Mr. Joseph P. O'Hern

Joseph P. O'Hern was born in Cuba, N. Y., September the nineteenth, 1868. After a few years in the village school, he began life as a messenger boy. In 1881 he entered the service of the Erie Railroad Company as telegraph operator. He continued in that work for six years and during vacations, while in college.

The desire for an education led Mr. O'Hern to enter the Geneseo State Normal School where he completed his college entrance studies in one year. In 1888 he entered the University of Rochester and was graduated in 1892 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. While in college he became a member of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity. Thirst for knowledge and the love of study seem to have been prominent traits of Mr. O'Hern's character.

After leaving college he spent two years in Europe devoted to post-graduate study in Philosophy; and one year in Harvard devoted to post-graduate study in English. In 1894 the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy was conferred upon Mr. O'Hern by the American College at Rome, and in 1895 the degree of Master of Arts by the University of Rochester.

Mr. O'Hern has traveled extensively and has visited in his travels nearly all the countries of Europe, and also Iceland, the Land of the Midnight Sun.

For ten years he taught English and History in the Bradstreet Preparatory School. When the West High School was opened he was made head of the English Department. For two years Mr. O'Hern has been with us, a constant companion in our journeys through the field of English Literature. He has given us a broader outlook on life, he has developed in us an appreciation of all that is true and lasting in literature, and it is in appreciation of all that Mr. O'Hern has meant to the Seniors and to West High School that we dedicate this little book, with the hope that—imperfect as it is—it may yet merit his approval.

It is our wish for West High School that Mr. O'Hern, a man who has traveled much and who loves all that is best in art and literature, may long continue a member of her faculty.

Alma Mater

Sweet be thy memory, High School of ours,
Fair be thy destiny, fadeless thy flowers.
Hearts that have loved thee have won in life's fight,
Names that we honor thy standard holds bright.

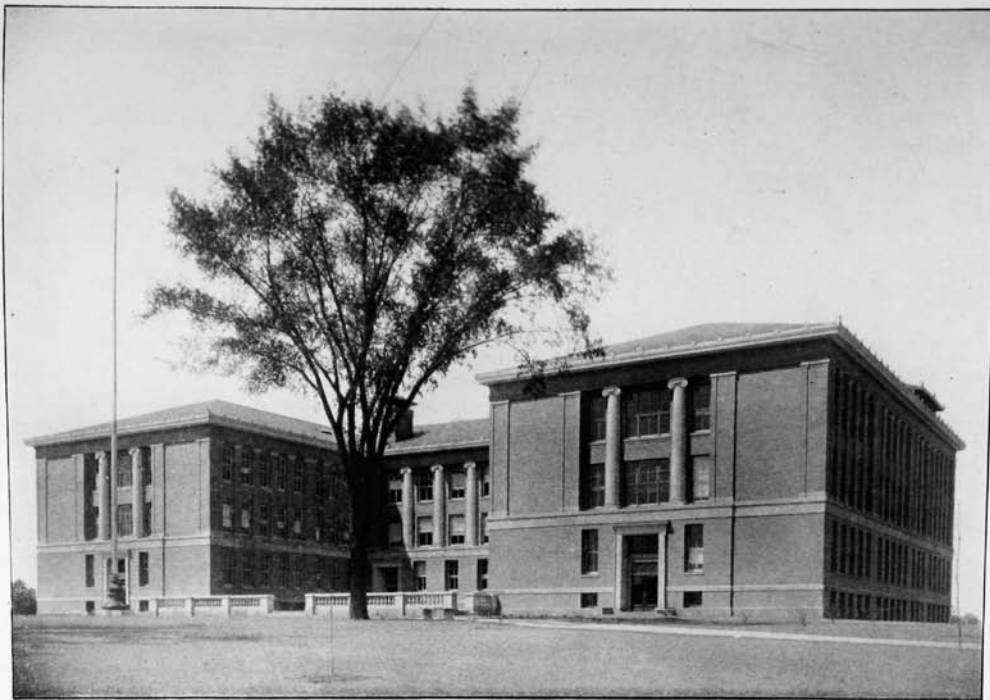

Our Alma Mater dear, to thee we sing,
May all thy future years new honors bring,
May friends thy banners raise, thy foes grow less,
All love and praise to our old R. H. S.

West High Alma Mater

Proudly waves old West High's emblem,
Black and orange fair;
Floats triumphant in the breezes,
No dishonor there.

Student days have fondest memories,
Comrades here we stand
As our troth to Alma Mater,
Pledge we heart and hand.

Class Poem

When summer skies are glowing and the birds' glad song is calling,
Afar from sleepy woodland and across the dreaming hill—
With care-free hearts we wander forth and leave our books and classes,
To revel in the music of the merry mountain rill.

