LOUIS H. MILLER

DEDICATED
TO
LOUIS H. MILLER

under whom we began our High School
Life in the Fitzhugh Street Annex.
Ever honest and true himself, he leads others to honesty and truth.

Louis H. Miller

Mr. Miller is a native of the City of Rochester. He attended public schools Number 16 and 14 and several German schools that once flourished here. From Number 14 he was promoted to the Free Academy, where he completed the classical course and was awarded a scholarship to the University of Rochester. While in the University Mr. Miller became a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. After being graduated from college he engaged in journalism for several years, leaving this course to accept an appointment as teacher in the Rochester Free Academy, his Alma Mater. Since that time Mr. Miller has been in continuous service in the Free Academy and its successors in name—the Rochester High School, the West Side Annex and finally, the West High School. At the close of June, 1908, Mr. Miller can celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his connection with the High Schools of Rochester. During this quarter of a century he has shown a great amount of interest in all the student activities, endearing himself to the heart of every alumnus who has come in touch with him, and helping to raise for the school the high standard in all things that it now bears. What more fitting than that we, the class which started in high school under him, should show our appreciation of his great interest in all things pertaining to us, by this small tribute?

Class Poem

Past, present, future—trinity of time,
You bring life, opportunity and death
To man, and grant him with his earliest breath
The power to make you sordid or sublime.

Perspective lends unto our backward gaze
A broader vision and a sight more true,
And so today we give the past its due,
And memory her grateful tribute pays.

We see how as the weeks went rolling by
Now slowly, and now swiftly in their flight,
The light of knowledge rose upon our sight
As Phoebus' chariot mounts the eastern sky.

We've learned some lessons not contained in books,
And study has not quite engrossed the mind,
Each one some recreation seemed to find,
And each upon his course with pleasure looks.

But now we leave our High School life behind:
The pleasure, pain, and every friendship dear,
Those ties that stronger grew from year to year;
And boldly start our work in life to find.

May each with cheerful heart and steadfast thought
This object have: to find the true and right,
And finding it to serve it with his might;
Then may he view with joy what he has wrought.

Let not our High School life forgotten be,
But let our memory hold this truth we've learned:
That what is best worth while is hardest earned;
That only knowledge makes us truly free.

One chapter's closed; we leave these well-loved halls;
We take the tiller in our grasp and steer
Out on life's stormy sea. Let us not fear,
But ever lay our course where duty calls.

H. E. B.

Alma Mater

Sweet be thy memory, High School of ours,
Fair be thy destiny, fadeless thy flowers.
Hearts that have loved thee have won in life's fight,
Names that we honor thy standard holds bright.

Our Alma Mater dear, to thee we sing,
May all thy future years new honors bring,
May friends thy banners raise, thy foes grow less,
All love and praise to our old R. H. S.

West High Alma Mater

Proudly waves old West High's emblem, black and orange fair,
Floats triumphant in the breezes, no dishonor there.
Student days have fondest memories, comrades here we stand,
As our troth to Alma Mater pledge we hand in hand.

From thy halls, dear Alma Mater, we at length must part,
But thy memory shall not perish from one student's heart;
Far away on life's broad highway, all shall fortune try,
Still our loving hearts shall cherish thoughts of thee, West High.

THE FACULTY

"Train No. 230, bound for West High, trying to leave the Four Corners.

230 is the number of the finest car that goes.

You ask the student who is late, he'll tell you, for he knows.

Each morning it gets here on time (at least that's what they say),

And many a lecture dire has been escaped in just this way.

A student rushes in just late, the teacher looks severe.

The student calmly smiles and says, "230 brought me here!"

Senior Class Song

Tune: Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Four years, dear Alma Mater, we have spent within thy walls,
In a parting song our voices now resound throughout thy halls,
We leave thy well-loved shelter to proceed where duty calls—
The parting day has come.

