Alma Mater

Sweet be thy memory, High School of ours, Fair be thy destiny, fadeless thy flowers, Hearts that have loved thee have won in life's fight, Names that we honor thy standards hold bright.

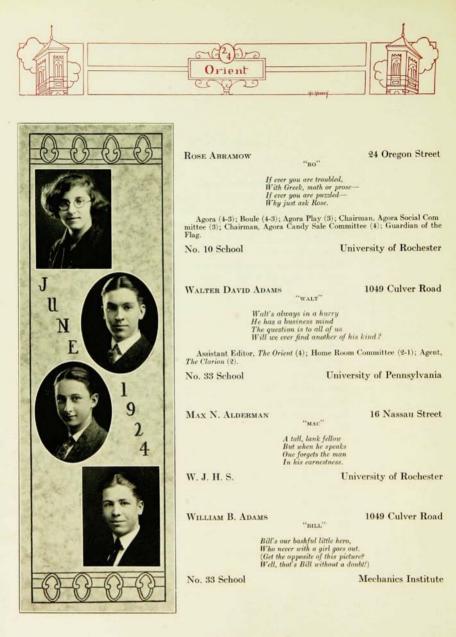

Our Alma Mater dear, to thee we sing, May all thy future years new honors bring, May friends thy banner raise, thy foes grow less, All love and praise to our old E. H. S.

Class Poem

A stately temple saw I in a dream, Fashioned like some old shrine of ancient Rome; The pillars all of marble, wondrous fair, Upheld with fluted heads, carried the dome. A flight of shining steps led up to it; It crowned the summit of a noble hill; The glory of the sunset mellowed it; The land about was broad, and fair, and still. I joined the throng of those who come to view Their Alma Mater's glorious Hall of Fame And read upon its walls the deeds of those Who'd bravely won for her and them a name. Within there breathed a spirit calm and sweet, And filled with peace, I walked with noiseless tread; On either side, in golden frames, I saw Rare portraits-not of the illustrious dead, But of each class sent out by old East High, That in the world's work taking noble part, Had wrought unusual service to their kind, Or gained rich laurels in the realm of art. And at the end I saw a space unfilled, And underneath was writ "June '24"; And in my heart I made an earnest prayer That we, too, might succeed as those before, So that our portrait and our name might claim An honored place among the rest; That those who follow after us might know "June '24" had striven for the best.

The Class Will

Being of sound mind and memory we, the class of June 1924, East High School, of the City of Rochester, County of Monroe, State of New York, do make this our last Will and Testament, hereby revoking any and all former Wills, made by us at any time, and do herein make the following bequests:

FIRST:

To those of our teachers who "had a heart" and overlooked our shortcomings, we leave our blessing, to be equally divided.

SECOND:

To those nameless ones who will come after us, and who will have missed the benefits of D.T., we leave our best wishes and encouragement in making their peace with Miss Eisenberg and Mr. Partridge.

THIRD:

We leave to "John" a legacy of one thousand dollars ($1,000) in payment of delinquent students' "Hot Dogs."

FOURTH:

To all future classes, including the "Gum Chewers" in the Annex, we leave the ghosts of our endeavors, to spur them on to better efforts and encourage them in their struggles.

FIFTH:

To the luckless holdovers, we leave to each a large interest in the firm known as "Class Application, Perseverance and General Enlightenment Company."

SIXTH:

To be held in trust until they are of age (and know better) we leave the Freshmen in the care of the ranking Senior Class of January 1925.

SEVENTH:

To those who are in need of them we bequeath our Cicero and Virgil "Fords" that they may be able successfully to "ford" the Latin sloughs of despond.

EIGHTH:

To Miss Stoneburg we do give and bequeath our earnest wishes, that when she goes to her reward, in the hereafter she will not meet any of those dead languages she has been teaching.

NINTH:

To our beloved Principal, Mr. Wilcox, and Principal pro tem, Mr. Eddy, we leave our deepest affection and warmest appreciation for their efforts in our behalf.

We hereby appoint all future classes executors of this our last Will and Testament.

In witness whereof, we hereunto subscribed our name on the 1st day of June in this year, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-four.

THE BOYS' ELECTION AND PIN SELECTION

A Full History of 1921-The Boys' Election

October 17, 1921.—With a superb superiority to mere parliamentary precedent, the boys of June '24 opened their political history with the election of officers before troubling with the adoption of a constitution. Harold Prince (now no longer in school) was elected president, Paul Lesslie vicepresident, and Robert Whiting opened is three-year term as treasurer.

Room 32 Says "Yes"

October 27, 1921.—To the dismay of the boys, it was discovered that Room 32 had not taken part in the balloting, which was conducted in the home rooms. A general assembly was called, and a week's deliberation was granted to the neglected room. It fortunately concurred, however, and the government ceased its tottering. At the meeting of October 27, Edgar Guttenberg's gregarious propensities were started on their marvelous development when he was elected chairman of the social committee. Eugene Bastian was chosen to investigate suitable class pins.

The Pins Appear

November 18, 1921.—The pins materialized today and two specimens were exhibited. Both boys and girls held meetings, and both gatherings were given a chance to decide on the pins. The boys made their decision first, but when Bastian had trotted over to the girls' meeting and shown them the samples, they could not come to an agreement before the boys wearied of waiting and departed.

AMBROSE BARKER

Girls Say "Yes," Too

November 23, 1921.—After five days of weighty and spirited consideration, the girls agreed unanimously upon the boys' decision, so all that delay was merely "front" on their part. Nevertheless, it cannot be denied that they had the last word. The pin chosen has been kept by the class ever since.

Usually Caustic "M. R." Has Word of Praise for Each Actor —Especially for Barker.

