ALMA MATER

Proudly waves old West High's emblem,
Black and Orange fair,
Floats triumphant in the breezes,
No dishonor there.

Student days have fondest memories;
Comrades here we stand,
As our troth to Alma Mater
Pledge we hand in hand.

From thy halls, dear Alma Mater,
We at length must part,
But thy mem'ry shall not perish
From one student's heart.

Far away on life's broad highway,
All shall fortune try,
Still our loving hearts shall cherish
Thoughts of thee, West High.

CLASS HISTORY

SENIORS: How impossible it seems that such a title would sometime be ours, on that day in January, 1920 when we made our appearance in West High. We were no exception to the semi-annual force of youngsters who appeared, but in a short time we became very much at home, learning to control our blushes at the statues, and that the elevator was simply a celebrated myth.

The organization of our class and election of officers whirled us into the social life of the school. The Freshman Reception was held, to which we conducted our parents and proved ourselves worthy of them and of West High, by acting quite as circumstances demanded. Soon after a Get-Acquainted Party was carried across successfully, as the girls took advantage of it being leap year and invited the very bashful masculine members of the class.

The Sophomore Year brought a full measure of sophistication to us and also a large addition to our class, namely Jefferson Junior High students. These were the first students from this school to enter West High. A second Get-Acquainted Party proved most successful as everyone co-operated to welcome the new members. On St. Patrick's Day our first real party was held, to which came both the boys and girls. Even at this early age, our budding dramatic genius was displayed in the play presented. The memory of how the hero, disguised as a lady went to a party and the result, made that party famous. A picnic at South Park was a "peppy" affair and every one consumed innumerable "Hot Dawgs". The crowning event of the year was a Halloween Party. A large number turned out and an evening of fun sent everyone home happy.

All too soon, we found ourselves proudly claiming the title "Juniors". Our Spring Frolic full of the exuberance of that season and our happy spirits, started things off with a bang. A farewell picnic for Mr. La Bounty, our beloved advisor who was to journey near but yet so far to Madison, was given at South Park.

Les Adieux

Our originality of idea asserted itself, and a Country Fair on Hallowe'en resulted. A mysterious "lady" appeared who kept "her" identity unknown all evening, and won the prize. A circus parade was a big feature in the entertainment, and the Elephant Jumbo performed unique stunts.

However, in all our good times we did not forget the school and so our class and that of June, '24 presented a most difficult play "The Copperhead" Exceptional acting was done by the characters in this touching play and its clever reproduction was certainly a credit to West High School. Who can forget the Junior and Senior dances, held at our most friendly neighbor school, Madison Junior? Many came to enjoy an evening of dancing in the gym, which was disguised to represent a veritable rainbow. The Senior Play was somewhat different from the usual, as two short light plays were given in place of one. "Two Crooks and a Lady", gave everyone a delicious thrilly feeling and "Spreading the News" an Irish Play was filled with the wit and humor, characteristic of that celebrated race.

January '24 sent many of her members to shine in the athletic world. "Bump" Howard in basketball that most beloved of games, "Chuck" Shoemaker in baseball—and as for other popular activities such as radio—well, everyone knows Gilbert Hathaway is the Radio Club.

But I cannot relate any more of the dazzling history of this super-class, or my readers will find little time to read the rest of this book.

Thus we reach the end. Our class bids good-bye to dear old West High as each member leaves to follow one of the many paths leading to further fame and fortune. Hail to our Alma Mater! May her untarnished memory always live with us and always spur us on to accomplish great things in future days.

PROPHECY

IT was one morning in June, 1930, when I was attracted to the scene of the accident. A beautiful sedan had collided with a street car! I rushed to the cause of the excitement, just in time to see a tall young man emerge from the wreck, seemingly unhurt, and cool as a cucumber. I gasped in surprise, for who was it but Harold Bonner! He, I had heard, had become a millionaire, by manufacturing a non-leakable fork, with which such food as soup, peas, and spaghetti could be eaten daintily and without embarrassment. The ambulance arrived and the occupants were rushing over to him when they stopped in surprise. Leora Post and Elizabeth O'Connor, the nurses, clutched each other excitedly, while Dr. Walter Mayer grasped him by the hand. John Wakeman proved to be the motorman of the street car. A traffic officer was about to give vent to his feelings, when we recognized him with delightful shouts; it was Willis Kurtz! As is the custom of re-united friends, we began to exchange gossip about our old classmates. I learned that Francis Swift and Charles Lerch had invented a pocket-size typewriter, which was being demonstrated by Dorothy Zwack and Dorothy Gaffney. Alice Smith and Paul VanKerkhove had received medals for swimming Lake Ontario. Leora said it was rumored that Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm had succumbed to the charms of Marjorie Jacques, who was a dashing young widow. Willis reported that Addison Kinney and Arven Matteson had cut off their hair and Marion Moreau, Doris Rodenbush and Mary Garley were using it for the manufacture of wigs for the bald inmates of the Old Ladies' Home. I was told that Grace Groff and Florence Webb had invented a purple hair dye, which was very popular with the society women. A sudden thought of my waiting kindergarten class necessitated a hasty departure.