When bright June weaves her garlands, hear we mystic voices calling,
That echo from the portals of the unknown future years;
Our hearts are brave, our hopes are strong in sturdy self-reliance,
The unknown cannot terrify, the future holds no fears.

We leave thee, Alma Mater, but our hearts will ever cherish
The sacred fire we bear away from thy maternal shrine;
The deep'ning love of learning's flame in us thy care hath kindled,
And lighting all our destined path thy memory shall shine.

Four High School years have passed away, with sun and shadow mingled,
Yet looking back we only see the sunshine—not the shade;
For distance lights the once rough way with magic transformation,
Imparting courage to pursue the new road, unafraid.

And when the rugged heights are won that stretch untried before us,
What radiant joy shall fill our hearts in looking back once more—
What dearer memories than thine, O best loved Alma Mater!
Shall murmur faint sweet music like the distant ocean's roar.

Then on, brave hearts, to victory! Your standard truth unbending;
Your watchword honor, and your lives made strong by self-control;
In smallest duties faithful, for to those the crown is promised—
The crown that waits the victor at the far-off destined goal.

Class History

One bright day in September, four short years ago, old Fitzhugh High School opened wide her doors to admit the youths and maidens of the class of nineteen hundred seven. For a year the stairs of the old building creaked and groaned under our cheerful tread. They groaned indeed, for though we were not at that time great in stature, verily even then the weight of knowledge in our learned heads weighed down the old stairs and caused them to groan.

To recount all of the great achievements that have made the class of naughty seven famous would take much time and space, but we must be content to recall only the most important.

Our start in high school life was a happy one. When we entered the Fitzhugh Building, we were "monarchs of all," we "surveyed," for our "right there was none to dispute." There were no boastful "Sophs," mischievous Juniors or haughty Seniors to sour our dispositions by their teasing. We never had to endure being called green and fresh. True, the teachers sometimes "sat upon" the greenest and freshest of our number when occasion demanded. But these occasions, be it said to our credit, were rare and life on the whole went on slowly in the old high schools.

In the first year of our reign many of 1907's sons and daughters distinguished themselves as actors. Our production of "Ivanhoe" in the Assembly Hall of the East High School was a great success, in spite of the fact that it was our first attempt at anything in that line. Early in our career we began to earn a reputation for debating. We had a debating society during that first year whose greatest achievement was a most enjoyable picnic.

But as our minds broadened we found the old building too small and narrow. So at the beginning of our Sophomore year we betook ourselves to the East High School, where our minds were more free to develop—and develop they did. For during this year we found among us many a budding genius.

Our Junior year ushered in the most notable event of our High School career, the completion of our own West High School. It was with regret that we separated from some of our classmates and left East High School, but the new Alma Mater has more than recompensed us for the old. This third year but added to our glory. Our "Prom" was the social function of the year. We were at this time imbued with a lofty desire to elevate the stage, to introduce into West High something of more literary and dramatic value than the ordinary farces. So we gave "An Evening with Dickens." This was a success both financially and dramatically—especially dramatically. It also discovered to us actors hitherto unknown.

In our Senior year, under the wise and careful guardianship of the King, the star of our fame reached its zenith. The budding geniuses of our Sophomore and Junior years blossomed out into poets, authors, actors, orators, debaters, musicians and athletes. Our class football team won the inter-class championship in our Senior year. The girls of the class gave a fair in the corridors, which was a distinct success. All who came to the Seniors' concert can testify to its excellence. Our Senior play, "The Continental Dragoon," equalled any performance ever given in the High School.

The class of June, nineteen hundred seven, has been well represented in all branches of school activities. The success of "THE OCCIDENT" during the past year has been in a great way due to one of our members, Dorothy Cross, editor-in-chief. Doreen Frost, our class poet; Dorothy Cross and Raymond Fuller deserve special mention for their literary work. We have been well represented in debating. The debating society has for the most part been supported by Seniors. We are proud of Katherine Baxter and Reba Snapp, who held their own so well in the debate with East High. Raymond Fuller and Carlisle Taylor, who represented us in the debate with East High, have brought honor to their class as well as to West High School. Richard Powell, Dorothy Cross and King Brown debated against the Erie High School.

We have muscle as well as brains. In athletics we have Bernhard, Hazard, Smeed, Hubscher, and others. The success of the girls' basketball team has been largely due to Louise Justice, captain of the team.

Among our actors we boast of Dorothy Cross, Alpha Menzie, Edith Airy, Richards, Brown, and Smyth, who distinguished himself as a tragedian in the "Evening with Dickens."

We have also been well represented in all musical organizations.

Let it not be supposed that because we have taken such an active part in all school activities, we have been behind in scholarship. On the contrary we have been as successful in this respect as in others. There are many in the class who have loyally upheld her honor by keeping the scholarship of West High up to a high standard. Everybody knows the grinding faculties of O'Kane.

