THE Class of June, 1925, wishes to express its gratitude and thanks to those who so kindly aided in the work for "Kismet," especially Mr. James Spinning and Miss Norma B. Story

Foreword

ITH the publication of "Kismet," the Class of June believes that it is producing a year book worthy of West High effort. We feel that "Kismet"—the largest year book ever conceived by a West High Senior Class—will prove a source of interest to every member of the student body as well as a fitting remembrance of the Class of June, 1925

Class Poem

*This year our time has come to part,
To turn aside with heavy heart,
To laugh in joy, and fondly hope
That fate some golden door may ope'.
We'll not forget you, dear West High,
But what of us, as years pass by?
To think of you, sweet mem'ries brings
And thoughts of oh! so many things.
Can you forget the games we played,
The fun we had, the marks we made,
The friendships true, to last for years,
Undying zest and hearty cheers?
When we have gone we'll stay true-blue,
Be ever loyal, trusting you;
But think, think back, in future dates,
Lest you forget your graduates Of 1925.*

—DOROTHY FOX.

Class History

By LUTHER SMELTZER

WHEN we first came on the West High campus, well nigh four years ago, we were as verdant as the average run of Freshmen. It did not take us long, however, to become accustomed to the change in intellectual climate from grammar and junior high school to senior high school. We breathed the rarefied air of higher academic freedom with delight. There were so many of us that we began to talk about ourselves as "The Elephant Class."

Our initial venture into social affairs was a rather dismal one. The Frosh stage party fell through, for reasons still unknown, although the girls were successful in their undertaking. Denied that opportunity to become acquainted with each other, we "visited" in the halls, on the campus and on the athletic field. You cannot keep a good class down, and the Class of June 1925 soon was spoken of as an upstanding aggregation of gallant youths and fair maidens.

The Sophomore year found us one year older, and all the more keen to enjoy the class party that we missed as Freshmen. The function was held on Hallowe'en, and "a good time was had by all present." "Sinkers," with a plentiful supply of cider to wash them down, formed the refreshment end of the affair. There were lots of jolly games and dancing. Some of our classmates preferred standing along the wall to prancing about the floor. But then, that was their privilege or misfortune, whichever way you want to put it.

The fall term of our Junior year was marked by another party, with music furnished by the school orchestra, and cider and doughnuts as the inevitable refreshments. On the night of February 21, 1924, the Junior Prom took place. It was a failure, financially, but a success, socially. Later in the year the Junior play afforded those gifted with histrionic talents an opportunity to add to the fame of class and school. The skit was entitled "The Successful Calamity," and was admirably staged under the direction of Mrs. Clara B. Ellis.

ONCE again we returned to West High, this time as "grave and respected Seniors". For some reason or other, a proposed dance fell through. In its stead, the class presented another play called "Fanny and the Servant Problem". Our budding John Barrymores and Maude Adamses were one year older, and of course did much better than in the Junior year. The play was a howling success, and a financial one as well.

Our teachers have been uniformly kind to us during our stay at West High. Not a single member of the class was "rusticated". Of course, there may have been some members who tarried for "Eighth Period", but that may have been to get in the good graces of their teachers. In times of perplexity, our faculty advisers, Miss Mamie Zwierlein and Mr. W. Otis Kenyon, were always ready and willing to help us.

The Class of June 1925, the largest one ever graduated from West High, did its share in upholding the honor of the school by furnishing a number of star athletes. Among its budding journalists, a number were found qualified to assist Mr. C. Raymond Naramore in getting out a "Better Occident". There were musicians, too, who found places in the school band and orchestra.

Now that we are leaving West High forever, we are just beginning to realize what our Alma Mater, under the guiding hand of Principal William M. Bennett, has done for us. And as we go out into the world, some into business pursuits, others to colleges or universities, we cannot forebear to shed a tear at the thought of parting, which is such "sweet sorrow". Ah, yes, "tempus does fugit", and we are separating, perhaps never to meet again as a class unit. In this we find our pride and joy, that we did all we could to uphold the glory of Old West High. We shall never forget the pleasant hours spent in lecture room, study hall, assembly hall and athletic field. Our parting wish and prayer is this: "Here's to good old West High; may she live and prosper."