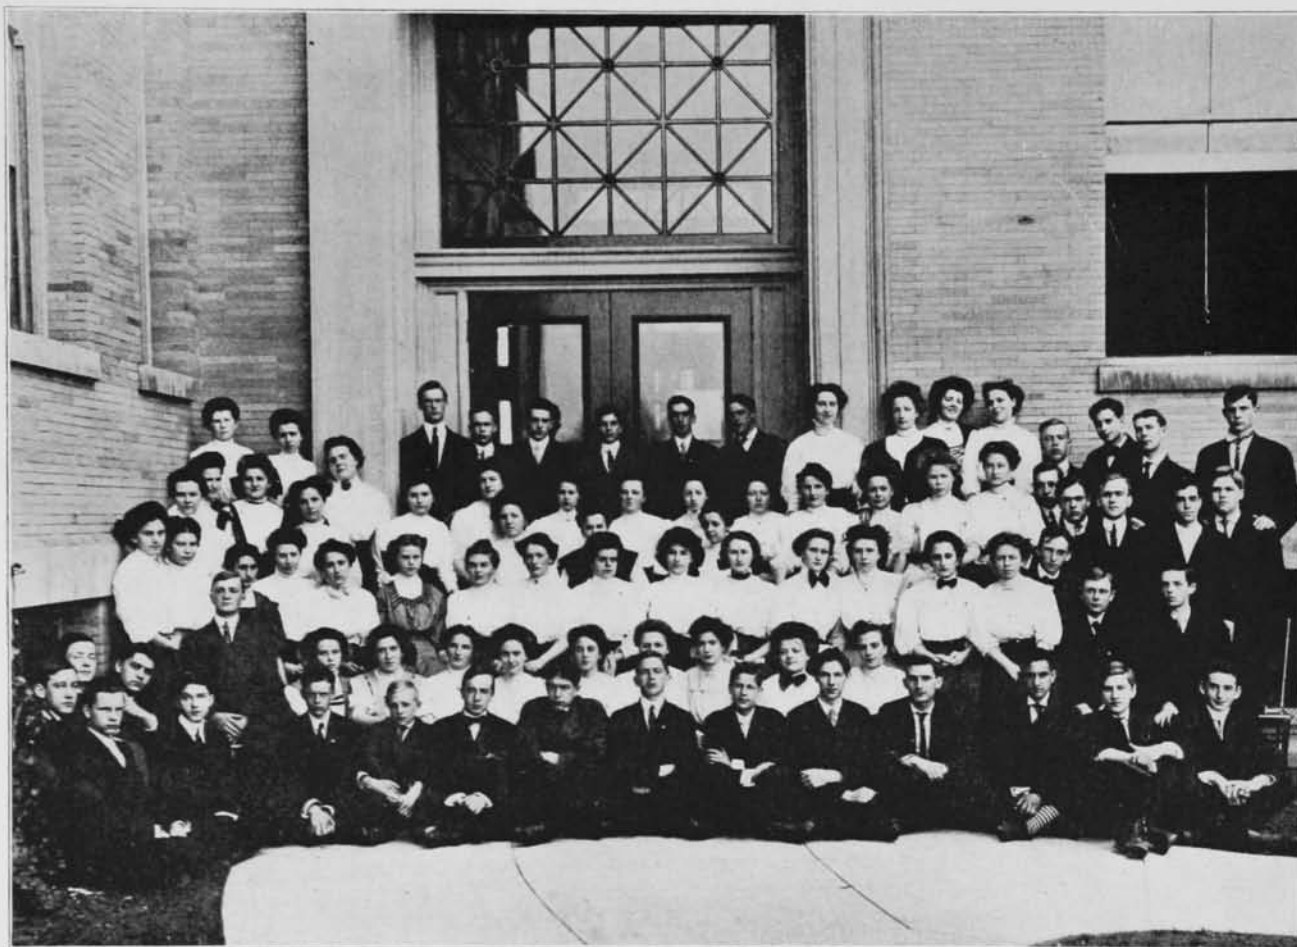

Chorus: Farewell to thee, our own West High School,
Farewell to thee, our own West High School,
Farewell to thee, our own West High School,
The parting day has come.

The lessons that we here have learned have helped to shape our life,
We'll be stronger and more valiant when temptation 'round is rife,
We thank thee for the knowledge which will aid us in the strife
Since the parting day has come.—Cho.