At the close of our High School career fond memories of old Fitzhugh High and of East High linger with us, but dearer than these will always be the thought of our own Alma Mater, West High. We are soon to leave these familiar walls, classmates and friends will separate. But though far away we will always look back with fondest memories to the days spent in West High. And in all the years to come may we, thy loyal sons and daughters, bring naught but honor to thy name and prove ever worthy of thee, our glorious Alma Mater, West High School.

GENA LAWLER,

Class Historian.

Tune: Santa Lucia.

I.

We come, West High beloved, glad praises bringing,
Our hearts and voices raised to thee in singing;
Far floats our orange bright,
Floats the deep shade of night—
Farewell, West High School, dear Alma Mater!

II.

With love and loyalty, all hearts are glowing,
Mem'ries of golden hours, wisdom bestowing;
Deep in a darksome mine
Thy gems of knowledge shine—
Farewell, West High School, dear Alma Mater!

III.

Thrice happy high school days, our consummation
We greet with mixed regret and exultation.
Faithful, West High, to thee
Shall we forever be—
Farewell, West High School, dear Alma Mater!

The Year's Dramatics

While our athletes have been winning victories for West High upon the athletic field, our many amateur actors have shown the school and its friends what good results High School students can achieve in the line of dramatics.

The first play of the season was William Shakespeare's "As You Like It," which was enacted by the school's Dramatic Club. It was the first time in three years that Rochester High School students had attempted to produce Shakespeare. The result was a distinct success. The oft-expressed opinion that High School audiences care only for light farces was once for all completely disproved by the close and appreciative attention displayed by the audience throughout the whole play. Those who took the different parts entered into the spirit of the play, and their lines showed careful study and preparation.

On Friday, December 7th, the January Senior Class gave their Senior play: "Seven-twenty-eight, or Casting the Boomerang." We shall not soon forget that benevolent old gentleman, Mr. Lancelot Bargiss, or his son-in-law, Mr. Hollyhock, who got into such difficulties. The play was such a merited success that, in response to a general demand, the class gave a second performance, which was the first matinee ever presented in our Assembly Hall.

The joint classes of January and June, 1908, gave as their Junior farce, "The Last Rehearsal." It was replete with amusing sensations, dramatic situations and would-be fussers. Its plot was unique—although not very evident, its staging effective, and every part was well taken—that of Mrs. De Yorburg-Smith finding especial favor with the audience. In addition, it was the financial success of the year, in the line of dramatics.

We now come to the social and dramatic event of the year—the June, 1907, Senior play, "A Continental Dragoon." Without exception this was the best production ever given by West High School students. The plot was thrilling, intensely interesting, and developed to an artistic and touching climax. As one gentleman in the audience said: "It was quite superior to many High School farces and plays, in that it possessed a strong plot." The Senior play would have been a very creditable production under the best of circumstances, but when we consider the great difficulties under which it had to be given—difficulties which almost necessitated its postponement—its dramatic success approaches the marvelous.

But he is in error who thinks that to the students should be given all the credit for the success of this year's dramatics. We should remember Mrs. Ellis, who, through her continued interest, unstinted co-operation, and able supervision, has made this success possible.

And now a word in conclusion. There was a time when every class in High School—not even excepting the Freshman—wanted to and did produce a play or farce. That was the time when a large number of plays given and not dramatic excellence was the question considered. The natural result was that it soon became difficult to secure a good audience for a High School dramatic production—the students and general public had been filled to satiety. We believe that West High School has at last succeeded in striking a happy medium. The past year was notable not only for the marked excellence of its dramatic offerings, but even more notable for the small number of these offerings. A precedent has been established, that, if followed, will prove to be for the best interests of the High School and its dramatics.

The Cup of Happiness

A Fable

In the long, long days ago, there nestled on the side of a great mountain a little town, and the maidens of this town were noted far and wide for their great beauty and were much sought after till these attentions had spoiled them and made them selfish, looking only for their own pleasure, thoughtless of others. One twilight as they were discussing what they could do on the morrow to most enjoy life, a spirit appeared to them and said: "Find the cup of happiness. One can obtain it on the way to yonder mountain summit." The maidens had all heard that the old philosophers had written much about the cup of happiness, and now as they glanced toward the summit of the rising peak, gilded and glorified as it was by the sinking Phoebus, it seemed most natural and probable that, if any where, the cup of happiness would be found on that glowing mount, the place where Phoebus first made his appearance and lingered longest. So they all resolved to make the search, each cherishing the secret hope that she would be the fortunate one to obtain that wonderful gift—the cup of happiness.