Class Will

WE, the class of June, one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-five, Anno Domini, being present in body (if not in mind) do hereby, in our first, last and only will and testament, bequeath the following:

First—To Professor Emil Oscar Sauer, three bachelor buttons (no—two!) for his distinguished success in the fine art of dog catching.

Second—To the undergraduates, the hope of a future "Masque Club" for West High.

Third—To Mr. P. A. Carpenter, one pinch of salt to sprinkle on the tail of the next pigeon that comes visiting, so he may catch it.

Fourth—To all hopeful "silver-tongues," the necessary funds to obtain outside judges for oratory contests.

Fifth—To the would-be "Frosh Shicks," a plentiful supply of Dick Jackson's own imported hair oil, concocted from the juice of the Umaynot Bangus tree.

Sixth—To Mr. Coon, a megaphone for stopping speeding in the halls.

Seventh—To the Band and Orchestra, a complete score of the "Refrain from Encores" by Mr. Bennett.

Eighth—To the school at large, the remembrances of the "notables" who are passing on.

Ninth—To the class of January '26, our cast-off Senior mannerisms and the plans that we were unable to carry out because of lack of time.

Tenth—To Maurice Faugh, the position in the high society (401) that has been twice bestowed on Ted Collins by other dear departed.

Eleventh—To whom it may concern, the gentle irony learned from many sources, especially Mr. Naramore and Mr. Holmes.

Twelfth—To all Seniors-to-be, all (which are few) of the arguments unused in our discussions on clothes for graduation.

Thirteenth—To the faculty, the memories of our bright remarks and intelligent (?) expressions, also a pleasant summer vacation in which to recuperate from the above-mentioned.

Fourteenth—To the student body, Kay Scanlon's latest hints on "Entertaining the Masses."

Fifteenth—To the cast of the faculty play, one (1) Eskimo pie to heighten the scenic effects of "Icebound."

Sixteenth—(Last, but not least.) To Mr. Watson, the unmade profits from "Kismet."

Being duly sworn to, witnessed, and entangled in red tape, we hereby affix our signatures and are now content to wait patiently for the great day of our decease.

Voice from the Past

WE were sitting before a glowing fire in my little sitting room, and I was congratulating myself on the fact that I, superintendent of an orphanage, had my guest, the renowned author, Florence Sweetnam, all to myself, for a while at least. The room was very restful, because it had been decorated for that purpose by Elizabeth Wing, who had ever since been in demand; the chairs were more than ordinarily comfortable because their maker, Richard Cook, abhorred hard seats, and then, too, I knew that my assistant, Molly Tobey, was very capable at watching the orphans, especially while they were asleep. In fact, all things conspired to arrange a perfect setting for a nice, comfortable visit.

Then, since I begged to hear of Florence's adventures abroad, she started her story.

"Oh, my trip was just perfect. I really didn't have one dull moment from the time I left until the time I returned. I made so many new acquaintances with the most interesting people. There were three missionaries on the boat going over, John Donaldson, Richard Brown and Maurice Gramkee. Can you imagine where they were going? Well, to no less place than that heathen territory known as 'No-Man's Island.'

"I was very fortunate in having as my companion during the trip, Burnetta Purtell, a very clever young artist. It was she who discovered that the object or John Beiter and Raffael Ferrigno's attention, a huge red book, was 'Corsica's Court ing Course.'

"At Berlin, our destination, we met Gladys Ridgley, who had eloped and was now fleeing detectives O'Donnell and Stuart, and we visited Sitzentatter's Button Factory. There we were introduced to all the prominent people, including Superintendent Kurkowski, Vice President White, and Mr. Wilson, secretary and treasurer of the firm; and two foremen, Messrs. Hopkins and Wright, took us through the factory.

"Of course we visited 'Gay Paree' and would not dare leave there without visiting Madame Diver's fashionable dress shop where all the gowns are designed by that new and clever designer, Marion Leffler. Her models, Edith Mabbett and Kathryn Dowling, displayed the gowns to the very best advantage, and the two girls who waited on us, Dolores Hughes and Ruth Stapler, were so capable and courteous that we couldn't help being greatly pleased with Madame Diver's shop."