As I entered the school room door, my co-worker, Margaret Beisheim, was reading the class one of the famous "Flossie Frizzle Stories" written by Marion Colton. When school was over, I related my adventures to Peg and we curiously wondered about the fate of the rest of old Jan. '24. While putting the room in order, I picked up one of the bubble pipes the children had used and I lazily blew a large shining bubble. My mood was such on this dreamy day, that I was not surprised when figures began to appear in the depths of the bubble. Peg and I watched, fascinated, as the scene grew clear. A large tent with people crowding around it appeared. At the ticket stand was Frank Haugh, exercising his powerful lungs by howling, "Tickets for the Chautauqua!" Nearby stood a hot dog stand, in charge of Ross Everson. The interior of the tent was now disclosed, showing William Cromwell giving a fiery oration on "Steam is Water, Gone Crazy with the Heat." The next number was a chorus of beautiful girls doing a Russian Ballet dance. On closer observation, we saw that they were our old friends, Dorothy Raynor, Josephine Fisher, Dorothy Davis, Arline Ansberger and Evelyn Brooks. The climax of the dance was reached, as the only male member of the ballet, whirled one of the girls around by the hair. I gasped when I recognized him as Charles Shoemaker! Next came the performing goldfish, which had been expertly trained to walk on their tails by Betty Weir and Margaret Tobey. The balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet" was the last number. As the beautiful Juliet appeared on the balcony, we saw it was Katherine Gehrke, and it was no surprise at all to find that Romeo was Horace Howard.

Suddenly the bubble burst! With frantic haste, we blew a second one, and were overjoyed to see other scenes appear. This was a barber shop, run by Carlton Foster, who enjoyed his task of bobbing young ladies' hair. His main source of advertisement was George Munroe, who stood in the doorway and attracted the girls to the inside. A large store painted a gaudy purple came next to our view. The sign over the door explained that it was the 6 & 11 cent store owned by Fred Traugott and Carl Wohlgemuth. Inside was Gerald Walker, lustily advertising the merits of stewed bricks with a special mud sauce; all for 11c. "Sherman's Snappy Suspenders and Sock Supporters," designed by Marion Sherman, were displayed. At the other end of the aisle, Edna Suarez was demonstrating a product manufactured by Beatrice Knapp called "Knapp's Knutritious Knoodles." Nearby was a counter surrounded by would-be beauties, who bought extensively of Sarah Wilkinson's artificial eye-winkers, and who went home laden with "Wilkinson's Winsome Winkers for Wily Wimmen." For 11c a person could buy one of Chauncy Martin's inventions, an alarm clock which would stop ringing if sworn at.

In the next bubble, we saw a large shadowy church. The whole congregation was composed of young ladies, who hung on the very words of the minister and sat there looking at him adoringly. It was Donald Dyer! At the organ sat Charlotte Coolbaugh. In the quartette were Lester DeMay, Winifred Curtiss Cecil Names and Richard Jones.

The next bubble showed us an interesting scene. A group of fur-clad figures, plowing through the crunching snow. Behold! They were our old schoolmates. Grace MacFarland, the organizer of the Arctic expedition, was at the head of the procession. Next came Ruth Farnam and Louise Chase, carrying a huge trunk full of Palm Beach suits, which they were going to pass out to the Eskimos. Alice McMahon and Gladys Moser, whose "Magical Multicolored Marbles" were famous, had come to teach the Eskimos the thrilling game of marbles, which had taken the place of baseball as America's national sport. George Baptist and Robert Salter were hoping to sell their Freckle Remover to the inhabitants of the North Pole. Mary Leigh had come to marry her fiancee, a wealthy Eskimo and the inventor of Eskimo pies. Last of all came Newton Morgan, an automobile salesman, who had a record of selling fourteen Fords a minute. The Eskimos were very fond of him, although his hot line had melted two icebergs.

When we had blown another bubble, we saw the beach of a fashionable summer resort. Two handsome life savers were strutting up and down the hot sands. They were so tanned that it was some time before we recognized them as Alfred Wheeler and George Fallesen. Then came a cry for help and as the Life Savers wearily launched their boat, one of them remarked, "That's Bernice McCurdy! This is the twenty-second time today that she's called for help." Peg and I gasped so strenuously at this remark that we burst the bubble.

