes the selection of the place to which he will go.

Right here in Rochester, MECHANICS INSTITUTE can be of service in offering a solution to both problems. Its courses in Industrial, Household and Applied Arts afford a wide range of subjects, intended to equip the student thoroughly as a teacher or for a professional career

The fact that such an Institute, with its unusual advantages is located here at home, should particularly appeal to EAST HIGH graduates. Don't make your decision until you have investigated its possibilities.

Picking Your Vocation

Deciding upon your life work is only the beginning, as the attainment of success in any business demands a thorough understanding of business principals.

This includes a practical knowledge of record keeping systems. Thousands of letters, orders, bills, receipts, checks, etc., must be filed so that they can be found instantly when wanted. Every business man should know how this is done.

Drop in at our store; say that you are from E. H. S. and we will be glad to show you some interesting things about "Y and E" Record Keeping Systems that will prove a long step in your business education.

'Twas Ever Thus

(A Play in Four Spasms.)

Scene—Room 10.

Time—About 2:30.

Curtain goes up amidst great clamor of voices.

Merce—The meeting will please come to order. Mr. Secretary, is there a quorum present?

C. Cole—How many are necessary for a quorum?

Merce—I dunno. D'you, E. Rausch?

E. Rausch—50 or 75, I guess. We'll say 50.

(Everyone then gets up to count the members present.) Charlie Cole (from top of desk)—There's only 43 here.

Merce—That ain't enough. Hurry up out and round up some of the bunch, will ya?

(Exit V. C. T. B. and followers. Returns presently with a train of people in her wake, whom she has rounded up. Class meeting proceeds.)

Merce—Order, please.

Voice from rear—And there was John and me in the Buick and—

Merce—ORDER! And may I ask that all unnecessary noise and conversation be stopped so we may get the business of the meeting over quickly? The Secretary will please read the minutes of the previous meeting.

Charlie Cole—reads the minutes of two meetings back, which he has hastily compiled while the president was calling the meeting to order.

Merce—Any corrections?

Coleman (making the only motion he knows how to make)—I move the minutes be approved as read.

Voice—Second moshun.

Hedges—I rise to a point of order. There was no discussion.

Merce—No discussion necessary.

Several pairs of hands reach up and drag the blushing and crestfallen Hedges to his seat, 'midst much jeering.

Merce—Order! May I ask that all unnecessary noise be stopped so we can, etc., etc... Nominations in order for class janitor.

Virginia Bush (gives usual spiel)—Mr. President, there is a boy in this class who is very popular, and he certainly has ability. He is one of the best in the class in that line, and most of you know how clever he is. (She gets warmed to her subject and waxes eloquent)—In fact, he is the very best one for the office. He has proved his ability at other times, and I'm sure he is the only one for this office. (She is so pleased with herself, that she decides to go on. She waxes more and more eloquent.)—He is very well liked and I think—(She is interrupted by a vociferous snore from the rear of the room. Undaunted, she goes on, and on—and on. She finishes)—and so I nominate Carl Lauterbach. (With a triumphant look around the room, she subsides. Conversations are resumed.)

Merce—Order, please! And may I ask that all unnecessary noise, etc. Any other discussion?

Voice—What was it about?

Merce (sinks wearily into chair)—Mr. Secretary, will you please read the nominations?

Cole (who has not been listening, gets up and holding a blank piece of paper before him, pretends to read. Thinks up something hastily. Class doesn't know the difference.)

Merce—All in favor—

Roberts—Mr. President.

Schaft (sized with a brilliant inspiration)—That nomination wasn't seconded.

MacAdam—I rise to—

His gang—Sit down!

Chase (climbs out window, followed by Kennedy.)

Merce (very faintly)—Moshun carried. Any more business?

Voice—Move the meeting be adjourned.

Merce (reviving slightly)—Any second?

(By this time, however, the room is empty, and the curtain falls, showing Merce in a state of collapse.)