"RUTHE SPEARE CHARMING"

Other Actors Receive Commendation —One of the School's Greatest Dramatic Successes

February 29, 1924.-On a date that comes only once in four years, June '24 presented its senior play in a manner that is equaled only once in forty. Even the charmingly frank "M. R." opined that it was the best play ever given in the East High school auditorium in many years. The actors were "well suited to their parts," and "the characters knew their parts." "Ambrose Barker a huge success... the manuscript of his part contained many possibilities, and he utilized every one to the fullest advantage-adding his own inimitable rendition and touch of humor. Ruthe Speare .... was deservedly the leading female star .... a charming touch of naivete and unconventionality. .her characterization. ... was well-nigh perfect . An exceptionally clever bit of work . by Robert Kienast . remarkably well done . Walter Friederichs as Pops succeeded in drawing to perfection ... . Edward Dake ... showed a commendable re-gard for detail ... Willis Jensen did well ... with particularly fine spots of acting...the hysterical screaming of Helen Line was good ....Both Doris Cohen and Allen

THE CHRONICLE

Frankel did well in their characters ....The crudities of grammar of Ruth Hurvitz as the handmaiden were a clever touch...the actors showed themselves gifted with a real stage presence...the capability of the actors...was one of the most remarkable features of the play.

"Miss Burns has set a standard for herself and June '24 has set another for all coming senior classes by this production."

Dry Goods and Groceries

December 24, 1921.-The girls carried out a resolution on this day to hold a candy sale that resembled a department store, for not only candy was sold, but also cookies and fancy work. We have no means of ascertaining how many digestions were spoiled for Christmas dinner. Charlotte Sturman had general control of the sale. Louise Stern and Dorothea Kohler comprised the fancy-work committee, and Lydia Frankenfeld and Eleanor Goldstein provided the cookies and candy. The girls built— or welded—all of the delicious viands. The sale was especially significant because of the fact that this was almost the first time in the history of the school that underclassmen had undertaken a project of this sort.

SENIOR PLAY CAST

Strong Competition

February 8, 1924.—Ambrose Barker was chosen for the title role in the senior play, "Buster Bean, Head Coach," from among ten or filteen aspirants for that part. The leading feminine role was awarded to Ruthe Speare, the part of the "Elapper." Other characters decided upon today or later were: Walter Friederichs, "Pops;" Helen Line, "Mops;" Willis Jensen, "Bulger;" Hyman Levy, "Mason;" Doris Cohen, "The Countess;" Ruth Hurvitz, her maid; Allan Frankel, "Balthzaz;" Alice Peck, "Granny;" Robert Kienast, "The Waster;" Clyde Weese, "The Lizzie Boy;" Bernard Ward, "Larabee;" Edward Dake, "The Greatest Left Hand Pitcher in the World;" and Wesley Buck, "The Minister," a necessary accessory to any play.

CAPACITY AUDIENCE SEES SENIOR FARCE

"Dan Cupid, Head Coach," Receives Enthusiastic Praise From Great Crowd

November 16, 1923 .- Tonight Ambrose Barker, who will ever be re-membered for "chewed up and spit out," and "spare me from the bloody gelatine and the cruel elocutioner," and Genevieve Smith delighted one of the largest audiences ever present at an East High school senior farce. Ambrose was "Buster Tetherton." and Genevieve was "Buster Tetherton," and Genevieve was "Betty Carlton" in the play, "Dan Cupid, Head Coach," Mary Mahns was the heroine of the comedy as "Kathryn Carlton," and Paul Lesslie played opposite her in the part of "Bob Houston." Clyde Weese, Willis Jen-sen, Edward Dake, Leighton Hatch, and Archie Hopkins endeavored manfully to take girls' characters in one scene, with but mixed success. Bernard Ward also had difficulty in convincing the audience that he was the scholarly Professor Carlton, and Helena Murphy was similarly trou-bled to appear as old Mrs. Carlton, hard of hearing. Walter Friederich was the villain, and secretary to the professor. Allan Frankel and Roy Yerger took respectively the parts of the "hick" and the "grind." Bennett Daly was the well-behaved butler in the Carlton house, supported by Kathryn Foulkes as the waitress. Mary Leader, Ruthe Speare, Lydia Frankenfeld, Ruth Berman, and Ruth Kelly all trod the boards as college girls.

LAST CLASS ELECTION

Seniors Choose Officers

October 4, 1923.—With the obvious intent of starting off its last scholastic year in the best possible manner, the class elected Chester Lauterbach president and Lydia Frankenfeld vice-president. This great duo was supplemented with Agnes Geddes as secretary and Robert Whiting as treasure—the third year he was to hold the office. Charlotte Sturman was also re-elected chairman of the social committee in grateful recognition of her services the year before. Robert Hanford was designated to succeed Leonard Emma as chairman of the athletics committee. With a glow of rightcous satisfaction, the class adjourned.

COMBINED CLASS

Holds Election

September 21, 1922 .- As junior terms the class decided that continued segregation of the sexes was utterly intolerable, and so two weeks after the opening of school the boys united in electing Jack Slotnick president and Beatrice Crippen secretary. Robert Whiting's industry the term before was rewarded by re-election as treasurer. Leonard Emma became chairman of the athletics committee, and Edgar Guttenberg gracefully re-signed his position as chairman of the social committee to Charlotte Sturman, the guiding light of most of the girls' entertainments the term before. Kathryn Foulkes won the vice-presidency of the class.

ORIENT ELECTION

Two Unanimous Ballotings

December 4, 1923.—Roy Yerger and Jack Slotnick were unanimously elected editor and business manager, respectively, of The Orient. For both offices there were just two nominees, but one for each withdrew before the balloting. These two were Leonard Lee Bacon and Edgar Guttenberg, for editor and business manager, respectively. They explained their action as on account of other work. They now hold the same position on The Clarion.

Roy later announced his assistants: Mary Leader and Allan Frankel Work was commenced almost immediately on the forthcoming year book.

FAMOUS PARTIES

"Soph Wash Day"

January 24, 1922.—The girls did not cease their social activities untithe boys might catch up with them, but went right ahead with the "Soph Wash Day," the event that makes Washington's birthday famous, for the affair was named after the Revolutionary patriot. According to The Clarion of March 9, 1922. "The program consisted of dancing a piano solo by Betty Rosner, a monologue by Florence Gilmore, a dialogue by Helena Murphy and Agnes Geddes, and a piano solo by Tille Freedman." It is not clear how Betty Rosner danced a piano solo, but if she really did employ her pedal rather than her manual extremities to play the piano, it is a marvel that she was not instantly signed up for a six months' tour by Mr. B. F. Keith.