Where'er we go, within our hearts, thy memory shall remain,
And the gladness of our school days will o'erbalance all the pain;
We are glad when we consider that our work was not in vain,
Now the parting day has come.—Cho.

SENIOR ANNUAL BOARD

Class History

If anyone had been near the old High School on Fitzhugh Street one bright sunny morning of September, 1904, he would have noticed a class of exceptionally bright faces come up the walk and enter the school. Here, for the first half of the year, we were all alone, and when the next freshman class arrived we were well acquainted with the school and her customs and we could laugh at their mistakes. At the old school we spent many happy days, and it was not without regret that we separated, half going to the East High School and half to the West; but we soon forgot this in the beauties of the West High School with such a fine man as Mr. Weet as principal.

During the second year we all applied ourselves diligently to our studies. Yet even then we were a help in athletics with Mr. Ball and Mr. Smith in football, Mr. Sterling in basketball and Mr. Uderitz in track.

Then came the third year. We were the first class ever to give an informal "Prom," and in proof that it was a success I will say that it has been followed by both the Junior and Senior classes. It certainly was a great success, and everyone there spent an enjoyable evening, much more so than if it had been formal, as it enabled all the class to go. Next came the Junior Farce. "The Last Rehearsal" was without doubt the best ever given, and one that coming years will have to work hard to surpass. It was successful from the financial standpoint as well as the dramatic. Another custom instituted by us was that of having a Junior OCCIDENT, which the Junior Class this year followed, and it is probable that the succeeding classes will do the same. Let us hope so. It is a good custom, and relieves the editors of the anxiety and worry for one month. Also during our third year many famous athletes were brought to light by means of the interclass contests in which we carried off the honors in basketball, track, hockey, baseball, and we also had a debating team which was more proficient in arguing than those of other classes.

By the fourth year we had increased in wisdom and stature, and were well able to undertake the duties of a Senior. One of the duties is to support the different athletic activities, and we surely did our share. In football there were Mr. Uderitz, Mr. Ball, Mr. Smith, Mr. Long, Mr. Lee and Mr. Lehn. They say cheering wins one-quarter of the game and actual playing the other three-quarters, so we must have helped many a game to be won, as the cheer leaders were both from our number, Mr. Nixon and Mr. Dorkey. Then in basketball Mr. Sterling and Mr. Uderitz, and in track, the captain, Mr. Long, who was the "saving grace" in so many meets, were of our number. Of managers we had many, and they proved themselves very efficient. Mr. Sterling, the treasurer of the school, so handled the money that we not only paid the debt of the preceding year and the new ones which were incurred, but made one thousand one hundred dollars for the Athletic Field Fund. In the musical clubs we were so well represented that I cannot enumerate all. The Senior play, "The Lady of Lyons," exceeded our highest expectations, and everyone played his or her role well. Our Senior dance has not yet taken place, but we feel sure it will be a fitting end to the social functions of the year.

Now, as we are completing our four years, which have passed only too quickly, it is with a sigh and yet a smile. A sigh because we have spent so many happy and profitable hours under the protection and guidance of the West High School and a smile because we long to do greater deeds, so that we will be deserving of such an Alma Mater.

May the classes to come be as fond and proud of her as we are and always shall be, and may they always seek to elevate her standard.

ADA C. CARSON,
Historian.

SENIOR PLAY

Owed to Virgil

Virgil thou art the bane of youthful minds,
Thy works do tax the student's patience sore,
And press upon his spirits more and more.
They are by far the hardest of all kinds.
In them no saving grace the student finds,
As seeking for the gold within the ore
He cons the hateful lessons o'er and o'er.
He in despair of finding, soon resigns.
Thy cases fit the meter, not the rule ;
Thy fancy soars in similes sublime.
From dactyl to spondee thy foot doth change ;
Thy moods can ne'er be learned in any school ;
Thy ancient tale will puzzle to all time,
And will the minds of studious ones derange.