Three secretly set out that very night. The rest were threading their way up the mountain path before the dew had left the flowers—all except Faythe—she had lingered to help her mother, and not until Apollo had mounted well into the heavens did she leave her home and begin her solitary walk. Even then there were many things that delayed her. She had heard the incessant calling of two birds and peeped through the sedge to seek the cause of their pathetic notes. She spied on the ground a little downy ball of a bird, scarcely able to hop, that had evidently fallen from the nest some ten feet above her. Going back a step Faythe found a broken-off branch. She tied her handkerchief between some of the twigs at the end, and placing the nestling on this, hoisted the prodigal to his home, where he joyfully flopped back in with his crying brothers, while his parents went jubilant with joy.

This done, she then recalled the purpose for which she had set out and continued her way along the winding road, quite alone, till she heard ahead of her a childish voice and saw a small urchin driving a flock of sheep. He was having trouble, for just as soon as he had hurried up the sheep on the right side, some on the left had strayed. As Faythe came up to him she said: "Would you not like me to walk on one side for you? I am going right along your way?" The child looked up with surprise and pleasure. "Oh, if the lady would I should be grateful to her," and Faythe smiled to think what her companions would say if they should see her driving sheep.

As they neared the destined sheep-cote the child timidly ventured to ask: "Would the lady help me now. This is the hardest part of all." Faythe smiled her assent and ran hither and thither till all the sheep were safely gathered in the fold. Then she hurried on, not giving the child time to express his amazed thankfulness. Bye and bye she neared a lonely mountain hut. A child came toddling down the path to meet her, saying: "Oh, is you coming to see my poor sick muzzer? Is you she, who she prayed to come?" "No, I am sorry I am not she, but I will come if she would like to have me," but the child in his baby conviction was already tugging her onward till she stood at the door of the crude cabin. There on a cot in a room of great disorder lay the sick mother. As she raised her head and gazed at the form in the doorway some of the smile and brightness of face seemed reflected on her own pained one. "What may I do for you?" asked the girl. The poor astonished woman hesitated. "But I really want to," added the girl. So Faythe heated water, bathed the painful part, righted the room and fed the woman from the delicacies of her own lunch. Then she departed to inform a relative of the woman in the next cabin along the way. The sick one was too grateful to express her gratitude, but remembered long afterward the comfort and happiness this first visit of Faythe had brought to her. Faythe found the sister and fulfilled her mission.

She wandered along the road again and tried to think what she had come for, because for the time she had quite forgotten her original purpose. She was nearly at the summit, but now as she thought of that much-sought treasure, she regarded it indifferently, and was about to turn back when she noticed a pretty cabin set near the top of the mount and thought she saw a figure beckoning her. She ascended, and sure enough there was a dear old lady.

"My child," she said, "pardon me, but so seldom I see anybody way up here and my eyes are so poor that it is a great temptation to ask you to read a bit of the blessed scripture to me." "Certainly, mother," responded the girl, and as the two guided their steps to the porch, the old lady told her that to-day many girls had passed and they all had said they were too busy in looking for the cup of happiness, but that after they had found it, then they would read to her. "And," added the old lady, "were you also searching for this cup of happiness? You look as though you had been successful." Faythe gazed out over the wide expanse. The valleys were already darkening—only on this summit the light still shone. "Yes, mother," she answered, "that is what I came for. I haven't really found it, for I haven't even looked, but I'm sure I feel as happy and contented as though I had." The old lady bent over and kissed the sweet face. "Yes, my child, I think you have truly found it, for they that seek it never find it, but to such as you it comes of its own accord."

Onnalinda, a Daughter of Nature

The creeping shadows of evening had deepened, and now the forest was wholly enveloped in a sable gloom. Tall, shadowy poplars towered far above the dense underbrush, standing in dark relief against the starless heavens. Occasionally a lonely whippoorwill called to its mate from the tree tops, or a disturbed owl noisily flapped its wings with a whirring sound as it whizzed through the air to seek rest elsewhere.

However, the forest was still—deathly still—and such sounds of the night only intensified the quiet. In a clearing, where the gigantic oaks had been cut away, the glowing embers of the watch fires illumined a cluster of tawny wigwams. Even as we gaze the flap of the largest and most imposing parts, and we see an Indian maiden, majestic in every outline, come forth and then stop, with one rounded, jeweled arm raised to her ear and her dark head bent attentively. Only for an moment does she stand thus in the firelight, this beautiful maiden; this Onnalinda, daughter of Kamanut, chief of the Senecas; and then with a deer-like bound, her moccasined feet scarcely touching the ground, she speeds down the moonlit trail toward the river. The gloomy forest shades are of little moment to her, for she loves it all; loves the glades; the darkness; the echoes and the night itself.