"The Zerro Oure"

November 23, 1922.—The first combined class party! "The Zerro Oure" was its name, and The Clarion called it one of the most unusual and colorful events ever staged by a class here. Hallowe'en refreshments were served, but the great drawing card was a playlet written by Jean Visscher and Jessie Tinsman, "The Salvation," depicting the lamentable life then lived by the classes in various Cicero Anna Spencer, Helena Murclasses. phy, Helen Piggott, Edgar Gutten-berg, Jack Slotnick, and Eugene Bastian were the actors. Florence Gilmore read Hallowe'en poetry and Sam Reni delighted with the mouth organ, besides vaudeville acts put on by other members of the class. Pennike's orchestra furnished music for several hours of dancing which was chaperoned by Miss Elizabeth LeMay and Mr. Grant W. Cleland and other teachers.

"Senior Mardi Gras"

November 17, 1923.—"The Senior Mardi Gras" was nevertheless held Saturday evening. But what's in a name? The event was an almost perfect replica of the famous French festival, to judge from the hilarity, the colorfulness and general festivity of the occasion. 150 members at least were present, strewing streamers and scattering confetti with the wildest abandon, and joining in a snake dance throughout the darkened corridors. Ray's Eight Syncopators played for several hours of dancing, and punch and wafers alternately slaked and created thirst. The class advisors Miss Elizabeth LeMay and Mr. Grant W. Cleland were present with ten other teachers as chaperons.

FAMOUS GAMES

One Thousand Per Cent

March 6, 1922.—Although the boys at this time were not as active as the girls socially—that is, officially socially —they were winning honors for themselves in sports. Room 301 led the "C" League, or the third floor, in basketball, having a percentage of 1000%. Chet Lauterbach, Bob Whiting, Bill Steele, and Paul Lessie were the strong men on the team.

Track Meet Won

October 26, 1922.—The one and only June '24 won the East High school interlass track meet with 30 points. June '25 was its nearest competitor with 26, and June '23 followed third with 26, and June '23 followed third with 22. Leonard Emma, captain, led his team. He won 10 of the 30 points.

Third in Swimming

November 16, 1922.—Our team was less successful in the interclass swimming meet held today, but made the grade in third place. Only 11 points were won (the winning team, Jane '25, had just twice that number), and those 11 by Ambrose Barker with 6 and Earl Goldstein with 5. Goldstein won the plunge for distance.

Noses Out January '25

March 15, 1923.—June '24 opened the interclass basketball tournament by defeating January 1925 by the close score of 18-17. The battle was full of fight, and Robert Whiting starred for the June class, shooting ten baskets. Winters, Lesslie, Zigansky and Moldof played, with Whiting in the game.

Gallery Gods

October 2, 1922.—The class attended its first upperclass assembly albeit in the gallery. Still they were there, and then they began to realize that they had forfeited an hour's study period once a week.

Class Prophecy

Settled comfortably in my chair I watched the sinking sun as it dipped into the sea. The pink clouds turned a deep red then almost purple, and the sun with a final burst of light sank rapidly into the sea. Del Ghopel was noted for its beautiful sunsets and delightfully long twilights. I did not find the duties of consul there very exacting, being required merely to make an occasional report and to make formal calls upon the government officials there. I was accustomed to sit thus every evenning and marvel anew at the colors of the setting sun.

Now, in anticipation of the lengthy twilight, I picked up a copy of the New York Times, already two weeks old by the time it reached me. On the front page, staring me in the face, were huge headlines stating that the Times was now under entirely new ownership and management. Several pictures beneath the captions attracted my attention. I recognized Edgar Guttenberg, the new owner of the paper, and two of his able editors, Roy Yerger and Allan Frankel. Mr. Guttenberg was quoted as saying that the Times would be a bigger and better paper, including many new features, all without any increase in price. Toward the bottom of the page I noticed an article stating that the Men's Clothing Models were on a strike for shorter hours. Among the preminent models mentioned were Wesley Buck, Leonard Champion and Raymoul Ward. These familiar names set me to wondering what had become of the rest of the class of June '24. As I sat staring off into the deepening twilight I thought what a pleasure it would be to know what had befallen my classmates, what part each was playing in the great game of Life. Musing and dreaming thus, I resolved to go to Makara, the great Oriental seeress, on the following day and enlist her aid.

I sat in a great square chamber, dimly lighted, whose walls were hidden by heavy purple hangings. The air was heavy with the scent of some Oriental incense. Curtains parted and there appeared before me the tall, white robed figure of Makara, the great secress of the East. She drew aside the hangings at one end of the chamber, disclosing an immense mirror. Warning me not to be alarmed by anything I saw, or anything I might seem to hear, she left me alone, feeling uncomfortably lonely and full of anticipations.

Suddenly a thick mist seemed to fill the room all about me and as it slowly cleared away there formed before my eyes a strange sight indeed. Lo and behold, I recognized before me a session of the House of Representatives at Washington. Up front on the rostrum sat Harley Moyer, Speaker of the House. Before him sat Jean Visscher, Beulah Simons, Ruth Wentz and Marie Terbush, clerks and stenographers. The Sergeant-at-Arms, Royal Thurston, was dragging in Hon. William Crombie and Hon. Charles Schults, who had tried to sneak out early because the Hon. Meyer Fix was making a lengthy speech. He had evidently been talking for some time, as I heard the Hon. Robert Kienast remark to Hon. Wilbur Allen that he had grown an entirely new mustache while listening to Meyer's oration.

However at this point Hon. Fix gave up and Hon. Winfield Scott VanHorn took the floor. I recognized him by his flaming red hair. He read a petition to the effect that legislation was necessary to preserve and protect the American Association of Red Heads from extinction. Prominent among the signers of the petition were Merle Baker, Ambrose Barker, famous comedian, Emmet Glasser, Ida Kokis, Mary Oemisch, Genevieve Smith, well known artist's model, Celia Snow and Olive Thomas.

Upon this a heated discussion arose between Hon. Frederick Cummings and Hon. Robert Hanford, which soon developed into a free-for-all fight. The Sergeant-at-Arms and Chaplain Adrian VanWyckhuyse were obliged to tear apart the irate Honorables. Off in another corner Hon. Joseph Fid and Hon. Robert Felter kept right on snoring steadily, while Hon. Stanley Engberg munched a limburger cheese sandwich and talked to Hon. Anne West and Hon. Olive Young between bites.