Editorial

It is now time for the present OCCIDENT staff to retire and give place to others. As we look back over this one year of the OCCIDENT's life, with its successes and failures, the pleasure of the work looms large, and the disappointment and trouble seem to fade. For on the whole the work has been a pleasure. There are many problems which confront the staff of a high school paper. For instance, you may think carefully and evolve a beautiful plan for improving your paper, and just when you see where its going to be a great success you suddenly realize that inasmuch as the number of subscribers never can increase materially, your painfully built plan vanishes. Your ambition is limited on all sides, and thus it is that you are likely to feel sometimes that your paper is a hum-drum affair after all. But the "saving grace" about the whole thing is the interest of the student body in the paper. And in that respect at least the OCCIDENT has always prospered. We heartily wish all who come after us the greatest success.

The year just past has witnessed what is probably the greatest event in the history of West High School, getting an Athletic Field. The campaign is still fresh in the minds of all of us—the work of it and the success of it. This is a thing almost unique among high schools, and a thing which a great many believed it impossible for us to do. The result proved not only our own spirit, but also the spirit of the community at large. We are justly proud of it. Let us hope that West High will always handle all her problems in this same way, and meet with the same success.

In a very short time the class of June nineteen hundred and eight will be but a memory. Its members will become separated; some will go on to higher institutions of learning, others, and probably the majority, will go out into that greatest of all schools—the world. May they prosper, and never do aught to bring dishonor to their Alma Mater.

In our four years' course we have learned some of the lessons of life,—lessons which we shall remember after those learned from books have been forgotten. Some have learned more than others, but all are nearer that goal of general knowledge for which each should strive. From our position at the end of the course we see things in a truer light than has before been possible. We have the advantage of perspective, and we are in a better position to judge the wisdom or foolishness of our past actions.

At graduation it is customary to leave a parting word for those who remain. Advice might be given upon the various phases of school life, but it would be both tedious and unprofitable. Tedious, because lengthy; unprofitable, because the views set forth would be tinged with personal opinion. But a few words of general advice can be left by the seniors as a parting legacy; and what words of ours can so well express the sentiment as those of the immortal Bard?

"This above all: to thine own self be true,

"And it must follow, as the night the day,

"Thou canst not then be false to any man."

Let us all, those who are graduated, as well as those who remain, be true to ourselves, our best selves. So shall we have a past upon which we may look back without shame, and a future to which we may look forward without fear.

Two Men in a Boat

Early one morning along the middle part of last summer a little launch sailed down the Connecticut River, out around the Breakwater across Long Island Sound. In it were two men.

One of the men was short, fat and well dressed. The little hair he had was carefully smoothed down. He had altogether the appearance of one who lives too well for his own good. The other was tall and strong looking. Old clothes, a tanned face and three or four days' growth of grey beard gave him rather a shaggy appearance. These two were going fishing.

Beside these there was a dog. Needless to say he was not going fishing.

When they neared the Island they dropped anchor and began operations; that is they put out lines and sat back and smoked and lied to each other about the fish they had caught before. Then both went to sleep.

The poor dog wondered why on earth men wanted to come away out there to sleep when they might just as well have slept on their own porches and not put him out. Then he went to sleep. He was a philosopher.

In the middle of the afternoon the Grey Man woke, and just as soon as possible woke the Fat Man. He did not like to see any one sleep longer than he could.

They pulled up the lines and found that between them they had one sun-fish. Of course they were disappointed. They had expected to live on fish for a week after this trip. They could not afford to stay there any longer so they made up a lie to tell the folk at home, and started out.

And the dog slept on.

As between them they only had about three packs and a half of tobacco they decided to stop at Greenport, on the Island, and lay in a new supply. This extra trip used up considerable of their diminishing supply of gasoline; but they did not realize this.

The little boat had slowly chugged away about seven of the fifteen miles home when the engine gasped, grunted and then stopped. The Grey Man, with the necessary amount of gas engine language, cranked and hammered and cranked again. The Fat Man and the dog looked on. It always puts one in good humor to have any one else watch him crank a gas engine, and then when the Grey Man found that his trouble was lack of gasoline and could not be remedied he was angry, to say the least.

"Why did you want me to stop at Greenport any way. You might have known we would need that gasoline to get home on," he fairly shouted at the Fat Man.

"It ain't my fault. What did you ever bring me to such a forsaken hole as this for?" the other answered.

They were both trying to lay the blame on the other.

The dog looked on. He wished he was home because he had a big bone buried back of the barn and he was hungry.