"Your acquaintance list isn't so bad," I said, "but I see loads of your old friends, too. Just listen. Every time I go down to the bank, I see Arthur Lintz, the cashier, and Roger Wellington, the teller, and I nearly always find that the president, Edward Smalley, and two of the directors, Hamilton Niven and Frederick Garret, are working themselves nearly to death—on the clever puzzles Kathryn McGonegle is inventing daily.

"Right near the bank there are two rival shops, Beatties' Boot Blackery and Hogan's Home of Hats. I was really disappointed the other day when they were both trying to rent space to Pearl Candle to demonstrate her well-known product, Frasher's Fish Flakes, that we passed by so quickly in the aeroplane bus. But with Olive Wood as motorman and Melba Kinde as conductor, it requires more than the combined noble efforts of traffic police, Lorraine White and Helda Kinne, to make them slow down. The other day they ran into Margaret Kowalski, in the aeroplane in which she won that whole series of races last year. William Alling and Hubert Brown, insurance agents, rushed to the scene from one direction, and Harold Decker and Franklin Dewey from another. Harold is an undertaker and Franklin a doctor, so they both acted rather disappointed because no one was hurt. Since they've gone into partnership I have changed doctors and now Dr. Robert Holmes, Q. Q. M., the discoverer of the 'radio ear', has had charge of my orphans. Besides Daisy Milne, manager of the florist shop near by, can testify that ever since the beginning of this partnership her head clerk, Marcella Kurkowski, has made many more sales."

I paused then for lack of breath and, anyhow, we had stirred up old memories and become thoughtful. The silence was soon broken by a rattle of metal and, as we started in alarm, the door swung open to admit the queerest-looking figure there could possibly be. He was old, undoubtedly, and his voice was as rusty as his armor as he said, in what was meant to be a shout, 'By my holbreth, forsooth,' (this with a courtly bow) 'be not alarmed, I' (with a proud gesture) 'am Arthur, King of England, and Knight of the Table Round. Prithce, fair ladies, list to the tale of my weary journeys. Verily to repay Merlin, the wizard, I need return to this world as every hundred years pass, until there shall come a time when all my questions shall be answered. Doth this not prick the heart? Lack-a-day, will ye not answer them? On my bended knees, I beg of thee.'

We assented eagerly, for it promised to be a fascinating task; and our queer visitor began his quizzing.

"Of a truth," he said, "I have heard said that I am called the Father of English Prose, and writing was always my 'hobby,' (that is a word I learned on my last visit); so I pray ye, tell me of the reading matter."

This was easy, for in the daily paper, Le Temps, edited by Harry Meyer, there were many novel features, including Mae Dieffenderfer's poetry, Cameron Collins' cartoons and Charles Maloney's column of wit and humor. Marion Pixley edited a page of 'Helpful Hints to Housewives' and all the young men always turned first to Lloyd Storandt's column, 'Words to Wary Bachelors.' (This was a 'leap-year only' feature.) Then, the latest best-seller was a de luxe edition of Dorothy Mount's group of essays, entitled 'The Cabbage Crunch,' with notes by Elizabeth Franklin and many illustrations by Fanny Ashenberg. The cover was designed by Dorothy Hawley, and the whole thing was just another good product of the well-known Bush Publishing Company, already famous for 'The Pugilist's Poetry' by Robert Knight, with Joseph Krank posing for the illustrations.

"Tis interesting indeed," said our guest, "but time is fleeting. We had no such books. But, who reads them? In my day, we had no education, and few but royalty read. Prithce, has there been a change?"

We hastened to explain that everyone was well educated now, and to prove our point we gave the specific example of Fairport High School, where the principal, Kenneth Lyon, was at present in conference with Austin Bleyler, city manager, and Robert Harmon, state commissioner of education, in regard to introducing the new system of scouting, inaugurated by Sarah St. Helens, in their school system. The matter had been put to a vote of the faculty and among those in favor were the gymnasium instructors, Orrill Saunders and Frederick Rowe; Margaret Stumpf, school nurse; Helene Murphy, instructor in dramatics, and James Little, head of the Latin Department. The small minority was upheld by Dorothy Murray and Gladys Stottle, teachers of English and French respectively.