Suddenly the scene became blurred, and the voices indistinct. A confusion of voices, total darkness, then, gradually, a great, softly-lit room, containing long green tables, took form. Here and there fashionably dressed ladies leaned over the tables, while others looked on. I recognized the exclusive Ladies' Billiard Academy at the Ritz, New York. Bernice Callan, proprietress, strolled majestically about. Marion Thiem, Elliose Thorne and Gertrude Waite, attendants, flitted to and fro. At one table were Ruth Hurvitz and Eleanor VanDoren, while Lois Killip, Beatrice Crippen, and Lucille Worden stood by and commented on their playing. At another table Agnes Wagner and Helen Treekel played hard to see which one would buy the dinner that night. Presently the scene became blurred and indistinet.

Suddenly amidst rancous applause and laughter there appeared before me the lank form of "Bill" Steele. About him there formed a great hall and a great crowd of people. Then I recognized one of Paul Leslie's new million dollar theaters. The audience scened to appreciate "Bill's" acting. Soon he was joined by his famous partner, Frederick S. Todd, Jr., the little man with the big name. Together they put on an act entitled "The Long and The Short of It."

Their act was followed by a miniature musical comedy featuring the famous Broadway stars, Ruthe Speare and Madeline Kane. In the chorus I saw Ruth Berman, Margaret Cameron, Mary Mahns, Evelyn Barkley, Rutha Brace, Irene LaLone, Harriet Betz, Carolyn Boyd, and Reine Gibeau. Next came a pleasing dance act. The dancers, billed as "Three Little French Sisters." I recognized as Virginia Katz, Ruth Kelley and Helena Murphy. Their act was followed by Walter Friederichs and Gerrit Hill in "Klever Kracks and Komments." They were showered with applause, and also with a few cabbages and antique tomatoes. They were succeeded by two former matinee idols who had descended to vaudeville. I recognized Leighton Hatch and Wesley Warren. At the conclusion of their act a number of strong men took the stage. I was not surprised to recognize Leonard Emma, Ernest Fetterley and Alfred Zelter. They seemed to take great pleasure in tossing Sam Feld and Thaddeus Davids about like a couple of bags of salt.

Now there appeared before me what seemed to be the backstage of the theater, with scenery and properties lying about in a confused mass. I saw Stage Manager Eugene Bastian rushing about searching for his stage hands. Behind a pile of scenery I saw Harvey Birnbaum, Peter DeVonis, Chas. Bechtold, and Daniel Fisher smoking and playing Mah Jongg. Ed. Dake, with a huge bouquet for Ruthe, was trying to get past Alfred Geotz, the janitor and doorman.

The sound of soft music smote my ears and the scene before me faded into the distance. Presently I began to see a great square room, brilliantly lit, filled with people dancing to the latest musical hits. I recognized the annual Society Ball, given by Jack Slotnick, internationally famous lawyer. At the door a line of tall, haughty flunkeys composed of Bennett Daly, Howard Miller, Clyde Weese and Albert Fuller, seized the wraps of each guest as he entered. Among the guests I saw Lee Bacon, famous writer of Campbell's Soup health verses: David Berger and Earl Goldstein, who had recently attempted to swim the Panama Canal; a group of famous scientists composed of Norman Cargill, Lyle Ressegger, Charles Sampson, Charles Thatcher and Bernard Ward; Julius Damiani, Fred Forman and Norman Weiss, clothiers; Gerald East, yeast manufacturer; Eugene Lowenthal, matinee idol and ladies' man; Richard Fancy, furniture mover; Alfred Finklestein, second hand dealer; George Hoyt, American golf champion; Merril Winter and Alexander Foster, prominent members of the Socialist Party; Mary Leader, women's writer; Harry Malley and Donald Margolis, producers of burlesque: Lena Monticelli, opera singer; Alice Peck, poet; famous automobile race driver; Inez D'Amanda, artist; Jessie Tinsman, authoress; Helen Scott, world famous pianist; William Witherspoon, well known stomach specialist; Fannie Weingarten and Sarah Zimmerman, only two female traffic officers in the world.

Noises of the street and the clatter of heavy traffic intruded upon the scene and finally obliterated it altogether. Before me I saw a stout little man, whom I recognized as Felix Ottaviano, standing on an upturned soap box, addressing a crowd at the top of his voice. I could not understand what he was shouting about, but among the curious crowd before him I saw Raymond Perry, Howard Siebert, Lydia Wolle, Frank Yaeger, Loretta Welkley, Wesley Ashman, Ruth Blumenthal, Andrew Dreier, Doris Cohen, Anna Spencer and Edith Stein. Florence Spiller and Mary Stupkiewicz were passing the hat among the crowd on behalf of Mr. Ottaviano.

Farther on down the street a great electric sign announced that Lilly Yaeger, Broadway's favorite, was appearing in Bernard Weiland's production of "The Eternal Triangle" by William Adams. A sudden shrill whistle behind me caused me to turn about. There at the curb stood Clarence Auer, tending a little peanut stand. Roger Cornelius and Abe Moldolf stood by, talking and sampling the fresh roasted peanuts.

And now amidst the elattering traffic I seemed to see first a rotund figure seated behind a high desk, then a number of persons grouped together below him. There gradually formed before me the scene of a court room, crowded to capacity with eurious spectators. The judge, Walter Adams, called loudly for silence. Before him sat Mabel McOuatt, clerk, William Glaser, the plaintiff's attorney, and Hyman Levy, attorney for the defense. It appeared that the plaintiff, Max Zigansky, was suing for damage done to his Ford by a limousine driven by the son of Randall Houck, noted financier. The jury was composed of Mansfield Hunt, foreman, Harry Brody, George Geldart, Jacob Goldman, Doris Boon, George Joel, Elizabeth Borzilleri, David Eichen, Margaret DeLee, Sophie Epstein, Wallace McDowell and Tillie Feldman. In one corner sat Louis Silverman, the jainitor of the building, reading the Police Gazette. Among the curious spectators I saw Minnie Bridge. Anna Belov, Gertrude Moore, Fannie Miller and Phillip Goldstein.