With feverish haste she unties the birch canoe and with a light spring takes her place at the prow, using the paddle with an easy grace. Two muscular even dips and the tiny craft skims over the shimmering, moonlit waters, and speeds on its way down the river.

Onnalinda's figure is erect as she breathes the dewy breezes and guides the small canoe. Her browned cheeks are flushed with the glow of excitement and intense enjoyment, and her unrestrained locks flow backward in the wind. Her dark eyes gleam and her parted ruddy lips reveal the even teeth. On and on she sailed with the same untiring stroke, past dark woods and steep shelving rocks. Now a screech owl seemed to hoot, "Whither, Onnalinda?" and further on some wild ducks chattered angrily upon her advent. The gentle south wind blew, rippling the gleaming waters and kissed Onnalinda's burning cheek. Softly she whispered, half to herself and half to the night, as she kept time to the regular dip of the paddles, "He loves me, he loves me, Eben Stark loves me. So happy am I." And a beautiful smile dimpled her rosy lips and her eyes shone bright with a joyful splendor.

Gradually the dark shadows of night steal away as silently as they came, and the river, the banks and the forest glades are draped in a hazy gray veil. A thousand songsters begin their glad song service from the nearby tree tops and an atmosphere of freshness exists. And once as Onnalinda passed the mouth of a clear, babbling brook, a deer, coming down from the mountains for its morning drink, gazed at her with big-eyed wonder, then startled, turned and fled into the wilderness.

Now Aurora flings wide open the eastern gates and a flood of radiance and light sparkles on the waters and gleams on the mossy banks. The shining pickerel come often to the surface to bask in the sunshine, only to scurry away as the canoe approaches. Bright, wide-open wild flowers dot the green in thick profusion, sending forth a gentle perfume which mingles with the fragrance of the fir-trees, and is wafted across the waters. Along the shore, the dead-ripe blackberries glisten on the bushes, unsought and uncultivated.

Onnalinda drinks it all in—the freshness, the sparkle and glory of it all and her pulse beats fast for a new thrill has coursed its way through her veins—a new joy; the joy of living. And as she slowly paddles her way homeward in the sunshine and splendor of the new moon, she rejoices and is glad, for she has communed with the goddess of nature herself, and has felt the throb and heart-beat of life.

Editorials

According to the custom set by the first class that was graduated from West High School, the SENIOR YEAR BOOK is the joint publication of "THE OCCIDENT" and the Senior class. This book, the result of many months of labor, is now placed in your hands. It has been our effort to make its pages interesting and readable, to make it something more than a catalogue of the school's activities. We hope that this little book will receive the approval of the student body and prove, in some degree, worthy of old West High.

Just a few words now about "THE OCCIDENT." It published during the year ten full page half-tones, as compared with four for last year. Besides these, there has been a large quota of smaller cuts and photographs. There were twice as many pages of class notes and twenty-eight pages more of reading matter this year than last. This has largely been made possible through the increased support and interest of the student body in its school paper. May the good work go on!

Another matter worthy of special notice is the fact that every cover designed for "THE OCCIDENT" used this year—with the single exception of a stock cover—has been the work of some member of the student body. It has been the policy of the staff to make "THE OCCIDENT" a paper of the school, by the school, and for the school. May it never prove necessary to employ outside talent to design the covers for our school paper.

The SENIOR YEAR BOOK takes great pleasure in officially announcing that the department class room and corridor, which has attracted so much merited attention throughout the year, is the joint work of Miss Alpha Menzie and William Richards.

We of the June, 1907, class are now at the close of our High School course. The toilers have received their reward in the promise of much-coveted diplomas; those who have neglected their school work may revisit the scenes of their defeat and take a so-called post graduate course, or leave these halls of learning for the broader field of life.

The close of one's High School course is a peculiarly sad event. For four fleet-passing years we have lived and worked, toiled and played, suffered rebuffs and gained victories for our class and school. And now has come the time when we must 'say a last farewell' to all our High School greatness. But whether at college or work we will ever remain loyal to our High School. May we never do aught to sully her fair name, dear West High Alma Mater!

A Review of the Year's Athletics

The athletic branch of our school activities has been very successful throughout the past year, especially when viewed from the standpoint of "victory or defeat." We have shown ourselves superior to our Oriental rival in football and basketball. Our track team did not succeed in winning the banner, but they did secure third place in the meet, an accomplishment which was praiseworthy, all things considered.

Football is first, both from point of time and interest as well as success, and the excellent record which was made during the season must be even now fresh in the minds of all. Some of the strongest and fastest teams in New York State suffered defeat at the hands of the Orange and Black. Hogan Yancey as coach, "Punk" Hagaman as captain and Andrew Sutherland as manager made an excellent trio to conduct the affairs of the gridiron, and to them falls a great share of the praise for all that was so well accomplished. One other thing, however, contributed no small amount toward making the season so successful, and that was the very general response which was made to the call for candidates and the keen competition for positions on the team which resulted. In judging the individual merits of the different men, Coach Yancey was impartial and used his best judgment in each instance and this is one of the many reasons why he so well deserves the appellation, gentleman, in the sense that Mr. Weet applies it and as we all remember him.