After a while the men stopped arguing to drag out a pair of oars—long, heavy ones they were—and start to row, one man at an oar. They stopped rowing occasionally to call each other a few things previously omitted.

As the progress they made was hardly perceptible the Fat Man became discouraged and stopped. "I am not going to row any more. It hurts my hands," he said.

"I suppose you think I'll row you ashore. Well I won't." And the Grey Man sat down with a grunt in the opposite end of the boat. There the two sat glaring at each other until it became necessary to get something to eat.

The meal consisted simply of hard tack, corned beef and water, but each was so afraid that the other would eat more than he did that between them they finished all the eatables aboard.

After supper, as neither would talk, they went to sleep. So did the dog, but he went hungry, for the men were too busy with themselves to think about him.

When they awoke the Fat Man spent the time usually used in making his toilet in praying for breakfast. It pleased the Grey Man to see the other man feeling that way and he showed it by laughing at him.

During the night they had drifted to the eastern end of the Sound. They were nearing a spot where the tide rushes with terrific force between an island and a rock out to the open sea. On the rock was a lighthouse. The Grey Man decided that if they rowed hard enough they could pull the boat out of the current and land on the island. So once more the oars were brought out.

Their rowing differed as the men differed. The Grey Man rowed with a long steady stroke. The Fat Man had a little short stroke and every third time he pulled he stopped and spit on his hands.

It was just these third strokes so missed that made them speed by the island twenty feet from the shore.

During this whole operation the dog was barking his very loudest. He got so excited watching the men work, you know.

They were swept on for some distance before they realized that they had missed. Then the Grey Man sat himself down heavily in the stern seat and said things that would not look well in print. The Fat Man did not mind what he was called, though. He was too far gone. Once in a while he would call out to the open water around for help. In between times he cried.

And the dog, still hungry, looked on.

Just at this time the whole aspect of their affairs changed, for out from the side of the light house came a little boat headed for them.

Both men jumped up, shook hands, shouted.

"I did it," the Fat Man said, "did it when I hollered for help."

"No; I did it," the Grey Man said, "caused I waved when we came by the house. He saw my signal and now he is coming out to get us."

"You wait and ask the man if he did not hear me call."

So they waited until the man got close by and asked whether he had seen the Grey Man wave or heard the Fat Man call. "Neither," he answered, "I heard the dog bark."

To this day, when the light house keeper is not near, on telling of this incident the Grey Man says they were saved from death because the light house keeper saw him signal, the Fat Man tells it his way, but the dog knows the truth.

ATHLETICS

The Year's Athletics

Another milestone in the history of our school has just been passed, and the athletic victories and defeats of the year are now history. One by one the different branches have absorbed our interest during their season; the calling for candidates; the work in practice and then the real work of the season is over with all of them, and now we may look back in contemplation.

First and foremost, both in importance and interest, comes football. West High football has come to be a term to conjure with; we speak of it in the same appreciative, careful way we would speak of a delicate or intricate piece of machinery. Whether this fame which has come to us is a benefit or a detriment remains a question. Certainly it is a spur to the team to do its best, but certain also it is that when a break comes, as one is sure to come in time, this will be the cause of more unfavorable comment than anything else possibly could be. And this is simply because people expect too much. The attitude of the newspapers last season was due to the same cause. But after the success our football teams have had this "bubble reputation" is something that was bound to come. And we are proud of it; so perhaps the only thing to do is simply to do our best to maintain it as long as possible, and bear with patience whatever may come as the result of it.

There are simply two regrets of last season: one, the game at Binghamton, the other that we did not win the East High game. As to the first all we can say is that we feel that our team was in the right and did not get a "square deal"; as to the latter let us be sportsmen enough to say that we met our match. As coach of the team H. Acton Langslow was wonderfully efficient. The confidence inspired by Lang's coaching and backing was a very potent factor in the success of the team. Bobbie Bernhard made a good captain, and was in the game all the time. As manager, Wheeler Allen had marked success, and turned over a tidy sum at the end of the season. In summing up, let us say that West High has good reason to be proud of her last season's team.