The murmurs of the spectators seemed suddenly to grow into a roar, the walls of the room receded into the distance. The scene at first grew indistinct and then changed entirely. I saw before me a huge auditorium packed with people who seemed to be loudly applauding a diminutive figure upon the platform. I recognized Nathalie Gordon. Behind her on the platform sat several prominent educators of the country whom I recognized as Agnes Geddes, President of the University of Rochester; Alvin Gorsline, Yale's famous football coach; and Virginia Shannon, President of Vassar College. Upon this I realized I was witnessing the annual convention of the American Association of Teachers, recently organized by Justine Merrill, a prominent educator. The huge hall was filled to overflowing with teachers from all over the country. Among those present I recognized Ruth Haag, Leonard Horn, Ruth Fowler, Eunice Posner, Ruth Martin, Helen Pigott, Ruth Odell, Anna Quagliata, Henrietta Smith, Barbara Stern, Rose Abramow, Truman Brizee, Louise Stearns, Jennie DiPasquale, Francis Kane and Mae O'Connor.

Mingled with the speeches and applause I seemed to hear strange cries and noises which, somehow, seemed very familiar. Lguessed that the scene was again about to change and I wondered what I would see next. Presently I could discern in the distance a sort of circular grandstand. Then as it grew clearer I recognized the new world famous ball park of the New York Yankees. I had read some time before that the owner of the Yankees, Sam Lamonica, had secured the services of that famous architect. Robert Whiting, in building the new park. Now I saw before me a world series game in progress. I recognized Manager Howard London on the side lines conferring with several of his players, Hume Deming, Gordon Kennedy, Edward Loeser and Rueben Nudelman. In the grandstand I saw Cyril Nagle and Pred Mora attempting to explain the game to Dorothy Cushman. They seemed to be in great difficulty. Down in front Ernest Hagen and Edward Becker were busy throwing pop bottles at the helpless umpire, whom I recognized as William Mullin. I saw Meyer Goldstein and Max Alderman, seated among the reporters, busily writing up the game.

And now, much to my surprise and disgust, the scene began to fade, just at a most important point in the game. However, I resigned myself to whatever might come next. Soon I could hear in the distance the wail of a saxophone and the blare of a trombone. Then I began to see couples dancing, then more of them, until there was a huge room full of them. The orchestra grew noisier and louder, and played faster. I recognized Willis Jensen at the piano, while Duane Guernsey pounded the drums. Behind a hugh trombone I caught glimpses of Bruce MacDonald, blowing and puffing out his checks in a frenzied effort to keep up with the rest of the orchestra.

I saw Bennie Ade, proprietor of the dance hall, whisper to his official bouncer and handy man. Whereupon the bouncer, whom I recognized as Archie Hopkins, seized two offending "shieks" by their collars and rapidly propelled them to the door. I was surprised to recognize the two as George Slyford and Joseph Schiff. Ben Steinburg and Herbert Sweemer, detectives, took them in charge and led them away. Among those whirling about the floor I glimpsed Helen Borden, Clayton Kaul, Norma Farnham, Verona Huyek, Anna Cohen, Max Isaacs, Blanche Fisher, Helen Folts, Eleanor Glerum, Frank Jacobs, Mona Caley and Nettie Conklin.

In the twinkling of an eye the scene before me had vanished, leaving me in complete darkness. However I could hear the murmur of many mingled voices, all of which seemed to be engaged in heated argument. As the light about me gradually increased I saw that I was entirely surrounded by a huge gathering of women. Upon a raised platform sat several persons who somehow seemed very familiar. I realized that I must have fallen into the national convention of the Women's Party, which I knew had been recently formed through the efforts of Florence Gillmour and Virginia Clampitt, two strong upholders of women's rights. Upon the platform I recognized Kathryn Foulkes, making a flowery speech in praise of Avis Tillson and Lydia Frankenfeld, candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States. Very few of the delegates listened to what was being said, being more interested in talking to their neighbors. In one corner sat a familiar group composed of Effie Bathrick, Ruth Millard, Rutha Brace, Antoinette Bonavilla, Lillian Ruth, Florence Braman, Edith Costich, Rose Francis, Tillie Gitin, Evangeline Goff, Gussie Golding, Eleanor Goldstein, Evelyn Sage.

Suddenly I heard the sound of music and then I saw before me a symphony orchestra, playing in a great concert hall. A short little man with unruly hair led the orchestra. I recognized Gustave Koncz. I looked to see if I might recognize any more of the musicians, and, sure enough I saw Vincent Capasso and Chester Lauterbach. The great orchestra, under the perfect control of its leader, seemed to thrill the huge audience through and through. In the audience I saw Pauline Gorkin Eleanor Gray, Helen Hill, Ernestine Hollenbeck, Harriet Hausser, Edward Zimmerman, Helen Hilbert, Margaret Hausser, Vera Higham, Pearl Granitstein and Julia Schaff.

I was looking about to see if I might recognize more of my acquaintances when suddenly the harsh sound of a steam calliope and the criss of vendors broke upon my ears. I saw the white tents of a circus. All around me crowds of people jostled and pushed each other about. Above the noise and hubbub I heard a familiar voice describing the wonders to be seen in one of the side shows. There stood Francis Dudley, enticing people into a tent to see the "eighth wonder of the world, the only two headed bull in captivity."

Farther on I saw Dorothea Kohler and Claudia Kashuba gaping at the bearded lady. As I entered the tent I saw Ruth Larson attempting to smuggle her large family in on one ticket. Inside, the ringmaster, Ladley Husted, was putting a number of snow white horses through their act. I saw Helen Line and Grace Nowack riding bareback and turning somersaults on two of the horses.

High up in the air Minnie Levine and Irene Reed hung by their toes while they tossed Lillian Rappaport and Rosalind Levine back and forth in a carefree sort of way. On the ground below them a number of women were forming all sorts of picturesque groups and living pictures. I was indeed surprised to recognize Carolyn Lauer, Mildred Kroll, Alta Pose and Elsie Ryder.