The announcement in the Assembly Hall sometime ago that Mr. Yancey had consented to coach our team for the season of 1907 met with no heartier applause than it deserved from the student body of West High, and were it even untrue that the team of 1906 will be almost intact next season, we still should have no reason to fear for its success with Yancey at the "helm."

In basketball we again gained a victory over the Purple in a game replete with speed, accuracy and freedom from unfair tactics. The final score, 27 to 25, tells a story of its own. Not unlike the East-West football game, which resulted in the score of 12 to 0, this game was also very fitting for the last contest of the season. But of fifteen games, most of which were out of town, seven resulted in victories for West High, while our opponents won eight. In this branch of our athletics the response to the call for candidates was not quite as gratifying as it was in the case of football, still, among those who did come out for the team the competition was not without good results. Louis Brandt as captain and Harry Bloss as manager made a good working pair and what they accomplished is praise enough in itself. These are the facts. Cook Academy was defeated on its own court, Brockport Normal lost to us in the Alumni "gym," and East High was defeated. These teams will be recognized as three of the fastest in Western New York.

The girls deserve especially mention under this head for their excellent work in this branch of our athletics. They have helped much to elevate our athletic standard and to spread the fast increasing fame of West High.

The track team secured third place in the interscholastic meet in which several teams competed. Even though East High did win first place, they cannot boast that fact as a victory over the Orange and Black. Where several teams are entered in such a meet the competition is of such a nature that no two teams compete against each other on equal terms. Francis Carroll and Raymond Lander were captain and manager of the track team and many thanks are due to them for their work in behalf of the school. The victor always bears the laurels, but in this case there was neither victor nor victory, and thus our captain and manager were denied the wreath, but received instead a crown of thorns (denoted by the silence in Assembly Hall on the next Monday morning).

The next important part of our season's athletic work is that of inter-class athletics, which have occupied no little place of interest in the minds of the student body throughout the year. In this work Mr. Silsby has been the backbone and his is the praise for the very gratifying results. Much new material has been turned out by means of the inter-class contests and the physical benefits of athletic training have been made vastly more general. An inter-classes association has been formed and a constitution drawn up which will regulate all matters of importance attending inter-class athletics. The classes of January and June, 1907, won the football championship, the 1908 classes won the basketball and also the track championship of the school for the year 1907 and 1907. In each case a banner has been awarded, and thus their victory is recorded in words that cannot be erased.

The fame of our beloved Alma Mater is spreading, the prestige of the Orange and Black is increasing, and the responsibilities of each student is therefore becoming greater. Here is where we may take a little larger view with perhaps a realization of the truthfulness and importance of what we see. It is for us to acknowledge that victory in athletics does not stand for a great deal at the most, that it stands for absolutely nothing if the following requisites are not complied with. First, a good standard of scholarship in those who play on our teams. Next, cleanliness and fair play in every instance, and, lastly, a high regard for our Alma Mater and a little less ambition for individual honors with the interest of the school as a whole more dearly at heart.

With these last words the athletic editor lays aside his pen with some reluctance, yet with a hope that the next editor of this department of the paper will profit by his many mistakes and will succeed better than he in making it interesting and expressive of the mind of the student body and the spirit of the school.

FRANK MOODY.

EXCHANGES

In the last issue of the year a word about our Exchanges is not amiss. They come from all parts of the country—from Washington to Rhode Island, from Montana to Texas, and their contents are as varied as the regions from which they come. It is a great pleasure to receive the glimpses of life in other schools which our Exchanges afford, and the students may enjoy them as well as "THE OCCIDENT" staff, for as soon as the Exchanges are looked by the staff, they are placed within the reach of the student body.

The "Cascadillian" is probably our best—as well as our most expensive—Exchange. Other papers deserving particular mention are: the Durham "Messenger," the "Record," "The Student," from Covington; "The Lanthorn" and the Lafayette "Oracle."