Basketball was about an even break. We won and lost alternately, and sad to relate we lost the East High game. However, we have the knowledge that the team worked hard and conscientiously all season, and that counts for much. We also realize that there were set-backs that were hard to overcome and that the team did, to a great extent, overcome them. So, on the whole, although from the point of view of actual results the season was perhaps not successful, still in consideration of all the facts the team deserved our hearty support.

Our girls' basketball team deserves our highest praise. For a second time they have won the championship of the city, defeating the University girls' team, the East High team, the Hakes School team and also other teams in the city. There is no team of which we are more justly proud of than our girls' basketball team.

Let us consider hockey next. Our hockey season was a complete success, our team winning the cup and coming within an ace of the city championship. Hockey is one branch of athletics which has never flourished at West High; indeed, nowhere in the city has it received the attention that it does elsewhere. But there was a decided gain in interest this last season, and we hope that with the fine record of our team last season before them our future hockey teams may also be cup winners.

In consideration of the material to start with and various other circumstances, our track team was perhaps the most successful team which represented our school during the past year. There was practically no old material to start with, but a certain small group of fellows stuck to the work during the season, and won an easy second at the 'Varsity meet and also placed in the Cornell meet, both times winning over East High. This shows what can be done by consistent work. May West High teams always have this same spirit!

At the time of going to press we are just starting our baseball season, and a few words in regard to this activity would not be amiss. Undeniably baseball has been unsatisfactory. We do not need to go into the causes here save only one: that is the interest shown in baseball. Baseball is our national sport; everyone can play it fairly well at least. It is much more generally played than football, yet here at West High not near the number of candidates turn out for baseball that do for football. Although few turn out for the team everyone is ready to talk about it if it loses. Students, this is one of our activities, and we want to win in this as much as in any other. Of course, what we say here cannot be applied this year, but let us try to remember it in the future. West High will never have a winning team until more try out for the team, and until we cast off our attitude of criticism and adopt the one of sympathy and support.

In summing up the year's athletics we find that we have had a very successful year. We have not won in everything, nor can we or other schools expect to. But we have had good sport and clean sport and good spirit at all times, and that more than results constitutes success, although we are by no means afraid to examine our results. We feel that our reputation in athletics has had material advance in the past year.

When you consider West High's reputation throughout the State, and then consider how long West High as an institution has existed, you can appreciate what her teams have done. Let us all do everything in our power to maintain and increase this reputation; to care for this charge which has been handed down to us. And whether we win or whether we lose let West High stand first of all for what she has thus far—clean, good sport.

Assembly

One of the bright features of this year of good things has been the excellent list of speakers to whom we have had the pleasure of listening in Assembly. The value of a good speaker in an educational way is greater than we usually realize, but we can readily see that we might never have heard many of the things which have been spoken from the platform in any other way. We have had the pleasure of listening to Ben Greet, perhaps the foremost student of Shakespeare's plays, and we will always have a clearer idea of the conditions under which the drama was produced in Shakespeare's time, and of some of the forces which produced the Elizabethan drama.

Personal reminiscences of Whittier also helped us to see the poet as he was, and to give us a clearer insight into the meaning of his poems.

We have had talks on conditions in the Congo Free State, and the life of the Southern mountaineer, and many other interesting topics.

Space will not permit mention of all the interesting subjects upon which speeches have been given, but a list of some of our speakers may give some idea of the value of what we have heard. Among them have been: Ben Greet, of the celebrated company of English actors of that name; Dr. Gannett, Dr. Paul Moore Strayer, Mr. David Porter, Mr. O. F. Williams, former consul-general at Singapore; Mr. Bennett of our own faculty, Mr. Joseph Clark, Professor Dodge and Mr. Myron T. Bly.

Surely we are grateful to those to whom we owe the pleasure of these Assemblies, and we are glad to express our appreciation in this way.

The Year's Dramatics

Starting with comedy pure and simple, including a patriotic play and a faculty play, and ending with a strong play bordering on the melodramatic, the year's dramatic offerings at West High have been sufficiently varied to suit all tastes. And they have all been well done. No really weak performance has occurred to mar the year's work, and that is doing well for a high school, though of course we never expect anything else at West High.