The huge audience seemed to be thoroughly enjoying itself. Nearby I recognized Myrtle Levenson and Celia Olinekow eating peanuts and watching with childish glee the antics of the clowns. Among those about me I was able to recognize Leona Maurhoff, Anges Morrison, Anna Moss, Ruth Nuijens, Ellen Ostberg, Eugenia Parker, Louis Sadowsky, Florence Smith, Virginia Peiffer, Mina Wandell and Lucille Rissinger. I was on the point of recognizing one of the clowns when, much to my regret, the scene began to grow indistinct, and finally it faded out altogether, leaving nothing but a dense white mist about me

As the mists gradually dispersed I began to see about me the somber hangings and the great mirror of the chamber of Makara, the Oriental secress. With a jolt I awoke to the realization that my seance was over. With a feeling of regret, yet with a feeling of pleasure at what I had just seen. I left the mysterious chamber and began the journey back to Del Ghopel. I knew full well that Makara, good business woman that she was, would presently send me a staggering bill for her valuable services. However, I reflected, it was well worth the price to see again, and know what had befallen those who had been my classmates long ago in old East High.

Review of the School Year

East High School opened its doors last September under unusual conditions. Mr. Wilcox left for Europe immediately after school opened, for a year's rest and travel. For thirty years he had given of himself to East High School and during those years he had been a friend to every boy and girl who had entered the school and an inspiration to every teacher who had worked with him. It was only natural, therefore, that pupils and teachers in anticipation should feel a sense of loss and an apprehension that the coming year might not be as happy as others had been.

When we learned, however, that Mr. Eddy was to be our principal, our fears were dispelled. Perhaps no other person could have taken Mr. Wilcox's place so well. He brought to his work a spirit of kindliness and sympathetic understanding which has won the friendship and enlisted the co-operation of every teacher and pupil in the school. Although we shall be very happy to have Mr. Wilcox with us again, our delight will be tempered by the possibility that upon his return Mr. Eddy may not continue to be so closely associated with us.

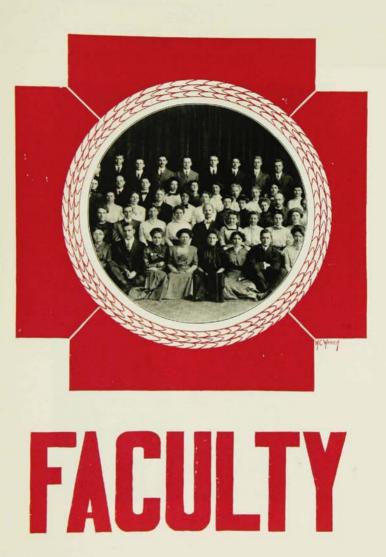

Does it appear complacent to say that we have closed another year of successes?

Our athletic teams have all concluded successful seasons from the point of view of wins and losses; but their success is more significant when it carries with it the realization that at no time has the honor or good sportsmanship of our school been questioned. We have won without guile; we have lost without malice. Our school paper still continues to be the most significant paper of its kind in the state. The plays which have been presented during the year have been ambitious in their inception and they have been presented with finesse.

To one who is not of us, such a review must seem to betoken egregious conceit; those who know that these things are true, realize that little credit is due us. There is something very fine about the relationship of principal, teachers, and pupils in their work towards a common end; a fineness that brings out the best in us. It is the spirit of East High School.

The Year in Publications

THIS semester The Clarion has become more of a newspaper, both in size and content. The size of the page has been changed, increasing the number of columns from four to five and adding about five inches to the length of the paper. The publication of a literary section has been discontinued, and only short stories and articles have been used infrequently.

The Clarion in its function as the school newspaper has been commendably vigilant in securing all possible news articles and presenting them before the students in clear, unbiased newspaper fashion.

The general sentiment is enthusiastically in favor of this new style and policy, and we congratulate the editor and staff of The Clarion on the success which their new venture has attained.

The other publication of East High School is the twice-yearly senior annual or year book. The predecessor of The Orient, The Janua of the class of January 1924, set a new standard for year books and the staff and members of January 1924 may well be proud of their book and feel complimented at the praise and approval it called forth. They set for us, June 1924, a goal to strive for and a standard to maintain.

As for this annual, The Orient of the class of June 1924, we leave to you its judgment, and to the annual of January 1925, the expression of your opinion.

MISS KATHERINE J. BURNS

The Year in Dramatics

Two plays were presented by the classes of East High School during the past semester under the direction of Miss Katherine J. Burns, director of dramatics. The senior final play of June 1924, "His Majesty, Bunker Bean" was given first, and was followed by "The Dictator," the senior term farce of the class of January 1925.

Of "His Majesty, Bunker Bean" the dramatic critic, M. R., declared "it was the best play given in East High School in many years" and all who witnessed the performance enthusiastically endorsed this opinion.

And there seemed to be a general opinion expressed by those present at "The Dictator" that this performance, too, was far above the usual standard of high school dramatics anywhere.

The senior term farce of June 1924, "Dan Cupid, Head Coach" was presented the previous semester on November 16, 1923, and it was also generally acclaimed a huge success.

It is apparent that however exceptional or remarkable the dramatic talents of a class may be, it requires far more ability and talent to transform such potential possibilities to an enjoyable play. And this, we all agree, is the difficult task which Miss Burns performs so well. School sentiment in general again joins with M. R. in feeling that the success of dramatics in East High School is unusual this semester and that it is due to the ability of Miss Burns to select well-adapted manuscripts, to choose best suited players, and to coach them expertly and helpfully.

ARTHUR E. WARD

DAVID_E. MATTERN

The Year in Music

Through the untiring efforts of Mr. Mattern and Mr. Ward, East High School has had a highly successful season in music, both vocal and instrumental. The orchestra and band reached new heights of perfection, and in their concerts and in the assemblies showed the results of constant and faithful practice.

The glee clubs proved over and over again the skill of Mr. Ward in training and directing choruses for vocal music. In the assemblies and in their concerts they upheld the reputation of East High School for exceptional vocal music.

The boys' and girls' quartettes also showed the results of their careful training under Mr. Ward. Whenever they appeared they were heartily applauded.

Mr. Ward has done much to further the interest in individual work in music this year. His voice training classes have produced many well-trained soloists who frequently entertained us.