The following is a complete list of the Exchanges received during the school year: "Academian," "Academic Observer," "Acroama," "Arrow," "Calendar," "Campus," "Cascadillian," "Chronicle" (Masten Park); "Chronicle" (Niagara); "Citizen," "Clarion," "Congress," "Crescent," "Crimson and Blue," "Dragon," "Easterner," "Genesee Wesleyan," "Hamilton Literary Magazine," "Hetios," "Hesperian," "High School Beacon," "High School News," "High School Recorder," "High School Times," "Hour Glass," "Huisache," "Lanthorn," "L. H. S. Primer," "Messenger," "Mirror," "Mountain Echo," "Normalia," "Nugget," "Oracle" (Fulton); "Oracle" (Lafayette); "Oracle" (Mount Vernon); "Owl" (Middletown); "Owl" (Temple College); "Penn Charter Magazine," "Pennsylvania Yankee," "Purple and White," "Quill" (Alcuin Preparatory School); "Quill" (Norton County High School); "Record," "Review," "Spectator," "Student" (Covington); "Student" (Swanton); "Sunnyside," "Vail-Deane Budget," "V. H. S. Student," "Vindex," "Whims," "Windmill," "Yale Alumni Weekly."

Class Room and Corridor

The bonds of student days, about which memories fond and lasting cling, are about to be put asunder. The class of June, 1907, is soon to be a thing of the past as far as its active association with the West High School is concerned. The old familiar faces will shortly be new and strange ones in other fields. What a change there will be!

For some there is in store "the golden haze of college days," while others will step straightway into the busy, active world. To him who anticipates University life, or to him who will adopt the other alternative, there is one word and only one which spells ultimate success. That word is application; application, no matter in what phase of activity, is the one true aid in making of oneself what the world is proud to call a man—a man in the truest sense of the word. Perseverance, Application, an old teacher of mine once coined a good word, "Stick-to-it-ive-ness." They are all good words and all contain the elements of success.

Jack London takes a rather morbid view of life. Don't let your thoughts parallel his, for through his views runs a trace of melancholy. He says, "Life is a strange thing. Why this longing for life? It is a game which no man wins. To live is to toil hard and suffer sore till old age creeps in upon us and we throw down our hands on the ashes of dead fires. It is hard to live. In pain the baby sucks his first breath; in pain the old man gasps his last, and all his days are full of sorrow and trouble; yet he goes down to the welcome arms of death, stumbling, falling, with his head turned backward, fighting to the last. It is only life and the things of life that hurt, yet we love life and hate death. It is all very strange." What a very cynical view of life; yet how peculiarly like it is Omar Khayyam's verse in the Rubaiyat:

"When you and I behind the veil are past,

Oh, but the long, long time the world will last.

Which of our coming and departure heeds

As the seas self should a pebble cast."

But a cynic's view of life is not a pleasant one with this great and glorious world about us. Let the curtain exclude the darker thoughts and rise on the brighter side. This country is in a state of great prosperity. Who should be in a more happy frame of mind than the men who have made it so? And the places of such men are the end to which we are now tending. Don't imagine that the world is a couch with soft, downy cushions, a cozy corner welcoming you to its embrace. One has to struggle and struggle hard to get along in it. A nephew of Russell Sage once wrote him and asked: "Uncle, can you advise me as to an easy job?" And the world-wise financier wrote back: "Don't study law; that's not easy. Don't take up medicine; that is indeed hard. Don't become a business man; there is too much labor involved in that occupation. Leave journalism alone; that is the hardest of all. In fact, if you are looking for an easy job I'm afraid you are going to be disappointed. The only easy job now-a-days is dying."

A recent "Outlook" contains an extremely clever little story by Alice Brown, called "The Sower." It contains the true meaning of life's struggle. It compares the daily toil of man to the farmer sowing his grain and "the man bought the best seed there was to be had, but the ground, or the wind, or the sun always seemed to be wrong and he despaired of ever seeing a green shoot." So in life we carry out our daily labor, seemingly with little effect on the world about us, wondering if there ever will be a change in the end to which perfection we lend out aid. But after all if we live as we should and practice high thoughts, the world will be benefited by the years we spend in it and future generations feel the effects of our good work. Robert Louis Stevenson says:

"The world is so full of a number of things

I am sure we should all be as happy as kings."

And now we are weary. We lay down our pens. May brighter and more capable editors take it up. If any of the measures we have proposed from time to time have given an incentive for good to some one of you, then we can count the little work we have done a success.

Mr. Dooley on Commencement

"How did ye injye yer darter's graduation fr'm Wist High?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

(Iditors will please rise.)

6. Oration.....Montmorency Smith

7. Punch (liquid) an' Awardi' iv Diplomas.

"An int'restin' program," remarked Mr. Hennessy.

"Yis, indade. F'r variety it had advanced vaudeville all stopped. There wuz something being done all th' time. Ginirally 'twas the audience. The Invocation and Prayer was well raycaved. After that, the Boys' Glee Club sang, 'What Kind of Shoes Do de Angels Wear?' The applause was so vociferus that they responded to the encore with th' well-known classic, 'Ivirybody Works Father.'