Then we told of the various other educational advantages, such as the butterfly collections recently given to the city museum by Professor Dana Weeks, and the monthly Ottman-Pearson debates; and bewailed the fact that the two greatest attractions of the season, a joint concert by Harold Long and Ralph Hauss, with Elsie Standing as accompanist, and a spectacular screen release, were coming the same evening. In his report, the national movie censor, Milbert Dunlap, said that the production, directed by Russel Forth and Alfred Hall, was the achievement of the day, for Elizabeth Jardine had written the scenario from material which Evelyn Beckwith and Marjorie Cornwall had been touring Africa for two years to collect.

No sooner had we finished speaking than our ghostly, grave-risen guest, 'midst his awful clanking of armor and rattling of bones, asked, "Ay, forsooth, it behooves me to beg of your graces, to tell me what other entertainers please these mortals?"

"Well," we answered, "the famous Family Circus seems to take well with people. The ring leader, Ethel Snyder, has proved quite efficient in her work. Bessie Noble, the bareback rider, is the best rider known, and the clown, Baldwin Terney, can make even the very sourest of his spectators laugh. Their tight rope walking scene is done by LeMoine Kuhns and Max Morris, two very clever acrobats, who never fail to win a great deal of applause.

"A new moving picture, 'The Horse Thief's Revenge,' in which Myra Vancunini and Harlan Yust star, is drawing people not only from their desks and benches, but from their pews. A side-splitting comedy in which Leland Morscheimer and Glennie Baker play the leading parts, is shown with this picture and also a Pathé Review, which includes pictures of our American Ambassador to France, Paul Woodbridge, and the famous girl daredevil, Catherine Scanlon."

We paused momentarily, terror stricken, while our visitor growled, "Alack, aforetime things were not thus. Lo, are there none who'd of themselves try right these wrongs?"

We wanted him to be pleased with our modern world so we told him of our reform league which is so active and determined in its efforts to abolish Frank Zierer's Follies. The Snappy Steppers Orchestra travels with the follies and it is said that when this orchestra plays, even balls and chains can't hold people down. The league worried over the follies for a long time, and finally decided that to each member of the League they would assign two members of the follies or their orchestra to reform. To Pauline Case were assigned Esther Moore and Mildred Ellison; to Florence Hufeland, Florence McKenna and Avis Baker; to Beryl Hedloff, Ruth Marchant and Marian Gauss; to John Gerling, Clarence Wood, the fiddler and William Santucci, the sighing saxophonist; to Virginia Baglin, Muriel Suarez, orchestra director, and Kenneth Cooper, trumpeter, and to Adelaide Morrison, Jean Krieger and Roy Hartsiel, another violinist.

"Then," we told him, "we have another Reform League to which Clarence Dutton, Rudolph Hahn, Gerrit Fremouw, Phyllis Oster and Elaine Frye belong that is doing a great work down in the Bohemian Isles where there are already five American workers. Harris Brayer is conducting a hospital down there among the savages. Virginia Webster and Geraldine Hilton are earnestly endeavoring to teach the natives Greek and Geometry. Gordon Hough and Earl Dannert walk about the colonies with their Bibles under their arms, perfectly confident they are a good influence upon the savage Bohemians.

"Oh that I might live now-a-days," was Arthur's fervent response, "but what of the practical things? Has there been an improvement in them also? Tell me, I pray thee, of the achievements of the day."

First of course, came the story of the filling in of Lake Erie by Irving Horsey and Jerome Walz, and the success of the firm Eisenschmid and Ernisse in selling the building lots thus formed. Then we told about the wonders of radio and to satisfy his curiosity tuned in our little desk set, which was patented by Baxter Davies, and let him hear speeches by Lloyd Booth, Shakespearian actor, and Harry Bradfield, famous aviator, and also a dancing lesson given by Isabella Watson.

KISMET

"No such things happened in my day," said Arthur, "but times were different. Lack-a-day, when I wed Guinevere—but, I am not here to waste time by relating tales, so I ask of you what are marriages like in such times as these?"