JACK E. SLOTNICK

The cheering in East High under the guidance of Jack Slotnick has shown a marked improvement. During the past season Jack has done all in his power to bring out the students' appreciation of the teams' and other activities. Jack has added many new and novel stunts to the cheering. As a cheerleader Jack was a huge success.

Basketball

THE BASKETBALL TEAM

SELIG APPERMAN Captain

HOWARD LONDON Manager

The Basketball Team

Captain-SELIG APPERMAN-Forward

"Jap" after leading all comers in scoring finally reached his goal as "Mr. Captain." "Jap" in previous years had been considered too small by Doc. Fowle. "Jap" furnished plenty of worry for opposing guards. The absence of "Jap" from the line up next season will be keenly felt.

FREDERICK GREEN-Forward

"Bub" proved to be an equal if not superior as a running mate to "Jap." "Bub" was chosen by the papers as an all-scholastic forward, showing his value as a player. Green could always be counted on for a "few" baskets in every game. "Bub" seems to have overcome his weak point—studies. Green will be available for next season's team.

CECIL TROXEL-Center

Troxel's timely appearance on the scene saved the day. Troxel after Bickle's voluntary retirement had a pair of large shoes to fill and succeeded very well. If Troxel had been eligible all season, there is no doubt but that he would have been picked for the all-scholastic team by all papers. Cecil will also be back next season.

GREGG SWARTHOUT-Guard

Gregg, the veteran all-scholastic guard, has proved true again. Gregg still floats around with the title "best all-scholastic guard in the city." "Heinie" has proved to be the undoing of many a well meaning forward. Gregg's clever dribbling is what started the final downfall of West High. "Heinie" will also make another appearance next year with the team in the role of captain.

ELI BENSKY-Guard

Bensky proved to be an able assistant to Swarthout in keeping the opposing forwards checked. It is a question of whether or not Bensky would have been picked for the all-scholastic team, if he had not received an injury which made him play with more precaution. Bensky will also be available when "Doc" issues the call next year.

RUSSELL BRADSHAW-Substitute Center

"Rusty," the elongated substitute, was kept out of the game chiefly through lack of experience. "Rusty" showed up well when called upon to battle for the Purple and White. Bradshaw will be lost to the team next season.

YOZO TAKAGI-Substitute Forward

"Yoz." the speedy, ever trying Jap, proved to be an able substitute for either Green or Apperman. With a little more experience Yozo will be a big factor in the machine. "Yoz" will be back next year and should have little trouble in filling Apperman's vacancy.

ELWOOD KING-Substitute Guard

The boy from Utica proved valuable in many instances. "Kingie" on entering the game added new zeal and pep. King will be another one missing in action next season.

The baseball team has pried off the lid to a good start, defeating Charlotte High School, 25-9. Under the tutelage of Coach McKay during the Easter vacation the team was rapidly rounded into shape. Ward Carpenter does not intend that the team shall be idle any week. The team this year is entered in a league in which teams representing West High, Charlotte, Rochester Tech High, Genesee Wesleyan, Fairport, Canandaigua are competing. Coach McKay has built the team around Deming, Swarthout, Calkins, the veterans of last season, using these men as the nucleus for the team.

The Swimming Team has had one of the most extensive schedules ever known, due to Manager Friedrich's efforts. The team has been composed of practically raw material. Coach Benson should be commended for the success of the team. Next season's team should have little trouble in getting away to a good start. Most of the team is remaining in school.

The Girls' Basketball Team had a very successful season. Their first game was an overwhelming defeat of West High. The second game proved to be a narrow escape for West High while the third game proved to be their undoing. The Girls' Team has defeated West High for the past two seasons for the championship. Good luck next year, girls.

Wrestling previously in East High school has received little attention. This season wrestling was declared a minor sport by the Executive Council. Coach McKay built up a team that went out to win and did. The wrestling team is the champion of scholastic wrestling besides being composed of many champions in their separate classes.

The Reserve Basketball Team

The Reserves lost but one game in the city championship Reserves' round and that was due to absence of Cushing and Ehre from the line up. The Reserves are really the backbone of the first team because it is upon these players that the first team try their tricks and schemes. The Reserves beat the Regulars several times in practice and there was a great deal of uncertainty as to some of the first team's player's positions because of the Reserves' consistent plugging. Although the first team may have lost to Charlotte we are avenged to a certain degree by the double defeat handed them by the Reserves. Manager Dan Long arranged a few out of town trips on which the Reserves were recompensed in a small way for all of their banging around.

The Track Team is composed of mostly all veterans. "Doe" Fowle had the team off to an early start, practicing at the Armory in February. Captain Smith is endeavoring to lead the team to as good a victory as he did the Cross Country Team.

JAMES H. FOWLE

"Doc" Fowle has turned out two undefeated teams. Yet not until this year has his value as a coach been shown. "Doc" had to build up a whole new team practically, and had very light material to do it with. But not until the team met far heavier teams was their superiority in cleverness and co-operation brought out. "Doc" also is coaching track and expects to have a big veteran squad in training.

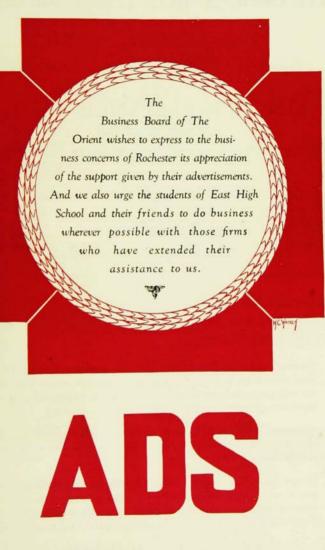

When it comes to coaching baseball a school will have to look a long way before finding an equal to "Pete" McKay. "Pete" has turned out almost miracle teams in the past years and there is no doubt but that he will have a scrapping team this year. In wrestling he has again shown his superiority as a coach. McKay has worked on wrestling for the last three seasons until he has gradually pulled it up to a minor sport in the school. He has developed champion wrestlers out of raw material. If McKay left the school his loss would be keenly felt.

LILLIAN I. WANGMAN

Miss Wangman shows she is beginning to be an equal of "Doc" by again turning out a champion team. The girls' sports in East High School are almost an unheard of quantity. But if the good work is kept up in the next few years as it has been in the past two, it is bound to come to the front. Miss Wangman does not have a chance to show her prowess as the boys' coaches do, but keeps on plugging with little credit being given for unceasing toiling.