"Thin Dinny Slattery, President of the College Club, read a highly intertainin' an' instrhuctive paper on 'How I Run West High.' Th' nixt two numbers on th' program wint off with a loud report. No accidents. Thin followed the oration, 'School Spirit—What Is It?' by the valedictorian, Montmorency Smith. Among ither things th' spaker brought forth th' significant an' alarmin' fact that only wan hundred an' forty-sivin iv the thousan' odd students at Wist High were members of th' Students' Association—th' rist were members iv Th' Ancient and Protective Order iv Mutual Bluffers. 'Tickets iv admission to th' Students' Association can be obtained at th' door on th' right, as you go out,' said this br-right lad, 'only twenty-foive cints apiece. Double green tradin' sta-amps given to purchasers of half-dozen lots. None genocine without th' signature iv th' treasurer.'

"After th' tumultus applause that greeted this masterly effort had subsided, the Fussers' Glee Club sang their touchin' little melody entitled, 'Hands I Have Held.' Though there wuz little melody in it, I injyed it very much. It reminded me so much iv old times."

"G'wan," interrupted Mr. Hennessy, with a snort. "The only hand you ivir held wuz at a poker game."

"S-sh, not so loud. Mrs. Dooley might hear yez. But to raysume. After th' awardin' iv diplomas which closed th' evinin's entertainment, th' meetin' broke up. 'Twes a most successful gradyation."

"Well, what is your candid opinion of Commencement Exercises?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I think," concluded Mr. Dooley, "that they are well named. 'Tis only after a feller gradyates fr'm High School that he really commences to do anythin'."

EVERY day we hear business men who employ young people say :
"It is next to impossible for us to get enough efficient, well-trained office assistants. We do not ask for experienced help, but for intelligent young men and women who have been well trained by you and who are willing to work."

The highest degree of efficiency possible in comparatively short time can be obtained at the

Rochester Business Institute

where instructors, thoroughly familiar with modern business requirements, are preparing young men and women for business positions throughout the year.

The courses, both in the commercial and shorthand department, are so arranged that it is possible to enter them at any time. These courses have stood the test of many years, and their efficiency is proved by the thousands of graduates of this school who hold responsible and lucrative positions in Rochester and other cities.

Ask for catalogue and copy of the school paper.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING

COMMENCEMENT

A more fitting reward of merit could not be presented to the graduate than a volume, or a set of beautifully bound and illustrated books. We have exercised exceeding care in the choosing of books most appropriate for this occasion, and our department devoted to this purpose is at your service.

Commencement also brings with it the feeling that summer games and sports are next to be considered.

Your Camping Outfit

will not be complete unless you have good fishing equipment. We are prepared to furnish you with Extra Quality Trout and Bass Flies; all kinds of bait, Trolling Spoons, etc. Everything you require in the fishing line. Don't fail to see our Junior Fishing Outfit complete $1.50 and Senior Fishing Outfit complete $3.00.

Canoe Pleasures

are enhanced when you paddle an "Old Town Canoe." For 25 years this canoe has been a recognized leader. Ask anyone who owns one. The Upper Genesee is alive with them. We have everything in Lawn Tennis, Golf and Baseball goods, all grades and prices.

Pennants, Seals and Steins

West High School Pennants in colors from 25c. to $1.25. In leather, hand painted letters at $3.50. Beautiful felt school and fraternity seals in colors $2.50. Better ones in bronze mounted on wood base at $4.50. Steins, beautifully hand-painted, from $1.50 to $3.00. Just the things for graduation gifts.

Made to order pennants and seals a specialty.

Picture taking is not a fully developed art. Herein is its charm. There is always another step to take, new mysteries to work out. All this is exceedingly attractive to the amateur, the one working for the love of the work.

You can hardly keep up with the times to better advantage than by being in touch with our Photographic section. We always have all the new implements for you to work with.

This season there is a new No. 2 Brownie Camera, takes pictures  $2\frac{1}{2}$  in. x  $4\frac{1}{2}$  in. It is \$3.00.

Brownie Enlarging Camera takes any film  $2\frac{1}{4}$  in. x  $3\frac{1}{4}$  in. or smaller, enlarging it to 5 in. x 7 in. It is a simple and effective means of securing larger pictures from your best negatives. Price is \$2.00.

WEDDING SILVER

A large and carefully selected stock of sterling silver seems greatly appreciated these days of weddings, present and prospective.

We make a specialty of exclusive designs in coffee sets, tea sets, ice cream dishes, meat dishes, vegetable dishes, fruit and salad dishes, water pitchers, claret jugs and many large pieces made to special designs.

Attention is called to the lower priced wares, such as creamers and sugars, bon-bon baskets, almond dishes, candlesticks, low compotes, and a most pleasing line of novelties and accesories for the table.

Chests and cases of flatware merit careful consideration.