The January class of nineteen eight opened the season with their Senior Play, "The Private Secretary," by Charles Hawtrey. From start to finish the audience was amused, and they were not slow to show it. The Rev. Mr. Spalding, with his "goloshes" and umbrella, not to mention numerous other things, will not soon be forgotten, and the stormy old Mr. Cattermole, with his appreciation of "wild oats," is recalled with at least a smile. The play aimed to amuse and it accomplished its purpose.

Next the Juniors held the stage, and told in word and act a story of love and war during the Revolution. "The Fate of a Spy" pleased more especially on account of its appropriateness to the season, being held on the eve of Washington's birthday. The minuet at the end of the play was interesting on account of its novelty to the audience, as well as on account of the fact that it was a very pretty affair.

The faculty was the next attraction of the year, and proved to be a great success. The idea of our august instructors being subject to discipline, and not above getting into mischief for an evening, seemed to tickle the students, and they applauded every time they had an opportunity. The fact that the hall was filled to its utmost in spite of the unpropitiousness of the elements, shows the interest which the performance aroused. A combination of rain, thunder and lightning was not enough to dampen the ardor of the admirers of the faculty. It was a successful performance in every way, and the announcement that our athletic field was an assured fact sent every one home happy.

And now we come to our own Senior Play. We took a play that required acting, with the idea that it was better to work up than to give a common production requiring little effort. It was a hard play to prepare, but it paid. The cast had the satisfaction of knowing that they had a worthy field for their efforts, and they spared no pains to make it a success. How well the seniors played "The Lady of Lyons," we leave for the students to judge. It would ill become us to praise our own class.

After due credit has been given the actors, there is still the real cause of success to seek, and that cause is Mrs. Ellis. Her untiring efforts and unflagging interest did much to make our dramatic season what it was, and we owe her a most hearty vote of thanks. For the electrical effects of the year, especially prominent in the Junior production, we are indebted to Herbert Allen, who has done much to get our stage lighting where it is.

Class Room and Corridor

When the SENIOR ANNUAL is spoken of it brings to mind the close of the school term. Looking ahead a little further, we think of vacation—a very long vacation, perhaps, for some of the Senior Class who are not planning to enter College in the fall, a shorter one for those who are. There are probably not two persons who look upon this word in the same way. For some vacation holds the literal meaning—rest; but what a far different interpretation it has for others. Yet are not the latter the happier, to think of something ahead to work and strive for?

Three very profitable years have been spent in the West High School, and it is our sincere wish that the future ones may be just as successful. Especially do we, who have been writing incognito, wish the very best of success to the two who shall have charge of "Class Room and Corridor" another year. At the present rate of progress it would almost seem that much midnight oil would be burned in merely thinking of things to criticise. The first year it was not so difficult, nor perhaps the second or third, but now things are down to a pretty fine point, and it may be necessary to dispense with this section of the paper. Almost everything that could be thought of has been written about the classes—class standings and recitations for example; and as for the Corridors, they are about as they have been, and, as far as can be seen, always will be. The benches are generally occupied, but this has been discussed elsewhere. So we feel assured that in due time a new name will have to be substituted for the present "Class Room and Corridor."

LOIS G. CREELMAN.

How easy it is to criticise the actions of others. They seem to be made for criticism, and yet how much more leniently we regard our own deeds. "That," as Kipling says, "is another matter."

The writers of Class Room and Corridor have a good opportunity to find fault, for they are supposed to comment on the life of the school, and if possible to suggest improvements. It is so much easier to discover faults and censure them than to see good actions and praise them that a writer in this department is in danger of becoming a chronic grumbler if he be not constantly on his guard. Such a one is a public nuisance, and ought to be suppressed, but there is another side to the question. It is possible that a thing may appear in a clearer light when down in black and white, and thus a person may be led to "see the error of his ways" by a so-called "kick". If that occurs once during the year it is worth the work necessary to keep Class Room and Corridor going.

But if each one would look at his own acts with as critical an eye as he turns upon the shortcomings of others there would be no occasion for unfavorable criticism in this department. Why can't each one of us start a little Class Room and Corridor of his own, and watch his own acts with as vigilant an eye as was ever used in getting material for the department of that name in our school paper? It would do us a great deal of good.