Then Peg grabbed the pipe and blew a bubble, in which we saw a very familiar scene. The assembly hall of old West High! As the grave, severe principal came forward, we recognized William Lutz. Then we saw some of the faculty sitting among the students. Walter Schmidt was head of the English department, and Grace Hemenway and Margaret Germandt were teaching a subject more complex than trigonometry. There sat Constance Marsden and Ruth Graves, teachers of a much-needed course in etiquette. Hazel Talbot was said to be a marvelous Latin teacher, and taught the whole four year's course in one year. In the gymnasium we saw Alexenia Derham, the gym teacher, punching some of the students in her attempt to make them stand correctly. We learned that Jacob DeWeerd and Howard Galvin, undertakers, employed William Lauterbach and Wallace Jordan to bury students blown up in Joyce Bennetts' chemistry class. Wallace Hagaman was hired to scrape the gum off the desks and tables, while William Little operated the elevator. Angelina Montuori ran the lunch room which was noted for its delicious hash. Margaret Walter was conducting a bus line, which was a great benefit to West High. The bus ran from the Genesee car stop directly to the home room, thus saving many students from becoming knock-kneed by running that distance every morning.

Peg and I feared that this would be the last scene, but in the next bubble we saw one more. The Fiji Islands! Ellery Mater and Stanley Isbister were there learning new steps for the dancing class, which they conducted in New York. Virginia Chase, Dorothy Andrews and Elizabeth Hellen were designing mummy cases for the royal family. The great honor of being poet laureate of the Fiji Islands had recently been conferred upon Dorothea Douglass. Oren Ferster was slaving away as dentist to the month-old heir to the throne. Poor Oren always loved hard work. Frieda Iseman was earning an enormous salary, designing dresses for the Queen. Her latest creation was a gorgeous combination of dried grass and banana skins. The cries of a newsboy startled us out of our reverie.

The newspaper, run by James Mooney and John Bar, was the Journal's closest rival. Walter Brown and Paul Mitchell drew the famous comic strip, "Dinky Pete". Walter Phillips and William Ritchie wrote the bedtime stories and Dorothy Walker was the editor of the "Advice to the Love-lorn" column. We were delighted to read that Gladys Kugler was a winner in a beauty contest, and that Philip Bassett and William Atchely, who had become professional golfers, were teaching Dorothy Barbour and Lydia Holbert, well-known artists, how to play. Gilbert Hathaway, after discovering a new kind of radio wave in the air, collapsed from radiosus, and was restored to health by Clifford Pitt's Peppo Pellets. In the movie section we found that a film directed by John McCarthy was coming. Althea Persse was the leading lady, and the leading man was Gerald Odell, who had surpassed Valentino as a passionate lover. They were supported by Robert Southworth, Mary Manning and Helen Fremd. It was printed in huge black type that Edith McMillan had discovered a new flavor in the chewing gum factory owned by Harry Mount and Edwin Crockett, where the famous "Mounts Minty Mouthfuls" and "Crockett's Crinkly Cuds" were made. On the next page was a picture of Sidney Stauber. His long drooping mustache brushed the front of his checked coat, and he wore a monocle! He was the detective who found the marvelous pearls lost by Arthur York's wife. On the last page we saw that Walter Patterson, the jockey, had again taken part in a race. His horse, "Garlic" had won by a breath!

Just then, the clock struck six, and we realized how late it was. We carefully put away the bubble pipe and the newspaper, which had told us so much of the success and prosperous fates of the members of dear old Jan. '24.

CLASS WILL

WE, the departing class of January, nineteen hundred and twenty-four, being in unusual financial conditions, surrounded by the sheltering affection of our teachers, and being of an extraordinarily generous spirit, do condescendingly bequeath to the school the following treasured valuables.

ARTICLE I—To Louise Mason, we leave the innocent girls of the class of January 1928 for training in the art of “Magnetism”

ARTICLE II—To the straight-haired youths of the school, we leave the curling iron owned by John McCarthy and Bump Howard.

ARTICLE III—To the bob-haired boy of the sophomore class, we leave “two bits” for a hair cut.

ARTICLE IV—To the future announcers in assembly, we bequeath the occasional crack in Fred Traugott’s voice.

ARTICLE V—To those who dread weekly “oral day” we leave Katherine Gehrke’s extensive vocabulary.

ARTICLE VI—To Marge Lewis, we bequeath Alexenia’s famous book on “How to become willowly, winning and winsome.”

ARTICLE VII—To the orchestra, we bequeath Beethoven’s “Unfinished Symphony”, in hopes that they will finish it.