We then launched into a vivid description of the big wedding of the year, which we had attended a few days ago. We told all about the bride, Jeanne Bantel, and her attendants, Margaret Bennet and Loys Jenkins (with their costumes, the creations of Ethel Riecke and Ruth Kirker), and quite shocked our dignified visitor by being unable to remember the name of the groom. Then we recalled how wonderfully the organist, Dorothy Eshelman, had played the wedding march and how beautiful the marriage ceremony was as Rev. Lorin Carson read it. We laughed as we remembered how busy the newspaper reporters, Mable Close and Evelyn Hood, had been getting lists of the important guests. No wonder, for among those present, were Margaret and Ruth Miller, Robert Levis and Kenneth Fletcher, the biggest social successes of the year, Wesley Ashton, the great steel magnate, and Sarah Woodworth, recently chosen as the most representative American girl by a group of distinguished judges. Then we marvelled at the beauty of the music sung by a quartet consisting of Ruth Hanson, Evelyn Cottrill, Loren Fertig and George French, with violin obligato by Helen Spath and Phyllis McKim.

"But do not people need training in the social arts for parties such as you have just described?" was our guest's next question. "In my day, festivities were great, but there were none so great as this, and yet there were years of training. Is there no longer need for it?"

We explained the ease and utility of the new sort of social training, as it was taught at the School of Poise and Charm, where one might learn much in a short time. The men's department was conducted by Floyd Cooper and Clifford Fox, and the ladies were under specialists, the favorites of whom were Doris Davison, who taught expression, and Grace Jaeger, with her classes on the acquiring of a French accent. In the department of physical education, Lois Boorman taught graceful carriage and Helen Eshelman conducted "keep-fit" classes. A new feature was the addition to the staff of four 'tactful chaperons,' Hortense Cazeau, Virginia Hanna, Nellie Wilber and Mildred Van Zandt, who were always in great demand and added even more to the popularity of the school.

"In the social graces, these things suffice; but in the days of yore athletics we were taught and jousts and tourneys were our pleasure. Are such things by-gone now?"

We then told enthusiastically of those who were now returning from representing America in the Olympic games. Among them were Alfred MacClurg, roller skating meteor; Edward Bishop, marble champion; Earl Dixon, discus thrower; Chester Harry and Nicholas Katsampes, high scorers in the bean bag toss; Merton Fahy, renowned hoop roller; Daniel Davies, highest flyer of kites; and Ernest Lomaglion, winner in the peanut race. Manager Addison Smith and Coach Frank Schantz are both greatly pleased with the results, as are Howard Brown and Frances Eynon, coaches of the champion scholastic football teams. Really, we could say with pride that Americans were prominent for Dora Maltz not only won the swimming cup, but said that her success was largely due to the fact that she wore a Neverleak Bathing Cap invented by Elizabeth Benson, another American.

"And oh," we informed him, "you've forgotten all about business affairs in these days. We're terribly business-like, and the 'personality club' run by Mildred Culhane and Velma Pelletier is so successful that Marjorie Newman and Helen Knickerbocker, the secretaries, recently won the prize for having typed the greatest number of letters in two weeks. This club is really just an employment bureau, only the managers suggest work especially fitted to the person, and, oddly enough, nearly all their clients are successful. Why, you ought to see Iola Aab and Eleanor Jenkinson working in their doll hospital and read the clever divorce announcements that Madalyn Reid and Genevieve Fahy write. They're specialists in their line, and have a great future ahead of them."

Next we told about the clothing business as it had changed from the time of Arthur's last visit and discussed the rise of the firm of Remington and Rauber, largely due to the head model, Richard Jackson. Another recent success was that of the dancing pair, Helen Fiege and Stanley Goodman, who were at present drawing a capacity audience in the theatre run by Rhea Kenney and Carrie Phelps, much to the satisfaction of their business manager, Richard Van Voorhis. However, Manager Harlan Smith insisted that it was his attraction, the singers Charles Lavrakas and Nicholas Gustina, that was drawing the crowd, and the argument had become so great that President of the Associated Theaters, DeLos Boutwell, had decided to give a public hearing to Douglas Pidgeon of the Musicians League and Jay McDevitt of the Dancers' Union to settle the question and satisfy all parties. "Thus you see the dangers of success," said Arthur, "but nevertheless strive for it." Then, as a most unearthly rattle was heard, he moaned, "Alack, e'en my bones stir to hear such a sad, sad tale. Methought aforesomes justice was not just. Marry, is it now?"