HORACE E. BARNES.

Exchanges

During the past year the exchange editor has had the pleasure of seeing the list grow from nearly fifty to eighty; about three hundred and twenty issues have been received in all. This reflects great credit especially upon the upper members of the staff, for by their good work is the OCCIDENT made such as is desired by other schools. Criticisms of it have appeared in various papers from time to time, the majority praise, some find a fault, but all have been withheld from print for the reason that we do not wish to appear to have braggadocio. To be sure he who knows and knows not that he knows is a fool, but he who knows and continually reminds us of that fact is tiresome, hence our modesty. You understand that the reason for our frankness at present is because this issue does not exchange with other schools. On that account we may speak freely, and students, the exchange editor wishes to say to you that of all the high school papers he has seen you have one of the most creditable. Following are a few comments from various cities:

FROM HARRISBURG, PA.:

There are so many equally noteworthy papers now in the field for highest honors that we, fearing the fate of Paris, never say, concerning an exchange, that it is the "best" we receive, but that it is one of the "best." By the latter term do we measure the OCCIDENT hailing from West High School, Rochester, N. Y. We do not desire to panegyryze any paper too highly, but every number of the OCCIDENT is an achievement, an eternal memorial to the proficiency of its present staff. We can say no more; the paper from Rochester speaks for itself.

FROM NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.:

The OCCIDENT takes the lead as a representative high school paper. But though the editors seem to have included nearly every topic of interest to a school, we believe that the addition of original humor would improve the paper even further.

FROM FULTON, N. Y.:

The Calendar and OCCIDENT are fine specimens of the perfection that all high school papers may attain.

Is there not a slight lesson from this department that we may all take seriously to ourselves? For as one paper improves from another, may not one man from another? Then as one paper gives friendly suggestions to another, may not one man to another? And as one paper receives unfair scourging from another, must not one man from another? But as some papers succeed and others fail will not some men succeed and others fail?

Commencement Engraving

SCRANTOM, WETMORE & CO. invite your consideration of their increased facilities for the production of the very finest effects in engraved commencement stationery. Their completely equipped shop for engraving on steel and copper and for plate printing, die-stamping and illuminating--their staff of artists and expert engravers--and their more than twenty years of experience in operating their own shop--are responsible for a quality of work not inferior to the best products of engraving plants in the larger cities. This exclusive shop produces work of the highest quality only. Yet their prices for first-class work are low in comparison with prices which are usually quoted for inferior or mediocre work. The authority of a house of their standing, on questions of taste, style and correct form, is one of the important features of their service.

Attention is directed also to the lines of engraved and specially fine printed stationery for social and business use.

Vacation Sports

For sport and recreation soon to be experienced, after the work of the school year is finished, every staple and novel device in the way of athletic goods and equipment is displayed in our Athletic Goods Department.

"OLD TOWN" CANOES, beautiful models bearing the trade-mark of the famous makers.

WM. MILLS & SONS' FISHING TACKLE, and all the newest and best things for fishermen.

FOR GOLFERS—MacGregor Clubs and a fine assortment of select quality Caddie Bags.

FOR TENNIS PLAYERS—Racquets, nets, balls, etc., in wide variety of styles and prices.

DIABOLO—Be sure to take a genuine imported outfit with you on your vacation.

FOR LIGHT SUMMER READING—Visit our Book Department, where all the best and latest fiction is to be found.

The Rochester Business Institute

attracts an increasing number of high school graduates every year, the number of such students in attendance during '07-'08 being nearly double that of any previous year.

The courses of study in the commercial, shorthand and teachers' training departments are so arranged that it is possible to enter them any month in the year and carry on the work continuously until completion. :- :- :-

The groups of subjects in each of these courses can be taken up in a compact and consecutive way that conduces to the highest efficiency. :- :- :- :- :- :-

2486 requests for the graduates of this school to accept responsible positions during the two years, ending December 31, 1907, prove that the forty-five years of effort to build up a commercial school of the highest grade in Rochester have been effective. :- :- :- :- :- :-

The school prospectus gives particulars regarding the courses, and the managers are always glad to answer questions.