ARTICLE VIII—To our cheerleader “Coco” we leave the ever-peppy yell “Q-QM, Rah, Rah! Rah, Rah!”

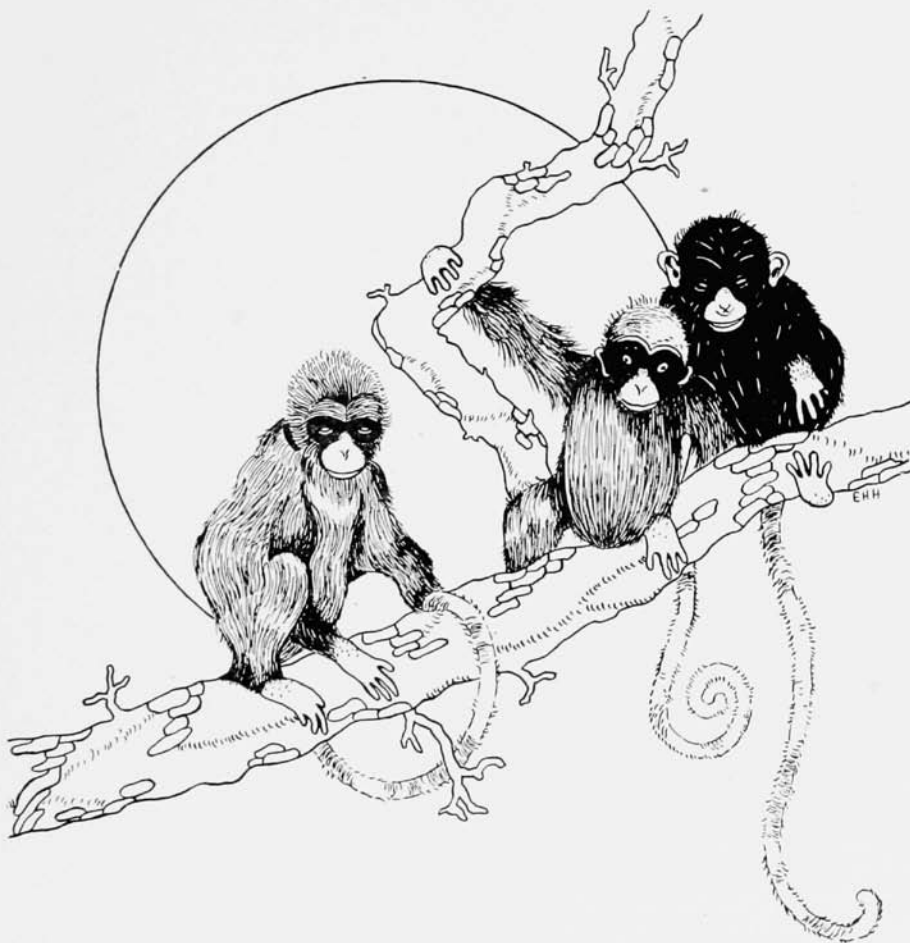

ARTICLE IX—To the excitement-loving school, we bequeath the thrilling memory of “the shovel”

Having finished, ended and completed this, our last will and testament, we affix the artistic daub of red sealing wax and necessary blue ribbon, and hereby pass on to the elysian fields of the collegiate and business world.

Optical Quality

The precise optical instruments you will use in the study of the sciences upon entering college will more than likely bear the familiar trade-mark of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., the largest manufacturer of optical instruments in America. Here in Rochester we make most of the microscopes and similar equipment used in the schools and industries throughout the country.

Bausch & Lomb products, with Rochester incorporated in the trade-mark, are favorably known throughout the world. Seventy years of experience in the manufacture of eyeglasses and optical instruments insure quality reflecting credit to us and to Rochester.

The most fastidious find in this Store cheerful service as well as merchandise of the highest grade.

Our clientele includes not alone the grown-ups of our community but the growing-ups — those who will very shortly take the places of fathers and mothers.

We know if we please them now that in the future, they will feel almost pledged to us.

In the more personal things — those that are worn, for instance — our Store has earned its enviable reputation by being up-to-the-minute on styles and, as it were, setting the pace.

Red Cross Ranges and Furnaces

Perfect baking is easy with a Red Cross Range because it works equally well with either coal or gas. There is no guess-work. Its beautiful gray enamel finish eliminates blacking forever and with its efficient Gas and Coal Water Heater you are assured the convenience of steaming hot water the year 'round.

For winter comfort a Red Cross Furnace is unexcelled. It warms every room to an even temperature with pure, fresh and properly moistened warm air. No dust, dirt or gas. Heat your home with a Red Cross Ajax or Empire.