We thought for a while before answering so that we might give him a good illustration. Finally, I recalled one trial which had been very exciting. "Helen Tomaselli," I told him, "claimed that her understudy, Mr. John Grisanzio, had taken her patented formula for making gold from sardine cans. She carried the case to court, where Kenneth Chase, prosecuting attorney, and John Ash, lawyer for the defense, staged a never-to-be forgotten argument before Judge Elizabeth McCracken. After the jury, which consisted of Mrs. Leach, the foreman; Irene Schillinger, sculptor; Ruth Bonnet, insectologist; Everett Toomey, grave-digger; Mary Lown, stenographer; Dorothy Stocum, radio announcer; Howard Witzel, carpenter; Anna Barnes, milliner; Louis Schnarr, taxi driver; Evelyn Page, music teacher; Elmer Keegan, farmer; and Margaret Green, photographer, had deliberated for over two hours, the case was satisfactorily adjourned because the plaintiff had suddenly found the lost formula in her vanity case. Then when Ward Stottle had revived Leonard Hamner, who had fainted, with Smeltzer's Smelling Salts, the excitement was all over."

Florence then told him of the fashionable tea shoppe owned by Marion Phillips and managed by Ruth Maxwell, where Margaret McMahon and Violet Baglin wait on table. I told him of the great amount of welfare work done by Virginia Wooden who is sent out by Reverend Trost's church, where Marjorie Van Ryne is assistant minister.

Arthur heaved a great sigh at this point, and she stopped to let him speak.

"The ways of the world are indeed fascinating," he said, "and I fain would live my life again. But now 'tis night the stroke of twelve, and 'twas but nine of the evening when I came. Fair ladies, I am thankful for your assistance, and—my journeys are an end!" His voice rang out exultantly and his step was almost elastic as he passed quickly from the room. A moment later we heard the door slam behind him and silence reigned again, only to be broken by the sound of Molly's voice calling sleepily from upstairs, "Aren't you two ever coming to bed? And for goodness sakes, close the windows, because there's a big gale coming up and it just blew the door shut."

KISMET

With Our Musical Organizations

Instrumental

THE vocal work has been equalled only by that of the instrumental department, where wonderful progress has again been made. This year, the West High School Band, under the direction of Mr. Sherman A. Clute, journeyed to Binghamton to participate in the State Band Contest held there. Also, at home, no game seemed quite complete without the bright appearance and cheering blare of the band. The orchestra, with Mr. Robert O. Barkley as leader, has been no less loyal in assisting at plays and helping our sister schools in their pageants and other entertainments. Innovations this year consisted of both a string and a saxophone quartet which helped make the joint concert a grand success.

Vocal

THIS year our vocal organizations, under the able leadership of Mr. Alfred Spouse, have taken another great step forward in music. Besides an excellent concert, the proceeds of which were used toward the purchase of a new piano for the music room, these organizations gave several minor concerts at schools and churches which sought their services. In addition, the Boys' Glee Club has furnished music for various occasions, all with the same degree of success. Then, too, all these organizations have added to the pleasure of our assembly programs with vocal selections by both groups and individuals. Is not this enough to make us honor and recognize the exceptional work of Mr. Spouse and his loyal followers from the faculty and student body?

The West High Saxophone Quartet

WILLIAM SANTUCCI	Soprano Sax
NELSON SMITH	Alto Sax
ELBERT HANCOCK	Tenor Sax
DAVID WRIGHT	Baritone Sax

Although this is the first year that we have had a saxophone quartet in West High, we feel certain that this enjoyable novelty will become a permanent factor in the musical life of West High. The quartet has played at various concerts given by the band as well as in our own auditorium with remarkable success.