Gas and Electric Meters Are Just As Dependable As High-Grade Watches

Thousands of gas and electric meters have been tested from time to time by our meter departments, under State supervision. The records of these tests show, first, that only a very small percentage register incorrectly and, second, that incorrect registrations generally favor the customer.

All meters installed by this Company are tested periodically according to the rules of the Public Service Commission, and all meter testing is done under supervision of the Commission's representatives.

Gas and electric bills represent useful use, unusual use and wasteful use. This Company advocates useful use; advises extra watchfulness when unusual use becomes necessary, and opposes wasteful use because it invariably results in "high bill" complaints which are costly to handle and practically impossible to dispose of satisfactorily.

	Poetical Prophecy
TATOR	Why, bless my soul! And can it be That Raymond Ward's the man I see?
WARD	Well, Tator, Is it really you? And what has brought you back here, too? Whom have you seen, what do you know? Come spill the dope of high or low.
TATOR	First, how is Hill and where is he?
WARD	Ah, practicing at law with me. He pleads all cases in the court, As talking never was my forte. I'm just the silent one behind— The one who furnishes the mind.
TATOR	A modest violet still, I see!
WARD	And now, how goes the world with thee— How is the business of the show? You sing and clog, that much I know.
TATOR	My jokes and dancing please the crowd As, also, do my costumes loud. In short, we seem to draw the dough Which is quite needful—as you know. But let me be! Of course, you've heard Who's on the stage, the latest word For beauty, talent, all the rage? Yep, Genevieve Smith is on the stage.
WARD	Oh yes, I've often seen her act She knocks 'em dead and that's a fact.
TATOR	And also there's the great jazz queen Who is none other than Hel-ee-n (a).
WARD	They say the shimmy that she shakes Half of her reputation makes.
TATOR	The classic dancers known to fame Line and Callan were by name.
WARD	The idol of the matinees Was Barker in the bygone days.
TATOR	The tenor with the soulful eyes Is Hatch—once our singing prize.
WARD	The movie hero whose cute curls Has won the hearts of all the girls We knew as Jensen, long ago.
TATOR	Isn't it funny how things go?
WARD	The silver sheet's resplendent star Is Ruthe Speare, though that is far From the poetic name she bears Since movies' laurel wreath she wears.

Our New Plant With Additional Equipment and Enlarged Organization

THE elements of business success are really few and simple. Brilliant strokes and meteoric sales effort exist chiefly in story books. Persistent selling of right ideas is what builds reputation.

Our idea is to produce worthy goods, and tell many people about them continually for many years. For after all, this so-called "psychology" in advertising or selling means nothing more than human nature; the "potentiality" of markets means human wants, and "cumulative effort" means repetition.

Poetical Prophecy

TATOR The great statesman, you know, Was just Guttenberg long ago. Sheik Kienast of the world grown weary Resides now in a monastery And the fellows who run this state Is Fred Forman and his running mate Zelter, (who Bradstreet does for a million rate) You know he just gave Davids the gate.

WARD C. Sturman in the far off lands Enthuses all the savage bands And Mary Mahns is a model wife Making worthwhile her husband's life.

TATOR And do you know by whose decree Fashions for women come to he? "Tis Playford, the grand modiste, Who changes styles from Yeast to least.

WARD And he whose silver tongue Enraptured crowd on crowd has hung Is Jack Slotnick.

TATOR The international heavyweight Whose wallop knocks out, sure as fate, Whose fame grows ever more and more Was Bill Steele back in days of yore.

WARD The big league pitcher of renown Was Ed Dake back in our home town. Frankel now's a multibillionaire Bootlegging pays for those who dare.

TATOR Bacon, the historian of our age, Still daily's writing page on page.

WARD And Miggs Westy, divorcee gay, With number ten we hope she'll stay. At least a very little while To cheer him with her dazzling smile.

Татов And Thurston, he who bears the name Of the magician of great fame Now he himself has disappeared For which, the deed, the world has cheered.

WARD And yet there are a great many more Of fame in the class of June 2-four.

Have you ever gathered around the campfire at night and listened to the call of the wild birds and animals, and then crawled into your warm woolen blankets and enjoyed a real night's sleep in God's great outdoors? If you haven t, you've missed the thrill of a life-time, and if you have, ou'll feel the call to try it again. At CAMP PATHFINDER you will get this thrill and many others.

Jack—"Ed's left his umbrella again. I do believe he would leave his head if it were not fastened on."

Allan-"'You're right. I heard him say yesterday that he was going to New York for his health."

She—"You have a terrible line." Roy—"Yeh, Spalding pays me thirty a week to string racquets."

Famous Slips:

"Banana."

"Slip me five, dad-"

"Who were you with?"

Ward—"Say, that's my dad's car and what he says goes." Tator—"Tell him to come down and say engine."

Mr. Wolgast-"It takes a sharp student to cut a class successfully.

"Why so sad, Roy?" "I just happened to think, this is the last evening we can be together until tomorrow."

Jack-"Gee, that girl is dumb. She thinks 'necking' is a new kind of dress trimming."

"Oh, boy," says the mattress bouncing up and down, "spring is here."

Mr. McGhee—"Of course you've read Scott?" Bluffer—"Yes, but I don't like the way it ends."

Peruna-the elipic of life, the essence of happiness. Drunk by richest and lowest elumosynaries. Makes the bed-riddled get up and shout Hallelujah. Changes the most troubled mind into a haleyon of peace. Cannot injure or harm in any manner. An integrant part of any man's life. More palatable than ambrosia. It is distilled from pomegranate and wild poppies containing Ethyl and dunnite. It will make you lean or make you fat. It will put the hair right under your hat.

A broken egg-Gee! but it's tough to be broke.

In summer I can sleep all night Until the early morning light, It's quite different in the fall Because I never reach bed at all. And when for sleep my soul doth yearn The midnight oil I have to burn, English and Algebra to con Lenia of Cicero to dwell upon. But even though I try to doze I cannot have a sweet repose Dreams tell me exams are due On lengthy linen and syntax too.