What Others Are Saying :

In advertisement No. 56 of this series we gave some startling excerpts from the Canadian Royal Inquiry Commission's report of its investigation of the Ontario Hydro Commission operations. Following are a few more excerpts from the same report which are quite as startling and just as informative:

"The failure to provide a sinking fund for nearly all of the bonded indebtedness in respect of the Niagara developments, which are operated by the commission as private companies, in the same general manner and to the same extent as is done in respect of cash advances under the power commission act, has been, in our opinion, unsound and unjustified." "The exemption from taxation given under the assessment act results in lowering the cost of power to the consumers, but the gain to the consumers is equalled by the loss to the taxpayers of the municipalities in which the developments are located." "The chairman of the commission (Ontario Hydro), in the past, has frequently shown impatience at the suggestion that the government should, before advancing the money asked for, look into the merits of the schemes for which it is asked."

PLANNING FOR VACATION DAYS JUST AHEAD

Carefully laid plans will have much to do with the pleasure of the vacation, and the store offers you its assistance in making your preparations.

There's Luggage—something you must have.

Sport Clothes, of course.

A Bathing Suit—certainly.

Books, of course—playing cards, a flashlight, a kodak, and one of those cute little suitcase phonographs no bigger than a kodak, would add much to the fun!

A Tennis Racket and balls if you frequent the court.

Golf Equipment if you find pleasure on the links.

Here's hoping we may help you, and wishing you the very best of vacations

Bits of Wisdom

"There's a new dog in your alley now.
What's his name?"

"Ginger."

"Yeh? Does Ginger bite?"

"Naw. Ginger snaps."

—Dennison Flamingo.

Teddy C.—"Smoking hey?"

Ham—"No, Camels."

Katsampes—"What are those holes in that fence?"

Meyer—"Why, they are knotholes."

Long—"Why, those are too holes."

Ruth—"That girl has Franklin teeth."

Geraldine—"How come?"

Dot—"Air cooled."

Harry—"Is skiing hard on the feet?"

Nick—"No—not on the feet."

Cora—"Father said that if you came to night I must not see you."

Harry—"He meant I should turn out the light."

Kenneth was walking behind the fair co-ed. Suddenly a book fell from her arms. He rushed to her and picked it up. It was an American History.

"Pardon me, miss, did you drop this?" he asked her.

Hortense dropped it with a fiery glance.

"Drop it, the dickens," she came back, "I flunked it."

Maloney—"What brand's the butt in your mouth, Ernie?"

Ernie—"That's a baseball special."

Maloney—"Gwan, there ain't no such rope."

Ernie—"Sure there is; it was a grounder and I picked it up."

He—"Say something soft and sweet to me."

She—"Custard pie."

Her—"Are you a frat man?"

Him—"Yes. I Soppa Towel."

Her—"At what college?"

Him—"Barbers College."

Homo—"Thinking about me?"

Homette—"Oh, was I laughing? Pardon —Stanford Chaparral.

"See that prof? He's the most popular chaperon on the campus."

"Why?"

"His shoes squeak."

—Stanford Chaparral.

Doctor—"Well, and how did you find yourself this morning?"

Sitz—"Oh, I just opened my eyes and there I was." —Hamilton Royal Gaboon.

"Papa, can I go swimming?"

"There ain't no water, child."

"Don't need none; I can do the sun stroke."

—California Pelican.

"My girl calls me Maple Syrup now."

"What else could she call a refined sap?" —Middlebury Blue Baboon.

Bishop—"Now that I have my diploma from high school I am looking for a large field in which to exercise my talents."

Father—"Well, the forty-acre field is ready to plow."

"Where'd ya get that black eye—been fighting?"

"Nah! Got bit by a butterfly."

"Do gooseberries have legs?"

"No!"

"Then I must have swallowed a caterpillar."

Mr. Kenyon—"Collins, how do you make ice water without ice?"

Collins—"Peel an onion. That'll make your eyes water."

He who laughs last is usually the dumbest.

NOTICE!!!

Do you know that good rebuilding of your shoes is Health, Comfort and Economy? No. 1, Health: Every nerve and muscle of your body is affected by condition of your feet; cold or wet feet will make you ill. No. 2, Comfort: To have old shoes at all times on your feet is good fitting and comfortable. No. 3, Economy: Do not neglect to repair your shoes—you will have comfort, economy, longer wear and save money at the same time.
